to contest the West Derby Liverpool at the general election as a supporter of Mr. Gladstone's policy, but was defeated. He was an alternative candidate, Lord Claud Hamilton. Again, at the general election he was selected by the Liberals of the North of Scotland to contest that constituency against Mr. Wilson Noble, but without success. On the formation of the Liberal Administration in 1892, Mr. Hemsley was appointed Solicitor-General for Scotland, an office he held until the formation of the new Ministry in 1895, and on his resignation of that office he was sworn in as a Privy Councillor for Her Majesty's Privy Council.

At the general election of 1895 he entered the lists, and was elected to the House of Commons.

He entered Parliament as member for the Glasgow North division, as a Gladstonian Home Rule man. His entry into Parliament was followed by an active part in supporting Home Rule measures, especially those more closely connected with Ireland, such as the Local Government Bill, 1898. He and the late Sir Frank Bland occupied for some time the position of sitting on the front Bench as actual Solicitors-General for England and Ireland respectively.

On the consequence of the delay in the appointment of their successors in office. Mr. Hemsley married Augusta, daughter of the late Sir Francis Stanhope, son of the Earl of Harrington. This lady died in 1899. His addresses are: 1, Grosvenor Square, Dublin; and Clifton Park, co. Dublin.

HEMSLEY, William Botting, F.R.S., botanist, was born Dec. 29, 1833, at Hoathley, Sussex. His father was a farmer and nurseryman, and he was educated at the early age of ten years in the school of training for the same walk in which he had a taste for botany, he came into the notice of Mrs. Eardley Hall, a well-known naturalist. William Borrer, a well-known naturalist of his day; and through her influence he entered the Kew Herbarium in 1860. In 1863 he received a regular appointment in that institution, which he was compelled to resign in 1867 in consequence of his health failing; but after many vicissitudes he returned to Kew again in 1874. During this time he gained a living by writing popular articles for horticultural and botanical publications; his first important work being an adaptation of a treatise on plants suitable for culture. But through the assistance of the authorities at Kew, he soon obtained congenial employment, and he has been actively engaged in botanical work ever since. He is the author of numerous contributions to botanical science, including translations and summaries from various languages; but his principal works are the botany of the Challenger Expedition, dealing with Insular Floras, the Botany of Salvin, and Godman's magnificent "Biologia Centralis-Americana"; the Botany of Afghanistan, in conjunction with Dr. Aitchison; and the "Index Floræ Sinensis," which is still in progress. In 1875 Mr. Hemsley was elected an Associate of the Linnean Society of London, and in the same year he was appointed Lindley Librarian to the Royal Horticultural Society. In 1876 he was appointed Lecturer on Botany at St. Mary's Hospital, a post he soon resigned. In 1883 he was appointed Assistant for India in the Kew Herbarium, and in 1890 he was promoted to the post of Principal Assistant and Acting Librarian, a position which he still occupies. His later published work chiefly relates to insular floras, including Lord Howe Island, the Tonga Islands, the Solomon Islands, Christmas Island, and a general review of the literature bearing on the subject. He has also worked out the botanical collections made by most of the recent British and American explorers in Tibet. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1889, and of the Linnean Society in 1896, and is at the present time a member of the Council of the latter Society. Address: Herbarium, Kew Gardens.

HEMY, Charles Napier, A.R.A., R.S.W., born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, May 24, 1841, is the eldest son of the late Henri Frederick Hemy, a well-known musician and composer. Educated at Dr. Bruce's Academy, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Ushaw College, Durham, he developed an early taste for drawing and painting, and as a boy studied at the Newcastle-on-Tyne School of Art. After leaving Ushaw College he went to sea, but speedily abandoned that career. He went to France, intending to become a "religious," but discovered his true vocation to be painting. Ultimately settling in London, he at the age of twenty-four made a reputation by pictures of Clovelly, and began to be known at R.A. and other exhibitions. At twenty-six he went to study at Antwerp Academy of Painting, remaining three years there under Baron Henri Leys. Here he was selected to do some paintings for Antwerp Cathedral, and his drawings made at the Academy were retained as models for the students. Baron Leys dying, Mr. Hemy refused to remain in Antwerp, and abandoned the Cathedral commission. He returned to London, which remained his place of residence until 1881, when he removed to Falmouth and built Churchfield, where he still resides. In Falmouth Harbour he keeps the Van der Meer, a sea-going house-boat and studio, on board of which many of his most important pictures have been painted direct from nature. At twenty-eight he painted his first picture in the manner of Baron Leys, and continued to paint in this style for some time. Gradually abandoning his Antwerp manner, and devoting himself almost entirely to marine subjects, he developed a style of so marked an individuality that it has placed him at the head of a school of painters. The following are his most important pictures: "Evening Grey," 1866 (this early attempt made Baron Leys his friend); "Girl decorating an altar of Our Lady on a Feast day, sixteenth century"; "The Limehouse Barge Builders"; "Shields Harbour"; "Blackwall"; "Saved," 1880; "Vespers, Oporto"; "Grey Venice"; "Homeward"; "Smelt Net"; "Silent Adieu"; "Trammel Net"; "Our Boat"; "Pilchards" (bought for Chantrey Bequest, 1897); "Lost," 1897; and "Wreckage." The following pictures have been reproduced as etchings: "Saved" (photogravure); "Silent Adieu"; "Trammel Net"; "Homeward." He was elected A.R.A. in February 1898, having previously, in June 1897, become R.S.W. Address: Churchfield, Falmouth.

HENDERSON, The Very Rev. William George, D.D., D.C.L., was born in 1819, and is the son of Admiral George Henderson, of Harbridge, Hants. He entered Wadham College, Oxford, in 1836, but was elected a demy of Magdalen in the same year, and retained that post for ten years, when he became Fellow of his College (1846-52). During his College career he gained the following distinctions: The Latin Verse Prize in 1839, The Latin Essay in 1842, the Ellerton Prize in 1843. In 1840 he took a second class in the Final School of Mathematics. He took his B.A. in 1840, M.A. in 1843, became D.C.L. in 1853, and D.D. in 1882. He was Proctor of the University in 1850. From 1852 to 1862 he was Head-master of the Victoria College, Jersey, and from 1862 to 1884 he was Head-master of Leeds Grammar School. In 1884 he became Dean of Carlisle. He married the daughter of J. Dalzell, of Lingo, Fifeshire. Address: The Deanery, Carlisle.

HENEAGE, Admiral Sir Algernon Charles Fieschi, K.C.B., is the son of Charles F. Heneage, Esq., of the 1st Life Guards, and Gentleman Usher of the Privy Chamber, by the Honourable Louise, daughter of the 3rd Lord Graves. He was born in March 1833, entering the navy in 1845. He served in H.M.S. Hastings during the operations in Burmah, and awarded the Burmese medal. In 1854 a Lieutenant of H.M.S. St. Jean d'Alger Sir Algernon took part in the Russian the Baltic, and was present at the of Bomarsund. In the following proceeded to the Black Sea, and close of the war he received the Crimean (with Sebastopol clas Turkish medals. He became a Rear-Admiral in 1874 the following year was appointed in-command of the Channel Squadron. Sir Algernon proceeded to the Pacific as Commander-in-Chief on that station in 1887, and in 1892 he hoisted his flag as Vice-Admiral at the North. He was created a K.C.B. on the Queen's birthday in 1894. The Royal Humane Society conferred upon him their silver medal for saving the life of a boy at Sierra Leone in 1861. Admiral Heneage is married to Louise, daughter of Sir Edmund Albert Bart. Address: 22 South Eaton Place.

HENEAGE, Lord, The Right Hon. Edward Henry, eldest son of George Fieschi Heneage, Esq., of an ancient Lincolnshire family, was born at London, March 29, 1840, and educated at Eton. He accepted a commission in the 1st Life Guards in 1857, after six years' service, and returned in 1864 to the family estates. He was returned as a Liberal for Lincoln, but unsuccessfully contested Great Lincoln in 1874, but gained the seat in 1885, and was again returned in 1885, 1893. He has always been prominent among Liberal members for his interest in agricultural and questions; and it was probably for this reason that, on the formation of Gladstone's Government in 1868, he was appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, with the Vice-Presidency of the Committee of Agriculture, from which he resigned in April 1886, on a disagreement with Mr. Gladstone's Bill. Lord Heneage is High Sheriff of the Borough of Grimsby, and a Trade Commissioner of the Hull Sanitary Commission. He was created Baron Heneage in 1896. He married, in 1864, Lady Cecilia, daughter of the late Lord de Grey. Address: Hainton Hall, Lincoln.

He was elected a member of the Académie des Beaux-Arts in succession to Cabanel in 1889.

HENNESSY, Professor Henry, F.R.S., M.R.I.A., second son of John Hen- nessy, of Ballyhennessy, was born on March 19, 1826, in Cork, where he received an excellent school training in mathe- matics and languages; but the disabilities regarding higher education for those who were not members of the lately disestab- lished Church of Ireland prevented him from entering the University. He had thus to pursue the study of the higher parts of mathematics unaided, and at such intervals as his professional work as an assistant engineer permitted. Before at- taining to any position of a public nature he had commenced his career as a labourer in scientific investigation. The total amount of published matter which he has achieved amounts to more than eighty original papers, which have appeared in British and foreign scientific journals, the Reports of the British Association, the Pro- ceedings and Transactions of the Royal Irish Academy and the Royal Society, and the Comptes Rendus of the Paris Academy of Sciences. In 1851 his "Researches on Terrestrial Physics" appeared in the Transactions of the Royal Society, and in this memoir, as well as others communi- cated to the Institute of France and to the Royal Irish Academy during subsequent years, he has investigated several questions regarding the figure and structure of the earth and planets. From the first he held to the view of the fluid origin of these bodies, and he has always maintained that all the facts regarding the earth which come under our notice are best explained by the existence of fluid matter at a high temperature enclosed within its crust. He has also written papers on Climatology, which have appeared in various publications, including those of the bodies above mentioned. He claims to have proved laws of temperature distribution in islands, and to have deduced consequences of general application from the physical properties of water. Long before the present tendency to develop inland navigation, Mr. Hennessy published essays in some of the engineering journals, in which he advocated improvements and extensions in canal and river navigation. Besides his scientific papers, Mr. Hennessy is author of pamphlets relating to education, and, among others, of one relating to the study of science, a considerable portion of which has been reprinted in an Appendix to the Duke of Devonshire's Commission on Scientific Instruction. He has contributed to the discussion on international weights and measures by some publications, and by the proposal of a new standard derived from the earth's polar axis, which was soon afterwards advocated by Sir John Herschel. A series of weights and measures constructed from this standard were made under Prof. Hennessy's superintendence. These are now in the College of Science, Dublin, together with a number of instruments and models of machinery, executed by metal-workers in Ireland. Some of these were designed by Prof. Hennessy, and they were intended to promote technical education and skilled industries. With reference to other industries, Prof. Hennessy prepared a report in 1870 on the temperature of the waters surrounding the British Isles, for a Commission of Inquiry into Irish Fisheries, and he afterwards applied some of his meteorological deductions to questions relating to Agriculture. In 1855, on the invitation of Cardinal Newman, he became Professor of Physics in the Roman Catholic University of Ireland; and in 1874 he was appointed by the Duke of Richmond to the Professorship of Applied Mathematics in the Royal College of Science. In this office he occupied himself with inquiries in Hydraulics and Mechanism, some of which have appeared in the publications of the Royal Society. He was Dean of the Royal College of Science in 1880 and 1888. He was elected an F.R.S. in 1858, and has been Vice-President of the Royal Irish Society. He is married to Rosa, the youngest daughter of Hayden Corri. Address: Maison Schlageter, Clarens, Vaud, Switzerland.

He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge (M.A. 1864). He was Conservative M.P. for East Devon from 1866 to 1870, and has been in the House of Commons since 1874. He was waiting at various times between 1874 and 1893, and was re-appointed in 1893. He was appointed Lieut.-Governor of the Isle of Man in 1896. He married Alice Mary Cuffe, only daughter of the late Earl of Desart, in 1864; she died in 1893. Address: Government House, Isle of Man, &c.

HENNIQUE, Léon, French novelist and dramatist, was born in the Isle of Guadeloupe, November 4, 1851, and began his literary career as a disciple of Zola. His first works "La Débâcle" (1878), and "Elisabeth Courbon" (1879), exaggerated the style of his master. He also contributed to the famous "Le roman expérimental" of Zola, "Le roman expérimental de Médan," and was conspicuous for his naturalistic depiction of most details. His other novels are: "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert," 1883; "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert," 1883; "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert," 1883; "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert," 1883. He has also written for the theatre "Pierrot seigneur" (1884), a pantomime, in collaboration with Zola; "Esther Brantès," play (1887), at the Théâtre Libre in 1887, as was "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert," 1888. "Le roman expérimental de M. Hébert" was a dramatised version of Zola's tales, and was played at the Odéon in 1887. M. Hennique was connected for some years with the Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal, and was with the Legion of Honour in 1887. Paris address is 22 Rue d'Artois.

HENSCHEL, George, musician, born at Breslau on Feb. 18, 1829, of Polish descent. He was educated at Magdalen College in his native city, and at the Royal Conservatorium in Berlin. In 1862, as a child of twelve, he made his first appearance as a pianist. Later he sang in public for the first time. In 1877 he came to England and gave in the Monday popular concert in England the following year. He was appointed Professor at the Royal Academy of Music in succession to Jenny Lind. He was appointed, in America, first conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and started the well-known Loeb Symphony Concerts which are associated with his name and which he conducted from 1893 to 1899. He set on foot the Henschel Foundation. His marriage with Lillian Jane singer, in 1881, marks the beginning of a famous musical partnership. Mr. and Mrs. Henschel gave vocal recitals in the United States and in most European capitals till 1884, since which they have constantly appeared on the concert stage. Mr. Henschel has composed some hundreds of songs, besides his work on the piano, vocal studies, a comic opera, &c. He has also composed a "Miserere" which was performed at the Haymarket Festival in 1894, and the music for Mr. Tree's revival of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Haymarket in 1891. 5 Bedford Gardens, N. Kensington.

HENTY, George Alfred, was born at Houghton, Cambridgeshire, Dec. 8, 1842, educated at Westminster School and King's College, Cambridge. He left to go out to the Crimea in the 1854-55 Department. Returning in 1856 he was promoted to the rank of Major in the Forces, and was sent out to organise the hospitals of the Crimea. At the end of the war he returned home, and had charge first of the hospitals afterwards of the Portsmouth, &c. He resigned his commission, and several years was occupied in various operations in Wales, Italy, &c. He went upon the staff of the Standard. As a special correspondent of the Standard he witnessed the Italian war; was with Garibaldi in his campaign in the Tyrol; at the opening of the Suez Canal; with the Abyssinians to Magdala, and the Ashantis to Coomassie. He also went to the Franco-German war, and the siege of Paris, and was likewise present at the Parisian insurrection. He went to the Standard at the time of the Egyptian Expedition, and on his return he was in the mining regions of the United States, California, Nevada, Utah, and on. He accompanied the Prince of Wales on his tour through India, and was with the Turkish army in the Turkish war. Mr. Henty is the author of "The Boy's Own Paper," "All But Lost," "The March to Magdala," "The March to Coomassie," "Out of the Woods," "The Young Franc-Comtois," "The Young Colonist," and a number of other books for boys, of a historical character. Among his recent works may be mentioned "The Double," "A Woman of the World," "The Queen's Cup," "Colonel Henty's Secret," 1898. Address: 1, W.C.

HENTY, Hon. Hilary A., American, was born at Lawrenceville,

South Carolina; removed with his father at the age of twelve years to Greenville, Ala.; was educated at the Universities of Alabama and Virginia; studied law and was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Alabama. During the Civil War he served in the Confederate army as Captain and Colonel, and was wounded in the battle of the Wilderness, May 1864. At the close of the war he resumed the practice of his profession at Greenville till 1872, and since then at Montgomery, which is now his home. From 1877 to 1893 he was a representative in Congress. On the accession of Mr. Cleveland to the Presidency for the second time (March 1893), Mr. Herbert became Secretary of the Navy, a position which he retained until the close of Mr. Cleveland's term.

HERBERT, Hon. Michael Henry, C.B., Secretary to H.M. Embassy at Paris, was born June 25, 1857, and is the fourth son of the Right Hon. Sydney Herbert, and is brother of the Earl of Pembroke. He entered the Diplomatic Service in June 1877, and was appointed to Paris in 1879 as Attaché. In 1883 he became a Second Secretary, and was transferred to Washington in 1888, where he acted as Chargé d'Affaires from October 1888 to February 1889. He was promoted to be Secretary of Legation at Washington in 1892, and in the next year was transferred to the Hague. In 1894 he was promoted to be Secretary of Legation at Constantinople, and in August of that year he was acting as Chargé d'Affaires during Sir Philip Currie's absence at the time of the Armenian massacres. In acknowledgment of his energy and judgment he was created a C.B. In 1897 he was appointed Secretary at Rome, and transferred to his present post in August 1898, when he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary in the Diplomatic Service, this promotion being merely one in rank.

HERBETTE, Jules Gabriel, French diplomatist, was born in Paris, Aug. 5, 1839, and, having studied law, entered the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in 1860. In 1867 he became Consul at Naples, and two years after at Stettin. During the war he aided the Government of National Defence in its foreign relations. He was secretary to Jules Favre in March 1871, during the preliminaries of peace with Germany. Remaining at the Foreign Office, he was a delegate to the European Commission on the Danube in 1876, and to the Treaty of Berlin in 1878. He was the chief adviser of M. de Freycinet (q.v.) at the Foreign Office in 1880 and 1882. In 1886 he was appointed to the most difficult of all posts, that of Ambassador to Berlin, which he held under three Emperors, William I., Frederick III., and William II., and in which he succeeded beyond all expectations in keeping the peace under very delicate circumstances, such as the Schnaebelle affair. He held his post until 1896, when he was succeeded by the Marquis de Noailles. He is a Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour, and one of the 40. His Paris address is 2 Rue Pigalle.

HERDMAN, William Abbott, D.Sc., F.R.S., eldest son of the late Robert Herdman, Scotch historical and portrait painter, was born on Sept. 8, 1858, at Edinburgh. He was educated at the Edinburgh Academy, and at the University of that city, where he took the degree of B.Sc. in 1879, and that of D.Sc. at a later time. In 1879 he was appointed Secretary to the Challenger Expedition Commission, and assisted the late Sir Wyville Thomson in bringing out the reports on the scientific results of the Expedition. After occupying the post of Demonstrator of Zoology in the University of Edinburgh, from 1880 to 1882, he was in the latter year elected Professor of Natural History in University College, Liverpool, a post which he still holds. He has published a "Report upon the Tunicata collected during the voyage of the Challenger," 3 vols., 1882-89, and in 1884 he received the Neill Gold Medal from the Royal Society of Edinburgh for his researches in connection with these marine animals. Since going to Liverpool he has occupied himself with marine biology, and latterly with sea fishery questions. The Liverpool Biological Society, started some nine years ago, owes its origin mainly to Prof. Herdman, and he has also founded the Marine Biological Station at Port Erin, in the Isle of Man, of which he is the Hon. Director. For some years he was engaged, together with friends and assistants, in a dredging exploration of the Irish Sea, and the different volumes of reports on this subject were produced under his editorship, in the years 1886 to 1895. Prof. Herdman was in 1892 elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, has published many papers on zoological subjects, and has established, conjointly with the County Council, a Sea Fisheries Laboratory in Liverpool. In 1895 he was President of the Zoological Section of the British Association. Address: Croxteth Lodge, Liverpool.

HÉRÉDIA, José-Maria de, French poet, was born in the island of Cuba, at La Fortune-Lafoyère, near Santiago, on Nov. 22, 1842. He was sent to France, and studied history in the École des Chartes, and subsequently wrote for the Revue des Deux Mondes, the Temps, and other leading French periodicals and papers, being one of the group of "Parnassiens." His fame as a poet is chiefly based on his volume of 1874, which attracted great attention at the time of their publication, their polish being particularly admired in literary circles. On Feb. 22, 1894, M. Hérédia was elected a member of the Academy, in succession to the late Mazade. His first collection of poems was issued in 1893 under the title "Trophées": it was at once crowned the Academy, and was the chief reason of his election. In the same year he was created an officer of the Legion of Honour. He has translated "L'Épique de la Conquête de la Nouvelle Espagne" from the Spanish of Fernand Diaz del Castillo. His eldest daughter, Marie, is married to the poet Henri Regnier. His Paris address is: 11 Rue Balzac.

HEREFORD, Bishop of. See CIVIL, THE RIGHT REV. JOHN.

HERKOMER, Hubert, R.A., Hon. Fellow of 'All Souls', &c., born in 1849, at Waal, in Bavaria, father, Lorenz Herkomer, who was a famous wood-carver, emigrated with his family in 1851, to the United States, but he sought to improve his fortunes in England and settled in Southampton. As Hubert was hindered much in his education by ill-health and poverty: at thirteen he entered the Art School in Southampton. In 1865 he went to London with his father (who had been commissioned to carve copies of figures for the Crystal Palace, after the designs of Vischer), and while there the young artist was aided in his studies by J. E. Echter. In 1866 he entered the South Kensington, but after five months was obliged to return to Southampton, where he was instrumental in establishing a drawing-school for the study of the human figure from the life, and at Christmas in that year and the young artists associated with him held an exhibition of their works, at which he sold his first picture. In 1867 he went to South Kensington for six months, and in the following year he established himself in the village of Putney, and there painted two pictures, which he exhibited at the Dudley Gallery. He then came to London, and occupied himself successfully with water-colour painting and designing for the gravers. In 1871 Mr. Herkomer was invited to join the Institute of Painters in Water-Colours; and to the gallery of the Society, and subsequently to the Royal Academy, where he contributed many ly of Bavarian subjects. The oil picture "After the Toil of the Day," in the Lemy Exhibition of 1873, extended his reputation and prepared the way for the "Last Muster," 1875, the memorable picture of Chelsea pensioners, which, after hanging in the Lecture Room at Burlington House in 1875, figured at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, and was there awarded one of the two Grand Medals of Honour snatched off by the English school. Subsequently the artist turned his attention to painting and pure mezzotint engraving, and was chiefly instrumental in causing the revival of the latter art in this country. Earlier pictures exhibited by him at the Royal Academy and other exhibitions in London were: "At Death's Door,"

"God's Shrine," a large Bavarian landscape; "Wind-swept," 1880; "Home-coming," 1882; "Castle Gardens," and "Familiar Enemies," 1883. Since 1880

he painted a very large number of portraits, including many of notable persons.

and again in 1885, he paid visits of several months' duration to America, where he also painted many portraits.

Of his most notable successes in portraiture was that of Miss Catharine Grant in "The Lady in White"—which gained a gold medal at Berlin, Vienna, and London. This portrait was followed by "Companion," in a black scheme of colour, titled "Entranced," painted during his second visit to America, which had also great success. In 1885 his landscape "Landscape," a scene on a Welsh mountain, was purchased under the terms of the Duke of Devonshire Bequest, and in 1889, a second picture—"The Chapel of the Charterhouse"—was purchased in the same manner. Besides these two pictures, his other important works have been "Our

Age," "The Foster-Mother," "The

Germeister and Town Council of Landsberg, Bavaria," a large picture which he presented to that town; "Hard Times," acquired by the Manchester Art Gallery; "The Strike," 1891, his diploma work to the Royal Academy; "Back to Life," and "The Guards' Cheer," 1898, representing Crimean veterans of the Guards bringing her Majesty the Queen during the Jubilee Procession in 1897. Besides these, he has produced a large number of smaller subject pictures, both in oil and water-colours. In the Academy of 1899 he exhibited as many as eight subjects, six of portraits, including one of the Duke of Cornwall, and another of Prince Luitpold of Bavaria. He founded and superintends an important art school at Bushey, in connection with which a theatre was opened in 1888, where a romantic fragment, "The ceress," by Prof. Herkomer himself, was first performed, followed in 1889 by a musical and pictorial play, entitled "An Idyl." Since this date several less important plays have been produced. Mr. Herkomer's house at Bushey, which has been in progress for many years, contains much wood-carving, weaving, and other art-work, designed by the artist, and carried out principally by his father and his two brothers, whose portraits as "The Makers of my House" hang in one of the rooms. At Landsberg-am-Lech, where his mother died, stands the "Mutterthurm," a habitable tower built by him to her memory. Mr. Herkomer was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1879, and a full Member in 1890. Having for some years resigned his position as Member of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colours, he was in 1893 elected an Associate of the Old Water-Colour Society, and in 1894 a full Member. In 1896-97 he acted as Deputy-President of the Society. For nine years, 1885-95, Mr. Herkomer held the position of Slade Professor of Fine Art at Oxford, where he also received the degree of M.A., and an Honorary Fellowship of All Souls' College. He holds the Maximilian Order pour le Mérite, and a Life Professorship at Munich. He had the honour of being elected a Member of the Institute of France in place of Lord Leighton; and is also an Officer of the Legion of Honour. He is a Member of the Academy at Berlin, Vienna, Antwerp, and Stockholm, and is an Honorary Member of many Art Societies, both in the United Kingdom and abroad. His interest in Celtic tradition was manifested in 1896, when he presented to the Arch-Druid of Wales, Hwfa Mon, a complete official Druidic costume, with jewelled insignia, designed in accordance with ancient tradition. Permanent addresses: Lululaund, Bushey, Herts; and Athenæum.

HERMITE, Professor Charles, was born on Dec. 25, 1822, at Dieuze, Lorraine, and studied first at Nancy, and then at Paris. He is a distinguished mathematician, Professor of Higher Algebra at the Sorbonne, and Honorary Professor at the École Polytechnique. Dr. Hickson has been, since 1894, Professor of Zoology at the Owens College, Manchester. He is the author of: "A Naturalist in North Celebes"; "The Fauna of the Deep Sea." Address: Ellesmere House, Withington, Manchester.

HIGGINSON, Mary (Thacher), was born at Machias, Me., Nov. 27, 1843, and is the daughter of Peter and Margaret Potter Thacher. She is the niece, by his first marriage, of Henry W. Longfellow, who induced her to publish her first book, "Seashore and Prairies," 1876. She has since published "Room for One More" (a tale), 1879; and, with her husband (T. W. Higginson), a volume of poems, "Such as They Are," 1893.

HIGGINSON, Thomas Wentworth, was born at Cambridge, Massachusetts, Dec. 22, 1823. He graduated at Harvard College in 1841, studied divinity, and was a minister of the Theodore Parker school until 1858, when, having entered actively into literature and also into political affairs, notably in the anti-slavery conflict in Kansas, he abandoned the pulpit. In 1862 he became captain in a Massachusetts regiment of volunteers, and afterwards colonel of a coloured regiment in South Carolina, this being the first regiment of freed slaves in the United States service. He was severely wounded in August 1863, and left the service in the following year. From the close of the war to 1878 he resided at Newport, Rhode Island, but since 1878 has lived at Cambridge, Massachusetts. He is an earnest advocate of woman suffrage, and in 1880 and in 1881 was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. From 1881 to 1884 he was a member of the State Board of Education. He has published: "Outdoor Papers," 1863; "Malbone, an Oldport Romance," 1869; and "Oldport Days," 1873, both depicting life at the watering-place of Newport; "Army Life in a Black Regiment," which was translated into French, 1870; "The Sympathy of Religions," 1871 (reprinted 1883); "Harvard Memorial Biographies," 1866; "Atlantic Essays," 1871; "Brief Biographies of European Statesmen," 1875; a "Young Folk's History of the United States," 1875, which has been translated into French, Italian, and German; "Young Folk's Book of American Explorers," 1877; "Short Studies of American Authors," 1879; "Common Sense about Women," 1881; "Margaret Fuller Ossoli," 1884; "A Larger History of the United States," 1885; "The Monarch of Dreams," 1886; "Hints on Writing and Speech-making," 1887; "Women and Men," 1888; "Travellers and Outlaws," and "The Afternoon Landscape," poems, 1889; "The New World and the New Book," 1892; "Concerning All of Us," 1892; "English History for American Readers" (with Professor Edward Channing of Harvard University); and "Such as they Are," poems (with his wife, Mary Thacher Higginson), 1893; "Massachusetts in the Army and Navy," 1895-96; "Book and Heart," "The Procession of the Flowers," 1897; "Cheerful Yesterdays," and "Tales of the Emerald Islands," 1898. He also translated "complete works" of Epictetus (revised edit., 2 vols., 1890). In addition to these he is a frequent contributor to the magazines and papers, particularly the Atlantic Monthly, the New York Harper's Bazaar.

HILES, Henry, Mus. Doc., b. Shrewsbury, Dec. 31, 1826, was educated privately in his native town. Dr. Hiles held several organ appointments in London and Manchester, and was appointed Lecturer on Harmony and Musical Composition at the Owens College, Manchester, in 1880, which appointment he still holds. He is also Professor of Harmony, Composition and History in the Manchester College of Music, and conductor of several important societies in and near Manchester. He graduated Mus. B. at Oxford in 1854, Mus. Doc. in 1867. Dr. Hiles gained prizes for the best organ composition offered by the College of Organists in 1864, 1865, and 1868; also the best anthem in 1865; and was by the Council specially elected as a member of the College. In 1868 Dr. Hiles' composition for six voices was returned as "unquestionably superior to all the other compositions submitted." In 1878 the prize offered by the Manchester Gentlemen's Glee Club for the best serious glee was awarded to him for his four-voiced glee "The Death," which, with two other works, was returned at the head of the compositions sent in. Dr. Hiles is also known as the author of several theoretical works—especially "The Grammar of Music; a Treatise on Counterpoint, and Form," "Past and Modern Counterpoint," and a treatise on all styles of parallel motion, invertible or otherwise; and a poser of a large quantity of exercises, also as the author of an Oratorio, "The Patriarchs," several cantatas, "Fayre Pastorel," "The Crusades," and "War in the Household," and operatic works, of several characters, and of many songs and choruses of classical form. In 1882 Dr. Hiles took a leading part in the establishment of "The National Society of Professional Musicians," now called "The Incorporated Society of Musicians," an association of musical artists and teachers, which has developed throughout the kingdom. Address: Owens College, Manchester.

HILL, Alex, M.A., M.D., Chancellor of Cambridge University, Master of Downing College, w

ington in 1856, and is the son of John Hill, of the London Stock Exchange. He was educated at University College School, at Downing College, Cambridge, also the medical profession at St. Bartholomew's Hospital. He was appointed Fellow of Downing in 1880, and in 1888 Master. He is said to have been the youngest man, only medical man, appointed to a university headship since William Harvey made Warden of Merton in 1644. He was appointed Hunterian Professor of Royal College of Surgeons (Eng.) in 1885, and gave two series of lectures on Brain, was at one time President of Neurological Society of London, and been the energetic Chairman of Executive Committee of the National Home-dwelling Union since its foundation. He has written some important works on Neurology, which include "The Plan of the Central Nervous System," 1885; and a translation of Obersteiner's "Central Nervous Organs." Other works of his are "Notes to Browning's Poems," and, in 1897, "A Run round the Empire." He married, in 1878, a daughter of the late Benjamin Woodward, of Liverpool. Address: Downing Lodge, Cambridge.

HILL, The Right Hon. Alexander Staveley, Q.C., M.P., D.C.L., J.P., D.L., was born at Dunstall Hall, Staffordshire, in 1825, and was educated at Birmingham Grammar School, in the house of Dr. Lee, the future first Bishop of Manchester, and in company with Rendal, Westcott, Evans, Lightfoot, Benson, and other celebrities. From there he went to Exeter College, Oxford, and in due course, having taken his degree, was elected to a Staffordshire Fellowship at St. John's. He subsequently took his D.C.L. degree, and was appointed one of the Examiners in Law and Modern History, in which capacity he participated in the award of a "first class" to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. He was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple in 1852, and joined the Oxford Circuit, being elected the same night as Mr. Henry Matthews, Mr. Ward Hunt, and Sir Henry James; and he soon obtained a large practice, eventually becoming leader of the circuit. His practice was very varied, ranging from criminal business, probate and divorce, to Parliamentary; and in addition to all this he found time to devote himself energetically to the Volunteer movement. He was, in fact, one of the first to join the Victoria Rifles in 1859. It was not till 1865 that he was tempted to take any part in politics, and by that time his Parliamentary practice had become exceedingly lucrative. The death of his wife in 1868, and the increasing calls of his profession had, however, decided Mr. Staveley Hill to give up all thought of politics when the offer made by Mr. Disraeli led him to reconsider his decision. He sat for Coventry from 1868 to 1874, for West Staffordshire from 1874 to 1885, and has represented the King'swinford Division since that date. Perhaps the most interesting part of Mr. Staveley Hill's career is his connection with Canada. He first went out there in 1881 to ascertain, on behalf of his constituents, what sort of place it was for emigration; and speedily becoming alive to the advantages of the New World, he not only established a large cattle ranche in the Far West, but returned there himself in successive autumns, and eventually published his book, "From Home to Home," which sets out the wild charm of life among the foot-hills of the Rocky Mountains. This book is dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Princess Louise. It is illustrated with sketches by the present Mrs. Staveley Hill, whom he married in 1876, and who has regularly accompanied him in his Canadian tours. Mr. Staveley Hill is a staunch advocate of a duty on foreign manufactured goods, and has for many years worked in the cause of Imperial federation, having seen enough of our Empire to realise how entirely self-supporting it could become. Mr. Staveley Hill was Treasurer of the Inner Temple in 1886, and is Judge-Advocate of the Fleet and Counsel to the Admiralty, and Deputy High Steward to Oxford University. He is also Deputy Lieutenant and J.P. for Staffordshire. He married (1) in 1864 Katharine, daughter of M. Ponsonby, and (2) in 1876 Mary, daughter of the late F. Baird. Addresses: 13 King's Bench Walk, E.C.; 4 Queen's Gate, S.W.; and Oxley Manor, Wolverhampton.

HILL, The Right Hon. Lord Arthur William, M.P., D.L., J.P., youngest son of the 4th Marquis of Downshire, was born in 1846. He entered the 2nd Life Guards as Lieutenant in 1865, and retired in 1868. In 1880 he was returned as Conservative member for co. Down, and in 1885 was returned for co. Down West, which he continues to represent. From 1885 to 1892 he was Comptroller of the Royal Household and Conservative Whip, and was reappointed Comptroller of the Household in 1895. He was Lieutenant-Colonel in the 2nd Middlesex Artillery Volunteers from 1885 to 1887, and is Deputy-Lieutenant for co. Down, and J.P. for Sussex, Berks, and co. Down. He married (2), in 1877, Annie, daughter of J. F. Harrison. Address: 74 Eaton Place, S.W., &c.

HILL, Sir Clement Lloyd, K.C.M.G., C.B., head of the African Department of the Foreign Office, was born on May 5, 1845, and is the third son of the late

Rev. John Hill. He was educated at Marlborough College; entered the Foreign Office in 1867; was secretary to Sir Bartle Frere's mission to Zanzibar in 1872-73; was appointed Acting Chargé d'Affaires at Munich in 1876; and was Commissioner to Hayti in 1886 and 1887. He was created K.C.M.G. in 1887, and C.B. in June 1898, for services in connection with the then recent West African negotiations. He married in 1889 the widow of Charles Waring, daughter of Sir G. Denys. Address: 9 Grosvenor Place, S.W.

HILL, Hon. David Bennett, American statesman, was born at Havana, New York, Aug. 29, 1843. He received an academic education, studied law and was admitted to the Bar at Elmira, New York, in 1864. In the same year he was appointed City Attorney. Since 1868 he has been a delegate to many Democratic State Conventions, serving as President of those held in 1877 and 1881. He was also a delegate to the National Conventions of the same party in 1876 and 1884. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1870 and again in 1871; was chosen Mayor of Elmira in 1882; and in January 1883 became Lieut.-Governor of the State. On the resignation of Governor Cleveland in 1884 after his election to the Presidency, Mr. Hill became Governor of New York, a position which by subsequent elections he continued to hold till 1891, when he entered the U.S. Senate for the term ending March 1897, at which time he was succeeded by Thomas C. Platt.

HILL, Sir Edward Stock, K.C.B., J.P., M.P. for Bristol (South) from 1886 to 1898, is the son of the late Mr. C. Hill, of Bristol, and was born at Bristol in 1834. He was educated at Bishop's College, Bristol, and on the Continent. He was elected President of the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom in 1881, and was President of the Association of Chambers of Commerce from 1888 to 1891. He is partner in the Bristol shipowning and mercantile firm of Charles Hill and Sons, is J.P. for Glamorgan and Cardiff, and was High Sheriff of Glamorgan in 1888, has been Colonel-Commandant (since 1864) of the Glamorganshire Artillery Volunteers, and is K.C. of the Swedish Order of Wasa. He was made K.C.B. in 1892. He married a daughter of General Tickell, C.B., in 1866. Addresses: 1 St. James's Street, S.W., and Rookwood, Llandaff, &c.

HILL, George Birkbeck Norman, D.C.L., LL.D., was born at Tottenham on June 7, 1837, and is the second son of Arthur Hill, Head-master of Bruce Castle School. He is of the family of Sir Rowland Hill, K.C.B. He was educated at his father's school, and at Pembroke College, Oxford, where he took a fourth class in Lit. Hum. From 1859 to 1876 he was Head-master of Bruce Castle School, and since that date has devoted himself to letters. As he grows an old man, he is the first living author of the Johnsoniana, and has become famous as the editor of the definitive Boswell and of Johnson's "Letters." He was B.C.L. in 1866; D.C.L. in 1871; and Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford, in 1876. Hon. LL.D. of Williams College, Conn. His works include: "Dr. Johnson and his Critics," 1875; "The steps of Dr. Johnson in Scotland," 1879, and one of the Life, 1886; edition of "Rasselas," "Wit and Wisdom of Dr. Johnson," 1888; editions of Boswell's "Traveller," 1888; "Life of David Hume to W. Strahan," 1889; "Essays of Dr. Johnson," 1889; "Life of Johnson," 1892; "Johnsoniana," 1897, &c., &c. Address: Wilderness, Holy Hill, Hampstead.

HILL, Joanna M. Margrave, born at Hampstead. She is the daughter of the late Mr. Mathew Hill, Recorder of Birmingham, M.P. for Hull, and niece of Rowland Hill, of penny-postage fame. The greater portion of a century the family have been associated with useful and philanthropic, and from childhood the influences surrounding Joanna Hill were calculated to lead to a life of intelligent devotion to good creatures. She was the god-daughter of the well-known writer Joanna Baillie, a pupil of Mary Carpenter, who left its mark on the character of the girl. At an early age Miss Hill became a friend and collaborateur of her father in his labours for the amelioration of the condition of criminal and neglected girls. In 1860 she and her elder sister published "Our Exemplars," being an account of lives of persons of all classes who benefited mankind to a remarkable degree. It was published with a preface by Lord Brougham. Circumstances led to Miss Hill's notice, in 1859, the condition of girls in workhouses. She became a member of the Visiting Association, and for many years was a constant visitor in the workhouses of Bristol, where her father resided. After her father's death she took of the Recordship of Birmingham, Hill, with the consent of the governing body of the poor of that town, revived a visiting young workhouse girls' association which had fallen into disuse.

falling health of its originator, Mrs. Talbot. While studying the condition of pauper children, Miss Hill heard a system then being tried in some parts of England, Scotland, and Ireland to give the pauper child to the privileges of family life under the careful supervision of prudent ladies. To this scheme Miss Hill devoted her best energies, and, on becoming secretary to the King's Norton Ragged-School Committee, she has accomplished a good work. Miss Hill's evidence before the Select Committee for the Ragged-School Life Protection Bill, will be found in the Blue-Book published in August 1890; and a paper in the appendix of the same Blue-Book, which contains information concerning her plan for the inspection of pauper children by lady visitors.

HILL, Micaiah John Muller, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Mathematics, University College, London, eldest son of the late Rev. Samuel John Hill, was born on Nov. 22, 1856, at Berhampore, Bengal. From 1864 to 1872 he was educated at the Ragged-School for Sons of Missionaries, Black-Path. From this school he obtained, in June 1872, the fourth place and first prize in the Matriculation Examination of the University of London, and in the following September, an Andrews Entrance Prize at University College, London. There he devoted his attention chiefly to the study of Mathematics under Professors Henrici and Clifford. In June 1873 he obtained the Exhibition in Mathematics at the first—or, as it is now called, the Intermediate—B.A. Examination. In June 1874 he obtained a second year Andrews prize at University College, and in the following November the Scholarship in Mathematics at the B.A. Examination of the University of London. In April 1875 he competed for the Civil Service of India, and obtained the first place in the open competition, but did not proceed to the further examinations. In October 1875 he entered as an undergraduate at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, where he had been elected to an open scholarship, and whilst studying there he was elected, in February 1876, a Fellow of University College, London, and in June of that year he obtained the Gold Medal for Mathematics at the M.A. Examination at the University of London. In January 1879 he was bracketed equal Fourth Wrangler, and immediately afterwards was bracketed equal Smith's Prizeman. From April 1879 to June 1880 he acted as Assistant-Professor of Mathematics at University College, London. In February 1880 he was appointed Professor of Mathematics at the Mason Science College, Birmingham, commencing work there in the following October on the opening of the College. In 1883 he took the degree of M.A. in the University of Cambridge, was elected a Fellow of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, and a member of the London Mathematical Society. In 1884 he was appointed Professor of Mathematics at University College, London, acting as Dean of the Faculty of Arts from 1888 to 1890, and Member of the Council of the College from 1888 to 1892. From 1877 to 1882 he acted as Assistant-Examiner, and from 1885 to 1890 as Chief Examiner in Mathematics at the University of London. In 1890 he received the degree of Doctor of Science from the University of Cambridge for original work. In 1891 he was elected a Member of the Council of the London Mathematical Society, and in 1894 a Fellow of the Royal Society. His chief writings on mathematical subjects are a paper on the "Discriminants of Ordinary Integrable Differential Equations" in the Proceedings of the London Mathematical Society, a paper on the "Fifth Book of Euclid's Elements" in the Transactions of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, and the following papers in the Proceedings and Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society: "On the Motion of Fluid, part of which is moving rotationally and part irrotationally" (Proceedings, No. 229, Transactions, Part II., 1884); "On the Locus of Singular Points and Lines which occur in connection with the Theory of the Locus of Ultimate Intersections of a System of Surfaces" (Proceedings, vol. 50, Transactions, vol. 183, 1892); "On a Spherical Vortex" (Proceedings, vol. 55, Transactions, A., 1894). He was married on Dec. 21, 1892, to Minna Grace, elder daughter of the late Marriott Ogle Tarbotton, Consulting Engineer to the Corporation of Nottingham. Address: Lakeview, Northwood, near Rickmansworth.

HILL, Octavia. social reformer, has laboured principally among the poor, whom she seeks to benefit morally and physically. The record of her work is given in "Homes of the London Poor," and from it we learn that in 1864, partly at the suggestion and under the guidance of Mr. Ruskin, who advanced the necessary funds for the beginning of the scheme, Miss Octavia Hill purchased three cottages in one of the poorest courts in Marylebone, and became her own rent-collector and manager, and without any commercial loss, succeeded by kindness and conciliation in effecting the gradual reformation of the tenants. By degrees the whole of the court became hers; and the Countess of Ducie and others entrusted their property in Marylebone and Drury Lane to her management, with the same excellent results. Miss Octavia Hill's work in managing houses has of late years largely extended, and she has also devoted much time to securing and preserving open spaces both in London and in the country. Address: 190 Marylebone Road, N.W.

HILLIER, Frederick James, late editor of the Morning, is the second son of Alfred George Hillier, and was born at Southampton in 1868. He was privately educated, and joined the staff of the New York Herald, becoming successively assistant London correspondent, news editor, in 1890, of the London edition, and then night editor in Paris. He was subsequently offered the chief sub-editorship of the Morning, when it was started, and was promoted to be news editor and editor. In November 1898 he resigned this last post, which he had filled with great ability. He married, in 1890, Anne, daughter of William Henry, of St. Heliers. Address: 18 Electric Mansions, Brixton, S.W.

HIND, C. Lewis, editor of the Academy, was born in 1862. He has been sub-editor of the Art Journal, 1887-92, editor of the Pall Mall Budget, 1893-95, and has written largely for magazines and newspapers. In November 1896 he succeeded Mr. Cotton as editor of the Academy, and has introduced great changes and improvements into the working of that important literary weekly. In November 1898 he published "The Enchanted Stone," which has been described as "a very modern romance," in a style beyond reproach. Address: 43 Chancery Lane, W.C.

HINGESTON-RANDOLPH, The Rev. Prebendary Francis Charles, M.A., born at Truro, March 31, 1833, is the only son of the late Francis Hingeston, St. Ives and Truro, and Jane, eldest daughter of the late William Kirkness, of Kernick. He was educated at the Truro Grammar School, and at Exeter College, Oxford (B.A., Double Hon. fourth Classics and Mathematics, 1855; M.A. 1858). Having held a curacy in Oxford (Holywell), he was appointed in 1859 to the Perpetual Curacy of Hampton Gay, near Oxford, and in 1860 to the Rectory of Ringmore, Devon. He was appointed Domestic Chaplain to the Baroness le Despenser (Dowager Viscountess Falmouth), 1859; Rural Dean of Woodleigh, Devon, 1879; and Prebendary of Exeter, 1885. He is the author of "Specimens of Ancient Cornish Crosses, Fonts, &c.," 1850; "Four Years of a Country Friendly Society," 1870; has edited "The Poems of Francis Hingeston," 1857; "The Chronicle of England, by John Capgrave" (under the direction of the Master of the Rolls);

"Johannis Capgravii Liber de Henricis" (in the same series: "Book of the Illustrious Henries," translated from the Latin of Capgrave), and "A Collection of Royal and Ecclesiastical Letters during the Reign of Henry III. (for the Master of the Rolls), 1891; "Register of Edmund Stafford, Bishop of Exeter," 1886; "The Register of John Bronescombe and Peter Quivil, Bishops of Exeter," 1889; "The Register of John de Stapeldon, Bishop of Exeter," 1891; "The Register of John de Grandison, Bishop of Exeter," 3 vols., 1894-5. He married Martha, only child of the Rev. Herbert Randolph, whose widow he assumed in 1860. Address: Rectory, near Kingsbridge.

HINKSON, Katharine Tynan, KATHARINE.

HISTORICUS. See HARCOURT, RIGHT HON. SIR WILLIAM.

HITCHCOCK, Ethan Allen, born at Mobile, Alabama, in 1835, his parents being of New England stock and he a great-grandson of Allen of American revolutionaries. After taking an academic course at New Haven, Connecticut, he went to St. Louis in 1851 and engaged in literary pursuits till 1860, when he went to China and was employed by the old-established house of Oliphant & Co. there. He returned to St. Louis in 1874, where he was president of several large manufacturing and railroad corporations, but resigned these positions in 1897 to become United States Minister to Russia.

HITCHENS, Rev. J. Henry, was born in 1835, and educated at the Congregational Church Ministry, Western College. He settled as minister of Peckham Rye Congregational Church, 1858; was one of the earliest to appear at the London theatres; became a well-known lecturer on historical and biblical subjects; was elected Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature in 1887; Deputy-Chairman of the London Missionary Society in 1887; became minister of Eccleston Square Church, London, in 1871; President of the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews. He is the author of "Ecce Veritas," "The Young Man and the Scripture," "Bible Waters," "The Living Angel," "Perfect Through Faith," "The Jesuits, their history and influence," "The Face of the King," "The Cross," and several other works. Address: 90 Gloucester Street, Belgravia, HITT, Robert Roberts, American statesman, was born at Urbana, Ohio, Jan. 1834; removed to Ogle County, Illinois, in 1837; was educated at Rockport Seminary and at De Pauw University. He was First Secretary of Legation, Chargé d'Affaires ad interim, at Paris, from December 1874 until March 1877; was Assistant-Secretary of State in 1877; was elected to the Forty-seventh Congress in November 1882 to fill a vacancy, and has been continuously re-elected since then to represent his district. He is at present (1898) Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives.

HOARE, Hon. George Frisbie, LL.D., son of the Hon. Ebenezer Rockwood Hoare, was born at Concord, Massachusetts, Aug. 29, 1826. A.B. Harvard, 1845. He was admitted to the Bar in 1849, and began practice at Worcester, where he still resides. He was a Member of the State House of Representatives in 1852, and of the State Senate in 1857. He was City Solicitor in 1860, and in 1868 was elected a Member of Congress, and was re-elected three times, declining a nomination for a fifth term. From 1874 to 1880 he was an Overseer of Harvard; was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions of 1876, 1880, 1884, and 1888, siding over that of 1880. He was elected a United States Senator from Massachusetts in 1877, and re-elected in 1883, 1889, and 1895. When a Member of the lower branch of Congress he was one of its managers in the Belknap impeachment in 1876, and served on the Electoral Commission which decided the disputed presidential question in the same year. He was a regent of the Smithsonian Institution in 1880, and is now (1898) President of the American Antiquarian Society; trustee of the Peabody Museum of Archaeology; and a member of many learned societies. The degree of LL.D. has been conferred upon him by Williamstown, Amherst, Williams, Yale, and Harvard Colleges.

HOARE, Alfred, is the fifth son of the late Mr. H. Hoare. He was educated at Eton, and at St. John's College, Cambridge, of which he was a scholar. In 1863 he was 14th wrangler. He is a partner in the famous banking house at 11 Fleet Street. He represented Holborn in the first London County Council, and was an Alderman (Progressive) in the second London County Council. He was re-elected Alderman (Radical) for the next six years in which he stood second on the poll with 168 votes. Addresses: 37 Fleet Street; Athenæum.

HOARE, Edward Brodie, M.P., is the son of the late Rev. Edward Hoare, Hon. Canon of Canterbury, and for many years Vicar of Holy Trinity, Tunbridge Wells, and Maria Eliza, daughter of Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie, Bart. He was born at Richmond, Surrey, on Oct. 30, 1841. He was educated at Tunbridge School and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he obtained his B.A. degree in 1864, and M.A. in 1867. He was for several years a partner in the banking-house of Barnett, Hoare & Co., and became a director of Lloyd's Bank, Limited, on the amalgamation of the two banks in 1884. In 1885 he contested the Attercliffe division of Sheffield, and the Central division of Bradford on the death of the Right Hon. W. E. Forster in 1886. He was returned as Member for Hampstead on the elevation of Sir Henry Holland to the peerage in 1888, and has sat for that constituency as a Conservative since that date. He married Katharine, daughter of Rear-Admiral Sir Wm. Edward Parry, in 1868. Address: Tenchleys, Limpsfield, Sussex.

HOBART, Garret A., Vice-President of the United States, was born in Monmouth County, New Jersey, June 3, 1844. He graduated from Rutgers College in 1863; taught school a short time, and then studied law and was admitted to the Bar in 1869, commencing practice in Paterson, N. J. He was a Member of the State Legislature in 1873 and 1874, and was elected Speaker of the lower house in 1876; was elected to the Senate of the State in 1879, and in 1881 was President of that body, and re-elected in 1882. He was elected Vice-President of the United States in 1896, and took the oath of office March 4, 1897.

HOBBS, John Oliver (Mrs. Craigie), née Pearl Mary Teresa Richards, is the eldest daughter of John Morgan Richards, and was born at Boston, Mass., on Nov. 3, 1867. She was privately educated, and afterwards studied music at the Royal Academy under Macfarren, and in Paris. She also studied Greek and Latin at University College, London, under that brilliant scholar, the late Professor A. Goodwin. Thus equipped, she early learned the value of literary style, and now shares with Mrs. Meynell the distinction of being a master of epigram and pure English. Her first novel, "Some Emotions and a Moral," appeared in 1891, and at once put her in the first rank of contemporary novelists. This was followed by "The Sinner's Comedy," 1892; "A Study in Temptations," 1893; "A Bundle of Life," 1894; "The Gods, some Mortals, and Lord Wickenham," 1895;

"The Herb-Moon." 1897. "School for Saints." 1907. As a playwright John Oliver Hobbes has been no less successful than as a writer of novels. Her first piece was written for Miss Ellen Terry, and is entitled "Journeys End in Lovers Meeting. Proverb in one Act." 1894. Her play, "The Ambassador," still running with undiminished success at the St. James's Theatre, was first produced in 1898. She has also written "Repentance," a drama in one act. 1899. Address: 56 Lancaster Gate, W.

HOBHOUSE, Lord. The Right Hon. Sir Arthur, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., fourth son of the late Right Hon. Henry Hobhouse, of Halden House, Somersetshire, by Harriet, sixth daughter of John Tilton, Esq., of Sarnall Hall, Staffordshire, was born at Halden, Nov. 10, 1818. He was educated at Eton and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he gained a first class in classics in 1841. In 1845 he became a Member of the Chancery Bar, and practised as a conveyancer and equity draughtsman, and subsequently as a Queen's Counsel, in the Rolls Court. He was appointed one of Her Majesty's Counsel in 1865; but in the following year he quitted the Bar in consequence of ill-health, and was appointed a Charity Commissioner, and in 1869 an Endowed Schools Commissioner. In 1872 he was nominated Law Member of the Governor-General's Council in India, and on his retirement in 1877, was created a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India. In 1878 he was appointed arbitrator under the Epping Forest Act; and in 1881 he was made a Privy Councillor and a Member of the Judicial Committee. In 1882-84 he was a Member of the London School Board, and from 1889-92 was an Alderman of the London County Council. In 1885 he was created Baron Hobhouse, of Halden, in the county of Somerset. Lord Hobhouse has taken a keen interest in many social topics, especially in those connected with women's property, with endowments, and with settlements and transfer of land. He has delivered many addresses on these subjects, some of which were collected and printed under the title of "The Dead Hand," 1880. He stood for Westminster in the Liberal interest at the general election of 1880, but was unsuccessful. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Farrer, in 1868. Addresses: 15 Bruton Street, W.; and Athenæum.

HOBSON, Lieutenant Richmond Pearson, United States naval officer, was born at Greensboro', Alabama, Aug. 17, 1870; was educated at the Southern University and at the Naval Academy, where he graduated in 1891. His constructive genius was so marked that he was sent for a three years' period of study to Paris. On his return he organised and conducted the graduate course of construction at the United States Naval Academy. When Spain was declared in April 1898, he applied for active service and was assigned to the flag-ship Albatross, as First Lieutenant, and distinguished himself in June following by taking a Spanish collier, with the aid of a crew of 100 men, in under the guns of the Albatross, and there sinking his vessel, in that way preventing the escape of the Spanish fleet from the harbour. He and his men were taken prisoners, but were released a month later, with the rest of the Albatross crew, and returned safely to their own ships.

HOCKING, Joseph, minister and novelist, born in St. Austell, in Brannel, Cornwall, on Nov. 1, 1825, the son of James Hocking, a farmer, and Elizabeth Hocking, deceased. He was educated at a village school, afterwards at Owens College, Manchester, and Crescent Road, Victoria Park, Manchester. He exhibited an exceptional fondness for reading, and would walk seven miles away, when seven years old, in order to spend a day on a cheap reprint of some volume. He had read nearly all Sir Walter Scott's books at twelve years of age, and had read stories from early childhood. At twenty years of age he had completed a volume novel. He became a surveyor at the age of sixteen, and entered Owens College, Manchester, at twenty, and left it when twenty-two, after pursuing theological studies at the Free Church of Scotland, and at the University of Glasgow, where he took the Robertson Prize, and stood first for the Free Church of Scotland. He entered the Free Church of Scotland at twenty-three in a Yorkshire village, where he remained two years, and afterwards came to London. In 1887 he spent six months in Eastern travel; went to Egypt (up the Nile), Port Said, Jerusalem, &c., and spent six months in the Holy Land. He visited Smyrna, Rhodes, Ephesus, Athens, &c. On his return from the East he wrote his first novel, "Jacob's Brook," a religious novel, and a song. The book has sold by n by "Her Benny," a story of Liverpool street life, which has been translated into a number of languages, and has had a sale of over 100,000 copies. In 1879 "His Father" and "Reedyford" were published. These were followed in successive years by "Ivy," "Sea-waif," "Dick's Fairy," "Real Grit," "Caleb Carthew," "Crook-leigh," "For Abigail," "Rex Raynor," "For Light and Liberty," "Doctor Dick," "Where Duty Lies," "One in Charity," "The Heart of Man," "For Such is Life," "In Spite of Fate," and "God's Outcast." The last-named has been lately issued. The total sale of these volumes has reached 1,200,000 copies. In 1894 he was appointed editor of the Family Circle, which post he relinquished in 1896, when along with Mr. F. A. Atkins he established the Temple Magazine, a sixpenny illustrated monthly for Sunday and general reading, which has taken a prominent position among the illustrated magazines of the day. In addition to his literary work Mr. Hocking has lectured on various subjects in nearly all the principal towns and cities of England, drawing large audiences wherever he has appeared. His more recent volumes have been translated into French, German, and Danish. Mr. Hocking is a frequent contributor to periodical literature, and also writes a weekly column of chat for the National Press Agency, in which he deals with current topics from an ethical standpoint. This is syndicated throughout the country under the title of "For a Quiet Hour." He married in 1876 the youngest daughter of Mr. R. Lloyd, of Liverpool, by whom he has two sons and two daughters. Address: 18 Avenue Road, Highgate, N.

HODGE, Harold, editor of the Saturday Review, was born in 1862. His parents are both Cornish, his father being a member of the firm of Gotheby's. He is the youngest of three sons, the eldest being Rector of Holy Trinity, Marylebone, the second a partner with his father in Gotheby's. Mr. Hodge was educated at St. Paul's School, under Mr. Frederick Walker, where he was captain of football and president of the debating society, and at Pembroke College, Oxford, of which he was an Open Exhibitioner. He took his degree in Classics (2nd Mods., 3rd Greats). On leaving Oxford in 1885, he devoted himself for some years to the study of social and political problems in East London. He is still actively connected with the Oxford House in Bethnal Green and with the Mansion House Council on the Dwellings of the Poor. He was called to the Bar (Middle Temple) in 1893, devoting himself to Common Law and Parliamentary practice. He was one of the counsel in the famous Colonial Judge Case (Anderson v. Gorrie), the last case Lord Coleridge ever tried. During this time he was a contributor to the Saturday Review. He has also written in the Fortnightly Review and in the Athenæum. But it was as a politician and social worker rather than as a journalist that Mr. Hodge came to take the editorship of the Saturday Review. He has always taken the deepest interest in Church matters and in problems affecting the welfare of the working classes, particularly questions of housing and public health and elementary education. He inherits a strong turn for natural history. Address: 6 Crown Office Row, Temple, E.C.

HODGSON, Frederic Mitchell, C.M.G., Governor of Gold Coast Colony, was born in 1850, and entered the Post Office in 1869. In 1882 he became Postmaster-General of British Guiana, a post which he exchanged for the Colonial Secretaryship of the Gold Coast in 1888. In 1892 he raised a force of Gold Coast Volunteers, of which he is the Major commanding. Having administered the Colony in the absence of the Governor on several occasions, he was appointed to succeed Sir W. E. Maxwell, K.C.M.G., on March 22, 1898.

HOEY, Mrs. Frances Sarah (who writes as Mrs. Cashel Hoey), wife of John Cashel Hoey, Esq., C.M.G., of Dromalane, Newry, daughter of the late Charles Bolton Johnston, Esq., was born at Bushey Park, Rathfarnham, co. Dublin, Feb. 15, 1830. She married, in 1846, the late Adam Murray Stewart, Esq., of Cromleigh, co. Dublin, and secondly, in 1858, her present husband. Mrs. Cashel Hoey has written for several literary journals since 1860, and is the author of the following novels: "A House of Cards," "Falsely True," "A Golden Sorrow," "Out of Court," "Griffith's Double," "All or Nothing," "The Blossoming of an Aloe," "No Sign," "The Question of Cain," 1882 (new edit., 1890); "The Lover's Creed," 1884; and "A Stern Chase," 1886; "The Queen's Token," &c. Mrs. Cashel Hoey is a contributor to Chambers's Journal, Temple Bar, All the Year Round, Belgravia, London Society, and other periodicals, and is the translator of several works from the French and Italian languages. Among the former are: "The Memoirs of Madame de Rémusat," "The King's Secret," "1794: A Tale of the Terror," "The Last Days of the Consulate," "Frederick the Great and Marie Theresa," "The Surprising Exploits of Dr. Quies," "Ten Centuries of Toilet" (a translation), and "A Friend of the Queen"

(Marie Antoinette and Count de F- translation), 1894. Address: Dr. Newry.

HOFMEYER, The Hon. J. South African journalist and the moving spirit of the African. He has represented South Africa at conferences, notably at Ottawa and London. He edits the Folkstem. For a year the ally of Cecil Rhodes; broke with him after the Jameson and in the elections of 1894 was an opponent, not as a candidate, but a puller of the Bond Caucus. In 1895 he was a man who advised separation from England, but after the Transvaal War of 1896 he acted as mediator between the Boers and the Government, especially over the franchise question, when a peaceful settlement arrived at through his influence.

HOGAN, James Francis M. born at Nenagh, Tipperary, on Feb. 1, 1855, but while still an infant was by his parents to Australia. He was educated in St. Patrick's College, Melbourne, and was for some years in the Public Education Department of Victoria. In 1881 he joined the staff of the Melbourne Argus, being also a regular contributor to the Melbourne Punch and Sydney Daily Telegraph. Articles by his pen have appeared in the Review, the Victorian Review and other colonial periodicals. He was elected and the first President of the Catholic Young Men's Society. A heroic bronze statue of Daniel O'Connell by Mr. Thos. Brock, R.A., now in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Melbourne, was erected by a committee of which Mr. Hogan was secretary. He is the author of the following books: "The Australian Christmas Collection," "History of the Irish in Australia," "The Australian in London," "The Lost Explorer," 1890; "The King," 1891; "Robert Lowe, Sherbrooke," 1893; "The Sisters," 1895; and "The Gladstone," 1898. In February 1893 Mr. Hogan was elected, without opposition, to the Division of Tipperary. Since then he has been in the House of Commons he has been in the promotion and ventilation of questions. He organised the Party, and at its first meeting in 1893 was unanimously appointed secretary. To the Contemporary in November 1893 he contributed an explanatory of the constitution, objects of the Colonial Party, and of membership now numbers from all quarters of the House, by a common interest in colonial and the adequate representation of the interests of Greater Britain in the Parliament. Mr. Hogan was returned unopposed for the Mid of Tipperary at the general election of 1885. Address: Montague Mansion, 11, Bedford Square, W.C.

Quintin, is the youngest son of Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart., of the Old East India Company, also brother of the late Lord John Russell. He was born in London on May 14, 1845, and was educated at Eton. On leaving school Mr. Hogg at once took an active and personal interest in the boys. Eventually he took a house in the neighbourhood of the Polytechnic, which he fitted up as dormitories for about fifty working boys, with a playground, &c., attached. All his time was devoted to their welfare, and he lived amongst them, sleeping in a special corner of the boys' dormitories. He initiated the movement which has since been continued by the Committee of the National Society for Working-Boys. In time, a library, a Sunday School were connected with the home by Mr. Hogg, assisted by his old school friend, Mr. (now Lord) Kinnaid, and Mr. T. H. W. Pelham. In 1873 he published, in a room in Endell Street, the title of "The Youth's Christian Association for those of his age above sixteen years of age." The Institute was of so acceptable and attractive a character to youths, that the membership rose to 1000, and when the premises of the old Polytechnic in the Strand came into the market in 1878, Mr. Hogg purchased them, and moved them for the work of his Association.

From that time the membership went up by leaps and bounds, and now, in 1898, the members exceed 16,000. The work of the Institute is of a threefold character, moral, educational, and religious, and is carried on at any of the religious or classes is perfectly optional. Since the purchase of the lease, and the consequent enlargement of premises for the maintenance, Mr. Hogg has expended some £200,000. For years, from morning until closing time at night, he has been on the spot, making the use of his experience and advice. All this, however, but one aspect of his life. In 1871, Mr. Hogg entered the Indian Civil Service, and was posted to the West Indian house of Bosanquet, Curtis & Co., as a junior, and is now the head of the firm, its present title being Hogg, Curtis, Campbell & Co. At one time he was much pressed to enter Parliament, and was in 1886 invited by the electors of Westminster to stand as their candidate. Indifferent health, however, and a feeling that public life would interfere with his work at the Polytechnic, caused him to decline the invitation. A few years later, however, upon the constitution of the London County Council, he was spontaneously elected Alderman. In February 1899, after eight months' absence in the East Indies, Mr. Quintin Hogg was welcomed home at the Queen's Hall, Langham Place, by an audience of from 3000 to 4000 members of the Polytechnic, representing all the social interests of that institution. In 1871 he married the daughter of Mr. William Graham, the late M.P. for Glasgow, a lady warmly interested in her husband's work. Addresses: 309 Regent Street, W.; 5 Cavendish Square, W.; and Athenæum.

HOLE, The Very Rev. Samuel Reynolds, D.D., Dean of Rochester, was born on Dec. 5, 1819, is the son of Samuel Hole, Esq., whose family has resided at Caunton, Nottinghamshire, since Hugh Hole was Vicar in 1567, and was educated at the Grammar School, Newark-on-Trent, and at Brasenose College, Oxford. He was ordained Deacon, 1844; Priest, 1845; and became Curate of Caunton, 1844; Vicar, 1850; Rural Dean of Southwell, 1865; Prebendary of Lincoln, 1875; Proctor in Convocation, 1875; Chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, 1885; Select Preacher to the University of Oxford, 1885-86; Dean of Rochester, 1887; Almoner of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in 1895; and Grand Chaplain of Freemasons in 1897. Dean Hole is the author of "A Little Tour in Ireland," illustrated by John Leech, 1858; "A Book about Roses," 1859 (this has run through many editions, and has been translated into several languages); "Six of Spades," 1860; "Nice and her Neighbours," 1881; "Hints to Preachers," 1881; and of numerous pamphlets, sermons, and speeches. Among his later works we may mention his "Book about the Garden," 1892; "Memories of Dean Hole," 1892; "More Memories," 1894; and "A Little Tour in America," and "Addresses to Working Men." Addresses: The Deanery, Rochester; and Caunton Manor, Notts.

HOLE, William, R.S.A., only child of Richard Hole, M.D., of Hole, in Exbourne, Devon, and Anne, his wife, the daughter of Dr. Fergusson, Governor of Sierra Leone, was born in Salisbury on Nov. 7, 1846. On the death of his father from cholera in 1849, his mother returned to her family, then residing in Edinburgh, and her son was educated at the Edinburgh Academy and University. In 1874 he was apprenticed to a firm of civil engineers. After four years he took a trip to Italy, and developed latent artistic instincts in the congenial studio atmosphere of Rome. On his return he could find no employment as an engineer, and definitely abandoned that profession for art. He was trained, in a sort of way, at the Edinburgh School of Art, and then learned his business under Cameron and Chalmers at the School of the Royal Scottish Academy. He was elected Associate of that body in 1878, and full Academician in 1889. He is also a member of the Royal Scottish Water-Colour Society, and of the Royal Society of Painter Etchers. Mr. Hole's claim to distinction is perhaps chiefly due to his power as an etcher, in which art he certainly has taken a foremost place. His principal pictures are: "The End of the '45," 1879; "The Evening of Culloden," 1880; "Prince Charlie's Parliament," 1881; "The Fill of the Boats," 1883; "If Thou hadst known," 1884; "News of Flodden," 1886; "Gethsemane," 1887; and many portraits. His principal original etchings are: "Quasi Cursores," portraits of the Professors of the Edinburgh University in its Tercentenary Year, 1884; and "Canterbury Pilgrims," 1888 (36-inch plate). His other etchings are: "Mill on the Yare," after Crome, 1888; "He is Coming," after Mattys Maris, 1889; "The Sawyers," after J. F. Millet, 1890; "Six plates after Thomson of Duddingston," 1889; and many others. A large plate after Constable's "Jumping Horse," was published in the autumn of 1890, and was followed by two others after Velasquez—viz., "Don Gaspar de Guzman" and "Admiral Pulido Pareja." More recently Mr. Hole issued an important etching after Sir John Millais' "Idyll of the '45." At the Chicago Exhibition Mr. Hole was granted an Award of Merit for his etchings. For the future his name will probably be associated with works of mural decoration. His "Te Deum" in the Church of St. James, Edinburgh, has already attracted considerable attention, and he is at present engaged on the decoration of the Scottish National Portrait Gallery, a commission entrusted to him in 1897, and probably the most important work of the kind in point of magnitude which has been given to one man since the recent revival of mural art in these islands. In 1876 Mr. Hole married Elizabeth, daughter of James Lindsay, Esq., W.S. Address: 27 Inverleith Row, Edinburgh.

HOLLAND, Canon Henry son of George Henry and Charlotte D. Holland, of Gayer, Wimbledon, was born at Leighton, Bedfordshire, in 1847, and educated at Balliol College. Oxford. He took a first class in the Final School in 1870, and in the same year was elected a senior studentship at Christ Church. He was ordained at Cuddesdon, and was afterwards Theological Lecturer at Christ Church. He was Select Preacher at Oxford in 1882, and again in 1883, and Censor of the Church in 1883. In 1882 he was appointed Canon of Truro and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop, and in 1884 was elected Canon, afterwards Precentor of the Cathedral. He has published several volumes of sermons, "Logic and Life," in 1881; "Friday at St. Paul's"; "Creed and Character," 1886; "Christ or Ecclesia," 1887; "On Behalf of Belief," articles on "Justin Martyr" and "Doctor Liddon" in the Dictionary of Christian Biography; an Essay on "Mundi," "Pleas and Claims," "God's City"; and, in collaboration with Mr. W. Rockstro, a "Life of Lind." Permanent address: Court, E.C.

HOLLAND, Professor Erskine, D.C.L., LL.D., son of T. A. Holland, rector of Poynton, (author of "Dryburgh Abbey Poems"), was born at Brighton in 1835. After entering Oxford as a student of Balliol College, he obtained a First Class in Classical School; a Fellowship at Magdalen College, and a Chancellor's Prize called to the Bar in 1863, and practised at the Home Circuit. In 1874 he was appointed Vinerian Reader of English Law but resigned that office on being called to the Bar a few months later, Chichele Professor of International Law. He has been law examiner at Oxford (1870-75) in the University of Cambridge (1891-92), and at Cambridge (1893-97) to the Inns of Court; a member and lately 1st Vice-President of the Institut de Droit International; Knight of the Order of the Crown; D.C.L. of Oxford; Fellow of Balliol College; Assessor of the Court; Hon. Prof. in the University of Perugia; Hon. LL.D. of the University of Bologna, Dublin, and Glasgow; Hon. Member of the University of Petersburg, of the Juridical Academy of Berlin, and of the Académie des Sciences of Toulouse. Among his works are: "An Essay on the Law of Deeds," 1864; "Essays on the

HOLLINGSHEAD, John, author and son of Mr. Henry R. Hollingshead, Irish Chamber, was born in London, Sept. 9, 1827, was educated at Eton, and entered business preferring journalism, became associated with several leading daily and weekly papers, as well as magazines. He was on the staff of Household Words as a constant contributor to Edinburgh and to All the Year Round, Household Magazine, Good Words, and the Standard. From 1859 to 1864 he published volumes of essays and stories, and lived in London. In 1861, he was in London, he was the Special Correspondent of the Morning Post at the Exhibition. The outcome of his mission was "The Dead of London," in 1861. In 1862 he was connected with the Great Exhibition, and wrote the historical introduction to the catalogue. He has written one or two dramatic pieces, and was formerly the dramatic critic of the Daily Telegraph, Review, Punch, &c.; he contributed to Punch, and is a member of the Dramatic Authors' Society and of the Society of Gens de Lettres. In 1868, Mr. Hollingshead opened a Theatre, in the Strand, but after ten years he ceased to be its manager. He has had three theatres under his direction, and with the most powerful comedians and actors in London. He has also been the rector of the principal theatre in London. In 1879 he induced the Comedie Française to visit London for six weeks at the Gaiety. A collection of his writings was published under the title of "Miscellanies: Stories and Poems," 3 vols., 1874; two other collections in 1882 and 1883, called respectively "Plain English" and "Footlights"; and in 1877 he made a successful adaptation of MM. Meilhac and Halévy's "La Cigale," under the title of "The Grasshopper." Mr. Hollingshead is a director of several large variety theatre companies in London, the provinces, and abroad, and was the managing director of "Niagara in London," the popular panorama which Mr. Hollingshead organised for some American friends. In 1890 he collected some papers under the title of "Niagara Spray," containing, like "Footlights," a good many reprints from Punch. In 1892 he published "The Story of Leicester Square," and his Autobiography (2 vols.) in 1894, and "Gaiety Chronicles" in 1898. Addresses: 8 Egerton Mansions, Brompton Road; and 3 Garrick Mansions, Charing Cross Road, W.

HOLMAN-HUNT, William, painter, one of the most prominent of the three working members of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, was born in London in 1827, and exhibited his first picture at the Academy in 1844, a portrait of a child, entitled "Hark!" The earlier works were adapted from poetry and fiction, such as "Dr. Rochecliffe performing Divine Service in the Cottage of Joceline Joliffe at Woodstock," in 1847; "The Flight of Madeline and Porphyro," from Keats's "St. Agnes," in 1848; and "Rienzi vowing to obtain Justice for the Death of his young brother," in 1849. He began that series of religious and mystical subjects, whereby he has since made himself best known, with "A Converted British Family Sheltering a Christian Missionary from the Persecution of the Druids," in 1850; followed by the symbolical "Hireling Shepherd," in 1852. His picture in 1851 was in a different class of sentiment—"Valentine receiving Sylvia from Proteus"; that of 1853, "Claudio and Isabella," and "Our English Coasts," a study of the Downs at Hastings. Three of these pictures were awarded £50 and £60 prizes at Liverpool and Birmingham. The occult meaning of his "Light of the World," and of the "Awakening Conscience," of 1854, was explained by Mr. Ruskin in some letters to the Times. "The Scapegoat," of which the scene was painted upon the margin of the salt-incrusted shallows of the Dead Sea, was exhibited in 1856. The "Finding of the Saviour in the Temple" was exhibited in 1860; and "Isabella and the Pot of Basil," in 1866. His more recent pictures are "London Bridge on the Night of the Marriage of the Prince of Wales"; "The Afterglow"; and "The Festival of St. Swithun." The last-mentioned was in the Royal Academy Exhibition of 1868. The largest of his works, which exclusively occupied his time during a residence of four years in Palestine, was finished in 1873. It is styled "The Shadow of Death," and represents a prevision of the Crucifixion. "Plains of Esdraelon," an Oriental landscape with shepherd and sheep, taken at Nazareth, was exhibited in 1877. "The Ship," an illustration of lines from "In Memoriam," represents the deck of a ship by night, exhibited in 1878. A "Portrait of Sir Richard Owen, C.B.," was exhibited in Bond Street in 1880, &c. "The Triumph of the Innocents" was exhibited in Bond Street in 1885. It represents a company of the spirits of the Children of Bethlehem accompanying the Holy Family on their flight into Egypt. "Christ amongst the Doctors," designed for a mosaic placed in Clifton College Chapel, was exhibited in 1890. In the year 1880 he delivered a lecture at the Society of Arts upon the need of greater knowledge and care on the part of artists in the preparation of the materials upon the perfection of which they have to rely for the permanence of their works. This at the time awakened much attention to the matter, and still encourages research for better methods of obtaining superior preparations. A nearly complete collection of Mr. Holman-Hunt's works was exhibited at the Fine Arts Society's rooms in 1886. He has written in the Contemporary Review two articles of reminiscences of the Pre-Raphaelite movement. In the columns of the Times he subsequently led the attack upon the Royal Academy, in which, of course, he no longer exhibits. In May 1898 the Queen purchased one of his pictures, "The Beloved," exhibited in the New Gallery. Addresses: Draycott Lodge, Fulham; and Athenæum.

HOLME, Charles, F.L.S., editor and proprietor of the Studio, Hon. Secretary of the Japan Society, was born at Derby on Oct. 7, 1848, and is the son of George Holme, a silk manufacturer of that town. He was educated privately at Derby, and from 1868 to 1886 was an East India merchant. He has travelled much in Russia, Japan, and the East generally. He was the editor of thirty volumes ; Reasoner. Mr. Holyoake was the erson imprisoned in England for d Atheism. The cause was an r given in debate after a lecture Home Colonies (1841). Mr. Justice ie admitted that Mr. Holyoake did troduce theology into the address, erely gave an honest answer to a question, but sentenced him to six is' imprisonment to encourage him in ur. Mr. Holyoake was also the last against whom an indictment was by the Court of Exchequer for pub-g unstamped papers in support of ociety for Repealing the Taxes upon ledge. Mr. Holyoake having incurred upwards of £600,000 of fines, Mr. Gladstone said to a deputation upon the subject that "he recognised that Mr. Holyoake's object was not to break the law, but to try the law." The Repeal of the Newspaper Stamp Act, however, caused the prosecution to be abandoned. He was chiefly instrumental in causing the Evidence Amendment Bill to be passed, which legalised purely secular affirmations. He suggested and furnished the scheme of the series of Blue-Books issued by Lord Clarendon, prepared by the Foreign Office on the "Condition of the Industrial Classes in Foreign Countries." It was on his suggestion, made when Lord

John Manners was Commissioner of Works, that the limelight was placed over the Clock Tower at Westminster, to denote at night when Parliament was sitting. A later work is the "Life of Joseph Rayner Stephens, Preacher and Orator." In 1882

he a second time visited Canada and the United States to propose to the Governments of both countries the issue of a Settlers' Guide Book, to be prepared and published on their authority, Mr. Gladstone making Mr. Holyoake two grants from the Public Service Fund in aid of this object. Mr. Holyoake edited the first three volumes of the Present Day, a journal discussing "Agitated Questions without

Agitation." His recent works are: "Among the Americans," "A Hundred Days Abroad in New Mexico and Canada," and "Hostile and Generous Toleration." He has been a member of the Central Board since its first establishment in 1869. He has also published "Self-Help One Hundred Years Ago," 1890; "The Co-operative Movement of To-day," 1891; "Sixty Years of an Agitator's Life," 1892; "Public Speaking and Debate," 1894; "Origin and Nature of Secularism," showing that where born at the Hirsell, Coldstream, on April 11, 1834, and is the son of the 11th Earl, whom he succeeded in 1881, and Lucy, eldest daughter of the second and last

Lord Montague. He was educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge

(M.A.). He was Lord-Lieutenant of Berwickshire from 1879 to 1890, since which year he has been Lord-Lieutenant of Lanarkshire. He is A.D.C. to the Queen,

Major-General of the Royal Company of Archers, Colonel of Yeomanry, and Hon.

Colonel of Volunteers (V.D.). He assumed the name of Douglas in 1877. In 1899 he was created K.T. in place of the late Lord Napier and Ettrick. He married, in 1870, Maria, daughter of Captain Charles C. Grey, R.N. Addresses: 6 Grosvenor Square, W.; The Hirsell, Coldstream, Berwickshire; and Douglas Castle, Lanarkshire, &c.

HOOK, James Clarke, R.A. was born in London, Nov. 21, 1819. His father, Mr. James Hook, was the Judge Arbitrator in the Mixed Commission Courts, Sierra Leone, and his mother was the second daughter of Dr. Adam Clarke, the biblical commentator. The future artist was entered as a student of the Royal Academy in 1836, and his progress from the outset was marked and encouraging. He took the first Medals in the life and painting schools in 1852. He obtained the Gold Medal for historical painting in 1845, the subject being "The Finding of the Body of Harold." Up to this time Mr. Hook had chiefly confined himself to subjects from English history, and occasional portraits. In 1846 he obtained the travelling pension of the Royal Academy for three years, and in the same year married the third daughter of Mr. James Burton, solicitor, and went to Italy. After eighteen months' absence he gave up half his pension, and returned to England. He now began painting subjects from Italian and French history and poetry, and occasionally from Scripture. Of this class may be mentioned the following, all exhibited at the Royal Academy: "Pamphilus relating his Story," a subject from Boccaccio, 1844; "The Song of Olden Time," 1845; "The Controversy between the Lady Jane Grey and Feckenham," 1846; "Bassanio commenting on the Caskets," a scene in the "Merchant of Venice," 1847; "The Emperor Otho IV. and the Maid Gualdrada," 1848; "The Chevalier Bayard wounded at Brescia," also, "Othello's First Suspicion," and "Bianca Capello," 1849; "Escape of Francesco Novello di Carrara and the Lady Taddea," and "A Dream of Venice," 1850. Mr. Hook was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1850, and attained the full honours of the Academy in 1860. He exhibited "The Rescue of the Brides of Venice," and "The Defeat of Shylock," 1851; "The Story of Torello," from Boccaccio, and "Othello's Description of Desdemona," 1852; "The Chevalier Bayard knighting the Son of the Duke of Bourbon," and "Isabella of Castille and the Idle Nuns," 1853; "Incidents in the Persecution of the Protestants in Paris," 1854; and "Gratitude of the Mother of Moses for the Safety of her Child," 1855. About this period Mr. Hook returned to his first inclination, and devoted chiefly to pastoral and modern subjects. Of examples in his later style, instance the following: "The Boat of the Streamlet," "The Market-Place," and "The Shepherd's Boy," 1856; "The Fisherman's Good-Night," 1857; "The Ship on the Horizon," and "The Sea-Letter," 1857; "A Pastoral," with an inscription from Spenser, and "The Boy Gathering Eggs," 1858. Of the subjects Mr. Hook has devoted himself to, "Luff, Boy!" "A Cornish Girl," and "The Skipper Ashore," 1859; "The Cornish Girl," 1860; "The Cornish Girl," 1861; "The Trawlers," 1862; "The Doggerbank," 1870; "Saints in the Fjords, Norway," "Norwegian Haystacks," "Market Girls on a Fjord," 1871; "The Jolly as a Sand-Boy," 1872; "The Oak," and "The Sapphire Girl," 1875; "Crabbers," 1876; "The Catcher," "The Coral Fisher," 1878; "Little to Earn and Much to Keep," "Mushroom Gatherers," "Tanning Nets: Witches and Cakes from the Macbeth Country," 1879; "The Baby: The White Sands of Iona," "The Tide," "Sea-pools," and "The Gardens," 1880; "Diamond Mines in Cornwall," and "Past Work," "Caller Herrin'," and "Devonshire Cart: the Last Handful Home," "Catching a Mermaid," "Love and Toil," "The Wily Angler," "Cart of the Farmer Pengelly," 1883; "The Oar," 1886; "The Sea-weed Raker," "Last Night's Disaster," and "The New Smack," 1890. More recently he has exhibited "Good Liquor, Dutchmen," 1893; and "Before Sundown," "The packers," "Practising without Favour," and "Seed-time," 1894; "Finnan's Hey, Ho, Seely Sheepe!" "A Harvest in the West Country," 1895; "A Prawns," and "Breadwinners North," 1896; "From the Shore to the Field," Portrait of Allan J. Hook, "Low Water at the Tidal Cross," "Dutchman's Home," 1897; "A Lane: Blackberries"; "Trouble with the old Muzzle," and a landscape, 1898; "Wading to the Mill," "Water-Cresses," and a portrait of Bryan Hook, Esq., 1899. Address: Silverbeck, Churt, Farnham.

HOOKE, Sir Joseph G.C.S.I., C.B., P.P.R.S., M.D. F.G.S., D.C.L. Oxon., LL.D. Cantab. Edin., and Glas., is the second surviving son of the late Sir Jackson Hooker, Regius Professor of Botany in Glasgow University, subsequently Director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, by Maria, eldest daughter

Turner, F.R.S., banker, of Great Britain, Norfolk. He was born at Bungay, Suffolk, June 30, 1817, and educated at the High School and University of Glasgow, where he took a degree of M.D. in 1839. At the age of twenty-one he accompanied, officially as assistant-surgeon, but in reality as naturalist, the famous expedition of Sir James Clark Ross, fitted out by the Government for the purpose of investigating the phenomena of terrestrial magnetism in the Arctic Circumpolar Seas. The result of his researches during this voyage was a set of superb volumes on the botany of the northern regions, embracing the Arctic Islands, Fuegia, and Tasmania. By a comparison of the plants of these regions with other parts of the world, he was enabled to advance our knowledge of the laws which govern the distribution of plants over the surface of the earth. He returned to this country after an absence of five years. In 1846 he accepted the appointment of botanist to the Geological Survey of Great Britain under Sir H. de la Beche, and he contributed a valuable paper and volume of the "Records" of the Survey on the vegetation of the Devonian period as compared with the present day; and another on the occurrence of coal-fossils. In 1847 Dr. Hooker undertook a journey to India for the purpose of investigating the plants of the countries, and the flora of an unexplored region of the Himalayas. The course of his travels in these districts he was for some time a prisoner by the Rajah of Sikkim. He returned in 1851, and published two interesting volumes of "Himalayan Botany" and a number of scientific papers on the botany of India. In 1850, in India, he published some beautiful illustrations of rhododendrons from the Himalaya, several of which have since been introduced into England. His expeditions, though partly at his private expense, were conducted under the sanction of Government, which supplied him with funds. He was appointed in 1855 Assistant-Director of Kew Gardens; and on his father's death in 1865, succeeded to the Directorship, which he held until 1885. He was some time a Natural Science of candidates and appointments in the Royal Botanic Garden in the late East India Company's service, and Examiner in Botany on University and Apothecaries Acts. In the autumn of 1860 he accompanied the late Admiral Washington to Syria, during which he paid particular attention to the oaks of that country. Dr. Hooker presided over the meeting of the British Association held at Norwich in 1868. The main subject of his address, which gave rise to much controversy, was the consideration of the views put forward from time to time by Mr. Darwin on the doctrine of the continuous evolution of life, and in connection with this, on what is termed "natural selection," together with his theory of the "origin of species." To Darwin's notions, expressed in their fullest extent, Dr. Hooker gave his entire adhesion. He was appointed a Companion of the Bath (Civil Division) in 1869. In April 1871 Dr. Hooker left England for Morocco, in company with Mr. John Ball, F.R.S., and Mr. G. Maw, F.L.S., his purpose being to collect the plants of that comparatively unexplored country. On the 16th of May he and his companions made the ascent of the Great Atlas, the heights of which mountain had never before been trodden by any European; and at the close of June returned to Kew, bringing a large collection of plants. In 1873 Dr. Hooker was elected President of the Royal Society, but resigned in 1878, when the late Mr. W. Spottiswoode was chosen as his successor. In 1877 he was created Knight Commander of the Star of India, for his services to the Government of India, and in 1897, on the completion of "The Flora of British India," was raised to G.C.S.I. In 1877 he paid a visit of three months' duration to the United States, where he was most cordially received by the leading scientific men. On his return he presented to Kew a large collection of seeds and museum specimens, and a herbarium of about a thousand species, together with notes on the distribution of the North American trees in particular. He was awarded by the Royal Society a Royal medal in 1854, the Copley in 1887, and the Darwin in 1892. In 1884 the Founders' medal of the Royal Geographical Society was awarded to him "for his eminent services in scientific geography"; and in 1883 the Society of Arts presented to him their Albert medal for the services he has rendered to the arts, manufactures, and commerce by promoting an accurate knowledge of the floras and economic vegetable products of the several colonies and dependencies of the Empire. In 1888 he received the medal of the Linnean Society, and in 1898 that of the Manchester Philosophical Society. Sir Joseph is a member of various learned societies, and a corresponding member of the Institute of France. His works are: "Botany of the Antarctic Voyage," 6 vols., 4to, 1847-60; "Handbook of the New Zealand Flora," 1867; "Rhododendrons of the Sikkim-Himalaya," 1849-51; "Himalayan Journals," 2 vols., 8vo, 1854; "Genera

Plantarum," 1862, et seq.; "The Student's Flora of the British Islands," 1870; "The Flora of British India," 1872-97; "Journal of a Tour in Morocco and the Great Atlas," 1878. Addresses: The Camp, near Sunningdale; and Athenæum.

HOPE, Anthony. See HAWKINS, ANTHONY HOPE.

HOPE, Sir Theodore Cracraft, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., was born in 1831, and is the only son of the late James Hope, M.D., F.R.S. He was educated at Rugby and at the East India Company's College at Haileybury, and entered the Bombay Civil Service in 1853. He was an Educational Inspector in India, 1855-60; member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, 1875-80; provisional member of Council, Bombay, in 1880; Secretary to the Government of India for Finance and Commerce, 1881-82; Finance Minister (officiating), in 1882; Public Works Member of the Governor-General's Councils, 1882-87. He has retired from the Civil Service, and was created a K.C.S.I. in 1886. In 1893 he published "Church and State in India." He married in 1866 Josephine, only daughter of the late John Williamson Fritton, of Braidjule House, co. Down. Addresses: 21 Elvaston Place, S.W.; Bel Ritiro, San Remo; and Athenæum.

HOPETOUN, Earl of, The Right Hon. John Adrian Louis Hope, G.C.M.G., D.L., Lord Chamberlain, was born at Hopetoun House, N.B., Sept. 25, 1860, and is the son of the 6th Earl and Etheldred Anne, daughter of C. T. S. Birch-Reynardson, Esq., and was educated at Eton College. He succeeded his father in 1873. He passed at Sandhurst in 1879, but did not enter the army. He was appointed Lieutenant, Lanarkshire Yeomanry, 1880; is a Deputy-Lieut. for Linlithgow, Lanark, and Dumfries; and Justice of the Peace for Linlithgow. Earl Hopetoun was Junior Whip in the House of Lords from 1883 to 1886; was Lord-in-Waiting to the Queen from 1885 to 1889; and was Lord High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland 1887-88-89. He is the Hon. Colonel of the Forth Submarine Mining Volunteer Corps; and was made Governor of the Colony of Victoria in 1889 in succession to Sir Henry Loch, and in the same year was made G.C.M.G. He resigned this position in 1895, since which year he has been President of the Institution of Naval Architects. In December 1898 he was appointed Lord Chamberlain in the room of the late Earl of Lathom. He married in 1886 the Hon. Hersey Alice Eveleigh-de-Moleyns, daughter of the 4th

Baron Ventry. Address: Hopetoun, South Queensferry, Linlithgowshire.

HOPKINS, Edward J., Mus. Organist at the Temple Church, Westminster, June 30, 1818, was born at the age of eight, as a chorist in the Chapel Royal, St. James's, where he remained till his voice broke in 1833. He became a pupil of Thomas Forbes Waley, organist of the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. About a twelvemonth afterwards, Sept. 17, 1834, Mr. Hopkins played for and obtained his first appointment, that of organist to Mitcham, Surrey, at the early age of sixteen. After post he exchanged for that of organist to St. Peter's, Islington, in 1835. In the same year he obtained the Great Medal for his anthem, "Out of the Deep," and in the year 1840 he obtained a prize for his anthem, "God is great," the umpires being Dr. Crotch, Mr. Horsley, and Sir John Goss. He then accepted the position of organist at Luke's Church, Berwick Street, where he remained until 1843. During that time he executed a task calling for much vigour and patience, viz., that of copying two sets of old madrigals from the unbarred part-books for the Antiquarian Society—Thomas Waley's first set of madrigals, 1597; and Bennet's first set of madrigals, 1601, the former of which was published in the early part of 1843, and the other in a few years later. About that time he began to publish a series of arrangements for the organ, the first three numbers of which he had been trained to play, the remainder of the series were for the CC organ, to which, in connection with Dr. Gauntlett and Henry Hopkins became an early adherent. On May 7, 1843, Mr. Hopkins played for probationary service at the Temple Church, and in the following October he was formally appointed "Organist to the Honourable Society of the Temple Benchers." He retained his position until 1898. In 1849 the octave and F pedals were removed from the organ, and a proper set, of two octaves and a half, from which were laid down in their stead, was opened up the organ with this improvement, the service known as "Hopkins in F" was written, and followed by the second service. Previous to this, however, he had published the series of arrangements for the CC organ, in the Continental oblong form for the organ, and he had also issued his "Ludial Pieces." In September ered a course of four lectures at the Liverpool, on "Action and Capabilities of the Organ, illustrated with Diagrams, &c.," giving the request that they printed, were developed into a book entitled "The Organ: its Construction," by Dr. R. J. Hopkins. In 1880 Dr. Hopkins' history of the organ appeared in George Grove's "Dictionary of Music and Musicians." In 1883, at the request of the two hon. societies, Dr. Hopkins undertook the rather heavy task of editing a new book of the words of the psalter and a pointed psalter with a view to the express use of the Temple.

Hopkins has composed anthems, services, and voluntes. He has received many honourable recognitions for his services.

NS, Admiral Sir John K.C.B., late Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean, son of the Rev. J. S. Hopkins, Rector and Rural Dean of St. Andrew's, was born in 1834, and educated at Marlborough College. He entered the navy in 1848, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in 1854. During the Crimean War he served in H.M.S. Sunbeam, Britannia, and H.M.S. London. He was present at the attack on the Russian fleet at Sebastopol and in various other operations, for which he received several British and Turkish medals. He was promoted to the rank of Commander in 1862 and Captain in 1866. He was appointed Private Secretary to the Queen in 1871. In 1883 he was appointed to fill the office of Captain of the Dockyard at Sheerness. He relinquished the command in 1885 and took over the duties of the Director of Naval Ordnance. Sir John was promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral in 1885, and was elected a member of the Inter-Departmental Committee on the supply of naval stores. He was Admiral Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard between 1888 and 1891, when he became a Lord of the Admiralty. In 1892 he was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the North American and West Indian Station as Commander-in-Chief of the fleet in those waters. While on command a revolution took place in Cuba, and Admiral Hopkins was thanked by the inhabitants of Havana for despatching a ship to their aid by his prompt action rendering valuable service in protecting them from the outrages of brutal and lawless soldiers. He became Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean in 1896, and was retired from the service in July 1899. Sir John was created a K.C.B. in 1892. He married (1) in 1875 a daughter of Metcalfe Larken; and (2), in 1882 Minna, daughter of Admiral Sir Sydney Dacres, G.C.B. Address: United Service Club.

HOPPER, Eleanor Nora, was born Jan. 2, 1871, in Exeter, and was the daughter of the late Harman Baillie Hopper, Captain 31st Bengal Native Infantry, by his second wife, Caroline Augusta Hopper (née Francis). She was educated at the school of Mr. A. S. B. Scott, of Emperor's Gate, Kensington. Miss Hopper is a student of folk-lore and superstition. She is the author of the serial, "A Northern Juliet," now running in Atalanta, of "Ballads in Prose," 1894; "Under Quicken Boughs," 1896; and is a contributor to Longmans', Atalanta, Household Words, Macmillan's, Yellow Book, English Illustrated, Sketch, Black and White, All the Year Round, Morning Post, Album, Illustrated London News, Ludgate Monthly, Pall Mall Gazette, Sylvia, Girls' Own Paper, Woman, National Observer, New Review, Gentleman's Magazine, the Everygreen, the Lyceum. She began to write first for publication in 1887, and her earliest contribution was a poem which appeared in the Family Herald on Sept. 5, 1887. Her poems on Irish subjects are specially admired. Address: 36 Royal Crescent, W.

HOPPS, John Page, was born in London, Nov. 6, 1834, and was educated in London and at the Baptist College, Leicester. He entered the Baptist ministry at Hugglescote and Ibstock, Leicestershire, in 1855, and became assistant to George Dawson at the Church of the Saviour, Birmingham, in 1858. In 1860 he accepted an invitation from a Unitarian church at Sheffield; and afterwards was Unitarian minister at Dukinfield and Glasgow. At Glasgow he was elected a member of the first School Board, being the only representative there of the principle of secular education only in public schools. In 1876 he became minister of the Great Meeting, Leicester. For thirty years, in addition to the ordinary gatherings of his congregation, he has held meetings of working people on Sunday afternoons in public halls, at Birmingham, Sheffield, Manchester, Glasgow, and Leicester, for worship and "the uplifting of the life." During part of this time in Leicester, for several winters, he closed his chapel on Sunday evenings, and gathered together immense audiences of working people in the Floral Hall. He was proprietor and editor of the Truthseeker.

of two old Cornish families. He was educated chiefly in a private school at Exeter, and was apprenticed, at the age of 14, to the owner of a London sailing ship, and sailed nearly every part of the world on more than twenty different vessels, from the small coasting sloop to the first-class mail steamer, and through all the grades of able seaman, boatswain, third, second, and chief officer, and master. In 1854 Captain Hore was appointed an agent of the London Missionary Society's pioneer mission to Central Africa. He lived on the north shore of Lake Tanganyika for about 18 months, then at Niumkorlo, and subsequently on Kavala. He surveyed the 1000 mile coast of Lake Tanganyika in a little log canoe, and discovered the Lukuga to be the outlet of the lake. In 1884 Captain Hore returned to England to report on his mission. In 1882 he took the steel lifeboat, on trucks, from Zanzibar to Ujiji, a distance of 836 miles, in 100 days. In 1888 he finished the construction of the steam yacht the Thetis on Lake Tanganyika. Captain Hore received a gold chronometer from the Government of the French Republic in recognition of his assistance to the expedition; and in 1890 received the Peek grant from the Royal Geographical Society. Captain Hore is the author of "Tanganyika; eleven years in Central Africa"; as well as of contraband journals descriptive and of the condition and rights of the natives of Central Africa, for whom he has much sympathy. In pursuit of the mission he also during three years gave many lectures throughout England, Australia, New Zealand, and the United States, and exhibited in London a series of models (made by himself) illustrating Central African life. These are known as the "Brightest Pictures." Early in 1894 Captain Hore received a call to further work in the field, and has been appointed agent of the fine new steamship Thetis for the London Missionary Society's work in Polynesia.

F, The Rev. James John, D.D., D.C.L., the late Admiral Sir Phipps, Bt., of Little Green, Sussex, daughter of the Right Hon. Lord Gwyne, was born at Winwick, Lancashire, and educated at Eton under Mr. Hawtrey, and at Balliol College, Oxford, where, in 1849, he took a B.A. (Lit. Hum.). He rowed twice in the University Eight, viz., in 1849 and 1850, and was known at College and at Eton as a cricketer. He is now a member of the Alpine Club. In 1849 he became a Fellow of Brasenose College, and in 1854 Tutor and Principal of Bishop Cosin's Hall in the University of Durham. Returning to Oxford in 1864 he became Classical Lecturer at Brasenose; and in 1866 was Senior Proctor of the University. At the close of the latter year he was elected Second Master of Winchester School, which post he retained till his appointment as Head-Master of Eton in January 1868. Dr. Hornby was appointed one of Her Majesty's honorary chaplains in February 1882, and made D.C.L. of Durham University the same year. He was appointed to the Provostship of Eton, July 1884, and is Chairman of the Governing Body of Eton. He married in 1869 Augusta Eliza, daughter of the Rev. J. C. Evans, of Stoke Poges (died 1891). Addresses: The Lodge, Eton College; and Athenæum.

HORSLEY, John Callcott, R.A., son of the late William Horsley, the well-known musician, and grand-nephew of the late Sir Augustus Callcott, the eminent painter, was born in London, Jan. 29, 1817. His first exhibited picture, painted while he was a youth—"Rent-Day at Haddon Hall in the Sixteenth Century"—was spoken of in high terms by Wilkie. "The Chess-Players," "The Rival Musicians," "Waiting for an Answer," were first seen in the British Institution; and he exhibited, for the first time at the Academy, the "Pride of the Village" (now in the Vernon Gallery). This was followed by "The Contrast: Youth and Age," in 1840; "Leaving the Ball," another "Contrast," gay pleasure seekers on the one hand, the homeless outcast on the other; and "The Pedlar," both in 1841; "Winning Gloves," in 1842; and "The Father's Grave," in 1843. In the latter year Mr. Horsley's cartoon of "St. Augustine Preaching," gained at Westminster Hall one of the three prizes in the second rank of £200; and in the trial of skill of 1844 he obtained, by his two small frescoes, a place among the six painters commissioned to execute further samples for the Palace at Westminster. That of 1845, for "Religion," was approved, and the subject executed at large in the House of Lords. In 1847 his colossal oil painting, "Henry V., believing the King dead, assumes the Crown," secured a premium of the third class. Another fresco, which he was employed to execute, "Satan Surprised at the Ear of Eve," is to be seen in a portion of the New Palace, called Poets' Hall. Amongst his later works are: "Malvolio i' the Sun practising behaviour to his own Shadow," "Hospitality," "The Madrigal—'Keep your Time,'" "The Pet of the Common,"

"L'Allegro and Il Penseroso" (painted for the late Prince Consort); "Lady Jane Grey and Roger Ascham," "A Scene from Don Quixote," "Flower Girls—Town and Country," "The Holy Communion," "The Lost Found," "A Jealous Eye," "The Duenna's Return," "The New Dress," and "Under the Mistletoe," "The Bashful Swain," "The Duenna and Her Cares," "Attack and Defence," "Detected," "The Gaoler's Daughter," "Caught Napping," "The Banker's Private Room—Negotiating a Loan," "Old Folk and Young Folk," "Pay for Peeping," "In with You," "Stolen Glances," "The other Name?" "The Poet's Theme," "Sunny Moments," and a large religious subject with figures of a colossal size, entitled "The Healing Mercies of Christ," painted as an altar-piece for the chapel of St. Thomas's Hospital; portrait of Thomas Woolcombe, Esq., painted for the South Devon Railway Company: "Under Lock and Key," "Coming Down to Dinner," "The World Forgetting," "Critics on Costume—Fashions Change," "Le Jour des Morts," "Life in the Château Gardens at Fontainebleau," 1881; "A Merry Chase in Haddon Hall," 1882; and "Wedding Rings," 1883, &c. In 1893 he exhibited a portrait of Alderman Treloar at the Royal Academy. In 1882 Mr. Horsley was elected Treasurer of the Royal Academy. He has been very active in bringing together the magnificent collections of "Old Masters" displayed every winter since 1870 at Burlington House. On attaining eighty years of age Mr. Horsley, having held the office of Treasurer to the Royal Academy for fifteen years, resigned that post in 1897 and joined the list of "Retired Academicians." Addresses: 1 High Row, Kensington, W.; and Willesley, Cranbrook.

HORSLEY, Victor Alexander Haden, M.D., F.R.C.S., F.R.S., B.Sc., son of J. C. Horsley, R.A., was born on April 14, 1857, in Kensington, and educated at Cranbrook School and University College Hospital with the view of entering on a medical career. After taking the Gold Medal in Anatomy and in Surgery, obtaining the Surgical Scholarship at the University of London, and holding the usual preliminary posts, including the Surgical Registrarship, he was appointed on the surgical staff of the Hospital, having previously taken the F.R.C.S. and London degrees in medicine and surgery. From 1884 to 1890 he held the post of Professor-Superintendent of the Brown Institution, in the laboratory of which he carried out investigations into the localisation of functions of the brain and into the functions of the thyroid gland, by which latter he proved that the disease

known as myxœdema was caused by loss of this organ. In 1885 he was appointed Secretary to the Royal Commission on Hydrophobia, in which he personally sought out and set up the cases operated on, and he was thoroughly convinced of the efficacy of their treatment. In 1886 he was elected Fellow of the Royal Society, and his actions and Proceedings of which in conjunction with others, has given many papers bearing principally on physiology and localisation. He was elected Surgeon to the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy, and performed a successful operation for removal of a tumour in the brain of a patient suffering from those diseases. This was followed up by many others of the same nature, and in 1887 he performed a successful operation for the removal of a tumour of the spinal cord. The question formed the subject of a paper on Brain Surgery in 1886 in the Medical Journal, and again in 1890. In 1890 he suggested that in the treatment of myxœdema, the method proper was that of grafting the gland into the neck of patients suffering from the disease. In 1891 he contributed a critical and historical view of the subject to the Festschrift. In the same year in conjunction with Professor Goltz, he was appointed to give the Croonian Lecture of the Royal Society, the subject being "The Mammalian Nervous System: Functions and their Localisation determined by an electrical method." In 1891 to 1893 he held the post of Professor at the Royal Institution, where he delivered three sets of lectures, the first has appeared in book form as Brain and Spinal Cord. He was elected President of the Section of Pathology of the British Medical Association in 1893 and opened the discussion of the Surgical Section of that Association on the treatment of Tumours. As one of the lecturers at the British Association for the Advancement of Science he delivered an address on the localisation of the Functions of the Nervous System, showing how largely our knowledge of the subject is the result of recent research. In the same year he received the Cameron Prize for Therapeutics from the University of Edinburgh. He was Professor of Pathology at University College (1893-96), and in the Laboratory of that Institution at the Brown, has carried out researches on intra-cranial pressure with Dr. Semper, on the larynx with Dr. Semper, on the Du Buisson hot-air treatment of hydrophobia, on the motor cial nerves with Dr. Beevor, hot wounds of the brain with Mr. Horsley is also the author of several papers in the British Medical Journal, especially on the surgical treatment of neuralgia, and an operation, the method of Lannelongue, for the hydrocephalic idiocy in children. He is a member of the German Surgical Society, the American Surgical Society, the Anatomical Society, the Neurological Society, the Soci t  de Biologie in Paris, and a correspondent of the Royal Association of Physicians of Buda-Pesth. He has interested himself in questions of medicine, is President of the Medical Association, and has devoted much of his time to the study of archæology, especially in reference to prehistoric trephining, on which latter subject he has delivered several lectures, and has lectured before the Royal Institution. Mr. Horsley is an ardent supporter of experimental research, and has written of himself and his English contemporaries in the Church Congress of 1892, his article on the subject of the Twentieth Century and by many other papers. The Times, &c., is well known. 25 Cavendish Square, W.C. ; London, W.

Robert Forman, M.A., one of the most distinguished authors in the Congregationalist movement, was born in London on Sept. 18, 1841. He is the son of the Rev. T. G. Forman, at that time minister of Tonbridge. He was educated at Tettenhall Green School, and New College, Oxford; taking a first class in Theology, and subsequently becoming Lecturer in Theology at the College and Lecturer in Theology at New College. About this time he published his first book, "A History of the Congregational Movement," which is still a favourite text-book in many universities and Public Schools. In 1883 Dr. Horton's name came before the public in connection with his appointment by the government to the University as one of the examiners of the "The Rudiments of Faith," which included examination in the Thirty-Nine Articles. A fierce controversy was raised in the Clerical and Congregational circles of the University at the time of a Nonconformist to the University, and a serious opposition was started, meeting of Convocation the following year, and was defeated by a considerable majority. In the following January Dr. Horton was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church, Lyndhurst Road, which he has since the services of which he had been in a tentative way for three years previously. The success of his ministry may be judged from the fact that whereas at the formation of the church on Oct. 27, 1880, the total membership was 59, including himself, the number of members at present in active communion is 1170, besides about 100 whose names still remain upon the register, but are abroad or residing too far away for practical connection with the Church. The work of the Church is highly organised, and the reports of the various institutions connected with it, in the "Church Manual," form a considerable volume. A large mission and social settlement is also carried on at Lyndhurst Hall, Warden Road, Kentish Town, which was erected some years ago at a cost of over £6000. In 1893 Dr. Horton was invited to deliver the annual lectures on preaching at Yale University, and visited America for that purpose, the lectures being afterwards published under the title of "Verbum Dei." In recognition of this important service the University conferred upon him the degree of D.D., but personally Dr. Horton does not use it, nor the ordinary title of "Rev.," preferring to be considered simply a Christian layman. Notwithstanding the pressure of his pastoral duties, and the number of his outside preaching engagements, Dr. Horton has found time to add considerably to the literature of the day, his principal works, in addition to those already mentioned, being "Inspiration and the Bible," "Revelation and the Bible," "The Book of Proverbs," "This do," "The Cartoons of St. Mark," "The Lyndhurst Road Pulpit," "Oliver Cromwell," "The Teachings of Jesus," "John Howe," and "The Women of Scripture." He is also a frequent contributor to the magazines, and many of his papers have been republished in attractive form, such as "The Art of Living Together," "The Four Pillars of the Home," "The Conquered World," "Success and Failure," &c. Recently a series of addresses by him on Romanism, republished under the title of "England's Danger," has excited wide interest and attention. His monthly lecture to artisans appears in the "Christian World Pulpit" on the Wednesday following the first Sunday of each month, and thus reaches a wide circle of readers. Dr. Horton, in the year 1898, occupied the position of Chairman of the London Congregational Union, and he has already filled the Chair of the London Missionary Society. Address: Chesils, Christ Church Road, Hampstead, N.W.

HOSKINS, Admiral Sir Anthony Hiley, G.C.B., son of the late Rev. Henry Hoskins, was born in 1828. He was educated at Winchester, and entered the

May 11, 1842. He was promoted Lieutenant in 1843, Commander in 1853, and Captain in 1858. As a Midshipman in H.M.S. Porpoise he was present at the operations off Madagascar and in the Mediterranean during 1845 and 1847. During the Crimean War of 1854-55 he was a Lieutenant of H.M.S. Agamemnon, and acted as Naval Aide to General Sir Harry Smith during several times mentioned in despatches. He went to China in 1857 as Commander of H.M.S. Suney, and was present at the capture of Canton and the Taku Forts as Commander. Sir Anthony Hosmer had command of the Australian station between 1871 and 1873, when he was promoted to C.B. He held the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to the Queen for three years before his promotion to flag-rank in 1871. As a Field-Admiral he was employed in special service in Egypt during the war of 1882 and was awarded a K.C.B. and the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. Upon his return to England he was appointed Admiral-Superintendent of Naval Reserves. In 1884 he went to the Mediterranean as Commander-in-Chief, and while on that station was presented with the Medal of the first class by the Sultan of Turkey. Sir Anthony has been three times a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, and received a G.C.B. as a special reward for distinguished service upon his retirement from the active list in November 1886. He has also served upon several of the committees appointed by the Admiralty to inquire into service matters, and was the recipient of a good-service pension in 1886. He married, in 1861, Elizabeth, a daughter of the Rev. Sir George Robinson. Address: 17 Montague Square, W.

HOSMER, Harriet, born at Water-town, Massachusetts, Oct. 9, 1840, was educated at Lenox, Massachusetts, and early displayed a taste for art. She received a few lessons in modelling in Boston, and then entered a medical College in St. Louis to study anatomy and dissection. Her first work in marble was a reduced copy of Canova's bust of Napoleon, which was soon followed by an ideal work, "Hesper, or the Evening Star." In 1862 she went to Rome, and became a pupil of Gibson. After 12 years of study and modelling from the antique she produced the busts of "Daphne" and "Medusa." Her first full-length figure in marble was Enone, completed in 1865, and this was followed in the same year by "Puck," of which many copies have been made. Next came a companion piece, "Will-o'-the-Wisp." Her reclining statue of "Beatrice Cenci" was completed and exhibited in 1867. A colossal statue of "Zenobia,"

Queen of Palmyra, is the next important work. In 1870 "Sleeping" and the "Wreck" are designs of a memorial to Abraham Lincoln. Her chief sculpture, Miss Hosmer is famous for designing and developing machinery and devices, especially in connection with such as a method of carving Italian limestone for statues. She resided for many years in Italy on occasional visits to the Continent.

HOTHAM, Admiral Sir Frederick, K.C.B., born at the Nore, is the son of Captain John Hotham, R.N., fifth of the Barons Hotham. He in 1840, entered the navy as a Midshipman, and was promoted to Lieutenant in December 1845, and Captain in December 1855. He saw active service in the M. 1860, and in November 1861 landed with a party of 500 men to attack the rebel forces in which occasion he was wounded. His services were favourably noticed, and he was afterwards in charge of a detached party of 100 men across mud flats in that position. He was specially commended in despatches and given the New Zealand medal. As the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet he took part in the bombardment of Alexandria, and was created a C.B., and was knighted in 1867. He was promoted to the third class. In 1868 he was appointed a member of the commission on the system of contract for the Royal Navy. He had been a naval Aide-de-Camp in January 1868 he was promoted to the rank of Admiral and in the same year a Lord of the Admiralty. He was appointed to the Pacific station as Commander-in-Chief in 1890, holding that appointment for three years. Admiral Sir Charles is the youngest officer married to Margaret, Countess Milne-Home, Esq. of Milne-Home, Warwickshire. Addresses: St. James's Palace; and 20 Warwick Square.

HOUGHTON, Lord
EARL OF.

HOULDSWORTH, Henry, Earl, M.P., is the son of Henry Houldsworth, of Colchester, and was born at N. Aug. 20, 1834. He was of niversity. He has represented Manchester, as a Conservative in the House of Commons, since 1885. He has served as a member of the missions on Trade Depression, Silver, and the Liquor Licensing Bill. He was appointed a Delegate to the International Conference at Brussels in 1890, and also to the Labour Conference in 1892. Sir William Houlds was created Justice of the Peace for Lancashire, a County Alderman for Manchester, and is married to Elizabeth, daughter of Walter Crum, of Thorncliffe, Lancashire. He graduated at Bowdoin College in 1850; and in 1854 at the Military Academy at West Point, where, in 1857, he was made Instructor, and later Assistant-Professor of Mathematics. Upon the breaking out of the civil war he was made Colonel of a regiment of volunteers; commanded a brigade at the battle of Bull Run; and was made (Sept. 3, 1861) Brigadier-General of volunteers. He lost his right arm at the battle of Fair Oaks, June 1, 1862. He was made Major-General of volunteers, Nov. 29, 1862; and had the command of a division at Burnside's defeat at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. Soon after, he was placed in command of the 11th Army Corps, which was attacked at evening by the Confederate General Jackson, and put to flight, at Chancellorsville, July 1, 1863. He received the thanks of Congress for taking the position of success at Gettysburg. In the following autumn he was sent with his corps to the West; took part in the campaign which followed, down to the capture of Atlanta, and commanded the right wing of the army during Sherman's "march to the sea." He was in December 1864 promoted to Brigadier-General, and in the following March to Brevet Major-General in the regular army. In May 1865 he was placed at the head of the Freeman's Bureau, his duties lasting until 1874; and he served also from 1869 to 1873 as President of Howard University. In 1872 he was sent as special commissioner to the Indians in New Mexico and Arizona; and from 1874 to 1881 he commanded the Department of Columbia on the Indian frontier. In 1881 he took charge for two years of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point; and was subsequently transferred to the command of the Department of the Platte. In 1886 he received his full rank of Major-General, and was placed on the retired list in 1894 on account of reaching the age limit. The degree of A.M. was conferred upon him by Bowdoin College in 1853, and that of LL.D. by Waterville and Shurtleff Colleges in 1865, and by the Gettysburg Theol. Seminary in 1866. The French Government made him a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour in 1884. He has contributed many articles to the magazines, and has published: "Donald's School Days," 1879; "Chief Joseph," 1881; and "General Taylor" (in the Great Commanders series), 1893.

HOWLAND, The Hon. William, Canadian statesman, was born at Waterford, Ireland, May 19, 1818, emigrated to Prince Edward Island with his parents in 1839. He was educated at the Central Academy, Charlotte, and followed a mercantile career. From 1873 he was a Member of the Legislature, and at the time of the election was defeated at Prince for the first time. However, in 1878 he was called to the Senate of Canada, where he sat until his appointment as Governor of Prince Edward Island in 1892. In 1892 he came to London to confer with Douglas Fox on a project to connect the island with the mainland by a tunnel. He is a Vice-President of the British Empire League in Canada. Address: Government House, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

HOWLAND, The Hon. S. Pearce, C.B., K.C.M.G., was born at Milledale, Dutchess Co., N.Y., May 1, 1824, but removed to Canada in 1840. He was once engaged in business at Montreal, but in time became one of the leading proprietors in the Dominion. He returned for West York in 1854, and in the Legislature of Canada he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. In 1862 he became a member of the Executive Council of Canada. In 1862 to 1863 he served as Minister of Finance; 1863-64 as Receiver-General; and 1864-66 as Postmaster-General. In 1866 he succeeded the Hon. A. G. D. B. as Finance Minister, and on the following year, he accepted the office of Minister of Inland Revenue.

a Member of the Privy Council. In this position he resigned in 1868 on accepting the Lieut.-Governorship of the Cape, held by him till 1873. He was created a C.B. in 1867, and a K.C.M.G. in 1873. He lives at Toronto.

HOWORTH, Sir Henry Hoyle, Esq., M.P., Vice-President of the Society of Antiquaries, Corr. Member of the Royal Academy of Lisbon and of the Anthropological Society and Anthropological Society of Italy, Hon. D.C.L., F.R.S., F.G.S., &c., is the son of the late Sir Henry Howorth, of Lisbon, merchant, and was born in Lisbon, July 1, 1842, educated at the King's School, and called to the bar at the Inner Temple, June 11, 1867. He has devoted himself chiefly to literature and science, and is the author of a large work, "History of the Mongols," of which 11 volumes are published, and which is now in progress; a "History of Chinghis Khan and his Ancestors," based upon a recently discovered new chronicle of the race found in the Peking Library (this work has been published in a series of over 30 chapters in the Indian Antiquary); of a considerable amount of historical work entitled "The Mammoth and the Flood," discussing the problems connected with the destruction of so-called Pleistocene man and his contemporaries; a second work entitled "The Glacial Period and the Flood," in which the views of the more extravagant glacialists are attacked, and the effects which they assign to ice are attributed to the action of water. These two works, which have been abundantly reviewed in the Quarterly and Archæological Reviews and elsewhere, involve a radical change upon the current theories of the glacial period. Sir Henry Howorth has also published a work on the "History of the County of Rochdale," for the Chetham Society. In addition he has written more than twenty scientific memoirs, chiefly on geological, ethnographical, and historical subjects. Among these are several series of papers on the Westerly Drifting of the Glaciers, on the Early Ethnography of the North, on the Spread of the Slavs, in the Journal of the Anthropological Institute; a series on the Northern Frontiers of the Roman Empire, in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society; and a series on the Early Expedition of the Scandinavians, in the Journal of the Royal Historical Society. He has also contributed memoirs to the International Congress of Orientalists, to the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society, the Archæological Magazine, the Journal of the Numismatic Society, the Quarterly Review, and other reviews; and has contributed numerous letters to the Times, Standard, &c., on political and social subjects. He is a magistrate for Lancashire; and for more than twenty years he has been actively interested in Lancashire politics. He is a trustee of Owens College and a Feoffee of Chetham's College and Library. In 1894 he was appointed President of the Archæological Institute, and in May 1899 was appointed Trustee of the British Museum in place of the late Mr. Drury Fortnum. Sir Henry Howorth was elected a Conservative member for South Salford at the general election of 1886, and again in 1893. In recognition of his works upon Eastern history, &c., he was created a K.C.I.E. in 1892, and a F.R.S. in 1893. In 1869 he married the eldest daughter of the late J. P. Brierley. Addresses: 30 Collingham Gardens, S.W.; and Athenæum.

HOWSE, Henry Greenway, M.B., F.R.C.S., received his medical education at Guy's Hospital, London, and graduated M.B. at the University of London, where he was Surgical Scholar and Exhibitioner in Physiology and Biology. He is Senior Surgeon and Lecturer on Surgery at Guy's, Consulting Surgeon at Evelina Hospital, Fellow of the Roy. Med. Chir. Soc., and Member of Council, and lately Vice-President of the Royal College of Surgeons (Eng.), and has been Examiner in Surgery and in Anatomy at the University of London. He has contributed important articles to Heath's "Dictionary of Practical Surgery," 1886, to Stevenson and Murphy's "Treatise on Hygiene," to the Med. Chir. Transactions, "Guy's Hospital Reports," the Transactions of the Pathological Society, and other leading medical journals. Address: 59 Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

HOWTH, Earl of, William Ulick Tristram St. Lawrence, K.P., was born on June 25, 1827, and succeeded his father as 4th Earl in 1874. He was educated at Eton, and then entered the army, from which he retired, as Captain of the 7th Hussars, in 1850. He acted as State Steward to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland from 1855 to 1858, and from 1859 to 1866; and he sat in the House of Commons as Liberal Member for the borough of Galway from 1868 to 1874. Addresses: 55 Jermyn Street, S.W.; and Howth Castle, co. Dublin.

HUBBARD, The Hon. Evelyn, M.P., was born in London on March 18, 1852, and is the youngest son of the 1st Baron Addington, and Maria Margaret, eldest daughter of the 8th Baron Napier, of Merchiston. He was educated at Radley, and at Christ Church College, Oxford, where he took a second class in Classical Moderations in 1872, and a second in History in 1874, and graduated B.A. in 1874; M.A. 1878. He engaged in business in Russia in 1875, and is a member of the firm of Russia merchants, Messrs. Hubbard & Co., of St. Helen's Place, London, and of Egerton, Hubbard & Co., of St. Petersburg. He is a Director of the Bank of England, a Commissioner of Public Works Loans, a D.L. for the City of London, and in 1895 was elected an Alderman of the London County Council, an office which he resigned in March 1898. As a Conservative he contested North Bucks twice, in 1889 and 1891, and Plymouth in 1895, when, in company of Sir Edward Clarke, he was beaten by only 26 votes. He was returned for Brixton West at a bye-election in January 1896. He married in 1881 Evelyn Maude, youngest daughter of Wyndham Spencer Portal, of Malshanger, Hants. Addresses: 38 Lennox Gardens, S.W.; The Rookery, Downe, Kent.

HUBBARD, N. W., Alderman of the London County Council, was born at Brixton, Surrey, on September 29, 1846, his parents being in a humble position. He received but little education in a local school, and having lost his father very early in life, he went out to work at the age of nine years. Mr. Hubbard very early began to take interest in public affairs, at first devoting his efforts chiefly to social and temperance reform. In the year 1881 he was elected a member of the Lambeth Vestry, and he has continued to be a member up to the present time. Chiefly through his untiring efforts, baths and wash-houses were established in Lambeth in 1897, and were opened on the 9th July by the Prince of Wales, Mr. Hubbard presiding at the opening ceremony. When the London County Council came into existence in 1889, Mr. Hubbard was elected a member for the Norwood Division of Lambeth, and was again re-elected in 1892. At the elections in 1895, however, he lost his seat, but the Progressive party, knowing his worth, and being desirous of retaining his services, made him an Alderman, which position he still occupies. He has been Chairman of the Fire Brigade Committee, the Highways Committee, and Vice-Chairman of several other committees, and is at the present time Chairman of the Asylums Committee. In connection with his temperance work, Mr. Hubbard is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Good Templars, and for four years occupied the position of Grand Counsellor of the Grand Lodge of England. For the last thirty years Mr. Hubbard has been a successful merchant, whilst in addition he is Chairman of the British Homes Assurance Corporation, Limited, 25 Great Winchester

Street, E.C., an institution for the purpose of enabling persons to be the owners of their own homes. Hubbard has several times been elected to contest a parliamentary seat, but the present has not acceded to his requests. Address: 39 Shakespeare Herne Hill, S.E.

HUDLESTON, Wilfrid E. F.R.S., J.P., is the son of John St. John of Knaresborough, M.D., who in 1867 assumed by royal license the name of Hudleston, in right of his wife, heiress of line of the Hudleston co. Cumberland. He was born on June 2, 1828, and educated at York Uppingham, and afterwards at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1850. During the period between 1850 and 1860 he travelled in Lapland, Greece, Turkey, and other countries. He is an ornithologist, and contributed to the earlier numbers of the Ibis. In recent years he has paid much attention to the study of geology, and has written numerous papers, reviews, and addresses which have appeared in the Proceedings of the Geologists' Association, the Geological Magazine, the Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, the Mineralogical Magazine, and issues of the Palaeontographical Society, and in other publications. He is a President of the Geologists' Association, the Mineralogical Society, of the Meteorological Society, and of the Naturalists' Union. He was elected President (1889-90) of the Devonshire Association for the Advancement of Science, Literature, and Art, and in 1891 was President of the Geological Society of London, of which he had previously been Secretary. In 1897 Mr. Hudleston was awarded the Wollaston Gold Medal by the Council of the Geological Society. Address: 8 Stanhope Gardens, S.W.

HUDSON, Charles Thomas LL.D. Cantab., F.R.S., son of Corrie Hudson, Esq., of Gurney, born at Brompton, London, on October 1, 1828, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1848, and was Wrangler in 1852. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society in 1889, and 1890, and elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1889. He is the author with Mr. P. H. Goss of Hudson and Grosse's "Rotifera", the discoverer of Pedalion in the numerous new genera and species of rotifers, described in papers published in the Journal of the Royal Microscopical Society, the Quarterly Journal of Microscopy, and the Annals and Magazine

HUGGINS, Sir William, K.C.B., Hon. F.R.S.E., D.C.L. Oxon., Cantab., Edin., Dublin, and St. vs, Ph.D. Leyden, was born in , Feb. 7, 1824, and received his education at the City of London . He afterwards continued his in mathematics, classics, and languages with the assistance of masters. Much of his time was to experiments in natural philo- and he collected apparatus by the which he gained considerable prac- knowledge of the elements of chemis- lectricity, magnetism, and other es of physical science. In 1852 he lected a member of the Micro- al Society, and for some years he l himself with much assiduity, with l of the microscope, to the study of and vegetable physiology. In 1855 lliam Huggins erected an observa- his residence at Upper Tulse Hill, occupied himself for some time with ations of double stars, and with l drawings of the planets Mars, r, and Saturn. From the first establishment of his observatory it was his desire not to continue in the beaten track of astronomical observation, but, if possible, to bring to bear upon the science of astro- nomy the practical knowledge which he had obtained of general physics. For his important discoveries and researches by means of the spectroscope applied to the heavenly bodies, Sir William Huggins received, in November 1866, one of the Royal Medals placed at the disposal of the Royal Society, of which he had previously, on June 1, 1865, been elected a Fellow. In 1867 the Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society was awarded to Sir William Huggins and Dr. Miller for their conjoint researches. Sir William Huggins has since continued his prismatic re- searches by a re-examination of the nebulae with a more powerful spectroscope, by which his former results have been con- firmed. He has also examined the spectra of various comets, and has found that the greater part of the light of these objects is different from solar light. Sir William Huggins has made observations of the spectra of the solar prominences, and devised the method by which the forms of these objects may be seen. From 1875 he has been engaged in obtaining photographs of the ultra-violet portions (invisible to eye observation) of the spectra of the stars. This difficult research has led to important results, and has opened quite a new field of work to the astronomer; it furnishes one of the chief data which we at present have as to the probable relative ages of the stars and of the sun. Sir William has extended this method of research to the planets, to comets, to the Great Nebula in Orion and to other nebulae; new results of importance being obtained. For these newer researches, and for that on the motion of stars in the line of sight, Sir William Huggins a second time received a medal from the Royal Society, the Rum- ford Medal being conferred upon him in 1880; also a Prix Valtz (1883) from the Institute of France; and the Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society for the second time (1885). The research on the motions of the stars in the line of sight was indeed a new departure of the utmost importance in astronomical physics. It has since been followed up at Greenwich, and at Potsdam and Harvard, by means of photography. Besides revealing to us the orbits of many stars, and otherwise undetectable companion stars, the study of line of sight motions must certainly widely increase our knowledge of the general laws and arrangements of the stellar universe. The work of the Tulse Hill Observatory continues to be actively carried on. Some of the latest investiga- tions (still in progress) include researches on the evolution of double stars ; on the correlations of the ultra-violet spectra of stars, and those of nebulae ; while in the Physical Laboratories attached to the Observatory researches have recently been made on the spectrum of Calcium which have important bearings on the problems of solar and stellar physics ; and other chemical researches are in hand. An autobiographical article giving a useful account of Sir William Huggins's early work, which laid the foundations of Astrophysics in this country, was published in the Nineteenth Century for June 1897, under the title "The New Astronomy." Sir William Huggins delivered the Rede Lecture at the University of Cambridge in 1869, when he gave an account of his researches in astronomy by means of the spectroscope. In May 1870 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from the University of Cambridge, and at the Commemoration at Oxford the same year, the degree of D.C.L. On the occasion of the meeting of the British Association at Edinburgh in 1871, he was created honorary LL.D. of that university. A large duplex telescope by Messrs. Grubb, of Dublin, consisting of an achromatic of fifteen inches, and of a reflector of eighteen inches, constructed at the expense of the Royal Society, was placed in 1871 in Sir William Huggins's hands, and fixed in the observatory erected by him at Upper Tulse Hill. In July 1872 he was elected a Foreign Member of the ancient University, Dei Lincei, in Rome. In the October of the same year the Academy of Sciences of Paris awarded the Lalande Prize for Astronomy to Sir William Huggins, as an acknowledgment of his researches in the physical constitution of the stars, planets, comets, and nebulae. The late Emperor of Brazil, who has twice paid long visits to Sir William Huggins's observatory, honoured him with the distinction of Commander of the Order of the Rose in March 1873. About the same time he was elected a Foreign Member of the Royal Society of Denmark, and also of the Philosophical Society of Lund. In January 1874 he received the honour of being elected a Corresponding Member of the Academy of Sciences of Paris. At the tercentenary commemoration of the University of Leyden, in 1875, Sir William Huggins received the honorary degree of Doctor of Physics and Mathematics. In 1877 he was elected a Corresponding Member of the Royal Society of Göttingen, and a member of the Royal Society of Bohemia. In 1886 he received the degree of LL.D., honoris causa, from Trinity College, Dublin ; in 1888 the Prix Janssen from the Institute of France ; and in 1897 the Wilde Medal from the Lit. and Phil. Society of Manchester. He is also an Hon. Fellow of the R. of New South Wales ; an H. Member of the American Acad and Sciences, Boston ; and a various other learned Societies and abroad. Sir William H. President of the Royal As Society from 1876 to 1878 ; and of the British Association for the ment of Science in 1891-92. 1897, on the occasion of the Jubilee, he was created a K. HUGHES, Professor D ward, F.R.S., was born in May 16, 1831 ; his parents emigrated to the United States in 1850 (on account of his great talents), appointed Professor of the College of Bardstown in where he had received his His equal talents for physical and mechanics later on procured appointment to the Chair of Philosophy at the same College. His great invention was that of the telegraph which bears his name. Professor Hughes went to London to superintend the making of his instrument, but the patent for it was out in the United States until that year the invention became success, and no sooner was than Professor Hughes received from the editors of the American Press summoning him to New York. American Telegraph Company in possession of the Morse instrument levied rates for transmission felt to be excessive. The English writer was therefore taken up in relation to the Morse. A company was formed and the lines of several small companies were leased. In 1857 these companies united to form one large company—the present Western Union Company. In that year Professor Hughes came to England in order to introduce the instrument here, but the English authorities metaphorically threw cold water on his invention, and he could not, at that time, persuade the telegraph companies here even to try it ; so, after fruitless efforts, he went to France. The French Imperial Government put the instrument in practical experiment between Lyons and Marseilles. At the end of that trial a provision was made with Professor Hughes giving him the right to the use of the instrument on the French lines ; stipulating

Experimental trials should be continued extended between Marseilles, Lyons, and Bordeaux for twelve months, during which a committee of the highest scientific experts should watch and report on the results obtained. The report of the committee being highly favourable, the French Government, in 1861, adopted the Hughes instrument for all their important lines. The Emperor Napoleon III. took great interest in the invention, and he sent for Professor Hughes in order to consult him privately upon several of His Majesty's own electrical inventions. Professor Hughes was nominated, in 1862, Chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur, and he became a member of the Telegraph Commission de Perfectionnements. In the great capacity he undertook, in conjunction with Professor Guillemin, at the request of the Government, a series of experiments upon the comparative value of the lightning protectors then in use. The experiments were made at the laboratory of the École de St. Cyr, and he published the subject of memoirs published in the Comptes rendus of the Academy of Sciences. At the end of the year 1862, the Italian Government invited Professor Hughes to visit Italy, and instruct their officers in the use of his instrument. This was done, and the instrument was used probationally for six months between Florence, Genoa, and Turin, at the end of which time the Hughes system was adopted for all their important lines. In 1863 the United Kingdom Telegraph Company of England adopted the Hughes instrument for their lines. In 1864, Professor Hughes was invited by the Russian Government to visit St. Petersburg, where he remained nine months, during which he had the honour of being a guest of the Emperor in the Summer Palace of Tsarskoe Selo, where he was requested to demonstrate his invention, and also to give a lecture on electricity to the Czar and his family. His instrument was adopted for all long Russian telegraph lines, and he was made a Knight of the Order of St. Vladimir. Between 1864 and 1876 Professor Hughes was called successively to Germany, Austria, Turkey, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, and Spain, where his telegraph system met with the same thorough adoption. In 1878 Professor Hughes announced through a paper to the Royal Society his discovery of the microphone. His instrument not only transmits speech, but magnifies the smallest sound, so that it is easy to render audible the faintest sound, such as the walk of a fly. The microphone is now universally employed as a transmitter to the telephone. In 1880 he presented to the Royal Society his invention of the Induction Balance, now well known to the scientific world. In 1880 Professor Hughes was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society; and he has since read numerous papers upon electricity and magnetism before that Society, for which, together with his discovery of the microphone and invention of the Induction Balance, the Royal Society, in 1885, bestowed upon him their Royal Gold Medal, and in 1897 the Prince of Wales, as Chairman of the Society of Arts, presented to him, in the name of the Society, and in presence of the Council at Marlborough House, their Gold Albert Medal, "in recognition of the services he has rendered to arts, manufactures, and commerce by his numerous inventions in electricity and magnetism, especially the Printing Telegraph and the Microphone." The Post Office in England now makes use of the Hughes system for all its Continental messages, and it is in active service in all the large cities of the Continent. In 1881 Professor Hughes represented Great Britain as one of the Commissioners at the Paris Electrical Exhibition; and in 1886 he was elected President of the Institution of Electrical Engineers. He has received numerous orders of knighthood, medals, and diplomas from the different countries which have appreciated his works. Professor Hughes is Commander of the Légion d'Honneur (France); Charles III. (Spain); Iron Crown (Austria); Medjidieh (Turkey); and Knight of St. Anne (Russia); St. Maurice and St. Lazarus (Italy); St. Michael's (Bavaria); Grand Officer of the Royal Order of Takovo (Serbia); Officer of the Royal Order of Leopold (Belgium); and he received the special Gold Grand Prix (one of ten only), Paris Exhibition, 1867, as well as the Grand Diplôme d'Honneur, Paris Electrical Exhibition, 1881; besides numerous other medals and titles of less importance. Address: 40 Langham Street, Portland Place, W.

HUGHES, Colonel Edwin, M.P., L.C.C., V.D., was born at Droitwich, Worcestershire, May 27, 1832, and educated at the Grammar School, Birmingham. In 1862 he was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Plumstead Artillery Volunteers, and became a prize-winner at many county and Wimbledon competitions. In 1865, Mr. Hughes was appointed chief county Conservative agent, and was successful in gaining enough on one revision to win six seats, which have ever since been kept by the Conservatives. In 1874 he was transferred to the City of London Conservative Association, and increased the Conservative majority by thousands, so that in 1880 they polled two to one, and in 1885 four to one. After twenty-five years' exertions he procured the return in 1880 of two Conservative members for Greenwich. He took an active part in the agitation against the School Board in 1885, and on the triumph of the "economical" party he was elected to the post previously held by the Hon. Lyulph Stanley. In 1885 he was elected first member for Woolwich by a large Conservative majority; and again in 1886 he was returned by a still larger majority. In 1887, retiring from the Volunteers, he became Honorary Colonel of the Artillery Brigade he had raised and commanded for twenty-eight years. He is an authority on Metropolitan Local Government, and in 1889 he was elected Member of the London County Council, where he has continuously represented Woolwich from the first. In 1892 he was re-elected to Parliament by a majority of 1892 over Mr. Ben Jones, whom he again beat by a very large majority in 1895. He has laboured unceasingly in the cause of the Government workmen as to superannuation, and of the sailors as to Greenwich Hospital pensions, and obtained two select Committees of the House of Commons in favour of his several propositions, gaining enormous advantages to others by his exertions, in pensions and increased wages of the capital value of over £5,000,000. Thus it comes about that in dockyard towns and in Woolwich Arsenal he is gratefully known as the "Pensioner's Champion." Colonel Hughes has given concurrent municipal service on various London Boards totalling to one hundred and seventeen years. His continuous political service as agent and member amounts to fifty-one years, his services, municipal and parliamentary together, probably exceeding that of any other public man. He is married to Mary Adele Elliott. Address: Oakland Is, Pinner, Middx.

HUGHES. Rev. Hugh Price, M.A., London, a celebrated Wesleyan preacher, was born in 1847, at Carmarthen, South Wales, and is the son of the late John Hughes Esq., surgeon, coroner, &c. &c. magistrate, chairman of School Board, &c. in Carmarthen, who died in 1897. He was educated privately and afterwards attended lectures at University College, London, and at the Theological College of the Wesleyan Methodist Church at Birmingham, where the Minister was in 1901. His first appointment was to Dover in 1868. He remained there, and at every other place to which he was appointed, for the whole years permitted by the Wesleyan Conference. His successful ministry was ended by his appointment to St. Paul's Church, London, in 1891. Since that time he has been Minister, St. Paul's Church, London, and St. Paul's Church, London.

ton Hill. At the conclusion of 2 years at Brixton Hill he was appointed his present position as superintendent of the West London Mission, which includes services in St. James's Hall, Prince Wardour Hall, and Cleveland Hall. He has a centre of social philanthropy in Lincoln House, 60 Greek Street, Square; a residence for young men in Wiclif House, Fitzroy Square; a Sisterhood in Katherine House, York Street, Russell Square. During his life he has joined in the Education controversy, and has taken part in the controversy that arose in relation to the Majority Report of the Commission. He published "Social Christianity," now in its second edition; and "The Philanthropist," in 1890. Other works from his pen are "Ethical Christianity," "Evangelical Christianity," and "The Almsgiver." In 1892 he came prominently forward at the "Review of the Conference at Grindelwald, which marks on a possible reconciliation between English Dissenters and the Church of England led to much discussion, and was present also at the Conference at Grindelwald in 1893. He is editor of the Times, the most influential English newspaper; is an active total abstinent, and Vice-President of the United Temperance Alliance. He took a prominent part in the Social Purity movement; is a permanent member of the Methodist Conference; and a leader of the "Forward Movement," with a view to the promotion of Social as well as Spiritual Salvation. He was President of the Wesleyan Conference, 1894-1895. Methodist Times Office, 12, Fleet Street, E.C.

ed, in 1850, to the staff of the cal Survey of Great Britain, under eral direction of Sir H. T. de la Bêche, ssor (now Sir Andrew C.) Ramsay, Local Director ; and he served the ears of his official life in company e late Professor Jukes (whom he ards succeeded) and Dr. Selwyn, the or of the Geological Survey of During the period of about years in which Mr. Hull was enon the survey of Great Britain, he ically mapped a large portion of the l counties of England, including the elds of Lancashire, Cheshire, and stershire. In 1867 he was appointed st-Surveyor to the Survey of Scot-and in 1869 Director of the Geo-Survey of Ireland (in succession to ssor J. B. Jukes), and Professor of gy to the Royal College of Science,

Ireland has been geologically sur-and a large portion of the southern evised and brought into harmony the British formations. Mr. Hull lected Fellow of the Geological y of London in 1855, and of the Society in 1867. During the inquiries by the Royal Commission, under esidency of the Duke of Argyll, Prof. gave much information regarding the ces of the British and Irish coal-which are recorded in the Report e Commission issued in 1871. The t on the Irish coal-fields was drawn y himself. In 1873 Prof. Hull was ed President of the Royal Geological ty of Ireland, and in 1874 he was nted Examiner in Geology to the ersity of London in conjunction with T. R. Jones, F.R.S., which appoint-he held for three years. At the ng of the British Association in Belin 1874, he was President of the gical Section (C), and read an address e volcanic phenomena of the North of
ld. In 1879 he received the honorary e of LL.D from the University of Glasgow on the occasion of the installation of the late Duke of Buccleuch as Chancellor. One of the most important events in Prof. Hull's life was his visit to Arabia Petræa and Palestine towards the close of 1883. On the recommendation of Colonel (now Major-General) Sir Charles Wilson, R.E., he was nominated by the Committee of the Palestine Exploration Society to take the command of an expedition organised for making a geological and topographical survey of the Arabah Valley and adjoining territories between the Sinaitic Peninsula on the south and Southern Palestine on the north. In that expedition he was accompanied by Colonel Kitchener, R.E. (now the famous Sirdar of the Egyptian Army), Mr. H. C. Hart, his son Dr. E. G. Hull, and several assistants ; and in November of the above-named year (1883), the party, with an escort of twenty-nine camels and their drivers, left Suez, and traversed the Sinaitic Peninsula, the Arabah Valley from Akabah to the Dead Sea, visiting Mount Hor and Petra, and thence across Southern Palestine to Gaza by Beersheba ; the period occupied being about three months. By this ex-pediton the surveys of Sinai and Palestine were connected, and the geological phenomena mapped and described. Collections of plants and animals were made by Mr.

Hart, and meteorological observations were carried out daily by Mr. Reginald Laurence. The narrative of the expedition was drawn up and published by the Palestine Exploration Committee, under the title of "Mount Seir, Sinai, and Southern Palestine" ; and the geological details are contained in the memoir, "On the Physical Geography and Geology of Arabia Petræa, &c.," 1886. In 1893 Prof. Hull visited Egypt and the Nile Valley as far as the First Cataract, for the purpose of examining the evidence regarding the former magnitude of that river as compared with that of the present day ; and arrived at the conclusion that in the Pleistocene (or Glacial) epoch its volume was vastly greater than at present. The evidence for this conclusion was laid before the Geological Society of London. At the annual meeting of the Geological Society of London, in 1890, the Murchison Medal was presented to Prof. Hull in consideration of his services to Geology. Prof. Hull is the author of several works and scientific memoirs, of which the following are the more important: "The Coal-Fields of Great Britain: their History, Structure, and Resources," 1865, 4th edit., 1881 ; "A Treatise on the Building and Ornamental Stones of Great Britain and Foreign Countries," 1872 ; "Contributions to the Physical History of the British Isles," 1882 ; "Sketch of Geological History,"

On the completion of the Geological Survey of Ireland in 1890, Prof. Hull retired from the public service. Address: 20 Arundel Gardens, W.

HUMBERT I., Rénier-Charles-Emmanuel-Jean-Marie-Ferdinand-Eugène, King of Italy, the eldest son of the late King Victor Emmanuel II., and of Adélaïde, Archduchess of Austria, was born at Turin, March 14, 1844. At an early age he obtained an insight into political and military life under the guidance of his father, whom he attended during the war of Italian Independence, although he was then too young to take an active part in the struggle. The youthful heir to the throne was more closely connected with the movement for the unification of Italy, which followed the events of 1859. In particular he took part in the work of reorganising the ancient kingdom of the Two Sicilies; and in July 1862 he visited Naples and Palermo, where he shared the popularity of Garibaldi. When the war between Prussia and Austria was imminent, Prince Humbert was despatched to Paris to ascertain the sentiments of the French Government in reference to the alliance between Italy and Prussia. On the outbreak of hostilities he hastened to take the field; obtained the command of a division of General Cialdini's army with the title of Lieutenant-General; and was present at the disastrous battle of Custozza (June 23, 1866), where it is said he performed prodigies of valour. On April 22, 1868, he married, at Turin, his cousin, the Princess Marguerite Marie Thérèse Jeanne of Savoy, daughter of the late Duke Ferdinand of Genoa, brother of King Victor Emmanuel. The Queen is a most accomplished lady, an artist, and a mountaineer of courage and endurance. A son was born at Naples, Nov. 11, 1869, who received the names of Victor Emmanuel Ferdinand Mary Januarius, and the title of Prince of Naples.

After the occupation of Rome by Italian troops in 1870, Prince Humbert and the Princess Marguerite took residence in the Eternal City. He succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, Jan. 9, 1878. As he was at Naples, Nov. 17, 1878, a man named Passanante approached the Royal carriage and attempted with a poniard to assassinate his Majesty. The King escaped with a slight scratch, but Signor Crispien, Prime Minister, who was with him, was wounded rather badly in the chest. Passanante was condemned to death, but the punishment was commuted to imprisonment for life. Humbert received the Order of the Crown by the hands of the Duke of Abruzzi at the Quirinal, March 2, 1878. He is Chevalier of the Order of the Black Eagle, and of the Austrian Order of the Golden Fleece, &c. King Humbert and the Princess Marguerite celebrated their silver wedding at Rome in April 1893. His son, the Crown Prince Victor Emmanuel III., born at Naples, was married in Oct. 1891 to the Princess Helen of Montenegro. An attempt upon the King's life in 1892 happily failed. There had been much talk as to the unpopularity of the King, and this event was almost regarded as confirmation of such reports. As he was driving out on April 22 to the Capannelle Racecourse, a workman struck him with a dagger. The blow was fatal, and the man was seized, and was eventually sent to penal servitude for life.

HUMPHREY, The Rev. Wm. S.J., son of John Humphrey, Esq., of Pitmedden, Aberdeenshire, was born at Aberdeen, July 31, 1839. He was educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, and was a member of the General Council of the University of Aberdeen. He studied at the University of Edinburgh; was a clergyman of the Church of England; and was Dr. Forbes, Bishop of Brechin, the living of St. Mary Magdalene, Aberdeen. He became a Roman Catholic in 1868, and went to Rome, where he pursued his theological studies at the Romano. He was ordained by Cardinal Manning in 1871, and was on the mission in London till 1874. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1874. Humphrey is the author of "The Teacher," 7th edit.; "Mary, Mother of God," 7th edit.; "The Written Gospels"; "Other Gospels"; "Mr. Stephen and Cardinal Bellarmine on the Religious State"; "The Bible and Christian Belief"; "Christian Marriage"; "The Mediator," 2nd edit.; "The Christ"; "Elements of Religion"; "Conscience and Law, or Princonduct"; "Recollections of Discopalianism"; "His Divine"; "The Living God"; and has contributed to the "Catholic Academia" month. Address: 114 Mount Vernon Square, W.

IRY and BOHEMIA, King of the Romans ANCIS JOSEPH I.

IRY, Major-General Sir James K.C.B., D.S.O., Commander in Chief, Ind., son of Archibald Hunter, Major-General, and Mary Jane, daughter of James Duncan Graham, of Glenlyon, was born Sept. 6, 1856. He was educated at Glasgow Academy and entered the Army as Lieutenant in the Royal Lancashire Regiment in 1875. For two years he served as Adjutant of his regiment, and was promoted Captain in August 1882, Major in January 1885, and Colonel in January 1894. He served in the Nile Expedition, was mentioned in despatches and was awarded the Victoria Cross of the third class and the Distinguished Service Cross of the fourth class. In 1885 he served with the Egyptian Frontier Force. He was present at the action of El Teb where he was severely wounded, his name being mentioned in despatches. During 1889 he served on the Egyptian Frontier in command of a Battalion of the Egyptian Army and took part in engagements at Arguin and was promoted to Lieut.-Colonel. In 1892 Colonel Hunter was appointed Governor of the Red Sea Littoral and was present at Suakin, and afterwards Commander of the Egyptian Frontier Force. In 1896 he served with the Expeditionary Force under Lord Kitchener in command of the Egyptian Brigade, being present at the Battle of Firket and the operations at Khartoum, was mentioned in despatches, and was promoted to Major-General. He distinguished service in the field. In March of 1898 General Hunter made a reconnaissance of the enemy's position at Atbara, and shortly after the brilliant action was fought in which 3000 dervishes were slain and 4000 taken prisoners. General Hunter was second in command on that occasion. He was appointed Governor of Omdurman on the settlement of affairs after the battle. Address: Highthorn, West Kilbride, Ayrshire.

HUNTER, Colin, A.R.A., was born in Glasgow, July 16, 1841, and is the son of John Hunter, bookseller and postmaster, of Helensburgh. He was educated in that town, and began painting at twenty years of age, after four years' clerkship. His education as a painter was derived from nature. His principal pictures are "Trawlers Waiting for Darkness," exhibited in the Royal Academy, 1873; "Salmon Stake Nets" (R.A.), 1874, now in the Sydney Government collection; "Give Way" (R.A.), 1875; "Digging Bait" (R.A.), 1876; "Their Only Harvest" (R.A.), 1878, now the property of the Chantrey Bequest Trustees; "Silver of the Sea" (R.A.), 1879; "Mussel Gatherers," and "In the Gloaming" (R.A.), 1880; "The Island Harvest" (Fine Art Society's Rooms), 1881; "Waiting for the Homeward Bound" (R.A.), 1882, now in the Adelaide collection; "A Pebbled Shore" and "Lobster Fishers" (R.A.), 1883; "Herring Market at Sea" (R.A.), 1884, now in Manchester Corporation collection; "The Rapids of Niagara" (R.A.), 1885; "The Woman's Part" (R.A.), 1886; "Their Share of the Toil" (R.A.), 1887; "Fishers of the North Sea" (R.A.), 1888; "Baiters" (R.A.), 1889; "The Hills of Morven" (R.A.), 1890; and, more recently, "Ireland" and "Lobster Fishers," 1893; and "The Gleanings of the Herring Harvest," and "Wintry Weather," 1894. Since 1895 he has exhibited some eighteen pictures of wild life at the Royal Academy's Exhibition. Mr. Hunter was elected an associate of the Royal Academy in January 1884, and is also a Member of the Royal Scottish Water-Colour Society. He married, in 1873, Isabel, daughter of John H. Young, of Glasgow. Address: 14 Melbury Road, Kensington, W.

HUNTER, Sir William Guyer, K.C.M.G., M.D., F.R.C.P., eldest son of the late Mr. Thomas Hunter, of Catterick, Yorkshire, was born in 1831, and educated at King's College, London, at Aberdeen University, and at various hospitals. He entered the Indian Medical Service, Bombay Presidency, in 1850, and served through the Burmese War and the Indian Mutiny. In 1876 he was appointed Prinprincipal of the Grant Medical College; and in 1879 Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay. He retired in 1880, and in 1883 went out to Egypt to serve on the Cholera Commission. For his services on this occasion he was made a K.C.M.G. In 1885 he entered Parliament as Conservative member for Central Hackney, and was again returned for the same constituency in 1886, retaining the seat until 1892. He married (2), in 1871, a daughter of S. Stainburn. Address: 21 Norfolk Crescent, W.

HUNTER, Sir William Wilson, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., M.A. Oxford, Hon. LL.D. Cambridge and Glasgow, son of the late A. Galloway Hunter, Esq., of Denholm, was born July 15, 1840, and educated at the universities of Glasgow, Paris, and Bonn. He headed the list of Indian civilians appointed in 1862; and after distinguishing himself in Calcutta by proficiency in Sanskrit and the modern vernaculars in India, passed through the appointments of a junior civil servant in the Bengal districts. On the outbreak of the Orissa Famine of 1866, he was appointed Inspector of Public Instruction in the province of Orissa and the southwestern division of Bengal. At the end of the dearth he received the thanks of the Government, but was invalided to England. When on sick leave Sir William Hunter wrote "The Annals of Rural Bengal," which in the next ten years passed through five editions; and a "Dictionary of the Non-Aryan Languages of India and High Asia." On his return to Bengal, he received the gazetted acknowledgments of the Governor-General and the Secretary of State; together with a present of Rs. 20,000 of public money, also notified in the Government Gazette, for his services. In 1869 he was attached on special duty to the Secretariat of the Government of Bengal; in 1870 to that of the Supreme Government of India, acting for a time as Under-Secretary; in 1871 he was appointed Director-General of Statistics to the Government of India. As the head of this Department he organised, and carried out from beginning to end, the Statistical Survey of India. The first census of India was taken in 1872. In 1876 he issued the "Statistical Account of Bengal" in twenty volumes. For the other eleven provinces of India a statistical survey was executed under his direction in each district of an area "equal to all Europe less Russia." Sir William Hunter again received the gazetted thanks of the Government. His labours had done much to throw light on the causes and management of famines, and to bring them within administrative control. In 1878 he was appointed in the first list of the new Order of the Indian Empire. In 1880 the Statistical Survey of India had been brought to completion in that direction, and its records had been made available to the public in 12 volumes. In 1881 he issued a condensed edition of this vast work, alphabetically arranged, in the "Imperial Gazetteer of India" in nine volumes. In the same year he was appointed a Member of the Legislative Council, and in 1882 Secretary of the Education Commission. As a Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, Sir William Hunter took a part in the important series of bills which issued from the Indian Legislature between 1881 and 1887, especially affecting the Land Law, and the Rights of Cultivators. As President of the Indian Education Commission he was largely instrumental in consolidating public instruction in India on a national basis. The results of these labours have been briefly but accurately described in the development of the Department of Public Instruction in India into a national system of education for the country. For these services he again received the gazetted thanks of the Government and was appointed a Companion of the Star of India. In 1884 Sir William Hunter was deputed to England, by the Governor-General in Council, to give evidence before the Parliamentary Committee on the economic aspects of Indian railway development. In 1886, in addition to his duties in the Viceroy's Legislative Council, Lord Dufferin appointed him to the Finance Commission, to conduct a searching inquiry into Indian expenditure, and to report on the financial relations of the Provincial Governments to the Supreme Government of India. Among the honorary offices discharged by Sir William Hunter during the course of his Indian career was that of the Vice-Chancellorship of the University of Calcutta. In 1887 he was appointed Knight Commander of the Star of India, and having completed his twenty-fifth year of service, he retired from that office. On his return to England he brought out the expanded edition of the "Imperial Gazetteer of India" in fourteen volumes. Since then he has been a consistent and powerful advocate of moderate reform in India. As an examiner and lecturer in the Honours School of Oriental Studies, and as a member of the Faculty of Arts, he has taken an active part in the university life of Oxford. He has also given impulse to the University Press under a series of short histories and biographies, now well known as "The Rulers of India." Of this series Sir William Hunter was the projector and editor, and of its olumes three are from his hand. William Hunter has received honorary degrees from the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Glasgow; and is an honorary member of many learned societies in Europe and Asia. He is an active magistrate and J.P. for Berkshire and Oxfordshire, and a Deputy-Lieutenant of Oxford county. His best-known books are "Annals of Rural Bengal," "Orissa, Indian Province under Native and British Rule," "The Indian Mussulmans," "System of Famine Warnings," "A History of Lord Mayo," 2 vols.; a shorter version of the same in one volume, "The Life and Work of the Marquess of Dalhousie," "A Dictionary of the Non-Aryan Languages of India and High Asia," "The Indian Gazetteer of India," 14 vols.; "The Indian Empire, its History, People, and Products," which condenses into one volume for popular use, the main results of the Statistical Survey of India. His "History of the Indian Peoples" has been translated into five languages, and its English editions has reached five thousand copies. Among his recent works are "The Old Missions," "The Thackerays in India," and "Life of Brian Hodgson." In March 1874 he published vol. i. of an important history of British India. Sir William married the daughter of the late Thomas Murray, M.A., LL.D., J.P., author of "The Literary History of India," and other antiquarian works. Resides: Oaken Holt, Cumnor, Berkshire; 128 Piccadilly; and Athenæum.

HUNT-GRUBBE, Admiral Sir James, K.C.B., son of the late James Hunt-Grubbe, was born in London and entered the navy in 1844. He was promoted Lieutenant in 1854, serving in Scourge on the West Coast of Africa, taking part in the bombardment of the forts of Pessie and Labadie, and was subsequently landed for the instruction of the Coast Artillery. In 1855 he was ordered to command H.M.S. Teazer for suppression of the slave-trade on the Coast of Africa, and a few years afterwards commanded H.M.S. Jaseur on the same station for a similar purpose. As Lieutenant of H.M.S. Arrogant he was hurt in the operations on the river Niger in 1861, and also the capture of the fortified town of Saba. He was mentioned in despatches and promoted to Commander. In 1866 he was appointed Governor of the Island of Ascension. In the second phase of the Ashanti War in 1874 he commanded the Naval Force, taking part in all the fighting and the capture of Kumassi. He was wounded, mentioned in despatches, and promoted to C.B. As Captain of H.M.S. Sultan he was present at the bombardment of Alexandria, and being the Senior Captain of the Mediterranean Fleet at that time, he was appointed to command the offshore squadron in the attack on the forts, and for his services on that occasion he received a K.C.B. Sir Walter also had charge of the transports in the feint on Aboukir, and was constantly employed in watching the enemy's coasts until the close of the campaign. He was promoted Rear-Admiral in 1884, and the following year was appointed Commander-in-Chief on the Cape and West Africa station. For three years he was Admiral Superintendent of Devonport Dockyard, and also Umpire in the Naval Manœuvres of 1893 and 1894. He attained the rank of full Admiral in 1895, and was appointed President of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, retiring from the active list in 1897. Admiral Sir Walter Hunt Grubbe has been an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, and is a J.P. for Hampshire. He married, in 1867, Mary Anne, daughter of William Codrington, Esq., of Wroughton, Wilts. Address: Royal Naval College, Greenwich.

HUNTINGTON, Daniel, LL.D., American artist, was born at New York, Oct. 14, 1816. He was prepared for College by Rev. Horace Bushnell at New Haven, and entered Hamilton College in 1832; and in 1835-36 was a pupil of S. F. B. Morse in the art department of the New York University. In 1836 he exhibited "The Toper Asleep," a "Bar-room Politician," and several landscapes. In 1839 he studied in Florence and Rome, where he painted "The Sacred Lesson" and "Christian Prisoners"; and, on his return to America, painted "Mercy's Dream" and "Christiana and her Children." In 1844 he again went to Rome, where he painted the "Roman Penitents," "Italy," "The Communion of the Sick," and several landscapes. In 1851 he visited England, where he painted the portraits of several distinguished personages, among them Sir Charles Eastlake (then President of the Royal Academy) and the Earl of Carlisle, now in the collection of the Historical Society. Among his later works, besides numerous portraits, are "Lady Jane Grey and Feckenham in the Tower," "Henry VIII. and Queen Catherine Parr," "Queen Mary Signing the Death-Warrant of Lady Jane Grey," "The Good Samaritan," "The Sketcher," "Ichabod Crane and Katrina van Tassel," "The Counterfeit Note," another "Mercy's Dream," "The Republican Court," a number of Shakespearian subjects, "Chocurna Peak," "Philosophy and Christian Art," "Sowing the Word," and Titian and Charles V. In 1882 he visited Spain and painted "The Goldsmith's Daughter," "The Doubtful Letter," as well as portraits. Since his return he has painted "A Burgomaster of New Amsterdam," and many portraits of distinguished people. He was one of the founders of the Century Club, of which he was President until 1895; and he is a Vice-President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was President of the National Academy of Design, New York, from 1862 to 1891, with the exception of a few years.

HUNTINGTON, The Right Rev. Frederick Dan, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop of Central New York, was born at Hadley, Mass., May 28, 1819. He was graduated from Amherst College in 1839, studied divinity at Cambridge, and in 1842 became pastor of a Unitarian church in Boston. In 1855 he was elected preacher to Harvard University, and Plummer Professor of Christian Morals. In 1860 he withdrew from the Unitarian denomination, and was ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church. He organised a new parish, which he named Emmanuel Church. In 1861 he was one of the founders of the Church Monthly. In 1869 he was consecrated Bishop of Central New York, taking Syracuse for his Cathedral City. Among his publications are: "Sermons for the People," 1856; "Lessons on the Parables," 1856; "Christian Believing and Living," 1860; "Lectures on Human Society, as Illustrating the Power, Wisdom, and Goodness of God" (Lowell Lectures), 1860; "Hymn, or Hymns of Holy Refreshment," 1865; "Lessons for the Instruction of Children in the Divine Life," 1868; "Helps to a Holy Lent," 1872; "Steps to a Living Faith," 1873; "New Helps to a Holy Lent," 1876; "Personal Christian Life in the Ministry," 1887; "Forty Days with the Master," 1891; a Pamphlet on "Strikes," 1891; "The Golden Rule applied to Business and Social Life," 1892; besides other pamphlets, sermons, charges, and contributions to various periodicals. In 1883, by appointment, he wrote the Pastoral Letter of the House of Bishops.

HUNTLY, Marquis of, The Right Hon. Charles Gordon, Bart., LL.D., J.P., was born at Orton-Longueville, Peterborough, on March 5, 1817, and succeeded his father as 11th Marquis in 1863. He is the premier Marquis of Scotland, acted as Lord in Waiting from 1870 to 1873, and was Captain of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms in 1881. Lord Huntly filled the position of Lord Rector of Aberdeen University in 1890, 1893, and again in 1894. He was married in 1869, to Amy, daughter of John Cunliffe-Brooks, Bart., of Ebor, Lancashire. Address, Orton, Peterborough, &c.

HURLBATT, Miss Ethel of Bedford College, London, Kent, and was educated at Maidstone until 1884. In 1885 she entered Exeter College, Oxford, as an Extra, and took a second class in the Honour School of Modern History. She remained in College until 1887 for further historical work. A Special Scholarship given by the workers' Company. In 1887 she was appointed Principal of Aberystwyth residence for women students of the University College of South Wales and Glamorgan, Cardiff. During the first of her tenure of this office the number of students increased from 17 to 25, and permanent buildings were erected and occupied in January 1895. Miss Hurlbatt acted as Hon. Sec. for South Wales the Association for the Promotion of Education of Girls in Wales. She served on the Committee of the School of Cookery and Domestic Science, Cardiff, and was a Governor of the School, Llandaff. For several years Miss Hurlbatt was employed temporarily during the Long Vacation upon the staff of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, where she was employed in calendaring manuscripts. In February 1898, Miss Hurlbatt was appointed Principal of Bedford College (for Women), London. There can be no doubt that this College will have increasing importance in the future, as it is recognised by the Corporation of London (London University) as one of the qualified for recognition as a School of the revised University of London. There are at present 180 students at the College (37 in residence), of whom many are preparing for examinations of the University of London, for which it is specially fitted.

the new feeling towards the Nor-manner, referred to above, received the best and most fitting expression in the address presented to Ibsen by some of his admirers, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, March 20, 1898.
The address, which was read at a representative gathering, was in silver, consisting of a ciborium or chalice, an exact facsimile of one presented to King George II. in 1730; a plate of silver and ebony, an original, presented to Ibsen in 1725; and a small cup of the same material. On the same date (March 20) a long poem by Mr. William Lambert appeared in the Daily Chronicle, addressed to Ibsen, and hailing him as "Poet, . . . by friends' and foes' in Drama's wide domain presiding!" His seventieth birthday was celebrated in Christiania amid great honours, and congratulations were presented by the President of the Storting, a member of that body, and by numerous clubs, associations, and private persons. King Oscar also took part, and his telegram of congratulation, said:
"The day of honour is, likewise, the day of the Norwegian people." A high estimate of his work, entitled
"On his Merits," was recently

IGNATIEFF, Nicholas Pavlo- Russian general and diplomatist, born January 29, 1832. He is the son of Paul Ignatieff, a captain of infantry who at the time of the military revolution that occurred at St. Petersburg was the consequence of the somewhat premature accession of the Grand-Duke Alexander to the throne of Russia in 1825, the first to pass over, with his company, to the side of the new Czar—a duty which it was his duty to make in a manly manner in opposing the defection of the rebels, and which ensured the protection of the former, and gained for Ignatieff and his family the protection of Nicholas I. The effect of this notice had at the very outset of his career the Emperor Alexander as godfather. He was educated in the Corps des Pages, and, according to custom, quitted that select institution for young aristocrats to the Guard; and in the Military Academy, after three years' study, he was appointed as staff officer. At the beginning of the Crimean war he was ordered to the staff of General Berg. He held at Riga the post of Quarter-Master-General of the Baltic corps. He passed from the military to the diplomatic service, finding his point of transition in the military attachéship to the Embassy at London. His chief performance in this capacity was a report on England's military position in India, which so pleased the Emperor that he summoned Captain Ignatieff to Warsaw for a personal interview. In 1858 Ignatieff, now a colonel and aide-de-camp to the Emperor, was sent on a special mission to Khiva and Bokhara. He was afterwards made a major-general in the Imperial suite, and sent as a plenipotentiary to Peking, 1860, where he concluded a treaty by which the province of Ussuri was ceded by China to Russia. On his return to Russia he was made Director of the Asiatic Department in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. In 1864 he was appointed Minister at Constantinople, where his legation was afterwards (1867) raised to the rank of an embassy. Apart from his rank as ambassador, he was a lieutenant-general, and general aide-de-camp to the Emperor.

The object which General Ignatieff steadily pursued at Constantinople was to secure for Russia a powerful influence over Turkey. He completely reassured the late Sultan Abdul Aziz as to the intentions of the Government of St. Petersburg, while on the other hand he gained the good-will of the Christian subjects of the Porte by his courteous behaviour and his simulated anxiety to protect them. In the negotiations between the various European Powers prior and subsequent to the war between Russia and Turkey, General Ignatieff took a very prominent part, and the treaty of San Stefano was mainly his work. He was recalled from the embassy at Constantinople, May 2, 1878, when Prince Lobanoff was sent there in his place. Afterwards he was appointed Minister of the Interior, from which post he was dismissed in June 1882, owing to disagreements with the pacific M. De Giers. He remained, however, a member of the Council of the Empire. He is a bitter enemy of the Nihilists.

INGRAM, John H., was born in London, Nov. 16, 1849, and educated at Lyonsdown and City of London Colleges and by private tutors. He entered the General Post Office in 1868. In 1863 he published a small volume of verse, subsequently suppressed. This was followed, in 1868, by "Flora Symbolica," a work on the folk-lore of flowers, which has passed through numerous editions. In 1873 he began a series of articles in English and American periodicals, calling attention to misrepresentations about the life and character of Edgar Allan Poe; and in October 1874 embodied some of the results of his investigations in a short "Memoir of Poe," prefixed to a four-volume edition of the poet's works. This was followed in 1880 by an exhaustive two-volume biography of Edgar Allan Poe; new one-volume editions of which work have since been published, the latest in the Minerva Library of Famous Books, for which series Mr. Ingram edited and copiously annotated a new edition of Lockhart's "Life of Burns," 1890. In 1879, under the name of "Don Felix de Salamanca," he published "The Philosophy of Hand-writing," wherein the characters of several celebrated contemporaries were assumed to be portrayed by their calligraphy. In 1881 he published a volume of "Fairy Tales," translated from the Spanish of Fernan Caballero, and in 1882 a collection of historical sketches, styled "Claimants to Royalty." In the winter of 1883 he published a volume of historical ghost stories, entitled "The Haunted Homes of Great Britain," and in 1884 a second series of similar narratives. In the same year appeared his life of "Oliver Madox Brown," the young poet-painter, who died in 1874. In 1884 Mr. Ingram edited an illustrated édition de luxe of Edgar Poe's "Tales and Poems," in 4 vols., and a selection from Poe's works, in 2 vols., for the Tauchnitz collection. In 1885 he published a monograph on Poe's "Raven"; in 1887, a collection of Mrs. Browning's Poems, with Memoir, and in 1889 a rariorum edition of Poe's "Poetical Works." He is editing a series of original biographical manuals, entitled the Eminent Women series, and wrote for it, in 1888, a Life of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. It is the only complete memoir of Mrs. Browning yet published, has gone through several editions, and has been adopted as a University text-book. In 1892 Mr. Ingram edited, with a biographical introduction, a reprint of George Darley's "Sylvia," and wrote various papers for Mr. Miles's "Poets and Poetry of the Nineteenth Century." He is a contributor to many of the leading reviews of Europe and America, and has occasionally lectured on behalf of educational institutions. Address: General Post Office, E.C.

INGRAM, John Kells, LL.D., Litt.D., born in the county of Donegal, Ireland, on July 7, 1823, and eldest son of the Rev. William Ingram, was educated at Newry School and Trinity College, Dublin. He was elected scholar of his College in 1840, and Fellow in 1846, Professor of Oratory and English Literature in 1852, Regius Professor of Greek in 1866, and Librarian in 1879. He is now Vice-Provost of Trinity College. He was President of the Statistical Section of the British Association in 1878, and in that capacity delivered an address on "The Present Position and Prospects of Political Economy," which attracted much attention at home and abroad, and was translated into German by the well-known economist, Dr. H. Von Scheel, and into Danish by A. Peterson. He also gave an address to the Trades Union Congress in 1880 on "Work and the Workman," of which a French translation appeared in the full work. He is the author of the article "P. 22" in the "Encyclopædia Britannica" (9th edit.), which has since been included in a separate volume. His work has been translated into French, Spanish, German, Swedish, Polish, Czech, and Japanese. He has contributed to the same Encyclopædia the article "Slavery" (separately published in additions, in 1895, and since translated into German) and many other notices, amongst which may be mentioned those of Quesnay, Turgot, Fourier, Smith, Ricardo, Arthur Young, and Leslie. He is author of "Greek Etymology in England," "The Etymology of Liddell and Scott," and "The Etymology of Hermathena," a university lecture which he edited for some years. He has also edited "The Opus Majus" of Roger Bacon, "The First English translation of the Imitatione Christi," on "Metaphysical Tales," and other subjects. He has also published "Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy," a paper on "The Weak Endings of Shakespeare," in the Transactions of the Shakespeare Society, vol. i., and "The noon Lectures" (Dublin, 1886) on Shakespeare and Tennyson, and of the etymological part of William Smith's Latin School Dictionary, 2nd edit., 1883. He edited for the English Text Society, in 1886, the English version of the Imitatione Christi mentioned above. He was President of the Library Association in 1884, and delivered an address on "The Library of Trinity College, Dublin." He has been President of the Statistical Society of Ireland, and of the Royal Irish Academy, and is one of the Trustees of the Library of Ireland, a Visitor of the National Museum, Dublin, and a Commissioner for the Publication of the Laws and Institutions of Ireland. Ralph. See SCHREINER,

IRVING, Sir Henry, LL.D., the name assumed by John Henry Brodribb, the actor, only son of the late Samuel Brodribb, was born Feb. 6, 1838, at Keinton, near Glastonbury, and educated at Dr. Pinches' school, in George Yard, Lombard Street, London. He made his first public appearance at the Sunderland Theatre, Sept. 29, 1856, and after a series of engagements at Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, and Liverpool, extending over nine years, he was engaged on July 30, 1866, to play, with Miss Kate Terry, at Manchester, by Mr. Dion Boucicault, in an original play of his, entitled "Hunted Down." This led to a London engagement, when he came out at the St. James's Theatre as Doricourt in the "Belle's Stratagem." He subsequently played at Drury Lane, the Haymarket, and the Gaiety theatres. In May 1870 he transferred his services to the Vaudeville Theatre, playing Digby Grant in Mr. Albery's comedy of the "Two Roses," which character he sustained for 300 consecutive nights. His representation of "Hamlet" at the Lyceum Theatre, Oct. 31, 1874, produced a great sensation among the playgoing public, and opinion was at first much divided as to the merits of the performance, but it is now generally admitted that by his rendering of this and of other Shakespearian parts, Mr. Irving has placed himself at the head of English tragedians. "Hamlet" was played for 200 nights, the longest run of the play on record. He appeared in "Macbeth" Sept. 18, 1875; in "Othello" in 1876; and next as Philip in Tennyson's drama of "Queen Mary." Afterwards Mr. Irving played his Shakespearian parts in the provinces, in Scotland, and in Ireland. When in Dublin he played "Hamlet" by the request of the University, he having been presented with an address in the Dining Hall of Trinity College. In January 1877 he added to his Shakespearian repertory by playing "Richard III." at the Lyceum. The withdrawal of Mrs. Bateman from the Lyceum gave Mr. Irving supreme control over the theatre, of which he had long been the mainstay. It opened under his management on Dec. 30, 1878, when he again played "Hamlet" for 100 nights. The most remarkable incidents of Mr. Irving's management have been the production of "Othello" (in which he alternated the parts of the Moor and Iago with Mr. Edwin Booth), "The Merchant of Venice," "Much Ado about Nothing," "The Cup," "Twelfth Night," and "Faust," all which have been played in conjunction with Miss Ellen Terry. A public banquet was given to Mr. Irving at St. James's Hall, on July 4, 1883, shortly before his departure with the

Lyceum company for a theatrical tour in the United States. A second visit to America was made in 1884, and before its close Mr. Irving delivered an address to the students of Harvard University on the art of acting. He also delivered an address by the invitation of the Vice-Chancellor (Dr. Jowett) at Oxford, on June 26, 1886. On May 5, 1887, Mr. Irving was elected a Life Trustee of Shakespeare's birthplace. On June 1 he produced Byron's "Werner" at the Lyceum Theatre for the benefit of Dr. Westland Marston, with the fine result of giving over £800 to the distressed dramatist. On October 17 he visited Stratford-on-Avon for the purpose of making the dedicatory speech at the presentation of a public fountain by Mr. G. W. Childs, of Philadelphia, and the next day left Liverpool for a third tour in America, lasting until March 24, 1888. During his stay in the States he was given, on March 15, a reception by the American Goethe Society, and on March 19, by special desire of the War Department, he took his company to the Military Academy at West Point, where, with Miss Ellen Terry, he gave "The Merchant of Venice" in Elizabethan dress and without scenery of any kind. On March 12 the great blizzard occurred which paralysed New York for a week, and on that evening the Star, where Mr. Irving was performing, was the only theatre open. After a short season at the Lyceum he took "Faust" on tour, and at Bolton laid the foundation-stone of a new theatre. On November 28 he was entertained at a public banquet in Birmingham. On December 29 he produced "Macbeth" at the Lyceum, with Miss Ellen Terry as Lady Macbeth, and ran it until the following summer, nearly 200 nights, which is the longest run of the play on record. In April of the year 1889 he visited Germany, where "Julius Cæsar" and "The Merchant of Venice" were presented for him at the Berliner Theatre by Herr Barnay; and on his return home he played, with Miss Ellen Terry, before the Queen at Sandringham. On September 28 he revived at the Lyceum Watts-Phillips' play "The Dead Heart." The play ran the whole season, ending in the summer of 1890, after which, with Miss Ellen Terry, he made a short provincial tour, giving recitals of "Macbeth" with the accompaniment of Sir Arthur Sullivan's music. On Sept. 20, 1890, he produced "Ravenswood," by Herman Merivale, founded on Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." This was followed in 1891 by a revival of "Much Ado," "The Lyons Mail," and "The Corsican Brothers." During the season of 1892 Mr. Irving's company played "Henry VIII.," a notable revival, at the Lyceum, the part of Cardinal Wolsey taking the part of Cardinal Wolsey. The next part was not dissimilar. In 1893 he appeared as "Becket" in the Tennyson's great play of that name. At the end of 1893 Mr. Irving gave revivals of familiar pieces in London. He then took his company to America, and, on his return to the Lyceum in the spring of 1894, revived "Faust." In September 1894 he appeared at the Lyceum in a little play by Dr. Conan Doyle, in which he figured as a Waterloo veteran. In 1895 he appeared as King Arthur in a play of that name, and in 1896 he appeared in "Cymbeline," a Shakespearean play. In April 1897 he appeared as Napoleon in a translation of "Madame Sans-Gêne." He received the honour of knighthood in May 1895, in the autumn of which he again visited America. In June 1897 he delivered the Rede Lecture at Cambridge on "The Theatre in its relation to the State," and on the 15th of the month received the LL.D. of the University. After a long absence from the scene of his former triumphs and of serious ill-health, Sir Henry Irving returned to the Lyceum Theatre in 1899, opening with the play of "Le comte de Montcalm," specially written for him by Victorien Sardou. He received a reception of unprecedented enthusiasm from his old admirers. In "Robespierre" (May 1899) he sustained the chief male part, while Miss Ellen Terry played the chief female character. Address: Grafton Street, Bond Street, and the Athenæum.

ISABELLA II., Maria Louisa, ex-Queen of Spain, was born at Madrid, Oct. 30, 1830. Her father, Ferdinand VII., had been induced by the influence of his wife, to issue a Royal Decree, revoking the Salic Law, at his death, Sept. 29, 1833. His daughter, then a child, was proclaimed Queen, under the regency of her mother, Maria-Christina. This event proved a signal for civil warfare, as the claims of the late king's brother were supported by certain classes of the nobility. The war of succession lasted several years, and the country was desolated by the struggle between the contending Isabella and Christina parties, until the final confirmed the claims of Isabella, and pronounced sentence of exile on Don Carlos and his adherents. In 1840 the king, finding it impossible to continue the government without making concessions to public feeling for which he was indisposed, retired to France, and placed her power into the hands of Isabella, whom she had been previously common to the head of affairs. For following three years, whilst that conditional leader was able in great measure to direct her education and training, the young Queen was subjected to purer and more influences than she had before experienced. She was declared by a decree of the Cortes to have attained her majority, on the 15th, 1842, and took her place among the reigning sovereigns of Europe. Maria-Isabella returned to Madrid in 1845, and her restoration to influence was marked by her marriage of Isabella II. to her cousin, Don Francisco d'Assisi, the elder son of her maternal uncle, Don Francisco de which took place Oct. 10, 1846. Exposed to the intrigues of a party whose interests were based on this unconstitutional union, Isabella II. never knew the social influence of domestic happiness; engagements and reconciliations having succeeded each other alternately in her married life. It deserves special mention, however, that during her reign Spain rose to the rank among the great powers of Europe, while the internal progress of the country advanced with rapid strides. On the 16th, 1868, a great revolution broke out in Spain, starting with the fleet off Cadiz, and gradually spreading over the whole Peninsula. The speedy result was the deposition of a Republican Provisional Government under Prim, Serrano, and others at Madrid, and the flight of Queen Isabella to France. On November 6 her Majesty took up her residence in Paris, and she remained during her exile, with the exception of an interval spent at London during the Franco-Prussian War. On June 25, 1870, she renounced her claim to the Spanish throne in favour of her eldest son, the Prince of the Asturias. Eight years of exile she returned to Spain, and was received at Santander by her son, the late King Alfonso XII. (July 1876). Queen Isabella has had five children: 1. Infanta Marié-Isabel-Francine d'Assise-Christine-de-Paule-Dominga, Dec. 20, 1851. 2. Alfonso XII., late King of Spain. 3. Infanta Maria del Pilar, born June 4, 1861. 4. Infanta Maria Paz, born June 23, 1862; and 5. Infanta Maria Eulalie, born Feb. 12, 1864.

He studied in Amsterdam, under Kruseman, and next in Paris, under Picot; and received Gold Medals of Honour in Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam. He also had conferred upon him the Belgian Order of Leopold, and was nominated a member of the French Legion of Honour. His principal paintings are: "The Tranquil House," "The Shipwrecked," and "The Cradle," "Interior of the Orphans' Home at Katwyk," "The True Support," "The Mother," and "The Children of the Sea" (in the Queen of Holland's collection). In 1873 he exhibited at the French Gallery in Pall Mall, "Minding the Flock," and since that time has continually added to that long list of pictures in which he has recorded the sadder aspects of humbler life. Among his later pictures we may mention "The Little Sick-Nurse," and the "Sewer," 1888. At the Paris Exhibition of 1889 he obtained a grand prix. He was elected a correspondent of the Academy of Fine Arts in January 1885. Mr. Israels has resided in the Hague for many years. His brother, Mr. Lehman Israels, born at Groningen in 1833, went at an early age to the United States, where he acquired a considerable reputation as a journalist. He was for several years foreign editor of the New York World. A monograph of the work of Josef Israels has been written by Netscher, and translated into French by Zilcken.

ITO, High Admiral of the Japanese fleet during the war with China, was for ten years at the head of the Yokosha Arsenal. In the summer of 1894 he was put in command of the Japanese naval forces engaged against China off the coast of Korea, and quitted his post at the arsenal to go on board his flagship the Matsushima. On Sept. 7, 1894, a great naval battle took place between the Chinese and Japanese fleets. Twelve Chinese cruisers and warships were conveying transports full of Hunanese soldiers to the scene of war, when twelve Japanese ironclads and cruisers and five torpedo-boats under Admiral Ito engaged them. The fight lasted some seven hours, and resulted in the sinking or destruction of four Chinese men-of-war, and the disablement of many others. Only one Japanese warship was disabled, but the troops had all been landed before the engagement. The Japanese fleet was again ordered to sea in October, after it had been refitted at Port Arthur. Admiral Ito explained the tardy progress of Japanese influence in Korea on the ground that it was necessary to restore order in that country, to crush the brigands swarming in the mountain districts, to erect works in order to keep open the line of communication with the Japanese armies, and to enrol and train the Koreans as soldiers. In November he co-operated with the land forces attacking Port Arthur. Towards the end of January 1895 he was reported to be narrowly watching Wei-hai-wei, the forts of which had fired upon his ships on the 21st. In February the whole place, together with the Chinese fleet, was surrendered to him by Admiral Ting, who subsequently committed suicide, together with three principal Chinese officers. Admiral Ito, in compliance with the dead man's request, allowed all the soldiers in Wei-hai-wei and all the sailors in the Chinese fleet to return home free, and even conceded them the honours of war. He has resumed his duties at the arsenal, and resides in the palace in the Park surrounding it.

IVEAGH, Lord, Edward Cecil Guinness, Bart., K.P., LL.D., J.P., D.L., of Castlenock, co. Dublin, born on Nov. 10, 1847, formerly a member of the great firm of brewers in Dublin, is the younger brother of Lord Ardilaun, and is well known as a munificent philanthropist, who has given a quarter of a million to be applied to the better housing of the poor, and also as a scion of a house whose wealth has been systematically employed for the promotion of schemes of public utility. His father, Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, it will be remembered, rebuilt St. Patrick's Cathedral in Dublin; and even the most rigid of teetotalers, when they see the purposes to which the great fortune of the Guinness family has been devoted, may almost be expected to forgive the source from which it has been derived. In December 1898 Lord Iveagh made two munificent offers, the first of a sum amounting to £250,000 for the further endowment of the Jenner Institute of Preventive Medicine, which has been gratefully accepted, the second of a like amount for the improvement of an insanitary area in the heart of Dublin. This last offer requires the sanction of Parliament. It is a scheme for erecting workmen's dwellings, &c., in the Bull-Alley area of Dublin, and for otherwise improving the streets of that district. He was raised to the peerage on Jan. 1, 1891, and received the degree of Hon. LL.D., Dublin, in the same year. He was made a K.P. in February 1896. Sir Edward married, in 1873, Adelaide Maria, daughter of Richard Samuel Guinness, M.P. for Deepwell, co. Dublin. Addresses: Farnleigh, Castlenock, co. Dublin; and Elveden, Suffolk.

IZZET BEY, Ahmet, was born some forty years ago, and was educated for the law. In the later days of Sultan Nedim he was appointed to the post of Tidjaret. After the accession of Hamid (q.r.) he became a pasha, a position which he greatly valued himself. From being a reporter to be a counsellor, and in 1894 he became Sultan's right-hand man. He was the ruin of Kiamil Pasha and his friends, and induced his master to seek protection from British pressure. The Cabinet are nearly all his. Naturally he has crowds of enemies. The old Turkish party hate him for his phil policy, while the advanced party like his despotic methods. He is in command of the Palace police, and is the truth the Power behind the Throne.

JACKSON, Frederick George, Arctic explorer, born in 1860, is the son of G. F. Jackson of Leamington. He was educated at Denstone College and Edinburgh University. He has traversed the Australian deserts and the tundras of Siberia. In 1894 he was in the command of the Arctic Expedition sent out by Mr. A. C. Harmsworth. He set out from London in the Widgeon, fixed his headquarters in Foul Bay, Land, in a small house which he called Elmwood, near Cape Flora. For three years he spent there he mapped the whole region, which he proved to consist of a continuous mass of islands of a number of islands. He discovered Gillies Land from his maps, the existence of which there has been much controversy. He has brought home many collections, immense numbers of photographs, and most valuable meteorological and magnetic observations. In 1896 he came across Nansen off the north of Josef Land, and his "Are you Nansen?" has become almost as famous as the "Livingstone, I presume!" of another known explorer. He returned to England in September 1897. Interviewed in December 1897, he announced his intention of starting upon another expedition as soon as possible. His whaler, will be left as far north of the Island as possible, and he will push a sledge drawn by dogs or ponies accompanied by only one other explorer. He laments the apathy of British geographers with regard to the north area, where so much remains to be discovered. He is an Hon. Corresponding Member of the Geographical Societies of America and Italy, received a knighthood of the class of the Royal Order of St. Olaf.

Oscar in December 1898, and in May 1899 was awarded the Gold Medal of the Geographical Society of London in recognition of his recent expedition to Franz Josef Land. He published in 1895, "The Great Frozen Land." Married, June 1898, Miss Mabel Dalrymple Bruce, daughter of Colonel Dalrymple Bruce. Address: Royal Societies

JAMES, Henry, American novelist and essayist, was born at New York City, April 15, 1843. He is the son of the late Henry James, a forcible writer on religious and philosophical topics (born 1811; died Dec. 18, 1882). In his eleventh year his family went abroad, and after some stay in England made a long sojourn in France and Switzerland. On their return to America in 1860 they first resided in Newport, Rhode Island, removing to Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1866. Mr. James attended the Harvard Law School for a year or two while his family were at Newport, but a few years after their removal to Cambridge, 1869, he went abroad, where he has since remained, with the exception of occasional brief visits home. He now lives in London, though he spends considerable time in Italy. He has been a contributor to most of the American magazines, but his celebrity rests mainly upon his novels, which usually deal with the American as found abroad. His published books are: "Watch and Ward," 1871; "A Passionate Pilgrim, and other Tales," 1875; "Roderick Hudson," 1875; "Transatlantic Sketches," 1875; "The American," 1877; "French Poets and Novelists," 1878; "The Europeans," 1878; "Daisy Miller," 1878; "An International Episode," 1879; "Hawthorne" (one of the English Men of Letters series), 1879; "A Bundle of Letters," 1879; "Confidence," 1879; "Diary of a Man of Fifty," 1880; "Washington Square," 1880; "The Portrait of a Lady," 1881; "Siege of London," 1883; "Portraits of Places," 1884; "Tales of Three Cities," 1884; "A Little Tour in France," 1884; "Author to the Hospital. In 1878 he lent Medical Officer, but his service was interrupted by a voyage of six months to the United States, during which he was in charge of a patient, and by the fact of a good opening for himself at Kimberley. About this time his health broke down through overwork, and he decided to go to Kimberley in the hope that a complete change of environment would quite restore him.

He arrived in South Africa and entered into partnership with a Matabele and soon acquired a large and successful practice as a doctor was very successful and among his patients on the Orange Free State, the Matabele chief Lobengula, whom he cured of gonorrhoea. His professional income at that time has been estimated at £1000 and £6000 a year. It was in 1879 that Mr. Rhodes and Dr. Jameson met and formed that close partnership which has existed ever since.

During the British South Africa Company's experience a great deal of the negotiations for the opening of Mashonaland, and it was at this time that the history of the Chartered Company began.

At Dr. Jameson first lent active service to his friend and abandoned a medical practice to undertake an extremely dangerous mission. In order to develop Mashonaland and adjacent territories it became necessary to obtain concessions from the Matabele chief, through which the pioneer force wished to pass. Dr. Jameson offered to carry out the mission and went to Bulawayo. Ultimogula agreed to all that was asked of him.

In 1889 the Home Government granted a Royal Charter to the South Africa Company, with the development of the territories lying to the south of the Orange River. An expedition was therefore sent, and Mr. Selous was in charge. It was to make a road into Mashonaland. Dr. Jameson was placed upon the operation, but the renewed hostility of the Matabele and the aggressive attitude of the British Government. Dr. Jameson again gave up his medical practice and undertook the mission to the wavering king, with a very successful result. It now became more evident that his services were indispensable to the Chartered Company and to Mr. Rhodes. Dr. Jameson therefore relinquished altogether his medical practice, and joined the expedition. He accompanied it into Mashonaland and settled at Fort Jameson. The representative of Mr. Rhodes, a few months he started upon an exploring expedition through an unknown country to discover, if possible, a route leading to the East Coast of Africa, which might be constructed as a waggon road and ultimately converted into a railway. But as a wide belt of the country through which he passed is inhabited by the tsetse fly, whose bite is fatal to oxen, the idea of a waggon road was abandoned and the Beira Railway constructed, which has reduced freights into Mashonaland by one half. Dr. Jameson's next venture was a mission to Gungunhana, King of Gazaland, who had been defeated by the Portuguese and taken prisoner. Gungunhana had for years asked the British Government to assume a Protectorate over his country without avail; the Chartered Company therefore entered into negotiations with him with a view to granting him a subsidy for certain concessions. This arrangement was strongly resented by the Portuguese, who immediately asserted a suzerainty over Gazaland. Their claim was allowed by Lord Salisbury. Dr. Jameson then determined to undertake a journey to Gungunhana before the Portuguese could make final arrangements. In company with two other Englishmen he started his march over 600 miles of entirely unexplored and unhealthy country, and made the journey in 43 days. They endured great hardships and were nearly starved, and being constantly wet with wading through rivers and marshy ground, suffered severely from malarial fever. His two companions nearly died by the way, and he himself never fully recovered from the effects of that terrible journey. Dr. Jameson had no difficulty in getting a concession signed by the King, who was glad of the opportunity of throwing off the Portuguese yoke. Although no territory was ceded to the Chartered Company on that occasion, it was entirely owing to the prompt action of Dr. Jameson that the Portuguese were prevented from absorbing Gazaland. During 1891 the Administrator of the Chartered Territories resigned, and Dr. Jameson, at the instance of Mr. Rhodes, was appointed his successor. He had not been in office many months when a large body of armed Boers made an attempt to invade a portion of Mashonaland which borders the Transvaal. Dr. Jameson met them and explained that he would oppose their passage by armed force. He had a parley with the leaders, and persuaded some of them to trek into Mashonaland, where they would be welcomed and enjoy equal rights with the English settlers. Ultimately the remainder returned peacefully home. About this time signs of unrest became only too apparent among the Matabele, and to prevent a massacre of whites, Dr. Jameson determined to take the field, more especially as he discovered that the Matabele had for many months been secretly preparing for war. He made a plan of campaign, foresaw the duration of the war and the speedy collapse of the rebellion, and astonished his officers by his power of organisation and tactical ability. In a few months, after several successful engagements, he completely subdued the Matabele, and having been allowed a free hand in the business, he conducted the settlement with admirable skill. Towards the end of 1894 Dr. Jameson visited England, meeting with a very cordial reception. On Jan. 24, 1895, a dinner was given in his honour in Whitehall Rooms by his fellow students at University College, where he had been Resident Medical Officer for two years. Mr. Christopher Heath was in the chair, and many eminent members of the medical profession were present. A few days after he delivered an address in the Imperial Institute before the Prince of Wales and an audience of 2500 people. The past, present, and future of South Africa constituted the subject of the address. Before he left England a C.B., civil division, was conferred upon him in recognition of his splendid work in South Africa. Towards the end of 1896 the discontent and agitation of the Outlander population of Johannesburg took a serious turn, and they secretly armed and determined to force the Boer Government to grant them constitutional rights. On Dec. 28 a letter was sent to Dr. Jameson, who was at Mafeking, asking him to come and help them. On the following day he started to their assistance with the Bechuanaland Police, 600 strong. Major Sir John Willoughby was in command of the force, and they took with them eight Maxim guns. After having cut the telegraph wires, they crossed the Transvaal border and pressed on to Krugersdorp. As soon as the news reached England, Mr. Chamberlain ordered the High Commissioner of South Africa publicly to repudiate Dr. Jameson's act by proclamation. At the same time Sir Hercules Robinson sent a despatch to Jameson ordering his immediate return. Dr. Jameson, however, disregarded the message, and at Krugersdorp he was met by a force of 1000 Boers, and fighting ensued. He then pressed on to Doornkop, hourly expecting some promised assistance from Johannesburg. Meanwhile the Boer force had been considerably augmented, and Jameson at last hoisted a flag of truce and gave in on the condition that the lives of his followers were spared. They were taken to Pretoria, and he and his officers were sentenced to be shot; but it was afterwards arranged that the whole force should be given up to

Her Majesty's Government. It was at once telegraphed to President Kruger her satisfaction at the decision of the Transvaal Government. At the same time in the crisis the German Emperor telegraphed to the Boer President congratulating him upon successfully repelling the invasion of the Transvaal. The interference on the part of the German Emperor caused the most widespread indignation in England, and led to the commissioning of a Flying Squadron in spite of the disastrous consequences of the illegal raid. Dr. Jameson's arrival in London met with a great ovation. He was taken to Bow Street charged before Sir John Bridge, under the Foreign Enlistment Act, and his officers were committed for trial. The trial was at bar before three judges, Lord Chief-Justice presiding. They were all found guilty and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. Dr. Jameson receiving fifteen months, the rest of the term. As a result of the imprisonment his health was broken, and a necessary operation the Home Secretary ordered his release. He had served a year of his time. Dr. Jameson led a retired life, chiefly devoted to the reading of English and scientific and professional literature. During the sitting of the South African Commission, which had been appointed to inquire into the causes of the Boer war, Dr. Jameson was called as a witness, and his evidence made use of the statement: "If I had been successful, I should have been forgiven."

In 1853 he was Assistant-Professor at the Lycée Charlemagne, and from 1865 to 1871 Professor at the School of Architecture. His chief work, however, has been done in connection with the numerous astronomical expeditions on which he has been sent. In 1846 he was sent to Peru to determine the position of the equator, but the fever of the Peruvian forests incapacitated him. From 1847 to 1864 he was studying the solar spectrum in Italy. In 1867 he observed a total annular eclipse at Trani, and the eruptions of Santorin. In 1868 he was sent to observe the eclipse of the sun at Poona, in India, one of the most important of modern times, which led to the discovery of the corona. The Academy of Sciences granted him the Lalande Prize, awarded specially to five times its normal amount. To observe the eclipse of 1870 in India he escaped from Paris in a balloon, on November 2, and travelled 300 miles in five days, descending at Savenay. In 1874 he observed the transit of Venus in Japan with great success, and he accompanied an English expedition to Siam in 1875. In 1876 he ascended Mont Blanc to study the position of an observatory. His reports have been included in the "Annales de Chimie," and the "Archives des Missions Scientifiques." He is an honorary LL.D. of Edinburgh, and F.R.S. of England. He was awarded the Rumford Medal in 1877. In 1875 he was appointed Director of the Government Observatory at Meudon. He is a Commander of the Legion of Honour, and his Paris address is 63 Rue de Vaugirard.

JAPP, Francis Robert, M.A., LL.D., F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry, Aberdeen University, was born at Dundee, Feb. 8, 1848. He is the youngest son of James Japp, minister of the Catholic Apostolic Church, and was educated at schools in Dundee and St. Andrews, and at the universities of St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Heidelberg, and Bonn. In 1881 he was appointed Lecturer on Chemistry in the Normal School of Science (now Royal College of Science), South Kensington. From 1885 to 1890 he was Foreign Secretary of the Chemical Society, and in the latter year received from the Society the Longstaff Medal for Chemical Research. In 1890 he was appointed Professor of Chemistry in the University of Aberdeen. He has published, chiefly in the Journal of the Chemical Society, numerous researches (over 60) dealing almost exclusively with questions relating to organic chemistry, and is also joint author, with Sir Edward Frankland, of a Text-book of Inorganic Chemistry. Address: The University, Aberdeen.

JARVIS, Thomas Stinson, Canadian author and diplomat. Born May 31, 1861, was educated at Upper Canada College, and when seventeen years old was sent away for a year's travel. He went to Europe and spent a winter in Italy and some months in Oriental countries. He studied law from 1879 to 1883, and was called to the bar. His first literary effort, "Letters from East Languish," was a compiled form of letters written to his parents while in the East; in 1884 he published "Wendray Hamstead." In 1887 he removed to New York, where he published "Point Ferme" as his second novel, and "The Ascent of Life" followed early in 1894. The remainder of the year he spent in Paris and London, where he published in New York "She Lived in New York."

JAYNE, The Right Rev. Francis John, D.D., M.A., Bishop of Chester, was born Jan. 11, 1847, and is the son of John Jayne, J.P. He was educated at Rugby School and William College, Oxford, of which he was a scholar. He took a first class in Moderations in 1867, and a fourth first class in the final school, 1868, in which year he became a Fellow of Jesus College. He was ordained in 1871, and was for a year curate of St. Clement's, Oxford, afterwards becoming Tutor of Keble College, where he remained until 1879. In that year he was appointed Principal of St. David's College, Lampeter, of which institution he greatly increased the efficiency. In 1880 he accepted the important vicarage of Leeds, vacant by the resignation of Dr. Gott, who became Dean of Worcester. In 1882 he was consecrated Bishop of Chester. In 1892 the Bishop initiated a discussion on public-house reform, and has since urged the necessity of temperance legislation on constructive lines. He is a warm advocate of what is known as the "Gothenburg System" of State-controlled liquor-traffic, and both on the platform and in the press has constantly advocated his views. He married in 1872 Emily, daughter of Watts J. Garland, of Lisbon. Addresses: The Palace, Dee Side, Chester; and the Athenæum.

He is engaged in a critical edition of the poems and fragments of Bacchylides discovered in 1896. He has taken an active part in promoting the study and teaching of Modern Greek. He was appointed in 1894 a member of the Commission on Secondary Education, and served in 1896-97 on a Departmental Committee on the Regulations of the Museum and Art Department (South Kensington); and was nominated in 1898 a member of the statutory Commission on the University of London. He served in 1897 as Chairman of a Select Parliamentary Committee on Burial Grounds. In the House of Commons and elsewhere he has taken an active interest in questions relating to the Church of England and to national education. In October 1898 he was appointed a Commissioner under the London University Act. He married Caroline Lane, daughter of the late John Reynolds, D.D., and widow of John A. E. Glemmer, U.S.A., in 1874. Residences: Springfield, Cambridge; and London.

JEFFERSON, Joseph, actor, was born in Philadelphia, Feb. 20, 1829. His grandfather and great-grandfather were distinguished actors, and his mother, Mrs. Jefferson, was a celebrated vocalist. He appeared on the stage at a very early age, and gradually rose to the front place as a comedian, and his merits are recognised in England and America. His range of characters is very wide, covering almost the whole field of comedy and farce, without degenerating into burlesque. His famous rôle is that of Rip Van Winkle in Dion Boucicault's play of that name, based upon the story by Washington Irving; a character which Mr. Jefferson is said to have created, as well as to have made his own. Perhaps he is more successful as Bob Acres in "The Rival Rascals," Dr. Pangloss in "The Heir at Law," and Caleb Plummer in "The Cricket on the Hearth." Besides playing in every theatre in the United States, he has made professional visits to England, Australia, and New Zealand.

JENKINSON, Francis John Henry, M.A., Librarian of the University Library, Cambridge, was born on Aug. 20, 1853, and is a son of John Henry Jenkinson. Lady Jeune is well known for her philanthropy, and for her social brilliancy. She has frequently contributed to the magazines and reviews on social questions, especially on the position of Woman, whom she regards from an enlightened conservative point of view. She has published a selection of her essays under the title "Lesser Questions." Addresses: 79 Harley Street, W.; and Arlington Manor, Newbury.

JEX-BLAKE, Sophia, M.D., is the daughter of Thomas Jex-Blake of Sussex Square, Brighton, and sister of the present Dean of Wells, and was born in January 1840. At the age of eighteen she became a mathematical tutor at Queen's College, London, where she remained for three years. After travelling on the Continent and in America, in order to study the education of girls, she entered on a course of medical training under Dr. Lucy Sewall, in Boston, U.S.A., in 1866. Returning to England two years later, she matriculated in the Medical Faculty of the University of Edinburgh. Being, however, not permitted to take her degree, she brought an action against the University in 1872, which she eventually lost in the Scotch Court of Appeal. She took the degree of M.D. at the University of Bern in 1877, and became a Licentiate in 1877, and a Member, in 1880, of the Irish College of Physicians. Leaving Edinburgh in 1874, she came to London, where she founded the London School of Medicine for women. She returned to Edinburgh in 1878, and in the same year opened a Dispensary for women and children, and a Cottage Hospital in 1885. In the following year she founded the Edinburgh School of Medicine for Women, which was recognised by the University of Edinburgh in 1894, and she is at the present time Dean of the school, and Lecturer on Midwifery. Dr. Jex-Blake is the author of "American Schools and Colleges," 1866; "Medical Women," 1872 and 1886; "Puerperal Fever," 1877; and "Care of Infants," 1884. Address: Bruntfield Lodge, Whitehouse Loan, Edinburgh.

JEX-BLAKE, The Very Rev. Thomas William, D.D., Dean of Wells, was born in London on Jan. 26, 1832, and is the only surviving son of Thomas Jex-Blake, J.P. for Norfolk, and Maria Emily, daughter of T. Cubitt, J.P. and D.L. for the same county. He was educated at Rugby, under Dr. Cotton, and at University College, Oxford, of which he was a scholar, and where he was placed in first class. He graduated B.A. in 1855. He took his M.A. in 1857, and D.D. in 1873. He was appointed by Dr. Cotton as Master to the sixth form at University College, and was elected a Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, in 1857. He vacated his fellowship of the college in 1857. Ordained Deacon in 1857, he became a Priest in 1857, he became a Master at Rugby in 1858. He was appointed Principal of University College, and in February 1874 succeeded Hayman as Head-Master of the school during a difficult period of the school's history. In 1887 he resigned the Head-Master of Rugby, and was appointed to the post of Alvechurch, Redditch, in the diocese of Worcester. He succeeded the Rev. Plumptre at Wells in February 1892. He is a Justice of the Peace for Wiltshire. He is the author of "Lectures on Religion in Continental Picture Galleries," 1858; of "Life and Faith," 1873; of a Latin Sermon to the Clergy in 1885; of "August 1892"; and of "Higher Education," 1896. He married the daughter of John Cordery, of Exeter, in 1857. Addresses: The Deanery, Wells, and Athenæum.

JOACHIM, Joseph, Mas. D.D., LL.D. Glasg., was born at Kitsee, near Presburg, in Hungary, of Jewish parents, July 15, 1815. He entered while very young the Conservatory of Music at Vienna, where he studied under Joseph Böhm. From the age of twelve years he attracted much attention at Leipzig by his rare skill on the piano, and obtained an engagement which he held for seven years, in the orchestra of the Gewandhaus. Meanwhile he assiduously pursued his studies, and received lessons in the theory of music from Moritz Hauptmann. In 1835, on his first visit to Paris, and in the same year he was appointed Director of the Concerts at Weimar. In 1838 he was Master of the Chapel Royal at Vienna. After this he appeared in many of the capitals of Europe, and paid a visit to London, where he gave several series of concerts. In 1869 he became a member of the Senate of the Berlin Academy, and was nominated Director of the Instrumental Music in the Conservatory of Music then recently established in the Prussian capital. He was created an honorary Mus. Doc. of the University of Cambridge, March 8, 1877. His fame rests mainly on his extraordinary skill as an instrumentalist, but it is great an artist not to keep his own technical ability always subordinate to interpretation of the music he is giving. As a composer he belongs to the school of Schumann. The "Concert Hongroise" (Hungarian Concerto) is one of his chief compositions for violin and orchestra. In August 1882 he was named conductor of the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin, and Musical Director of the Royal Academy of Arts. He has lately visited England since then, and has been principal violinist at the Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts at James's Hall since they were first given. On March 17, 1889, the fiftieth anniversary of his first appearance in London was celebrated, he being presented with a magnificent violin by his admirers. His wife, Amalie Joachim, the daughter of a German ballad and oratorio singer, died in February 1899. Oxford University has conferred on him the D.C.L. and Cambridge that of Mus. Doc.

JOHNSON, Eastman, American painter, was born at Lovell, Maine, July 1, 1811. From the age of seventeen he devoted himself seriously to art work, and in 1849 went to Düsseldorf, where he remained two years, and afterwards for four years at the Hague, where, besides numerous portraits, he executed "Savoyard" and "The Card-Players," the finest elaborate pictures in oil. After visiting the principal European galleries, he established himself in Paris, but was afterwards called home to Washington. In 1858 he settled at New York, where he remains. His favourite subjects are American rural and domestic life, including the negro and other subjects, though lately he has devoted himself almost exclusively to portrait-painting. He re-visited Europe in 1885. Among his best works, many of which have been reproduced in engraving and chromo-lithography, are: "The Old Kentucky Home," "The Farmer's Sunday Morning," "The Village Blacksmith," "The Indian Agent," "The Maple-Sugar Camp," "John Dictating to his Daughters," "Isuelo," "A Light unto his Feet," "The Husking Bee," "The Cranberry Harvest at Nantucket," and "The School Philosophy at Nantucket." Among the portraits he has painted are those of Horatio Cleveland, Chester A. Arthur, Dr. J. C. M'Cosh, and William M. Evarts.

JOHNSON, The Most Rev. Ed-ward Ralph, D.D., Hon. LL.D. Camb., Bishop of Calcutta, fifth son of William Johnson, of Castlesteads, Cumberland, was born at Castlesteads, Feb. 17, 1817, and educated at Rugby, and at Wad-

ham College, Oxford (B.A. 1850; M.A. 1860; D.D. 1876). He was ordained deacon and priest by the Bishop of Worcester—deacon, with a title to the curacy of Farnborough, in the county of Warwick—in 1851. He was appointed, in 1860, to a minor canonry in the cathedral of Chester, and to the curacy of the cathedral parish of St. Oswald. In 1866 the Dean and Chapter appointed him to the rectory of Northenden, in the county of Chester, where he succeeded the late Archdeacon Woolrough. He was selected by the Bishop of Chester, in 1871, to fill the post of Archdeacon of Chester, upon the resignation of the late Archdeacon Pollock. In October 1876 he was appointed to the Bishopric of Calcutta, vacant by the death of the late Dr. Robert Milman. He was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Nov. 30, 1876, and was in 1898 succeeded by the Head-master of Harrow, Dr. Welldon.

JOHNSON, The Right Rev. Henry Frank, LL.B., D.D., Bishop Suffragan of Colchester, was born at Walbury, Essex, on Dec. 17, 1834, and is the son of Col. John Johnson. He was educated at Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge. Entering the army, he was cornet in the 1st Dragoons from 1855 to 1856, but finding, like the Archbishop of York, that he had a vocation for the Church, he retired, and in 1858 was ordained. He has been successively curate of Richmond, Surrey; Sawbridgeworth, Herts, 1860-62; vicar of High Wych, Sawbridgeworth, 1862-80; rector of Chelmsford, 1880-94; Archdeacon of Essex, 1885-94; and of Colchester since 1894, in which year he became Bishop Suffragan of Colchester. He married, in 1857, Emily, youngest daughter of Thomas Perry of Moor Hall, Harlow. Address: Chelmsford Rectory.

JOHNSON, Lionel, poet and critic, is the eldest son of the late General Johnson, and was born at Broadstairs, Kent, on March 15, 1867. After a distinguished career at Winchester, he entered New College, Oxford, in 1886, and graduated in 1890 (B.A.), after obtaining a second class in Classical Moderations and a first class in Lit. Hum. Coming up to London, he commenced authorship, writing for Frederick Greenwood's brilliant and short-lived Anti-Jacobin, for the eccentric and admirable art quarterly, the Hobby Horse, to which he contributed poetry while still a schoolboy, and for the Academy and Daily Chronicle, &c. His scholarly criticisms in these two last-mentioned journals are the delight of many readers. Mr. Johnson is justly regarded as one of the late Walter Pater's leading dis-styles. We need only cite his "Letter to Sir Thomas Browne" and his engravings of the Castle of St. Angelo and on Benet. Mr. L. Johnson has also made his mark as a poet of distinction, having published "Poems" and "Irish and other Poems" besides contributing verse to the two books of the Rhymer's Club and to the Speaker, the Outlook, and other well-known papers. His "Art of Leo as Hardy" is a weighty prose contribution to the study of that novelist. Address: 5 New Square, Lincoln's Inn.

JOHNSON, The Right Hon. William Moore, Q.C., is the only son of the Rev. William Johnson, M.A., formerly Chancellor of Ross and Cloyne, and rector of Glenore, County Cork, by Elizabeth Anne, daughter of the Rev. William Hamilton, F.R.C.D., and was born in 1828. He graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, taking his Bachelor's degree in 1849, and that of M.A. in 1856. He was called to the Irish Bar in Michaelmas term, 1852, was appointed a Queen's Counsel in 1872, and was Law Adviser to the Crown in Ireland from 1868 till 1874. Mr. Johnson was returned as M.P. for Mallow at the general election of April 1880; and on the formation of Mr. Gladstone's Administration in the following month he was appointed Solicitor-General for Ireland, and re-elected M.P. for Mallow. He succeeded Mr. Law as Attorney-General for Ireland in November 1881, and was appointed Judge of the High Court of Justice in Ireland, Queen's Bench Division, 1883. He is a Bencher of the King's Inns, Dublin (1880), and was made a Privy Counsellor (Ireland), 1881. He married, in 1884, Susan, daughter of R. D. Bayly, J.P. Address: 26 Lower Leeson Street, Dublin.

JOHNSTON, Sir Harry Hamilton, K.C.B., F.R.G.S., African traveller, born June 12, 1858, at Park Place, Kennington, Surrey, is the third son of John Brookes Johnston, Esq., and was educated at Stockwell Grammar School and King's College, London. He is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, Zoological Society, Anthropological Institute, and Royal Colonial Institute, and was appointed H.M. Vice-Consul for the Cameroons and the Oil Rivers in October 1885. He was Acting-Consul for Bights of Benin and Biafra, 1887-88, and was promoted to be Consul for Portuguese East Africa, December 1888. He has written a great deal in the leading journals and reviews on subjects connected with natural history, travel, and political matters, and published, in 1884, a work entitled "The River Congo"; in 1886, "The Kilimanjaro Expedition"; in 1888, "Leo as a Slave"; and in 1891, "The Livingstone." He studied at the student of the Royal Academy of London, 1876-80, was a Fellow of the South Kensington School of Art, and has frequently exhibited at the Royal Academy and elsewhere. In 1880 he travelled through Algeria; in 1882-85 through the Congo and other parts of West Africa; and in 1884 conducted an expedition to Mount Kilimanjaro in East Africa. In 1887 he surveyed a portion of the Delta, and in 1888-89 surveyed Nyassa and Tanganyika for the purpose of making peace between the Arab and African Lakes Company. In 1890 he made a C.B., and in 1891 was appointed Commissioner and Consul-General of British Central Africa, and he administered the extensive territory of that protectorate. He visited Egypt in 1894, and frequently lectured on the subject of Central Africa, and in 1895 published, as a result of his charge, a short and interesting account of his charge. This forms one of a series of blue-books and reports on Central Africa published by him between 1891 and 1897. In 1897 he was appointed Consul-General of the Regency of Tunis. His latest work is "British Central Africa," published in 1897. He was created a Knight in January 1896; was appointed Consul-General for the Regency of Tunis in 1897; and received the Jubilee Medal in 1897. In 1896 he married William's daughter of the 5th Lord Bessborough, daughter of Sir H. Percy Anderson, Assistant Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Address: H.B.M. Consul-General, Tunis, North Africa.

JOHNSTON, Richard M., an American writer, was born in Savannah, Georgia, March 8, 1828. He graduated at Mercer University, Georgia, in 1841, and, after teaching for a year, was admitted to the Bar. He was offered a judgeship, but declined to accept the Chair of Literature at the University of Georgia, where he remained until the outbreak of the Civil War. Retiring to his country home near Savannah, Georgia, he there opened a school for boys, which in 1867 he removed to Baltimore, Maryland, where he has since resided. He has published numerous contributions to periodicals, in conjunction with William Hard, a "Life of Alexander H. Stephens," 1878, and "A History of English Literature," 1879; "Dukesborough Tale," 1881; "Old Mark Langston," 1884; "The Tourists," 1885; Mr. Absalom B.

ther Georgia Folk," 1888; "Ogeechee Firings," 1889; "Widow Guthrie," 1890; "The Pines and their Neighbours," 1891; "Studies Literary and Social" series, 1891, 2nd series, 1892); "Mr. Pier's Marital Claims," 1892; "Mr. Downs and his Likes," 1892; "Widow Gie," 1893; "Little Ike Templin and his Stories," 1894; "Old Times in Middlesex," 1897; and "Pearce Amerson's Story," 1898.

JOHNSTON, William, M.P. (known as John Johnston of Ballykilbeg), was born in Ballykilpatrick, Feb. 22, 1829, is the son of John Brett Johnston and Mary Ann Anne Henriette Scott, and received his education at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1852, and M.A. in 1856. He was called to the Bar in 1872. He was elected M.P. for Belfast, in the Protestant interest, in 1874, and was re-elected in 1874, and sat for the borough till 1878, when he was appointed Inspector of Irish Fisheries. He held that office till 1885, when he was rebuffed by Lord Spencer for a speech at the General Synod of the Church of Ireland. Mr. Johnston has been since a member of the Orange Institution, and was imprisoned for two months, in 1878, for taking part in an Orange procession at Bangor, co. Down, on July 12 of the previous year. He is the author of novels: "Nightshade," 1857; "Fresh Blood," and "Under which King?" 1872. He was returned for South Belfast with a large majority, and was again elected in 1883, 1892, and 1895. He has long been identified with Temperance movements, both of a social and a political character, and has been for many years a total abstainer. In 1898 he was unanimously elected President of the Irish Temperance League. In the House he is a leading representative of the Orange movement. He married (3), in 1863, Georgiana Hay, daughter of Sir John Hay, Bart. Residence: Ballykilbeg, co. Down.

JOICEY, Sir James, Bart., M.P., was born on April 6, 1846, and is the son of John Joicey, of Newcastle-on-Tyne. He was educated at Gainford School, near Widdowton. As Chairman and Managing Director of James Joicey & Co., Ltd., of the Lambton Collieries, Ltd., he is one of the most extensive coal-miners in the northern counties. He is the principal proprietor of the important Newcastle Daily Leader, Director of the N.E. Railway, J.P. for Durham County, Northumberland, and Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Member for the county of Durham. Since 1885 he has sat in Parliament as Liberal Member for Chester-le-Street, Durham. In 1884 he married (2) a daughter of the late Colonel Drever, H.E.I.C.S. Addresses: 58 Cadogan Square, S.W.; and Longhirst, Morpeth.

JÓKAĬ, Maurus (or Mór), the most productive and genial of Hungarian novelists, was born Feb. 19, 1825, at Komorn. His father was an advocate, of good and ancient family, and a strict Calvinist, so that his son was puritanically brought up, until his twelfth year, when he was left an orphan. For two years before his father's death he had been learning German at Presburg, but he was then left to teach himself, until in 1840 he went to the High School at Pápa, and in 1842 to that of Kecskemét, at both having the Hungarian poet Alexander Petöfi as his schoolfellow. In 1844 he went to Pesth, where he was articled to an advocate, and obtained his diploma, of which, however, he never availed himself; for in 1846 he was already editor of the then very famous Wochenblatt. In 1848 he proclaimed the "Twelve Points of Pesth," and in the same year he married Rosa Laborfalvi, the greatest of Hungarian tragedians. In 1849 he followed the Hungarian Government to Debreczin, where he edited the Abendblätter, and was present at the capitulation of Villagos, August 28. To escape being made prisoner, he resolved on suicide, but was hindered by the fortunate arrival of his wife from Pesth. She had converted all her jewels into gold, and the pair found their way on foot through the Russian army, reached a safe hiding-place in the wood of Bukk, and at last got safe to Pesth. Ten years followed, during which Hungarian literature became well-nigh extinct. Almost alone this young man created a new one, and since political journalism was impracticable he betook himself to fiction. He has published in 160 vols. 25 romances of several vols. each, 320 novelettes, and six dramas, of which more than half a million copies have been sold amongst six millions of Magyars, besides translations into various languages. Amongst his most popular romances are: "The Good Old Assessors," "A Hungarian Nabob," and its continuation, entitled "Zoltán Kárpáthy," "Sad Times," "Oceania," "The White Rose," "The Accursed Family," "Transylvania's Golden Age," "The Turks in Hungary," "The Last Days of the Janissaries in 1820," "Poor Rich Men," "The World Turned Upside down," "Madhouse Management," "The New Landlord" (translated into English by A. Patterson, London, 1865), "The Romance of the Next Century," "Black Diamonds," "Die Zonen des Geistes," "Beloved to the Scaffold," 1882; "The White Woman of Leutschau," &c.

Among his dramas may be mentioned: "King Koloman," 1858; "The Martyrs of Sziquetvar," and "Milton," 1878. In 1863 Jókai established, as an organ of the Left, the Hon (Fatherland), the most widely circulated Hungarian journal, in which many of his romances appeared. He has also become chief editor of the Governmental journal, the Nemzet (Nation). In 1898 his novel, "Dr. Dumany's Wife," was translated into English.

JOLY, John, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S., was born in 1858 in Hollywood, King's County, Ireland. He is the youngest son of the late Rev. J. P. Joly, M.A., Rector of Clonsast, and Julia, daughter of Frederick, Count de Lusi, Resident Prussian Minister in Greece. Owing to the early loss of his father his education and preservation during a delicate boyhood devolved upon his mother, to whose influence he ascribes what enthusiasm for science he possesses. He was partly educated, also, at the Rathmines School, Dublin; entered Trinity College, Dublin, in 1876, and took the degree of Bachelor of Engineering in 1883. He received the degree of M.A. (Stip. Con.) in 1887, and of Doctor of Science in 1889. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1892. He is Honorary Secretary of the Royal Dublin Society, has occupied successively the posts of Assistant Lecturer in Engineering and in Experimental Physics in Trinity College, and is now Professor of Geology and Mineralogy in the University of Dublin. He is author, among others, of the following papers: "On the Direct Experimental Determination of Specific Heats of Gases at Constant Volume," Phil. Trans. Roy. Soc., vol. 182; "On the Method of Condensation in Calorimetry," Proc. Roy. Soc., vols. 45 and 47; "On the Specific Heats of Minerals," ibid. vol. 41; "Observations on the Spark Discharge over the Surface of Dielectrics," ibid. vol. 47; "On the Steam Calorimeter," ibid. vol. 47; "On the Volcanic Ash of Krakatoa," Proc. Roy. Dublin Soc., vol. 4; "On a Method of Determining the Density of a Gas," Phil. Mag., 30, 5; "On the Uses of the Meldometer," Proc. Roy. Irish Ac., ii. 3; "On the Beryl and Iolite of Glencullen," Proc. Roy. Dublin Soc., iv.; "The Abundance of Life," ibid. vii.; "On the Formation of Crystals of Calcium and Magnesium Oxide," ibid. vi.; "On a Diffusion Photometer," Phil. Dublin Soc., viii.; "A Speculation as to a Pre-material Condition of the Universe," ibid. vii.; "On a Method of Photography in Natural Colours," Trans. Roy. Dublin Soc., vol. vi.:

"On the Origin of the Canals," ibid.; "On the Volume-change attending Fusion," ibid.; "On marine Geological Investigations," Roy. Dublin Soc., vol. viii.; and with H. H. Dixon, Sc.D., "On the Sap," Phil. Trans. Roy. Soc.; "On the Path of the Transpiration-rent," Annals of Botany, vol. ix. 39 Waterloo Road, Dublin.

JONES, Lieut.-Col. Alfred St. U.C., Assoc. M. Inst. C.E., was born in Liverpool, Jan. 24, 1832, and is the son of the late Archdeacon J. Jones and his wife Hannah, daughter of Thomas Pares, Esq., J.P., of Hope Derby. He was educated at the L.C. College. While serving as a Lieut. in the 9th Lancers he passed his examinations by the Public Works Department, India, 1857, for employment as an Engineer, and graduated at the Surveyors' College, 1860. Lieut.-Colonel Jones was present at the battle of Buddleekeer at Delhi throughout the siege operations including the assault and capture of the city, having been Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General to the Cavalry from August 8 to Sept. 23, 1857, and served with the 9th Lancers in Great Britain pursuing column, and was present at the actions of Bolundshuhur and Allypore, and the battle of Agra, where he was dangerously wounded, having received a musket wound and twenty-two sabre cuts. He was mentioned in the despatches of Lord Hope Grant on three different occasions (Brevet of Major, Victoria Cross, &c., with Clasp). He was awarded the Victoria Cross for the following service: "The Lieut. Jones of the 9th Lancers, with his squadron, captured one of the rebels, killing the drivers, and, with Lieut. Yule's assistance, turned the gun of the village occupied by the rebels, which was quickly dislodged. This was a well-received act, gallantly executed." As has been stated, he was Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General at the siege of Delhi, 1857, and held a similar position at the Cape of Good Hope, 1861-67; Adjutant of the Staff of the 1869-70, when that appointment was abolished on his own evidence before a Royal Commission on Military Estimates resulting in a saving of £400 per annum on the army estimates for the last 13 years, while the duties have been carried out efficiently as Lieut.-Colonel Jones proposed. In civil matters he has been Consulting Engineer to the Borough of Wrexham for sewage disposal: Council Member of the Institution of Civil Engineers, 1876; Membre de la Société d'Hygiène, 1877; Fellow of the Hygienic Institute, 1880; and Member of the Association of Municipal Engineers. He is the author of "Will a Sewage Pay?" 1874 (third edit., 1885), and papers on sewage disposal in the Transactions of the Society of Arts and of the Hygienic Institute, and in other professional publications. But Lieut.-Colonel Jones is perhaps best known in connection with the Canvey Island scheme, introduced by himself and other engineers, which was proved and recommended by Lord Selborne's Royal Committee on Metropolitan Sewage Discharge in their Final Report, 1884. This scheme has been elaborated and perfected by Lieut.-Colonel Jones and his partner, Mr. J. Bailey, F.R.S., Member Inst. C.E., and has been under the consideration of the London County Council since 1889. In 1879 he was awarded one of the only two £100 premiums ever offered by the Royal Agricultural Society of England for the best-tilled sewage farms.

David Brynmor, M.P., Q.C., born at Pentrepoeth Morriston, Swansea, Glamorganshire, on May 12, 1861, and is the eldest son of the Rev. David Jones, of Swansea, sometime Minister of the Congregational Unions of Glamorgan and Wales and of Victoria. He was educated at University College School, London, where he was a Hume Scholar in Jurisprudence in 1883. He graduated LL.B. (Lond.) in 1885, obtained a studentship of the Council of the University of London in January 1875, and was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1883. After practising in London and the South Wales Circuit from 1876 to 1883, he was appointed Judge of the Mid-Glamorgan County Court Circuit in the latter year, and transferred to the Gloucester-Cirencester Circuit in 1886, and resigned in 1892. He was made a Q.C. in February 1893, and has since followed his profession. He was elected M.P. for the Stroud division of Gloucestershire in 1892 in the Liberal interest, and has since been elected for the Swansea District in the same way as a Liberal. He served as a member of the Royal Commission on the Administration of Justice in Wales and Monmouthshire, 1893-1894. He is at present a member of the Executive Committee of the University of Wales, and Hon. Standing Counsel of the University, a governor of the University Colleges of Wales (Aberystwyth and of South Wales and Monmouthshire), and one of the Whips of the Welsh Liberal Parliamentary party. Mr. Jones has published "The Divine Order and Other Sermons and Addresses," by Thomas Jones of Swansea, with an introduction by John Addington Symonds, 1884; he has also published an essay on "Welsh History and Recent Research," 1891; "Home Rule and Imperial Sovereignty," 1886; and divers magazine articles and papers on the Welsh laws. He is a vice-president of the Cymmrodorion Society, before which he has read several papers. He acted as Senior Counsel for the promoters of the Welsh University, and drafted the charter with Mr. Cadwaladr Davies, and defended it in the House of Commons in 1893. In 1895 he successfully acted as honorary arbitrator between masters and men in regard to the dispute and strike at Aber-gwynfe Collieries. He also took an active part in bringing together the Welsh National Liberal Convention at Cardiff in February 1898. He married in 1892 Florence, widow of A. de M. Mocatta, and daughter of Major Lionel Cohen. Addresses: 27 Bryanston Square, W.; and 12 King's Bench Walk, Temple.

JONES, Emily Elizabeth Constance, was born in 1848, at Langstone Court, Herefordshire, and is the eldest daughter of J. Jones, Esq., M.D., J.P., and his wife, Emily Edith, who was daughter of Thomas Oakeley, Esq., J.P., of Lydart House, Monmouth, and his wife, Elizabeth Pearce, co-heiress of Llanrumney Court, Monmouthshire, and was descended from the ancient Welsh families of Lewis of Llanthwy and Morgan of Llanrumney. Miss Jones was educated at Miss Robinson's, Alstone Court, Cheltenham, and at Girton College, Cambridge, and took a First Class in the Moral Sciences Tripos in 1880 (was bracketed with the Senior), and appointed Resident Lecturer in Moral Science at Girton College in 1884, and Librarian in 1889. She has retired from both offices. Miss Jones was joint translator with Miss Elizabeth Hamilton of "Lotze's Micro-cosmos," and editor of the translation, which was published in 1885, and reached a third edition in 1888. Miss Jones is also the author of "Elements of Logic as a Science of Propositions," published in 1890.

JONES, Henry Arthur, was born on September 28, 1851, at Grandborough, in Buckinghamshire, and is the son of Silvanus Jones. After receiving the middle-class education of that period at the Winslow School, he was sent into the world at thirteen to shift for himself. He was engaged in commercial pursuits for some years, devoting all his leisure to the study of literature and to writing, and it was not until Dec. 11, 1878, that his first play, "Only Round the Corner," was produced by Mr. Rousby at the Exeter Theatre. In the summer of 1879 he made his first appearance before a London audience as a dramatic author. This was in the comediotta "A Clerical Error," which was accepted by Mr. Wilson Barrett and produced by him at the Court Theatre. His next essay in dramatic writing was a play entitled "His Wife," an adaptation of Mark Hope's "Prodigal Daughter," which was written for and produced by Miss Bateman at Sadler's Wells Theatre, and was afterwards played in the provinces. In November 1882 "The Silver King" was produced by Mr. Wilson Barrett at the Princess's Theatre. This play ran for over a year, and has been since played without intermission in America, Australia, and the English provinces. In 1884 Mr. Henry Arthur Jones wrote the first of the series of plays of modern English life with which he has since become so closely identified. This play, "Saints and Sinners," was produced at the Vaudeville on September 25 of that year. The propriety of dealing with religious matters on the stage provoked a considerable amount of discussion, but the play ran for over 200 nights. After the production of "Saints and Sinners" Mr. Jones reverted for a time to melodrama, and wrote, amongst other plays, "Hoodman Blind," "The Noble Vagabond," "The Lord Harry," "Heart of Hearts," "Hard Hit," &c. But it was not until 1889 that he was able to devote himself to the class of work that was really congenial to his inclination. On Aug. 27, 1889, "The Middleman" was produced at the Shaftesbury Theatre with Mr. Willard in the leading part. This achieved an instantaneous success, and ran for over two hundred nights, and was followed on May 21, 1890, by "Judah," a psychological play which achieved equal popularity. Both these plays have been translated and produced in Germany, Austria, Holland, Belgium, and Denmark. On Jan. 15, 1891, "The Dancing Girl" was produced at the Haymarket Theatre, with Mr. Tree in the leading part. This ran for over a year. In the autumn of 1891 Mr. Jones went into theatrical management, and his new comedy, "The Crusaders," was produced by him at the Avenue Theatre, running for one hundred nights. "The Bauble Shop" was produced by Mr. Chas. Wyndham at the Criterion Theatre on Jan. 26, 1893, and in the following autumn "The Tempter," a four-act tragedy, was produced by Mr. Tree at the Haymarket Theatre. Nearly all of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's plays have been produced in America. In 1894 Mr. Jones wrote "The Case of Rebellious Susan," which achieved a great success with Mr. Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore in the leading parts. Recent dramas from his pen are: "Michael and his Lost Angel," produced at the Lyceum Theatre in 1896; a clerical career, with Mr. Forbes in the leading part. In the same year "The Rogue's Comedy" was produced at the Garrick Theatre, and this was followed in 1897 by "The Physician and the Liars," both at the Criterion. Address: Townshend House, No. 1, Regent's Park, N.W.

JONES, Capt. Henry Mich late Minister at Lima and Quito in 1830, and entered the army. He served through the Crimean War with great distinction, being severely wounded at the Alma and the Redan. Left the army in 1857, he entered the Diplomatic Service the next year. In 1860 Consul-General at Tabreez, and subsequently at Christiania and Philadelphia. In 1889 he was Minister at Bangkok, and promoted to Peru in 1894. He has

JONES, Kennedy, part proprietor of the London Daily Mail, and former Director of the London Evening News. Born in Glasgow, on May 4, 1863, and educated at the High School. In 1884 he began his career as a journalist by joining the editorial staff of the Evening News, and in 1889 became sub-editor of the Birmingham Daily Mail. He came to London a few years later. Address: Daily Mail Office, Cannon Row, Temple, E.C.

JONES, Morris Charles, F.S.A. born in Montgomeryshire, May 1825, and educated at Bruce Castle, Tottenham. He is the author of many genealogical and antiquarian and privately-printed pamphlets, and of "The Abbey of Valle Crucis: its Origin and Foundation Charter," 1866; and "The Feudal Barons of Powys," 1868. He is the founder and chief supporter of the Powysland Club, an archaeological society for Montgomeryshire, and also of the Powysland Museum and Library at Llanfyllter. He has devoted much time to the illustration of the archaeological history of his native country, and in 1867 has been the editor of "The Montgomeryshire Collections," issued by the Powysland Club, which contains many and useful contributions to local geography and history, and affords a large and extensive materials for the study of the county of Montgomery. In 1894 archaeological services were acknowledged by a testimonial raised by public subscription, which were devoted to the purchase of a fine life-size group representing a scene in the history of the county, which, at his request, was placed in the Powysland Museum.

JONES, Thomas Rupert, F.R.S., late Professor of Geology at the College, Sandhurst, naturalist, geological palaeontologist, and antiquary, was born Oct. 1, 1819, at No. 6 Wood Street, St. Giles, London, and is the son of John Jones, silk merchant and silk throwster, of Taunton (descendant of the Jones family of North Wales), and Anne Jones (née Burberry), of Coventry. He was educated at Foster's at Taunton, and at Rev. John Allan's at Ilminster.

He was apprenticed to a surgeon (Hugh Jones) at Taunton, Somerset, in 1835; at the end of his apprenticeship with Philip Bunney, of Newbury, Berks, in 1838. After some years of desultory medical and scientific education, he was, in 1840, appointed Assistant-Secretary to the Geological Society of London; Lecturer in Geology at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, in 1858, and Professor in 1862, subsequently at the Staff College until his death in 1881. He is the author of "A Monograph of the Cretaceous Entomostraca in England," in 1849; and of "The Tertiary Entomostraca in England," in 1856; "Monograph of the Fossil Estheriæ," 1862; article, "Estheriæ," in Todd's "Cyclopædia of Geology," 1850; and of articles in Cassell's "Natural History," "Science for Schools," and "Encyclopædic Dictionary"; numerous articles and memoirs on Geology, Fossils, and Pre-historic Man, especially on recent and fossil Foraminifera and Entomostraca, in the Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, the Naturalist, the Geological Magazine, Proceedings of the Geologists' Association, and other periodicals, as well foreign as British.

Particularly may be mentioned: "On the Antiquity of Man," Croydon Nat. Soc., 1877; "The History of the Geology of Wilts," Wilts Archaeol. Soc., 1886; "The Geology and the Mineral Wealth of South Wales," Mining Journal, 1886, and Imperial Colonial Instit., 1887; "The Coal-Fields of South Wales," Brit. Assoc. Report, 1881; "The Geology of the Plateau of Kent," Natural Science, 1887; "Rockell and its Previous History," R. Irish Acad., 1897. These papers and essays are more or less characteristic of Professor R. Jones' wide range of research and of his steady endeavours to bring together scattered information on subjects of interest to geologists and to the public. Whether as lecturer, author, or reviewer, Professor Jones has always aimed at the advancement of geological science, free from the prejudices of old or new phases of thought. He is joint-author of the "Monograph of the Arctic and North-Sea Foraminifera," 1865; the Foraminifera of the Abrohos Bank," 1888; "Foraminifera of the Crag," 1866 and 1895; "Palæozoic Bivalves, Entomostraca," 32 Parts, 1855-95; "Nomenclature of the Foraminifera," 15 Parts, 1859-72; of the "Micrographical Dictionary," 1874 and 1882; "Monograph of the Carboniferous Cypridinadæ," 1874 and 1884; "Palæozoic Phyllopoda," 1888 and 1892; "Geology," Part I. Heads of Lectures, &c., 1870; and of numerous papers on Carboniferous and other Entomostraca. Mr. Jones was the editor of the "Arctic Manual," 1875; and the editor and joint author of the "Reliquiæ Aquitanicæ; or, Caves and Cave-Dwellers in Central France"; and of the second edition of "Dixon's Geology of Sussex," 1878; also of the "Supplement to the Monogr. Tertiary Entomostraca," 1889; and "Supplement to the Cretaceous Entomostraca," 1890. He was formerly Examiner to the London University, and to the Victoria (Manchester) University; and to the New Zealand University; now Examiner to the College of Preceptors; Assistant-Examiner to the Civil Service Commission, to the Department of Science and Art, and to the Royal College of Science. He was President of the Geologists' Association, 1879-81; Vice-President of Section C, British Association, at Montreal, in 1884; and President of Section C, at Cardiff, in 1891. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society, and of the Geological Society of London; Honorary Member of numerous scientific societies, British and foreign; Recipient of the Murchison Geological Fund in 1882; and Lyell Medallist of the Geological Society in 1890. Address: 17 Parson's Green, Fulham, S.W.

JONES, Rev. William, Primitive Methodist minister, was born at Halesowen, Worcestershire, July 6, 1834. He received a fair modern education. His first appointment of special importance was to Tunstall, the mother church of the Primitive Methodist connection. His next special appointment was to Birmingham, in 1867. It was while here that his fame as a preacher and lecturer became universally known. His name became a household word not only in his own denomination, but in Nonconformist churches generally. He was a familiar figure and speaker on many great occasions in the famous Town Hall. From Birmingham he returned to Tunstall. During his term of ministerial service he was instrumental in building, at a cost of £9000, the Jubilee Memorial Schools opposite the church. At the same time he rendered important service to the denomination by preaching and lecturing up and down the kingdom in behalf of its various interests. He was a constant contributor to the denominational newspaper. His own church, large as it is, was always crowded with persons eager to listen to him when he was at home. He was elected chairman of the first School Board for Wolstanton. When, in 1877, Surrey Chapel was taken over from Rev. Newman Hall by the Primitive Methodist Conference, Mr. Jones was appointed pastor, and to him belongs the honour of founding the first Primitive Methodist church in the historic building. From Surrey he removed to Derby, where another special task awaited him. The Central Church was in course of building, and as soon as it was finished he commenced his labours there, and succeeded in drawing together a large congregation and building up a powerful church. Mr. Jones's next appointment was to Stepney Green Tabernacle, London. He laboured subsequently at Grays, Lincoln, and Sunderland. At the Conference of 1896 he was elected to the office of President of the denomination. On his retirement he was presented with the thanks of the Conference. He is now for the third time stationed at Tunstall, and for the second time holds the position of Chairman of the School Board, besides being President of the Free Church Council for Tunstall and District. He is now in the sixty-fourth year of his age. Address: The Manse, Forster Street, Tunstall, Staff.

JONES, The Most Rev. William West, D.D., Archbishop of Cape Town, was born in 1838, and is the sixth son of Edward Henry Jones, of Hackney. He was educated at St. John's College, Oxford, of which he was a Foundation Fellow from 1856 to 1859. He obtained a second class in Classical Moderations in 1858, and a fourth in the Final Honours School of Mathematics in 1860; B.A. 1860; M.A. 1864; B.D. 1869; D.D. 1874. He was appointed Dean of Arts in 1864, and Vice-President of his College in 1872. He was Vicar of Summertown from 1864 to 1874, and Whitehall Preacher in 1870-72. He was appointed Bishop of Cape Town in 1874, and Archbishop in 1897. He is married to a daughter of Mr. John Allen, of Altrincham, Cheshire. Address: Bishop's Court, Claremont, Cape Town.

JORDAN, John Newell, C.M.G., Chargé d'Affaires in Corea, was born in 1857, and in 1876 became a student-interpreter in China. Having been Acting-Consul at Kiungchow and Amoy, he was attached to the Legation as Accountant in 1886, Assistant Chinese Secretary in 1889, and Chinese Secretary in 1891. In 1896 he was promoted to be Consul-General for Corea, to reside at Seoul, and in 1897 he was made a C.M.G.

JOUBERT, Petrus Jacobus, in-Chief of the Transvaal, was born in 1831, and first distinguished himself by his defeat of Sir George Collyer at Hill, 1881. In 1893 and 1894 he offered himself to be nominated for the office of the South African Republic, but was easily defeated by President Kruger. In 1896 he was the chief factor in the surrender of Dr. Jameson's expedition, he acts severely on the subject of concealing his men behind artificial obstacles, and trusting to their loyalty to prevent their position being discovered. In political matters he is entirely obedient to Kruger's domination.

JOY, George William, painter, born at Dublin in 1844, and is the son of W. Bruce Joy, M.D. He received his education at Harrow, and then studied art as a Royal Academician and in Paris under Bonnat and Jalabert. His principal works, exhibited at the Royal Academy, are "The Farewell," 1871; "Wellington at the Battle of the Marston," 1872; "The Danaids," "Truth," "The King of the Mountains," 1873; "The Death of General Wolfe," 1874; "The Bayswater 'Bus' and the Arc," 1895; "Patience," 1896; "Christ and the Little Child," 1897; "The Merchantman Seeking Goodly Pearls," 1898; "Mary of Bethany," 1899. He has won medals at the Paris Salon and the Chicago World's Fair. Mr. Joy is well known as a volunteer, and has shot several times in the Irish team at Wimbledon. He married Florence, daughter of Thomas Macdonald, Esq., of 51 Pall Mall. Address: The Red Lodge, 51 Pall Mall, Paddington, W.

JOYCE, Thomas Heath, Editor of the Graphic and Daily Mail, was born in London on July 9, 1842, and is the son of Thomas Joyce, of E. Somerset. He received the price of his education on the Continent, and has been on the staff of the Graphic since its first issue of that important paper in 1869. He has translated Victor Hugo's "History of a Crime," besides writing articles on various subjects in the Graphic and other magazines. Address: Freshwater Hill, Bromley, Kent.

JOYNT, Miss Maud, M.A., second daughter of Deputy General Christopher Joynt, Indian Army, and entered Alexandra College, Dublin, in 1881. In 1883, at the international examinations, she gained an exhibition in the middle grade and three gold medals in the same examinations in 1884.

marks of all Ireland, two gold and silver medals. She matriculated at Royal University in 1886, taking firsts in Latin, first place and firsts in German, first place and second in English, first honours in Experiments in Physics, and later in the same year a scholarship of Modern Literature. She obtained first class exhibitions in 1887-88; in the latter year the Henry Hutch-Stewart scholarship (Mod. Literature), a very distinguished honour. Her degree was obtained in 1889, with first honours in modern literature, and a degree of M.A. was conferred on her in 1890.

In his earlier years he was engaged in engineering, first in London and afterwards in Lincolnshire, but his taste for science, especially for geological studies, led him in 1863, to become a student in the School of Mines. In the following year he accepted the post of Analytical Chemist in one of the great iron and steel works at Sheffield, but while there he met with a railway accident that interrupted his work and studies for a considerable time.

Upon his recovery, he determined to devote himself entirely to his favourite study, and commenced a geological survey of the county of Lincolnshire, the results of his investigations being published in a number of memoirs on the Tertiary and Quaternary formation, which he showed to be admirably developed in that and adjoining counties. In 1867 he was appointed to join the staff of the Geological Survey and to continue his work in connection with that body. During a period of several years he was engaged in working out the relations between the Jurassic and the Triassic of the Midland district as compared with those of the Northern and Southern parts of England, and his book on the Geology of Rutland, &c., deals with this important question. In 1871 he was assisted by his friend the late Matthew Phillips to act with him for a time as a District Inspector, and to assist in the work of preparing the way for the operation of the Education Act of 1870 in the eastern suburbs of London. After the completion of this work, however, he returned to his geological studies, and commenced execution of a long-cherished project, namely, unravelling the complexities of the geology of the Secondary Strata of the English Highlands. Not only was he enabled to show what are the true relations between the great series of Triassic and Jurassic rocks in that area, but he also discovered and studied very interesting deposits of Carboniferous and Cretaceous age, the existence of which in the district had been previously overlooked. These studies led him to the investigation of the relics of the great Tertiary Volcanoes of the Western Isles of Scotland; and during several years he was engaged in travelling in various volcanic regions, and making comparisons between these and the districts in the British Isles in which igneous action was rife during past geological times, a long series of memoirs being published as the result of these researches. In 1877 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and in the same year, upon the retirement of Sir Andrew Ramsay, became Professor of Geology in the Royal School of Mines; in 1881 he accepted the same position in the Royal College of Science. From 1877 to 1885 Professor Judd was Secretary to the Geological Society, and during the years 1886 and 1887 held the office of President of that Society. In 1891 the Geological Society awarded Professor Judd the highest honour in their gift—the Wollaston Medal. In 1895 Professor Judd succeeded Professor Huxley as Dean of the Royal College of Science, and in the same year he was created a Companion of the Bath (Civil Division). He is the author of "Geology of Rutland," 1875; "Volcanoes: what they are and what they teach," 1878; "The Student's Lyell," 1896. He has, besides, published many papers in the Trans. Roy. Soc., and other scientific periodicals. He married Jeannie Frances, daughter of John Jeyes, in 1878. Addresses: 22 Cumberland Road, Kew; and Athenæum.

KASSON, John Adams, American statesman, was born near Burlington, Vermont, Jan. 11, 1822. He graduated from the University of Vermont in 1842; studied law in Massachusetts, and was admitted to the Bar. He practised law in St. Louis, Missouri, until 1857, when he removed to Des Moines, Iowa. In 1861 he was appointed First Assistant Postmaster-General by President Lincoln; resigned in 1862, and was elected to Congress, 1863-67. He was United States Postal Commissioner to Paris in 1863, and again in 1867, when he negotiated postal conventions with Great Britain and other nations. He was a member of the lower house of the Iowa Legislature from 1868 to 1873, when he was again elected to Congress, serving until 1877. In that year he was appointed Minister to Austria, serving till 1881, when he was again sent to Congress, until he went as Minister to Germany, 1884-85. In 1898 he was appointed on the Joint Commission to settle matters in dispute between Canada and the United States.

KATO, Takaaki, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Emperor of Japan at the Court of St. James's, was born in 1860, and was educated in the Imperial University of Tokio, where he obtained the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1881. He was Private Secretary to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Chief of the Political Bureau in the Foreign Office at Tokio, from 1887 to 1890. In the latter year he became Director of the Banking Bureau, and of the Revenue Bureau, in the Finance Department, and held these posts till 1894, when he was appointed to the Foreign Office and Directorship of the Political Affairs Bureau, with the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary. He was ordered to proceed to London as Envoy Extraordinary in November 1894, and has remained in that position since 1895. In recognition of his services during the Chino-Japanese War of 1894-95, he was decorated by the Emperor of Japan with the third class of the Rising Sun of the Empire of Japan. Address: Japanese Legation, 8 Sussex Square, Hyde Park, W.

KAWASÉ, Viscount Masataka, late Japanese Minister at the Court of St. James's, was born in 1839, and belongs to a family who in former times were vassals of the Prince of Choshu, in Japan. During the disturbed period preceding the restoration of the Mikado, Kawasé experienced many vicissitudes, but his first important appearance was in command of a force raised to defend the territory of Choshu from the army of the Shogun. The latter was completely defeated, and terms of peace were arranged. Kawasé then visited Europe, and resided for some time in England, being one of the first Japanese who devoted themselves to the study of Western institutions with the view of engrafting such as appeared suitable on those of their own country. On his return to Japan he was appointed Vice-Minister of Public Works by the present Emperor, and subsequently Vice-Chamberlain of the Imperial Household. In 1874 he was sent to Italy to represent Japan. He then successively filled the position of Senator and Vice-Minister of Justice, and in 1884 was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of St. James's, a post which he filled until the beginning of 1895, when he was succeeded by Viscount Masataka. He was created Viscount in 1887, and received a number of numerous decorations.

KAYSERLING, M., born in Germany, June 17, 1820, was educated there and at the University of Göttingen, where he was appointed by the Government of Aargau, in 1861, Rabbi of the Jewish community, and in September 1870, Rabbi of the Jewish community in Pesth, Hungary. In 1841 he married the daughter of the celebrated Rabbi Philippson. Dr. Kayserling's works are: "Sephardim: Romanische Juden in Spanien," Leipzig, 1857; "Feiertag in Madrid, zur Geschichte der Spanische Portugiesischen Juden," Leipzig, 1859-61; "Menschen und Werke," Berlin, 1861; "Der Dichter E. M. Prutz, ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der deutschen Literatur," Berlin, 1867; "M. Mendelssohn, sein Leben und Werk," Leipzig, 1852; "Zum Siegesfeste und Danklieder von M. Mendelssohn," Berlin, 1866; "Die Rituale der Juden oder Ist Schächten Thierqualen," Berlin, 1867; "Schlachten Bibliothek," Berlin, 1870. He has also published a volume of "Distinguished Jewish Women," a graphical work on Jewish diplomatic statesmen: several series of literary articles in the Deutsch-Jüdische Literatur, Prutz, Frankel's Monatshefte für Israeliten in Wien, Steinbock's Bibliographie; and some sermons. His most recent works were: "Biblioteca Española-Portuguesa," 1890; "The First Jew in England," and "Gedenkblätter," a book on the Jews of the nineteenth century.

KAY-SHUTTLEWORTH, Hon. Sir Ughtred James, Bart., J.P., D.L., is the eldest son, born 1844, of the late Sir James Philipps Shuttleworth, Bart., D.C.L., 50 years Secretary of the Council on Education, by Janet, only child and heiress of R. Sherrin Esq., of Gawthorpe Hall, Lancashire. Ughtred was educated at Harrow and at the London University, and author of the "First Principles of Chemistry" (the second edition of which was published in 1870). At the election of the Liberal party in North-East Lancashire, he contested that division and was defeated by a majority of 1,000. In October 1869 he became Member of Parliament for Hastings. Columbian Exposition in Chicago, 1893.
In 1897 he resigned as Rector of the Catholic University of America, and went to Rome.

KEBBEL, Thomas Edward, M.A., youngest son of the late Rev. Henry Kebbel, Vicar of Wistow and Kilby, in the county of Leicester, was born at Kilby
Nov. 23, 1828, and graduated at Oxford in 1849. He was called to the Bar in 1862.
Mr. Kebbel's first introduction to journalism was in 1855, when he was invited to join the staff of the Press newspaper, then newly established by the late Lord Derby and Mr. Disraeli as the weekly organ of the Tory party. In 1867, when the Day newspaper was founded, representing the views of the "Cave," Mr.
Kebbel was engaged as the leading political writer in support of the Conservative Reform Bill. Since that time he has been a contributor to the principal publications of the day—the Quarterly, Edinburgh,
Fortnightly, Nineteenth Century, and National Reviews, Blackwood's, the Cornhill, Fraser, and Macmillan's Magazine, and, under Mr. Delane, he was a frequent contributor to the literary columns of the Times. In 1873 he joined the staff of the Standard, on which he has continued ever since. In 1864 he published "Essays on History and Politics"; and in 1881, on the death of Lord Beaconsfield, he was employed to edit a collection of his speeches published in two volumes by Messrs. Longman. In 1886 he published
"Tory Administrations from the Accession of Mr. Pitt to Power in 1783 to the death of Lord Beaconsfield in 1881." In 1887 he brought out "The Agricultural Labourer," an account of the English peasantry, pronounced by the Edinburgh Review to be the best of its kind. A new edition of this work came out in 1893.
In 1888 he contributed a life of the poet Crabbe to the series of Eminent Writers. He is also the author of lives of Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Derby in the Statesmen series, and has recently published "The Old and the New," a comparison between the country life of 1890 and 1840 (1891); and "Sport and Nature" (1893). He is a contributor of articles to the "Dictionary of National Biography." Address: 54 Cathcart Road, West Kensington, W.

Bennett, Bishop of Meath, was born in Dublin on Oct. 25, 1849, and is the youngest son of A. Bennett Keene, M.A. He was educated at Rathmines School and Trinity College, Dublin, where his academic career was phenomenally brilliant. He was first Honour-man and Prize-man in Classics in 1867; first of the First Honour-men in Science in 1867, 1868, and 1869; first Primate's Hebrew Prize-man in the same year, and winner of scholarships in Mathematics, Hebrew, Syriac, and Chaldee, and of several theological prizes. He became Rector of Navan in 1879, and has been Prebendary of Tipper and Canon of St. Patrick's, Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Meath, Head-Master of Navan College, and Diocesan Nominator and Secretary of the Board of Education. He is a member of the Senate of Trinity College, Dublin. Address: Bishops court, Ardbraccan, Navan.

KEKEWICH, The Hon. Sir Arthur, late Standing Counsel to the Bank of England, was born in 1832, and is the second son of Samuel Trehawke Kekewich, Peamore, Exeter, at one time M.P. for South Devon. He was educated at Eton and Balliol College, Oxford, where he obtained a first class in Lit. Hum., and a second class in Mathematics, afterwards, in 1851, becoming Fellow of Exeter. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1858; made Q.C. in 1877; Bencher of his Inn in 1881; and was raised to the Judicial Bench (Chancery Division) in 1886. He married Marianne, daughter of F. W. Freshfield, in 1858. Addresses: 19 Park Crescent, Portland Place, W.; and Athenæum.

KEKEWICH, Sir George William, K.C.B., D.C.L., Secretary to the Education Department, is the third son of the late Samuel Trehawke Kekewich, M.P., and a younger brother of the Judge, and was born in 1842. He was educated at Eton, and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he took a first class in Classical Moderations, and a second class in Lit. Hum. In 1864 he entered as a student at Lincoln's Inn. He was appointed Examiner to the Education Department, the central authority for primary education, in 1867; Senior Examiner in 1871, and Secretary in 1890. In 1897 he was made Hon. D.C.L. of Durham. Address: Meadhurst, Sunbury Common, Middlesex.

KELLOGG, Clara Louise, American vocalist, was born at Sumterville, South Carolina, July 1842. In 1843 her parents returned with her to Connecticut, where they remained until 1856, when they went to New York. At an early age she gave evidence of musical talent, and after some years of careful study made her first appearance at the Academy of Music in New York in 1861. After further study she appeared as Mrs. Gounod's "Faust" in 1865. Her success was not long within the next two years, as Linda di Chamounix, in "The Barber of Seville," "La Sonnambula," "Lammermoor," and other operas. On 2, 1867, she made a successful London as Marguerite in "Faust," and returned to the United States in 1872. She again visited England at the Drury Lane Opera. In 1873-74 she organised an Entertainment Company, continuing until 1875, and returning to Europe once more in 1876 at Her Majesty's in London. In 1877 she appeared at the Imperial Opera Houses of Vienna, Petersburg, and has since appeared in opera and concert in principal cities of the United States. She was married some years ago to Dr. Kosch.

Address: Elgin, Inverness.

KELLY, Colonel James Graves, D.C., was born in November 1843. He joined the West India Regiment as a private in September 1863, and shortly afterwards exchanged into the 94th Foot, then 60th Foot, and then 1st Buffs. He was promoted to Captain in the Indian Staff Corps in September 1875, and Major in 1883, and for several years was the Brigade-Major of the Bengal Command. He first saw service with the Hazara Expedition in 1881, and obtained a medal with clasp. In the same year he also served in the Chitral Expedition. In March 1895 he was appointed in charge of the Gilgit Expedition, which, in co-operation with the 1st Buffs under Sir Robert Low, effected the capture of Chitral. Colonel Kelly's troops were made up of Bengal infantry, Cashmire, sappers and miners, and a small number of levies from various frontier tribes, with two guns. They marched a distance of 150 miles over a country presenting great physical difficulties, crossed the Karakoram Pass, which is 12,000 feet high, and in the snow, relieved the Mastuj garrison, and finally defeated the enemy posted in natural positions. After a most arduous and difficult march they reached Chitral on the 20th of April. Colonel Kelly was especially mentioned in despatches, and received the thanks of the Government of India. He was appointed to the command of the 1st Buffs, and was appointed to the Staff at Sealkote in the Bengal Command.

KELVIN, Lord, The Right Hon. William Thomson, G.C.V.O., M.A., D.C.L., F.R.S., P.R.S.E., D.L., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Glasgow University, was born in Belfast on June 26, 1824. His father, the late James Thomson, LL.D., was Professor of Mathematics at the Royal Academical Institute in Belfast, but on his appointment to the Professorship of Mathematics in the University of Glasgow in 1832 he removed to Glasgow with his family. At the early age of 14 William entered the Glasgow College, and after a distinguished course of study, he entered Peterhouse, Cambridge, where in 1845 he graduated as Second Wrangler and First Smith's Prizeman, and was elected to a Fellowship in his College. At Cambridge he did not confine himself to his books, but took a great interest in outdoor sports. He was a first-class oarsman, and won the Colquhoun Cup. He was also President of the University Musical Society. In 1846 he was elected to the Professorship of Natural Philosophy in Glasgow University, a post which he has now held for fifty-three years. At the early age of seventeen, while yet an undergraduate of Cambridge University, he attracted the attention of the scientific men of the country by his paper "On the Uniform Motion of Heat in Homogeneous Solid Bodies, and its Connection with the Mathematical Theory of Electricity." The method of this paper was quite original, and later proved of the greatest importance in the discussion of problems in electrostatics and magnetism. This paper was soon followed by others showing the same remarkable scientific insight and mathematical ability, and it was at once manifest that Thomson was destined to take a foremost place as a scientific worker. In 1845 he became the first editor of the Cambridge and Dublin Mathematical Journal, and held that office for nearly seven years. In its predecessor, The Cambridge Mathematical Journal, his article mentioned above had appeared, and several others of later date, of which we may note that "On the Linear Motion of Heat." From among the articles of later years, which have appeared in the various scientific periodicals or as communications to the learned societies, only a few of the most important can be selected for mention here. By his paper "On Electrical Images" he introduced an idea which has led to great advances in the mathematical theory of electricity. The value of his paper "On an Absolute Thermometric Scale" is shown by the universal use that is now made of that conception in calculations in thermodynamics. Many of his papers deal with the theory of heat—"On the Dynamical Theory of Heat"; "On the Thermal Effects of Fluids in Motion" (Joule and Thomson); "Compendium of Fourier Mathematics for the Conduction of Heat in Solids"; "Elasticity and Heat"—and his work in this department is worthy of special notice; for some of it was carried out in conjunction with Joule, and the warm friendship which existed between these two workers is a noteworthy feature in the lives of both. Other papers worthy of special mention are the following: "On a Universal Tendency in Nature to the Dissipation of Mechanical Energy"; "On the Theory of the Electric Telegraph"; "On the Use of Observations of Terrestrial Temperature for the Investigation of Absolute Dates in Geology"; "On the Electro-Dynamic Qualities of Metals." These papers, with others, have all been collected and published in 3 vols. under the title of "Mathematical and Physical Papers." The third volume was published in 1890, but since then many valuable papers have been published, of which the most recent are a lecture to the Victoria Institute "On the Age of the Earth," and a lecture to the Royal Institution "On Volta-Contact

Secretary of the Royal Commission on the Ecclesiastical Courts which sat during the years 1881-83. In January 1887, he was appointed Chancellor of the Diocese of Newcastle, in October of the same year
Chancellor of the Diocese of Southwell, and in 1891 Chancellor of the Diocese of St. Albans. He was the junior counsel for the Bishop of Lincoln in the historical trial of that prelate before the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1889-90, and has been engaged in a number of other important ecclesiastical cases. Mr. Kempe is the author of a number of papers on mathematical subjects, the value of which has been recognised by his election to a Fellowship of the Royal Society in 1881. The earlier of these papers were mainly about "linkages"; the most important being one published in the Proceedings of the Royal Society for 1875, "On a general method of producing exact rectilinear motion by linkwork," and a little book,
"How to Draw a Straight Line," published in 1877. Later papers related to some interesting theorems as to the movement of a plane (Nature, vol. xviii. p. 149), the colouring of maps (id. vol. xxi. p. 399);
the graphical representation of invariants and covariants (Proc. Lond. Math. Soc., vol. xvii. p. 108, and vol. xxiv. p. 97); the connection between logic and geometry (id.
vol. xxi. p. 147) and knots (*Proc. Roy. Soc.
Edinburgh*, 1886). In 1886 Mr. Kempe communicated to the Royal Society an important paper on the nature of the subject matter of exact thought, entitled "A Memoir on the Theory of Mathematical Form," which was printed in the Philosophical Transactions for that year. He has taken an active part in the management of the London Mathematical Society, of which body he was for some years the Treasurer, and was in 1893 and 1894 the President. He has served as a Manager of the Royal Institution in Albemarle Street, and is now (1898) on the Council of the Royal Society. He married (2), in 1887, Ida, daughter of his Honour Judge Meadows White, Q.C. Addresses: 10 Por-

KEMPE, The Rev. John Edward,
M.A., son of A. J. Kempe, Esq., F.S.A., a distinguished antiquary, was born March 9, 1810; educated at St. Paul's School and Clare College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1833 as a Senior Optime, and first class in Classics; and M.A. in 1837.
He was appointed Curate of Tavistock, Devon, in 1833, and elected a Fellow of his College in 1841. He became Curate of Barnet, Herts, in 1844; incumbent of St.
John's, St. Pancras, on the presentation of Bishop Blomfield, in 1846; of St. Barnabas,

Kensington, in 1848; and Rector of St. James's, Piccadilly, on the presentation of Lord Aberdeen, as Premier, 1853. In 1861 he was appointed by Bishop Tait to the Prebendal Stall of Chamberlainewood, in St. Paul's; in 1864 he became one of her Majesty's Chaplains; and in 1868 he was elected one of the Proctors in Convocation for London, being re-elected in 1874. In 1880 he retired from Convocation, and in 1895 resigned the Rectory of St. James. He was a rural Dean of the Diocese, and is considered to have rendered great services to the Anglican Church in general, and especially to its cause in London, by having established, and conducted as President for many years, monthly conferences, at which clergy and laity met for the discussion of Church questions. Mr. Kempe has published lectures on the Book of Job, and on Elijah; occasional sermons and prefaces to lectures delivered in St. James's Church on "The Use and Abuse of the World," "Companions for the Devout Life," and "Classic Preachers of the English Church," besides an adaptation of Bishop Andrewes' "Devotions," &c. Mr. Kempe is also the founder of the St. James's Diocesan Home for Female Penitents; and he was one of Bishop Tait's principal counsellors and coadjutors in the origination and earlier working of the Bishop of London's Fund. In 1868 Mr. Kempe was offered the Bishopric of Calcutta by Lord Cranborne (now Marquis of Salisbury), who was then Indian Minister, but declined it for family reasons. In 1843 he married Harriet, daughter of the Rev. R. Wood, of Osmington House, Dorset, by whom he has a daughter and four sons, of whom one is Chancellor of the Diocese of Newcastle, Southwell, and St. Albans. His present address is 14 Montague Place, W.

KENDAL, Mr., the stage name of Mr. William Hunter Grimston, was born in London on Dec. 16, 1813. He was educated at a private school and under a tutor, and went on the stage in Glasgow in 1862. Here he remained for several years, supporting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean, Helen Faucit, &c., and in 1866 appeared for the first time in London, at the Haymarket Theatre, the play being "A Dangerous Friend." He played many important parts at the Haymarket, at the Court, and at the Old Prince of Wales's Theatre. From 1879 to 1888 he was lessee and manager, together with Mr. John Hare, of the St. James's Theatre, and with that distinguished player produced "The Queen's Shilling," "The Squire," "Impulse," "The Ironmaster," "A Scrap of Paper," &c., &c. He married the well-known actress, Miss Madge Robertson, in 1867, and acted with her ever since. He is a Canadian and American actor, and between the years 1880 and 1885 an exceptionally successful actor at the Portland Place, W.

KENDAL, Mrs. (Mrs. W. Hunter Grimston), nee Margaret Robertson, was born at Grimsby, Lincolnshire. Her grandfather, her father, and her uncle were all actors. Her father was the dramatist T. W. Robertson. "Madge" Robertson's debut was made on July 29, 1865, when she appeared at the Haymarket as Ophelia in the Hamlet of Walter Moncreiff. On March 14, 1868, she made her first success in the metropolis as Madame Dumont in Dr. Westland Marston's "The Romance," which was performed for the first time on that occasion at the Haymarket Theatre. On Aug. 7, 1868, Robertson was married to Mr. W. Hunter Grimston, who on the stage is known by his assumed name, Kendal. In the ensuing five years she appeared at the Haymarket in many characters. The creation of the part of Lilian in "New Men and Old" gave Mrs. Kendal a position among the leading comédiennes of the day. In 1875 she began a short engagement at the Opera Comique, and in the autumn joined the company organised by John Hare for the Court Theatre. After she joined the Prince of Wales's Theatre, then under the management of Mr. Bancroft. In January 1877 Kendal returned to the Court Theatre. In 1879 she joined the company at James's Theatre, under the joint management of Mr. Kendal and Mr. Hare. In September 1889 Mr. and Mrs. Kendal went to America, where they made tours up to 1895, when they first returned to England, having obtained extraordinary success. Mrs. Kendal contributed to Murray's Magazine a series of gossip articles, chiefly autobiographical, entitled "Dramatic Addresses: 12 Portland Place, W. The Lodge, Filey, Yorks.

KENMARE, Earl of, The Hon. Valentine Augustus I. Bart., K.P., was born on May 1, 1851, and is the eldest son of the Earl of Kenmare, to whom he succeeded in 1871, and a daughter of Edmund O'Callaghan, Esq., co. Clare. As a Liberal Member of Parliament for co. Kerry from 1871, was Comptroller of the Household from 1856 to 1858, Vice-Chamberlain from 1859 to 1866 and 1868-72, Lord-1872-74; Lord Chamberlain, 1880-86; then Lord Lieutenant of co. Kerry 1866, and since the same year has been Colonel of the 4th Battalion Royal Munster Fusiliers. He married in 1858 Gertrude, only daughter of Charles Thynne. He owns immense property. Address: Killarney House, Killarney.

Risen to be assistant chief operator at Cincinnati, he was sent, in December 1861, by the Russo-American Telegraph Company to superintend the location and erection of lines in Siberia, and spent several years in travelling through the eastern part of that country on this duty. He returned to the United States in 1868, and two years later published an account of his Arctic experience in a volume entitled "Tent Life in Siberia."

In 1870 he went again to Russia, and spent some months in an exploration of the steppes and the mountains of the Caucasus, returning to America in the way of the Black Sea, Constantinople, and the Danube. In 1885-86 he made a third journey to the Russian Empire, this time for the especial purpose of investigating the Siberian exile system. The results of his observations on this subject during which he travelled 15,000 miles in Northern Russia and Siberia, were published in a series of twenty-eight articles in the Century Magazine, between the years 1887 and 1890, and were republished in book form in 1891, under the title "Siberia and the Exile System." His work attracted wide attention, and was translated into most of the European languages, including Russian, Polish, Bohemian, Bulgarian, German, Swedish, Dutch. Since then he has been a frequent contributor, as in the past, to leading American magazines. In 1891 he married Emmeline, daughter of R. Weld. Club: Authors', New

KENNAWAY, The Right Hon. Sir

Henry, Bart., M.P., was born in 1811 and is the eldest son of the late 2nd Earl of Eglintoun and Emily, daughter of Thomas Coke, of Kingscote. He was educated at Harrow and Balliol College, Oxford, where he obtained a First Class in Law and Modern History School (M.A.) in 1834.

He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1864. He sat in the House of Commons from 1870 to 1885 as Conservative member for East Devon, and since 1885 has represented the Honiton Division of Devon. He succeeded his father in 1873. He is President of the Church Missionary Society and of the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, has been since 1894 Colonel of the 3rd Volunteer Battalion of the Devon Regiment, and is J.P. and D.L. for Devonshire. He married in 1866 Fanny, daughter of Archibald F. Arbuthnot. Addresses: Escot, Ottery St. Mary, Devon; and Athenæum.

KENNEDY, Emeritus Professor Alexander Blackie William, Vice-President of the Inst. of Mechanical Engineers, LL.D., F.R.S., &c., born March 17, 1847, at Stepney, is the son of Rev. J. Kennedy, D.D., late President Congregational Union, and Helen Stodart Blackie, sister of the late Professor Blackie, and was educated chiefly at the City of London School, and afterwards, for a year, at the School of Mines, Jermyn Street. He served as an engineering pupil for four and a half years with Messrs. J. & W. Dudgeon, Engineers and Shipbuilders, Millwall; in 1868 became leading draughtsman at Palmer's Engine Works, Jarrow; in 1871 chief draughtsman to Messrs. T. M. Tennant & Co., Ltd., Leith; in 1872 became consulting engineer in Edinburgh with Mr. H. O. Bennett, as Bennett & Kennedy. In 1874 he was appointed Professor of Civil and Mechanical Engineering at University College, London, the title of the Chair being changed later to that of Engineering and Mechanical Technology. In 1875 he established the Engineering Laboratory at University College, which was the precursor of the similar Laboratories now to be found at nearly all the colleges in the country where Engineering is taught. In 1889 he resigned his chair, but received the honorary title of Emeritus Professor of Engineering from the Council of University College. In 1876 he translated and edited Reuleaux's "Theoretische Kinematik," under the title of "Kinematics of Machinery." In 1886 he published the "Mechanics of Machinery" (second edit., 1898). He has been connected with the Research Committees of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers since their foundation, and as Reporter of the Committee on Riveted Joints, carried out an elaborate series of experiments, which are published in the Proceedings of the Institution, 1881, 1882, 1885, and 1888. As Chairman of the Committee on Marine Engine Trials he has carried out a number of extended trials at sea, the results of which have been published in the Proceedings of the Institution of Mechanical En- gineers, 1889 and 1890). He contributed a paper on "Engineering Laboratories" to the Institute of Civil Engineers (Proceedings, vol. lxxxviii., 1887), and has published many papers in the professional journals. Among other structural work he designed the iron and concrete internal structure of the present Alhambra Theatre, probably the first building in which all the floors were simply flat concrete slabs, made in situ and carried by a wrought-iron skeleton, and also the Promenade Pier at Trouville, the first purely arched steel structure of the kind which has been built. He has been Engineer in Chief to the Westminster Electric Supply Corporation, Ltd., since its formation in 1890. He has also designed and carried out systems of electric lighting for the Corporations of Glasgow, Aberdeen, Oldham, Belfast, Edinburgh, Sunderland, Chester, Croydon, Carlisle, York, West Hartlepool, and many other places, in connection in several cases with systems of electric traction. He is Joint Engineer, with Mr. W. R. Galbraith, to the Waterloo and City Railway, is one of the engineers for the Brompton and Piccadilly Railway, &c. He is an Hon. Life Member and a Past President, 1894-96, of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers. He is a Member of Council of the Institute of Civil Engineers. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1887. In 1874 he married Elizabeth Veralls, eldest daughter of the late William Smith, LL.D., Edinburgh. Addresses: 1 Queen Anne Street, Cavendish Square; and 17 Victoria Street, S.W.

KENNEDY, Captain Alexander William Maxwell Clark, F.R.G.S., F.L.S., was born at Rochester, Sept. 26, 1851, being the eldest son of the late Colonel John Clark Kennedy, C.B., of Knockgray, N.B. He was educated at Eton, where at the age of sixteen he published "The Birds of Berkshire and Buckinghamshire, a Contribution to the Ornithology of the two Counties," 1868, by "an Eton Boy." He entered the Coldstream Guards as Ensign in 1870, became Lieutenant in 1872, and Lieutenant and Captain in 1874, and retired the same year. He is the author of various verses and poems, and of a work of travels, "To the Arctic Regions and Back in Six Weeks," being travels in Lapland and Norway, 1878. He has contributed articles to the Ibis, Zoologist, Land and Water, the Field, and other natural-history periodicals; and is a fellow of several learned societies. He is a Magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant for Kirkcudbrightshire, for which county he came forward as Conservative candidate at the general election of 1874, but retired.

KENNEDY, Gilbert George, Barrister-at-Law, Barrister of the Metropolitan Police, Greenwich and Woolwich, was born May 9, 1844, and is the fourth son of the late John Kennedy, of the Indian Service. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and called to the Bar in 1870, and was appointed Judge of Grantham in 1889, in which year he was appointed to his present office. He is author, in conjunction with Sir John Lubbock, of a work on "The Law of Succession," joint editor of Roscoe's "Conveyancing." He married, in 1874, the daughter of the late Edward Lyon, of the Indian Staffs. Address: 6 Linden Gardens, W., water, &c.

KENNEDY, John Gordon, was born in 1838, eldest son of John Gordon Kennedy, of Naples. He entered the Diplomatic Service in 1857, having been educated at Christi College, Oxford. He held appointments at Vienna and Warsaw, and became Second Secretary at Constantinople in 1886, where he was Secretary to Sir Henry Elliot, and accompanied in 1869 when he accompanied her Majesty at the opening of the Canal. In 1878 he was Secretary at Yeddo, and then at St. Petersburg and Rome. He became Minister at Constantinople in 1888, a post which he exchanged for his present post in August 1897.

KENNEDY, Robert John, D.L., J.P., Minister to Montenegro, was born in 1851, and is the son of the late Stewart Kennedy of Cultra. He was educated at Harrow and University College, Oxford, and entered the Diplomatic Service in 1870. He has been Secretary at St. Petersburg, in Russia, Bulgaria, Roumania, and was appointed to his present office in 1897. He married Bertha, daughter of the fifth Viscount Banger, in 1897. Addresses: British Legation, Cetina, co. Down, &c.

KENNEDY, The Hon. Sir Rann, K.B., eldest son of the late John Kennedy, Vicar of Barnwood, was born in 1846, and received his education at King's College, Cambridge. He was subsequently a Fellow of Pembroke College in the same year. In 1863 he was Senior Classical Scholar, and leaving Cambridge he entered the Inner Temple, was called to the Bar in 1865, and joined the Northern Circuit. He has since made a large practice at the Bar, and was made a Q.C. He was President of the Board from 1870 to 1871, and a member of the Bar Committee from 1880 to 1881.

After year he was appointed a Judge of the High Court (Queen's Bench Division) and was made a K.B. He unsuccessfully contested St. Helen's in the Liberatorian interest at the 1892 general election. In 1874 he married the daughter of George Richmond, R.A. Addresses: 94 Bourne Terrace, W.; and Athenæum.

KENT - BARRINGTON, Sir
See BARRINGTON, SIR V. H. K.

KENT, The Right Rev. George
Lunham, D.D., Bishop of Bath and Wells, born in 1845, is the son of George Kent, M.D., of Harrogate. He was educated at Oriel College, Oxford (B.A. 1867, M.A. 1871). He was ordained Deacon in 1869 by the Bishop of Tuam, and Priest the following year by the Archbishop of Tuam. He was Domestic Chaplain to the Bishop of Tuam, 1869-70; Curate of Doncaster, 1870-71; York Diocesan Inspector of Schools, 1871-73; Vicar of St. Paul's, Doncaster, Kingston-on-Hull, 1873-76; Vicar of All Saints', Bradford, from 1876 until his advancement to the episcopate. On Nov. 30, 1882, he was consecrated in Westminster Abbey, Bishop of Bath and Wells, in succession to Dr. Short, who resigned the See, which comprises the Diocese of South Australia. He was made Bishop of Bath and Wells in 1894, in succession to the late Lord Hervey, and died in England in the autumn. He married, in 1882, Henrietta, daughter of Charles Dalrymple Ferguson, Bart. Addresses: The Palace, Wells; and Athenæum.

KENT, The Right Hon. William
Judge of the High Court of Justice, born in Dublin on Jan. 14, 1814, and is the only son of the late John Kenny, solicitor, of Ennis. He was educated privately and at Trinity College, Dublin, of which he is M.A. He called to the Irish Bar at the King's Inns in 1838, and rose to be the leader of the Irish Chancery Bar (Q.C. 1855; Benchers, 1865; 1885; 1890). After the defeat of the Home Rule Bill of 1886 he laboured to organise Liberal Unionism in Ireland, for a time was Secretary to the Liberal Unionist of Ireland. He arranged for the visit to Dublin of Lord Hartington in 1887. He was Liberal Unionist member for St. Stephen's Green from 1885 to 1897. He was Solicitor-General for Ireland from 1895 to 1897. At his appointment to this office he had to contest his seat, and he thus held a hitherto impregnable Nationalist stronghold at three successive elections. In 1897 he was appointed Judge of the Court of Justice, Ireland. In 1873 he married Mary, daughter of David Caffey, Master in Chancery. Addresses: 72 Chester Place, S.W.; 35 Fitzwilliam Place, Dublin.

KENT, William Charles Mark
(known as Charles Kent), poet and journalist, was born in London, on Nov. 3, 1823, and was educated at Prior Park and Oscott Colleges. His father, William Kent, R.N., who was born on Dec. 23, 1799, in the Government House at Sydney in Australia, when his great-uncle, Captain (afterwards Admiral) Hunter was Governor of New South Wales, and who, on Aug. 27, 1816, was a midshipman on board the Leander frigate at the battle of Algiers under Viscount Exmouth, was the only son of Captain William Kent, R.N., the discoverer of Kent's Group and the Gulf of St. Vincent, and who died in 1812, while in command, during the great Napoleonic War, of H.M.S. Union, 98 guns, then stationed off Toulon. Mr. Kent's mother, Ellen, was the only daughter of Judge Baggs, of the Court of Vice-Admiralty in Demerara, by a lady of good Irish family. At an early age Mr. Charles Kent adopted literature as a profession. When 19 he had written and published, in three series, more than forty Essays and Stories. When 22 he began, in the Christmas of 1845, his twenty-five years' editorship of the Sunday newspaper, of which journal, during the last eight years of that quarter of a century, he was both editor and sole proprietor. Beginning with 1874 he was for seven years editor of the Weekly Register. He is the author, among other works, of "The Vision of Cagliostro, a tale of the Five Senses," 1847; "Aletheia, or the Doom of Mythology, and other Poems," 1850; "Dreamland, or Poets in their Haunts, and other Poems," 1862; "Footprints on the Road," 1864; his "Poems," in a collected edition, 1870; a "Mythological Dictionary" (virginibus puerisque), 1870; "Charles Dickens as a Reader," published simultaneously in London and Philadelphia, 1872; "Corona Catholica," in fifty languages, in which work he was translated by the chief linguistic scholars of Europe, Asia, and Africa, among them being Professor Paley into Greek, Professor Max-Müller into Sanskrit, Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte into Basque, Professor Mir Aulad Ali into Persian, Professor Dillmann into Ethiopic, Professor Sayce into Assyrian, Professor Nöldeke into Syriac, and Professor Novalevsky into Russian. He has written, besides this, "The Modern Seven Wonders of the World," profusely illustrated, in 1890. He has also published under various assumed names such entirely different productions as "Catholicity in the Dark Ages," by an Oscotian, 1847; ish Prose Selections." He is besides author of "Epic and Romance"; and "Essays on Mediæval Literature," 1897. Press is: 95 Gower Street, W.C.

KÉRATRY, Émile, Comte de, was born at Paris, March 20, 1832, of an ancient family, his father being Count de Hilarion Kératry, who died in 1861. Having completed his studies at the Lycées of St. Louis and of Louis-le-Grand, he entered as a volunteer the 1st Regiment of Chasseurs d'Afrique, in 1854, and through the Crimean campaign, passed successively to the 1st Regiment of Hussars and of Cuirassiers, and, in 1859, was appointed Sous-Lieutenant in the 5th Regiment of Lancers. In 1861 he entered into the 3rd Regiment of Chasseurs d'Afrique, in order that he might take part in the campaign in Mexico; and in 1862 he was detached as Captain commanding the second squadron of Colonel Bazaine's famous counter-guerilla. In this service he distinguished himself by his bravery and decision, and in 1863 he was appointed Officer of the Légion d'Honneur to Marshal Bazaine. The Comte Kératry was several times mentioned in the "Order of the Day" in Africa and Mexico. In 1865 he was recommended for a lieutenant's commission, but he sent in his resignation and retired from the service. At this period he had received the Légion d'Honneur, and had been decorated with several foreign Orders. On his return to France he devoted himself to literary pursuits, and contributed to the Contemporaine a remarkable series of articles on the Mexican expedition, in which he severely attacked the Government and the conduct of Marshal Bazaine. Afterwards he became editor of the Revue Moderne, in which periodical he renewed his accusation. In 1869 he was elected by the electors of Brest to the Législatif, when he associated himself with the new Liberal Tiers-Parti. On the establishment of the Government of National Defence in September 1870, he was made Prefect of Police; but in the following month he escaped in a balloon from Paris, then besieged, and proceeded on a diplomatic mission to Madrid, where, afterwards, he was succeeded by M. de Adam. On October 22 he was promoted General of Division, commanding mobilised forces in Brittany, and ordered a number of old sailors, but afterwards resigned his command. When M. Thiers came to power he was appointed Prefect of the Bouches-du-Rhône, but his severe repression of disorder and the hostility of the Republican press led to his resignation. After unsuccessful attempts to get into Parliament he retired into private life, and has latterly devoted himself to the question of international copyright. He is the author of "Le Contre-Guérilla," 1867; "La Créance Jecker," 1867; "L'Élévation et la Chute de Maximilien," 1867; a work on French events entitled "Le 4 Septembre et le Gouvernement de la Défense Nationale," 1871; "Armée de Bretagne, 1870-1," published in 1874; "Mourad V., Prince, Sultan, Prisonnier d'État," 1878; and "À travers le passé. Souvenirs Militaires," 1887. In 1872 he was promoted to be a Commander of the Légion of Honour.

In 1874 he the survey of Western Palestine jor Conder, but after the attack arty at Safed, in 1875, he returned and, and for two years was engaged g down the Palestine Exploration map. Returning to the Holy Land he executed the whole of the sur- Galilee. In 1878 he was sent to to organise the Courts. He was pointed Vice-Consul at Erzeroum. ently he returned to Cyprus and survey of the entire island. In aring that an Egyptian army was rganised by Sir Evelyn Wood, he volunteered for the service, and was appointed one of the two Majors of the cavalry. Major Kitchener soon acquired a knowledge of the Egyptian character, so that he was often entrusted with missions of some delicacy, which were always carried out in a most satisfactory manner. In June 1884 he was appointed Deputy-Assistant Adjutant-General of the Intelligence Department under Sir Chas. Wilson, and took part in the Nile Expedition. He also drew up a scheme for the relief of Khartoum and the rescue of Gordon. It was to have been effected by a small brigade of infantry, led with confidence and moved with celerity, but the plan was overruled. For his services he was several times mentioned in despatches, and was promoted Brevet Lieut.-Colonel. In August 1886 he succeeded General Watson as Governor of the Red Sea Territories, and the judicious advice he then gave the Arabs enabled them to overthrow Osman Digna at Tamai with great slaughter. Subsequently he succeeded Colonel Cherm-side as Governor-General of the Red Sea Littoral, and Commandant at Suakin. At the action of Handoub he commanded the Egyptian troops, and was severely wounded. In May 1888 he left for England, being succeeded at Suakin by Lieut.-Colonel Holled Smith. Upon his arrival he was nominated Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, which appointment carries with it the rank of Colonel; he was also awarded the Medjidie of the second class. Towards the end of the year Colonel Kitchener again left for Egypt, and was appointed to command a Brigade of the Egyptian army in the Soudan. He was present at the action of Gamaizah, and was mentioned in despatches. At the battle of Toski, in August 1889, he was in command of the mounted troops. He was again mentioned in despatches, and received a C.B. In 1892 he succeeded Sir Francis Grenfell as Sirdar of the Egyptian army, with the local rank of Ferik or Lieut.-General. Colonel Kitchener had been, since 1888, Adjutant-General and second in command of the army, and also Inspector-General of Police at Cairo. His next achievement was the re-capture of Dongola. In the summer of 1896 an expeditionary force, composed of English and Egyptian troops, advanced into the Soudan with the object of re-taking from the Dervishes the lost province of Dongola, and after several successful engagements the whole province was subdued. Sir Herbert Kitchener was promoted Major-General and created a K.C.B. for distinguished service in the field. The Khedive also conferred upon him the Medjidie of the first class, and the Osmanieh of the second class. The victory enabled him to extend a railway to rise in the reign of George IV. educated in Glasgow, and appointed Head-Master of the Normal School, Ceylon, before he was twenty age. He was partner in a coffee plantation in the interior of the island, wrote the "History of Ceylon," from chronicles, and "Forest Life in Ceylon" from his own experience. He was the first Hon. Sec. of the Ceylon Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. He was subsequently appointed Professor of Natural History and Logic in the Calcutta University, and in 1860 was transferred as Commissioner to Oudh by Lord

His "Private Life of an Eastern Ruler" published before the great Indian Mutiny broke out, gave a faithful account of the career of Nussir-ood-deen, King of Oudh, and incidentally of the state of that province before its annexation. This work was translated into most of the languages of Europe, and was referred to in Parliamentary debates as proving the necessity for the annexation of Oudh to the British dominions in India. In Fraser's Magazine, when

Mr. Froude, Mr. Knighton published "Village Life in Oudh," and, in 1878, issued his "Private Life of an Eastern Queen." Mr. Knighton retired from the Oudh Commission in 1878, and devoted himself to literature. He was elected a Vice-President of the Society of Literature in London, and the International Literary and Philological Association of Paris. In 1889 he had a statue of Shakespeare on the Boulevard Haussmann, in Paris—a statue modelled by Paul Fournier, the French sculptor. Mr. Knighton is Professor of Arts, a Doctor of Philosophy, and Doctor of Laws of the Giessen University in Germany. These degrees were conferred on him when Baron Liebig was President of the Philosophical Faculty in that University. His most recent work, "The Philosophy of Life," was translated into French by M. Léon Delbos, under the title "Luttes pour la Vie," and has been popular in Paris, in London, and in

Of Mr. Knighton's contributions to the Transactions of the Royal Society of Arts the most remarkable are "Early History," "Cleon the Democrat," "The Philosophy of Epicurus and Modernism," and "Greek and Latin Wit." He died, in 1883, Charlotte, daughter of V. Drake, K.C.B. Address: Tilehurst, near Leonards-on-Sea.

KNOLLYS, Sir Courtenay, K.C.M.G., Secretary of Trinidad, was born in 1841, and is the fourth son of Canon Knollys. He was educated at Balliol College, Oxford, where he took a second class in the Final Schools. He rowed for Oxford in the boat race in 1872 and 1873; won the Diamond Sculls at Henley in 1872, and the Goblets in 1873. In 1874 he was appointed Sub-Receiver of Trinidad; from 1879 to 1894 he was Auditor-General and Colonial Secretary of Barbadoes, and in the latter year was appointed to his present post. He married in 1874 Ellen May, daughter of P. H. de la Motte, and in 1897 was created a K.C.M.G. His address is: Port of Spain, Trinidad.

KNOLLYS, Sir Francis K., K.C.M.G., K.C.B. (Civil), was born in the thirties, and is the second son of the late General the Right Hon. Sir W. T. Knollys, K.C.B., and Elizabeth, daughter of the late Sir J. St. Aubyn. He is well known as Private Secretary and Groom-in-Waiting to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. He received the honour of knighthood in 1897. He married in 1887 a daughter of the late Sir H. Tyrwhitt, Bart., and of the Baroness Berners. Official address: St. James's Palace, S.W.

KNOWLES, James, F.R.I.B.A., born in 1831, was educated as an architect at a private school, at University College, in his father's office, and in Italy. He is a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects, and has executed many architectural works, chiefly in London and its neighbourhood—amongst which may be mentioned Aldworth, the Surrey residence of Lord Tennyson; Kensington House, with its gardens and adjuncts; the Thatched House Club, St. James's Street; the public garden and fountain in Leicester Square; Albert Mansions in Victoria Street; and St. Saviour's, St. Philip's, and St. Stephen's churches at Clapham. Mr. Knowles has also been engaged in literature from an early age, contributing many articles to journals and reviews, and in 1860 compiling (from Sir Thomas Malory) "The Story of King Arthur," which reached a sixth edition. In 1869 he originated the Metaphysical Society, a club consisting of forty members, being chiefly eminent representatives of the most various forms of belief and contemporary thought on speculative subjects—Anglican, Roman Catholic, Nonconformist, Positivist, Agnostic, and Atheistic—and constituted for the full, free, and confidential discussion of philosophical questions. The list of members included Lord Tennyson, Mr. Gladstone, Dr. Martineau, Cardinal Manning, the Archbishop of York, Prof. Huxley, Prof. Tyndall, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Father Dalgavus, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Arthur Balfour, Dr. Ward, Mr. Froude, Mr. Ruskin, the Duke of Argyll, the Bishop of St. David's (Thirlwall), the Bishop of Peterborough (Magee), the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol (Ellicott), Mr. Frederic Harrison, Sir J. Fitzjames Stephen, Mr. Leslie Stephen, Lord Selborne, Sir F. Pollock, Mr. R. H. Hutton, Prof. Seeley, Prof. Henry Sidgwick, Sir M. E. Grant Duff, Mr. Robert Lowe (Lord Sherbrooke), Lord Arthur Russell, Mr. Shadwack Hodgson, Mr. James Hinton, Mr. St. George Mivart, Sir Andrew Clark, Sir John Lubbock, Prof. Pritchard, Dean Stanley, Sir William Gull, the Dean of St. Paul's (Church), the Rev. F. D. Maurice, Prof. Sylvester, Mr. Walter Bagehot, Mr. Mark Pattison, Rev. Dr. Mozley, Mr. Croom Robertson, &c. In 1870 he succeeded Dean Alford in the editorship of the Contemporary Review, which, by enlisting the aid of the members of the Metaphysical Society, he raised to a position of influence and importance. In 1877, owing to a change in the proprietorship of the Contemporary Review, a separation took place between it and Mr. Knowles, when—supported by more than one hundred writers of celebrity (mostly members of the Metaphysical Society, and contributors to the Contemporary Review)—he established the Nineteenth Century, a monthly review, in which, as his own property, the principle of the unfettered and unbiassed discussion of all topics of public interest, by authors signing their own names, might be preserved without interference. The Nineteenth Century immediately attained, and still preserves, a very wide circulation. The introductory sonnet was written by Lord (then Mr.) Tennyson, who had become intimately acquainted with Mr. Knowles, consulting with him upon all matters of business, &c., and sharing rooms with him, for several years, as a joint-tenant, in Victoria Street, Westminster. A very influentially-signed protest against the proposed Channel Tunnel Scheme which appeared in the Review largely assisted in defeating that project, Mr. Gladstone often reproaching the editor that "he had stopped the Channel Tunnel," and another important protest signed by hundreds of women of all ranks against "Female Suffrage" helped to hinder that scheme. Mr. Knowles is a collector of works of art, a member of the Burlington Fine Arts Club, and a frequent contributor to the Winter Exhibition of the Old Masters at the Royal Academy and to other exhibitions. Permanent address: Queen Anne's Lodge, St. James's Park, S.W.

KNOWLES, Lees, D.L., M.P., eldest son of the late John Knowles, Esq., J.P., C.A. and D.L. (High Sheriff of Lancashire, 1892-93), of Westwood, Pendlebury, by Elizabeth, daughter of the late Lees, Esq., of Green Bank, born Feb. 16, 1857, and educated at Rugby and at Trinity College, where he took the degree of LL.M., and was president of the University Athletic Union. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1882, joined the Northern Law Society in 1883, and is joint-editor of the Law of Greenwood's "Real Property". Appointed unpaid private secretary to Lord Ritchie, President of the Law Amendment Board, in 1887, he received appointment again in 1890, and has formerly been hon. sec. of the Law Trust, a member of the Select Committee on Town Holdings, and a member of the Select Committee on the Patent Bill. He was appointed Estates Commissioner in 1891, and a trustee for two churches. Mr. Knowles is a D.L. for Lancashire, secretary to the Lancashire M.P.'s Association, and has been successful in passing five Acts of Parliament dealing chiefly with sanitation. He unsuccessfully contested the Division of Lancashire, but was elected for Salford (West) in 1890 as Conservative member. Addresses: 18, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., &c.; and Pendlebury.

KNOX, The Right Rev. E. Arbuthnott, D.D., Bishop of Coventry, son of the late E. Knox, Vicar of Exton, Rutland, born on Dec. 6, 1847, at Bangor, North Wales. He was educated at St. Paul's School, London, and Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where he was elected a scholar in 1865, took a first class in Moderations, and a first class in Lit. Hum., and a first class in Law and Modern History, and received the degree of B.A. in 1868, and of M.A. in 1872, whilst the hon. D.D. was conferred upon him in 1873. At Oxford he was a Fellow of Magdalen College from 1868 to 1875, and held the office of Vicar of St. John Baptist from 1879; tutor of Merton College from 1885; and chaplain of Merton College from 1885. He became rector of Beauchamp, Leicester, in 1888, and of Aston, Birmingham, and was appointed chaplain to the Bishop of Worcester in 1891. Mr. Knox was in 1894 a Hon. Canon of Worcester, rector of Philip's, Birmingham, Archdeacon of Birmingham, and Bishop Suffragan of the Diocese of Worcester (for Diocese of Worcester) married (1) in 1878, Ellen, daughter of the Rt. Rev. Thomas French, Bishop of Lahore (1892); (2) in 1895, Ethel of the Rev. Canon Newton, Redditch. Address: St. Philip's Birmingham.

L. Mrs., née Isa Craig, was born at Edinburgh, Oct. 17, 1831. At an early age she began to contribute anonymously to various literary periodicals, and at last her contributions to the Scotsman, under the signature "Isa," attracted notice, and led to her employment in the literary department of that journal. In 1857 she came to London, and was engaged by Mr. Hastings to edit the National Association for the Advancement of Social Science, to which she acted as secretary and literary assistant. After her marriage with her cousin, John Knox. In 1859 she won the prize for her Ode (against 620 competitors) recited at the Burns Centenary, and in 1865 published "Duchess of Devon and other poems. Among later works from her pen may be mentioned "The Consolation," 1874, and "Esther's story," which in 1880 was in its second edition. In 1892 selections of her works were edited by Dr. Japp.

KNUTSFORD, Viscount, The Hon. Henry Thurstan Holland, G.C.M.G., Knight of Justice of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, son of Sir Henry Holland, the physician, and President of the Institution of Great Britain, and daughter of James Caldwell, Wood, Staffordshire, was born Oct. 3, 1825, and educated at Harrow and Trinity College, Cambridge, taking his university degree in 1847. After the preliminary examinations he was called to the Bar in 1849 by the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple, and joined the Queen's Bench Circuit. Undertakings of a serious and delicate nature soon devolved upon him, and he was frequently employed by the Treasury, in conjunction with W. Stephenson, the late Mr. Hamilton, then Secretary to the Treasury, and the late Mr. George Arden, also attached to the same office, to reorganise the establishment of public offices, among the numbering the Ecclesiastical Commission, the Law Board, and the Woods and Forests Commission. In 1851 he was employed by the then Lord Chancellor in the onerous duty of drawing up the Bill, which, in 1852, became law under the name of the Common Law Procedure Act. This task he carried out under the direction of the late Mr. Justice Willes, and the Royal Commissioners. The Common Law Procedure Act of 1854

which followed the measure just mentioned, was the next work upon which Sir Henry Holland was engaged as draftsman. He was next employed by Lord Chief Baron Sir Fitzroy Kelly in drafting two of the criminal measures which became law in 24th and 25th Vict. The County Court Judgeship of Northumberland was offered him by Lord Campbell when Lord Chancellor, but the appointment was declined. Sir Henry continued to practise at the Bar until the beginning of the year 1867, when Lord Carnarvon selected him to fill the office of legal adviser to the Colonial Office. In 1870 he was promoted to an assistant under-secretaryship, and remained in that office until August 1874, when he resigned in order to stand for the borough of Midhurst; he was elected without a contest, and took his seat in the House of Commons in the following session. In 1885, after the borough of Midhurst was disfranchised, Sir H. T. Holland stood for the new borough of Hampstead, and beat his opponent, the Marquis of Lorne, by a large majority. In June 1885, when Lord Salisbury took office, Sir H. T. Holland accepted the post of Financial Secretary to the Treasury, and held that post till the September following, when he was appointed Vice-President of the Committee of Council on Education, and became a Privy Councillor. He was again returned for Hampstead in 1886, and again appointed Vice-President of the Council on Education. In January 1887 he was appointed Secretary of State for the Colonies, continuing in office till 1892, and as Secretary of State presided over the Colonial Conference which was held in London in 1887. In 1888 he was raised to the peerage, and took the title of Knutsford. In 1889 he carried through the House of Lords a Bill for giving a constitutional government to Western Australia, but it was rejected in the House of Commons. It was, however, passed in 1890 by both Houses. In 1895 he was created a Viscount. Lord Knutsford is a Bencher of the Inner Temple, a Deputy-Lieutenant of Middlesex, and a magistrate for the counties of Surrey and of the county of London. He is also a Trustee of the National Portrait Gallery. He married (1), in 1852, Elizabeth Margaret, daughter of Mr. N. Hibbert of Watford, and (2), in 1858, Margaret Jean, daughter of the late Sir Charles Trevelyan. Addresses: Pinewood, Witley, Godalming, Surrey; and Athenæum.

KOCH, Professor Dr. Robert, the eminent bacteriologist, was born at Klausthal, in Hanover, on Dec. 11, 1843. He studied medicine at the University of

Göttingen from 1862 to 1866, and having taken his degree was appointed assistant-surgeon in the General Hospital at Ham-burg, and afterwards practised privately at Langenhagen in Hanover, and at Rackewitz in Posen. In 1872, when District surgeon at Wallstein, he began his bacteriological investigations, and consequently was appointed in 1880 a member of the Imperial Board of Health. About that time he discovered a method of colouring microscopical preparations, by means of which he in 1882 isolated the tubercle bacillus, and produced tuberculosis by its inoculation in animals. In 1883 he was appointed a Privy Councillor, and given the direction of the German Cholera Commission, which visited Egypt and India. He then discovered the so-called "comma" cholera bacillus, and for his services received a gift of 100,000 marks (£5000). Two years later he went to France to make further investigations in regard to the cholera bacillus, and on his return was appointed Professor in Berlin University and Director of the Institute of Hygiene in Berlin. In 1891 he became an honorary Professor and Director of the New Institute for Infectious Diseases. At the beginning of the year 1890 he became famous for his discovery of the phthisis bacillus, and for a specific agent which arrests the ravages of the same. Invalids crowded to Berlin to be inoculated with Dr. Koch's lymph, of which the secret was closely kept. The German Government even sought to obtain a monopoly of its sale. The lymph was sent to various hospitals in Germany and abroad, notably to King's College, London. A committee of French doctors, however, visited Berlin in 1890 in order to study the newest Koch method, and announced, as a result of their investigations, that in several cases the lymph had aggravated the disease it was meant to cure. The celebrated Virchow also maintained that the injected lymph tended to produce centres of irritation. During the six years (1890-1896) work on the Koch cure and bacteria-caused disease has been going on steadily. In 1897 he said that, on the whole, his experiments led him to believe that perfect immunity from tuberculosis was brought about in two or three weeks after using the larger doses of his newer tuberculin; but he uttered an emphatic warning against unrealisable expectations. A patient who, in the natural course of things, has only a few more months to live can gain no benefit from his treatment; but with suitable cases he has had no failure. In 1896 he was summoned to Cape Colony to study the cattle plague (rinderpest) then raging in South Africa. In the next year he visited India to study the bubonic plague, which in German East Africa and India this plague was really a new disease. He claimed that the centres were in India, Hunan in China, Tibet, and Kismia, close to the Victoria Nile. He anticipated that within a short distance of time, the last plague would disappear. He has written on splenic fever and would KOHLRAUSCH, Friedrich German physicist, was born at Göttingen, Oct. 14, 1840, and is the son of Friedrich Kohlrausch, Professor of Physics at Langen. He was educated chiefly at his father, and at an early age he was appointed to the chair of Physics at Göttingen. He was promoted in 1870 to Zürich, Darmstadt, Würzburg, and finally appointed President of the Imperial Physical and Technical College at Charlottenburg. His chief works have been: "Leitfaden der praktischen Physik" of which the eighth edition was published at Leipzig in 1895; "Das Leitvermögen der Elektrolyte" (Leipzig, 1893, in conjunction with L. Holborn. He also contributes greatly to the Annalen der Physik. He is a member of the scientific societies of Berlin, Munich, St. Petersburg, and Haarlem, and of the Society of London. Address: 25, Charlottenburg.

KÖLLIKER, Rudolph Albrecht F.R.S., German physiologist and anatomist, was born at Zurich, July 6, 1817, and became Professor of Physiology at his native town in 1845. He was appointed to the chair of Anatomy at Würzburg in 1847. Among his chief works are "Manual of Human Histology," which was translated into English in 1854; and the Challenger report on P. tulida, 1880.

KOLTZOFF - MASSALSKY, Princess von, whose literary pseudonym is "Princess Dora d'Istria," was one of the daughters of Michael Ghika, and niece of Prince Gregory IV., who was the first spread among the people of Wallachia liberal institutions of civilisation. She was born at Bucharest in 1829, married in 1849 to the Russian Prince Koltzoff-Massalsky. Disliking the autocrat system of government in Russia, she quitted that country in 1855. She spent five years in Belgium and Switzerland, carefully studying the customs and laws, and, having made a tour through Greece, she went to Italy in 1861. At this period Garibaldi addressed to her a letter, requesting her to exert her influence over the Roumanians, to induce them to rise

TZE, ex-Chief-Justice of the South an Republic, is a Cape Dutchman by , has been called to the Bar at the r Temple, and has always been much vour of an English system in matters . He has translated into English, annotated Van Lieuwen's well-known an-Dutch text-book. He is now edit- he Transvaal Law Reports in 1881. f-Justice Kotze first came into noto- for condemning to death two high- robbers who had shot at a policeman. men were reprieved after the sentence been everywhere protested against. was dismissed by President Krüger in February 1898 for refusing to ply with the law of 1897, by the 4th on of which the judges were directed eat the resolutions of the Volksraad ws. He declared this to be a trespass he liberties of the people and an k on the independence of the country, more particularly of the voteless Uitlanders, whose property would depend absolutely on the pleasure of the majority of the Volksraad for the time being. He claimed for the Bench the so-called "Test- ing Right," i.e., the right to see whether laws passed by the Volksraad are in accordance with the provisions of the Grondwet, or written constitution. Mr. Kotze came to England in June 1898 to lay his case before the Colonial Secretary, by whom he was received most sym- pathetically.

KOUROPATKIN, Major-General, of the Russian army (sometimes spelled Koropatkin and Kuropatkin), is said to have been born in 1843, and was first famous as the chief of the staff to General Skobelev. He was left for dead at the Shipka Pass. After the Russo-Turkish war he wrote a book upon its operations. Although Skobelev's right-hand man, he held the rank of Captain only during the Russo-Turkish war; after which, however, he obtained the command of the light troops in Turkestan. He was again with Skobelev at the attack on Geok Tepe, where he had the rank of Colonel.

KOWALEWSKY, Alexander, F.R.S., embryologist, was born at Duna- burg, Nov. 19, 1840, and became Professor at St. Petersburg. He is known for his researches on the embryology of inverte- brates, which led to Haeckel's (q.v.) "Theory of the Gastrœa"; for his discovery of the true position of the Ascidians; and for investigations of the development of the Brachiopods. He was elected a Foreign Member of the Royal Society, and is now Professor at Odessa.

KRANTZ, Camille, French states- man, was born at Épinal in 1848. His father was a life Senator and Commis- sioner-General of the 1878 Exhibition. He studied at the École Polytechnique, and became an engineer. In 1893 he was elected deputy for his native town, Épinal, and acted as reporter on the last French Budget. In religious matters M. Camille Krantz is a Protestant. He entered official life on the offer of M. Dupuy, made in October 1898, to accept the portfolio of Minister of Public Works in the new Government which succeeded that of M. Brisson, and in May 1899 he succeeded M. de Freycinet on his resig- nation.

KREHL, Ludolf, is Professor of Arabic at Leipzig, and Chief Librarian of the University. For the past forty-eight years he has been editor of the Zeitschrift, the organ of the German Oriental Society, and has contributed many important papers to its pages. His principal work is the edition of Bukhary's "Corpus of Mohammedan Traditions." Other works by Professor Krehl are "The Religion of the Pre-Islamic Arabs," 1863; "Essays on the Koranic Doctrine of Predestination and Faith," 1877; "The Life of Mohammed," 1884, &c.

KROPOTKIN, Prince Petr Alexeievitch, a Russian revolutionist and geographer, was born at Moscow, Dec. 9, 1842. At the age of fifteen he entered the Corps of Pages at St. Petersburg, and was promoted Lieutenant in 1862. Attracted by the desire of travelling, he joined a regiment of Cossacks of the Amur, and spent five years in Eastern Siberia, first as Aide-de-Camp to the Military Governor of Transbaikalia, and, after 1863, as Attaché for Cossacks' Affairs to the Governor-General of Eastern Siberia. During these five years he thrice visited the Amur and Usuri, and made extensive journeys in Siberia and Mantchuria. In 1863 he crossed North Mantchuria from Transbaikalia to the Amur, via Merghen; in the same year he took part in the first steamer expedition up the Sungari to Ghirin. Accounts of these journeys, and several others, are published in the Memoirs of the Russian and the Siberian Geographical Society, from the former of which he received the Gold Medal. Promoted Captain in 1865, he returned in 1867 to St. Petersburg, and studied four years at the Mathematical Faculty of that University, and acted as Secretary to the Physical Geography Section of the Geographical Society. He then published the reports of his chief expeditions to the Olekma and Vitim Highlands, as well as a general sketch of the Orography of Eastern Siberia. In 1871 he was sent by this society to explore the glacial deposits in Finland and Sweden, the account of which is embodied in a larger work on the Glacial Period, the first volume of which was published by his brother Alexander, in the Memoirs of the Geographical Society, while he was confined in prison. In 1872 he paid a visit to Switzerland and Belgium, and became acquainted with the International Working-Men's Association, and joined the most advanced anarchist section of it. He returned to Russia and became a member of the widely-spread organisation of the Tchaykovtzy; was arrested in March 1874, and confined to the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, where he continued to write on the Glacial Period. He was transferred to the prison of the Military Hospital, and escaped on July 12, 1876, and went to England. The next year he rejoined, in Switzerland, the Federation of the International Working-Men's Association, and in February founded at Geneva the anarchist Révolution, now published in Paris. He fled from Switzerland in September, and stayed first for a few months at Thonon, while his wife passed her examination for a B.Sc., and then went to reside in London, where he roused an agitation against the Russian Government both in the Newcastle Chronicle, Fortnightly Review, and Nineteenth Century, and gave a series of lectures at Newcastle and London. In October 1882 he went again to Thonon, where he was arrested on Jan. 20, 1882. On Jan. 19, 1883, he was condemned by the Police Correctional Court at Lyons to five years' imprisonment for participation in the International Working-Men's Association. He was liberated on Jan. 15, 1886, by decree of the President of the French Republic. His anarchist papers contributed to the Révolution have been collected by Elisée Reclus, and were published in October 1885, in a separate volume under the title "Paroles d'un Révolté," which have had a wide circulation in the shape of pamphlets, in English, German, &c. His review articles on Russia were published in book form, in 1887, under the title "In Russian and French Prose." In 1892 appeared in French one of his latest nihilistic utterances, entitled "Recherche du Pain." He has written an article on Russia in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and in "Chambers's Encyclopædia." In 1896 he issued "L'Anarchisme, son philosophie, son idéal," which was translated into English in 1897. He also appeared his "The State: its History." Address: Bromley, Kent.

KRÜGER, Stephanus Jo Paulus, President of the South African Republic, was born at Rastenburg Colony, Oct. 10, 1825. With his family, and fellow-Boers he took part in the Great Trek of 1836-37, and settled at Natal, the Orange Free State, and the Transvaal. When quite a boy he was a spectator of the battles in which the advancing Boers drove the Matabele, Moselikatse, father of Lobengula, and the Limpopo. In his youth he was renowned as a fine game shot and a fast runner. He shot great quantities of animals in the uncultivated country, and was converted by the Boers. He became a member of the strictest sect of the Dutch Reformed Church, and distinguished himself, like the P. O. Old, as a preacher. The Bible was his sole education, and considering the Boer ideals were, he needed became a Field Cornet, District Commandant, and Commandant, and in 1872 became a Member of the Executive Council under President Burgers, and was then distinguished for coolness, courage, and common-sense. In the war against England in 1881 he was chosen Chief of the Provisional Government, and his post was made permanent in 1883, when he was elected President of the South African Republic for five years. He was re-elected in 1888 and 1893. On the occasion of Jameson's Raid and the abortive insurrection in Johannesburg (1896), his masterly display of what his enemies called "diplomacy," and what many good judges regarded as diplomacy, he succeeded in preventing the Uitlanders, or what he considered "hunting" foreigners, from acquiring rights with the Boers, his old compatriotes. He was humane and moderate on more than one occasion during the days succeeding the Raid. In the Transvaal he demanded an indemnity for the Raid of £600,000 for material damage and £1,000,000 for "moral damage," besides a small sum of odd shillings and pence, which excited the mirth of those who failed to see the satire involved in a scrupulously accurate bill of costs. In January 1898 he was re-elected for the second time by an overwhelming majority, winning more than 12,800 votes, while Schalk Burger polled only 3700, and Paul Kruger 2001. As the white population numbers 180,000, and the total number of votes polled was only 18,600, this gives an idea of the oligarchic character of what is really a seventeenth-century Dutch republic. A statue has been erected to President Kruger at Pretoria. A characteristic of the man and his reign is that Mrs. Kruger's especial wish should have been respected, and that the ugly chimney-pot, should have been removed and roofless, so that rain-water may collect there and afford solace to thirsty birds. He is called "Oom Paul" by his adoring subjects, and is a typical Boer in appearance and mind. His supporters regard him as a strong, sincere man, a type out of seventeenth-century Holland, who has struggled successfully against usurping despots, and retained the independence of his little fatherland against overwhelming odds. His official income is £7000 per annum, besides innumerable allowances. At Hazelrigg of old, he has already amassed a very large fortune, but the publicity of his life and surroundings renders his wealth a superfluity.

WANG-HSU, Emperor of China, may be likened to Joseph II. of Austria. He was born on Aug. 15, 1871, and is a nephew of the late Emperor Tung-Chih, and nephew of his predecessor Hsien-Feng, and succeeded to the throne on Jan. 12, 1875, previously, in accordance with Chinese custom, having taken the name of Tsai-t'ien. His Kwo Hao, or reigning name, is, however, the above. Until he was twenty-one he was under the regency of his aunt, Tze-hsi (q.v.), the Empress-Dowager, who, although sprung from the dregs of the people, is admitted to be a woman of great energy and ability. She has often been compared to Catherine the Great, and the analogy is not infelicitous, in regard to her greed of power, extravagance, and other characteristics. In July 1898 the German Emperor presented Kwang-Hsu with the Order of the Black Eagle set in diamonds. For some time past he had been much influenced by one of his advisers, Kang-Yu-Wei, the Cantonese reformer, who persuaded him to issue a decree ordering his people to cut off their pig-tails, assume foreign dress, and adopt a curious form of Christianity which he had evolved from the teaching of the English missionaries, and had afterwards corrected in accordance with the teachings of Confucius. The Emperor's reforming decrees amount to some two hundred perhaps, and evince a sincere desire for the reform of a corrupt bureaucracy. One of the most important edicts was issued in August 1898, and abolished the time-honoured system of literary essays in ancient subjects which constitute the examinations for governorships, &c. The essays, the edict provided, were in future to deal with practical modern subjects, and the highest examination of all was to be held in the Emperor's presence. Calligraphy, which in China implies a scholar's knowledge of words, was in future not to be insisted on on the ground of its being "an empty accomplishment." Another very important reform, promulgated in June, provided that members of the Imperial family should in future be sent abroad to travel and study. A college of foreign literature and science at Peking was also projected, and education was in many ways to be popularised. In April 1898 the Empress-Dowager openly threatened to dethrone him if he persisted in these schemes of reform. However, in July, he promulgated a decree, the effect of which was to close about two-thirds of the Buddhist temples throughout the Empire. The Empress warned him that he was going too fast, throwing thousands of officials into idleness, and getting himself detested by the old Manchu aristocracy. On Sept. 21, 1898, by a coup d'état, in conjunction with Li Hung Chang (q.v.), she seized the reins of power, arrested the young Emperor's reforming advisers, and sequestered him within the precincts of the Summer Palace at Peking. L-POOLE, Stanley, born in a, Dec. 18, 1854, eldest son of E. S. of the Science and Art Department died in 1867), was educated under rection of his great-uncle, E. W. the Orientalist, and proceeded to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, whence he took his B.A. degree in 1878, M.A. 1895. As early as 1870 his studies had been turned towards numismatics by his uncle, R. S. Poole, the Keeper of Coins in the British Museum, and in 1872 he published his first treatise on Arabic Coins in the Chronicle of the Numismatic Society. In 1874 he was appointed by the Trustees of the British Museum to write the official "Catalogue of the Oriental Coins" in the national collection ; the work appeared in 8 vols., 1875-83, and was couronné by the French Institute. Three volumes of a subsequent "Catalogue of Indian Coins" were published in 1884-92, and 2 vols. of "Additions to the Oriental Collection" in 1890. A "Catalogue of the Arabic Glass Weights in the British Museum," making the fourteenth volume of catalogue, followed in 1891 ; and a "Catalogue of the Mohammedan Coins in the Bodleian" was published in 1888. He has also printed 4 vols. of collected papers on Arabic Numismatics, 1875-93. On the death of Mr. Lane, in 1876, the duty of completing his great Arabic Lexicon devolved on his grand-nephew, who brought out vols. 6-8, between 1877 and 1893, and published a "Life of E. W. Lane" in the former year. In 1883 he was sent to Egypt by the Science and Art Department, for which he wrote a handbook of the "Art of the Saracens," 1886. With a view to collecting materials for a Corpus of Mohammedan numismatics, he visited Russia in 1886, and examined the coin cabinets of Stockholm, St. Petersburg, and Constantinople. In 1888 he published in 2 vols. the "Life of Stratford Canning, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe," from the ambassador's private and official papers, of which a popular edition appeared in 1890 ; and in the latter year he edited the despatches of Sir G. F. Bowen, the colonial governor, and published a memoir of Sir Richard Church, the generalissimo of the Greeks in the War of Independence. His next biography (1894) was the "Life of Sir Harry Parkes, late Minister to China and Japan," in which Mr. F. V. Dickins collaborated ; and his latest is a "Life of Saladin," now at press. He is at present engaged upon a "History of Mohammedan India" and a biography of the Emperor Bābar. His chief works, besides those already mentioned, are "Speeches and Table-talk of the Prophet Mohammed" (Golden Treasury Series) ; and "Le Koran, sa Poésie et ses Lois" (Bibliothèque Elzévirienne), 1882 ; "Arabian Society in the Middle Ages," "Studies in a Mosque," 1883 (2nd edit., 1893) ; "Picturesque Egypt" (edited by Sir C. Wilson), and "Social Life in Egypt," 1883 ; "Prose Writings of Jona-

In all he has published about sixty volumes. He also contributed to the "Encyclopædia Britannica," "Chamber's Encyclopædia," the "Dictionary of National Biography," and weekly critical reviews: and is a member of the Russian Archaeological and other learned societies, and an honorary member of the Egyptian Commission for the preservation of the monuments of Arab art. During two visits to Cairo in 1895 and 1897 he wrote a "Catalogue of the Coins in the Khedivial Library" there, and was instrumental in obtaining, through Lord Cromer's influence, a large increase in the Egyptian grant for the preservation of the Arab monuments, on which his report was presented to Parliament in the Egyptian Bluebook for 1898. He married, in 1879, Charlotte Bell, second daughter of the late David Wilson, of Ballymoney, co. Antrim, and niece of Gen. Fr. R. Chesney, R.A. Addresses: 3 Newnham Road, Bedford; and Athenæum.

LANG, Andrew, M.A., Hon. LL.D., critic, poet, and anthropologist, son of John Lang and Jane Pienderleath Sellar, was born at Selkirk, Mar. 31, 1844, and educated at the Edinburgh Academy, St. Andrews University, and Balliol College, Oxford, where he gained first classes in Classical Moderations and the Final Schools. In 1868 he was elected a Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. In 1888 he was appointed Gifford Lecturer at St. Andrews University on Natural Religion, and delivered his inaugural address on Jan. 17, 1889. He has published, in verse, "Ballades in Blue China," 1881; and "Helen of Troy," 1882; "Rhymes à la Mode," 1884; and "Grass of Parnassus," 1888; and, in prose, "Custom and Myth," 1884; "Myth, Ritual, and Religion," 1887. Although petition was unsuccessful, the Government in curious contrast to their previous promising attitude, soon after sanctioned the opening of classes for history, mathematics, and literature for women students at the Victoria Lyceum, which was to be lent to university study, and by the capacities of women for serious work were to be tested. A further step is a realisation of Frl. Lange's plan of the opening of an institution where girls might receive instruction in those branches of science which are the indispensable basis for any profession. These classes, called Real-kurse (comprising mathematics, chemistry, natural sciences, political economy, and languages), were opened in October 1889, in the presence of the press Frederick, on which occasion Lange delivered an address on the utility of training women's faculties, which is greater in our day than it has been before. The advancement of women's education and culture is Frl. Lange's one aim and object, to which she devotes every other interest subservient. She is identified with every movement designed to strengthen the capacities of women and to widen their spheres of influence and usefulness. The small band of women who are working for a near solution of the Woman's Question in Germany are rearing rapidly, and their eyes are bright with hope and confidence on Frl. Lange, who has shown ability and courage and initiative where it is necessary.

LANGEVIN, The Hon. Sir Hector Q.C., K.C.M.G., C.B., LL.D., born at Quebec, Aug. 25, 1826, was educated at the Seminary in his native city, studied law at Montreal, and was called to the bar in 1850. He was created Q.C. March 30, 1864. He was for some time chief clerk of the Mélanges Religieux, Montreal; afterwards one of the editors of Le Courrier du Canada, Quebec, and wrote Le Droit Administratif des Paroisses, or Official Laws and Customs of Lower Canada, 1862 (second enlarged edition, 1882). Mr. Langevin, elected Mayor of Quebec in December 1857, was re-elected in 1858 and 1859, has filled the chair of History at the Institut Canadien, and has been President of the St. Jean Baptiste Society of Quebec. He was elected January 2, 1858, Member of the Provincial Parliament, by the County of Dorchester, and has always supported the Conservative party. In 1864 Mr. Langevin became Solicitor-General for Lower Canada, with a seat in the Cabinet in Sir E. P. Tache's Administration, and exchanged the former office for the Postmaster-Generalship in November 1866. He was one of the Canadian delegates to the conference at Prince Edward Island on the question of the Confederation of the British North American Provinces in the summer of 1866, and afterwards to the Quebec Conference, and repaired to London with other commissioners towards the end of that year, in order to complete the arrangements. On the organisation of the Dominion Cabinet in 1867, Mr. Langevin became a Privy Councillor, Secretary of State of Canada, Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, and Registrar-General; and in November 1869 exchanged that office for that of Minister of Public Works, which he retained until the fall of the Macdonald Government in 1873. At the General Elections of 1878 he was returned for Three Rivers (which he still represents), and was sworn in as Postmaster-General in the Liberal-Conservative Government of that year. This portfolio he resigned, in May 1879, for that of the Ministry of Public Works, which he continued to fill until he resigned the office in August 1891. He was made a C.B. after the arrangements for the organisation of the Dominion Government, and in 1881 had the order of K.C.M.G. conferred upon him. He is also a Knight Commander of the Roman Order of St. Gregory the Great, and LL.D. of Laval University. In 1851 he married Justine, daughter of Colonel Fetu.

LANGFORD, John Alfred, LL.D., was born at Birmingham, Sept. 12, 1823, and was educated at the Mechanics' Institute, but in 1851 took private lessons in classics and mathematics from Prof. Lund, at Queen's College in that town. His first public work was to take a very active part in securing Aston Hall and Park for the people, for which he was presented to the Queen, when her Majesty performed the opening ceremony on June 15, 1858. He was an original Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, a post which he resigned in 1877. He was a Member of the Birmingham Free Libraries Committee, 1864-74; and teacher of English Literature in the Birmingham and Midland Institute, 1868-74. In 1875-76 he visited Australia and the United States, and the results of his travels were published in a series of articles in the Birmingham Weekly Post in 1876. He was elected a Member of the Birmingham School Board in 1874, and re-elected in 1876, 1879, 1882, 1885, and 1888. In 1891 he retired, having been a Member of the Board for seventeen years. In 1892 he was elected a Member of the Yardley School Board, and was appointed Chairman of the Attendance and Appeals Committee, but was not a candidate for re-election in 1895. He has been a meetings of the Birmingham Archæological Society, published in its Transactions; and is the author of several pamphlets on current topics. The honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Greenville and Tusculum College in 1869. Address: Astley House, Fernley Road, Sparkhill, Birmingham.

LANGLEY, John Newport, M.A. D.Sc., F.R.S., was born at Newbury on Nov. 10, 1852. He is the second son of John Langley, by his wife, Mary Groom, eldest daughter of Richard Groom, formerly Assistant-Secretary in the Tax Department, Somerset House. Mr. Langley's earlier education was carried on partly at home and partly at the Exeter Grammar School. In October 1871 he entered at St. John's College, Cambridge; was elected a Foundation Scholar in May 1874; and obtained a first class in the Natural Science Tripos in December of the same year. n at Roxbury, Boston, Mass., . Upon graduating from the School he devoted himself to civil engineering, and then to architecture, but soon abandoned these professions for astronomy. In 1863 he went to Europe, and upon his return to America in 1865 became an assistant in the U. S. Naval Observatory. He remained there, only for a few months, being appointed professor of Mathematics at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. In 1887 he was Director of the Observatory of the Western University of Pennsylvania (at Allegheny); and in 1887 was appointed Assistant-Director of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, succeeding to the full duties in November 1887. Secretary of the Institution has accompanied many of the expeditions sent out by the U. S. Government to observe eclipses of the sun in various parts of the world, the study of which has been one of the work to which he has devoted himself, and by which he has become known. Besides his lectures and travels in America, he in 1885 lectured at the Royal Institution in London, made an address before the Association for the Advancement of Science at Southampton. He received, in 1885, the first Henry Draper medal of the National Academy of Sciences, and in 1887 the Rumford medals of the Royal Society of London and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is a member of many scientific societies, American and European, and a corresponding member of the Institute of France. The degree of LL.D. was conferred on him by Harvard University in 1885, and by other institutions of America, as by that of D.C.L. by Oxford in 1885. In addition to his numerous strictly scientific papers, he published in 1884-85 The New Astronomy some more popular.

N, John, F.R.C.S., received his medical education at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and became M.S. in 1861, and M.D. in 1865. He is a Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in England, and has been Vice-President and Professor of the Royal College of Surgeons in England, and a Member of the Examiners. He is Surgeon in Chief on Clinical Surgery at his hospital, and surgeon to a number of other institutions. He is Fellow of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, and of the Medical Societies of London. In the Transactions and Journal of the Royal Society he has contributed papers on "Hernia," &c. He is the author to Heath's "Dictionary of Surgery," and has edited Holden's "Manual of Dissection." Address: 62 Harley Street, W.

LANGTRY, Lillie, actress, is the daughter of the Rev. W. C. Le Breton, Dean of Jersey, and was born in 1852. In 1874 she was married to Mr. Langtry, a native of Belfast, and about 1881, after having been for some years celebrated for her beauty in London society, determined to go on the stage. Mrs. Langtry made her first public appearance on Dec. 15, 1881, at the Haymarket Theatre, in "She Stoops to Conquer." In January of the following year Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft engaged Mrs. Langtry to play at the Haymarket Theatre, and she appeared in the character of Blanche Haye in Robertson's play of "Ours." She appeared as Rosalind in "As You Like It," at the Imperial Theatre, on Sept. 23, 1882, and subsequently went to America. Mrs. Langtry has twice leased the Prince's Theatre (now the Prince of Wales's Theatre). At the end of the summer season of 1885 she went once more to America, and in 1887 became a naturalised citizen of the United States. In 1891 she leased the Princess's Theatre in London, and appeared as Cleopatra in "Antony and Cleopatra." Her husband died under melancholy circumstances in 1897.

LANSDELL, The Rev. Henry is known as author, editor, &c. of the Practical divine. He was born at Leicester on Jan. 10, 1841, received his education from his father, and subsequently studied at St. John's College, Highbury, whence he was educated 1867 to the Curacy of Greenwich. In 1868 he was appointed Metropolitan Secretary to the Society for Missions, and during the following years preached and spoke in twelve countries, forty countries, and in about a hundred churches, &c. In 1870, and, as honorary secretary, was principal worker in founding the Homiletical Society, which had for object the improvement in practical pastoral work of the younger clergy candidates for Holy Orders, and brought within its membership of about one-fifth of the English clergy in connection with the foregoing society, originated, and for twelve years was the editor of the Clergyman's Magazine, of which about 300,000 copies were circulated, and edited also about the same time.

miletical and Pastoral Lectures," three Lectures on Preaching, delivered in St. Paul's Cathedral." Dr. Lansdell is widely known as a traveller and author. It occurred to him to make his days a means of philanthropic and religious usefulness, partly by the erection of hospitals and prisons, and partly by the distribution therein, and the sale, of religious literature. Accordingly he visited in 1874 prisons in America, Finland, Russia, and Poland; Norway, Sweden, and both shores of the Gulf of Bothnia; in 1877, during the Russo-Turkish War, Austria-Hungary, Rumania, and Slavonia; and in 1878 St. Petersburg and Archangel. The foregoing journeys, each of a few weeks only, which he was asked whether he would do something for Siberia. This led in 1870 to his traversing the Eastern Hemisphere in a tolerably straight line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, crossing America, and returning in seven months finishing the circuit of the world. Another journey of five months took him, in 1882, through Russian Central Asia, including Kuldja, Bokhara, Samarkand, and this was followed by a third journey, in 1885, through the kingdoms of Europe. Among the results of these journeys may be mentioned in gross the distribution in public libraries and elsewhere of about 150,000 copies of Bibles, in twenty languages, and in particular the providing at least one copy of the portion of Holy Scripture for the room of every hospital and prison throughout Siberia, Russian Central Asia, and, less completely, the Caucasus and certain parts of European Russia. Results of these travels have appeared in the form of 100 newspapers and magazines, also in two vols., published 1882, entitled "Through Siberia" (now as one volume in its fifth edition), and translated into German, Swedish, and Danish; also, in 1885, "Russian Central Asia," in two vols., translated likewise into German, and condensed into one volume, published in 1886 and entitled "Through Central Asia; an Appendix on the Russo-Afghan War." As a parochial clergyman, in 1870 he went to his curacy at Greenwich. Dr. Lansdell served as Assistant Minister of the German Church, Blackheath, in 1880-82; in 1885-86 was in sole charge of St. Andrew's, Eltham; after leaving which he asked whether he would "come out and lead the way" by a Pioneer Mission to Mongolia towards Tibet. This was the last and greatest of his honorary journeys, namely, of 950 days, through five of the kingdoms of Europe, Africa, and every kingdom of Asia, the course of which he distributed Bibles in eleven languages through five new countries, and also came in contact with about 400 missionaries, residing at 170 mission stations, in 110 localities, and working under fifty societies. He also collected some few thousands of specimens of the fauna of Russian and Chinese Turkistan. In 1892 Dr. Lansdell was appointed by the trustees Chaplain of Morden College, Blackheath, S.E. In the same year he married Mary Ann, eldest child of Charles and Mary Ann Colyer, of Farningham and Greenhithe, and proceeded on a tour to Spain and Portugal, thereby completing his visits to every kingdom of Asia and Europe. In 1893 he published another considerable work, in two volumes, entitled "Chinese Central Asia: a Ride to Little Tibet," a record of part of his last journey in Asia. Dr. Lansdell was elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society in 1876, and in 1880 became a member of the General Committee of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, before the annual meeting of which, at Swansea, he read a paper. In 1882 he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Archbishop of Canterbury, confirmed by Her Majesty's letters patent. He is, by invitation of the Council, member of the Victoria Institute, member of the Royal Asiatic, and sundry other societies. Address: Morden College, Blackheath, S.E.

LANSDOWNE, Marquis of, The Right Hon. Henry Charles Keith Petty-Fitzmaurice, K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G., D.C.L., LL.D., late Viceroy and Governor-General of India, eldest son of the 4th Marquis of Lansdowne, K.G., by his second wife, the Hon. Emily Jane, eldest daughter of the Comte de Flahault and the Baroness Keith and Nairne, was born Jan. 14, 1845. He was educated at Eton and at Balliol College, Oxford (M.A. 1884; Hon. D.C.L. 1888; Hon. LL.D. Camb.; Hon. LL.D. McGill University, Canada, 1884), and was formerly a Captain in the Wilts Yeomanry Cavalry. He succeeded his father in the Marquisate and other titles in 1866. Lord Lansdowne was a Lord of the Treasury from 1868 to 1872, and Under-Secretary for War from the latter date till 1874. He was appointed Under-Secretary for India when Mr. Gladstone took office again in 1880, but retired two months afterwards (July 8), owing to a disagreement with the Government on the subject of the Compensation for Disturbance (Ireland) Bill. In May 1883 the Queen approved the appointment of Lord Lansdowne as Governor-General of Canada, in succession to the Marquis of Lorne, who retired in October of that year, on the completion of the period for which he was appointed. Lord

Lansdowne was created G.C.M.G. a few months later. At the expiration of his term of office as Governor-General of Canada (the chief events of which were the suppression of Riel's rebellion in the North-West, the execution of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the satisfactory settlement of the long-standing controversy concerning the North American Fisheries). Lord Lansdowne was appointed by her Majesty Viceroy and Governor-General of India. His Excellency took his seat at Calcutta on Dec. 10, 1888. In December 1893 he was succeeded by the Earl of Elgin. He was appointed a Trustee of the National Gallery in 1894. In July 1895 he was appointed Secretary of State for War. His lordship is a magistrate for Wiltshire, and also for the county of Kerry. He married, in 1869, Lady Maud Evelyn Hamilton, youngest daughter of the first Duke of Abercorn. Addresses: Lansdowne House, Berkeley Square, W.; Bowood Park, Calne, Wilts; and Athenæum.

LA RAMÉE, Mdle. Louise de, commonly known to her readers as "Ouida," was born at Bury St. Edmunds in 1840. At a very early age she commenced authoress, and contributed to Colburn's New Monthly. She has written a large number of popular novels, some of which possess high literary charm. Of these the principal are "Held in Bondage," 1863; "Chandos," 1866; "Idalia," 1867; "Under Two Flags," 1867; "Folle Farine," 1871; "In a Winter City," 1876; "In Maremma," 1882; "Bimbi" (stories for children), 1882; "Wanda," 1883; "Othmar," "Guilderoy," 1889; "Signa," 1875; "Moths," 1880; "Syrlin," "Rufino," "Santa Barbara," "The Tower of Taddeo," "Two Offenders" (tales), 1894; "Le Selve," 1896; "The Massarenes," and "Toxin, an Altruist," 1897. "Ouida" lives in Florence, and is a well-known figure in Anglo-Florentine circles. Her novels deal with all phases of European society, and the scenes of many of them are laid in Italy.

LARMOR, Joseph, M.A. (Camb.), D.Sc. (Univer. Lond.), D.Sc. (Roy. Univer. Ireland), F.R.S., was born in 1857, being the eldest son of the late Hugh Larmor of Magheragall, Lisburn, Co. Antrim, and was educated at the Royal Belfast Academical Institution, at Queen's College Belfast, and at St. John's College Cambridge. He has been a Fellow of St. John's College Cambridge since 1880, and University Lecturer in Mathematical Physics since 1885. From 1880 to 1885 he filled the chair of Natural Philosophy in Queen's College Galway, and in the Queen's University in Ireland, and for some years he was a Fellow of the Royal Society. He is at present Examiner in Natural and Natural Philosophy at the University of London; a Governor of the Birmingham; Treasurer of the Royal Society; Vice-President of the Philosophical Society; and a member of the Council of the Royal Society. He has published memoirs on various subjects of mathematics, and contributed to the publications of these societies in other journals. Address: Trinity College, Cambridge.

LASCELLES, The Right Hon. Frank Cavendish, G.C.F.S., late Right Hon. William Lascelles, M.P., third son of the late Sir Harewood, and of Lady Catherine Howard, daughter of the Duke of Exeter. Born in 1841, he entered the Diplomatic Service at the age of 18, and soon afterwards appointed to the Legation of Madrid. Until 1878 he filled various subordinate posts in Paris, Berlin, Copenhagen, Rome, Washington, and in all these varied positions he showed the character of an able, painstaking diplomatist, especially when he acted as Chargé d'Affaires. In 1878 and 1879 he was on several occasions for several months, and Consul-General in Egypt. His capacity convinced his superiors of his fitness for higher and more independent spheres of action. In 1880 he was sent to Bulgaria in November and displayed in that difficult position much ability and discretion. In 1881 he was made a K.C.M.G. In 1887, was appointed to the post of Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at Bucharest. Thence, in July 1891, he was transferred to the Court of Teheran, succeeding Drummond Wolff there as Minister Plenipotentiary. His activity at Teheran and in Persia caused him to be so much appreciated by the Foreign Office that he was appointed to one of the most important posts in the Diplomatic Service. He was made Ambassador to St. Petersburg at the close of 1893, in succession to late Sir Robert Morier. In 1895 he was appointed to Berlin. He married Mary, daughter of the late Sir John Lubbock, M.D. Lady Lascelles died at Berlin in April 1897. Address: German Embassy, Berlin.

LASKER, Emanuel, chess champion of the world and of England, was born Dec. 24, 1868, at Berlinchen, in Prussia, and received a university education and Göttingen. When only fifteen years of age he entered seriously on the study of chess, and won a first prize in a Berlin tournament. He won a first prize at the Graz International Chess Tournament in 1890. He gave exhibition matches in London in 1891, and in 1892 won the first prize at the National Chess Tournament. In the now celebrated triangular match against Messrs. Steinitz, Burnes, Bird, Gunsberg, and Mason, he won the first prize with 6½ games out of 10. He toured in America from 1892 onwards, and beat Steinitz by ten games to five, of which four were won. He studied mathematics in his spare days, and has won three international chess championships, that of England in 1892, of America in 1894, and of the whole playing world in 1897. He has won many first prizes in chess tournaments, and has published several works on chess and on mathematical subjects. Address: 71 Chiswell Street, E.C.

LASSALLE, Jean, French baritone, born in 1859, and was educated as an actor, but gave up that career and entered the Conservatoire. His success was great, for he is a consummate actor, as a singer of high rank. He takes pains with a part, ransacking every library to study Hamlet, becoming a specialist to play Polyeucte, and studying geology before undertaking Aïda. He is a frequent performer at Covent Garden, and is a great favourite with the audiences.

LATEY, John, F.J.I., editor of the Illustrated Paper, was born in London, Oct. 30, 1842, and is the only son of the late John Lash Latey, who for many years edited the Illustrated London News. Both his parents were Devonians, and he received his early education at Exeter. He has been practically all his life a journalist. He joined the Penny Illustrated Paper when it was started by the proprietors of the Illustrated London News in October 1861, and has worked for it ever since, latterly as art and literary editor. To the columns of the Illustrated News, to which his paper is still attached, he has contributed largely, having succeeded the late Mr. Spellen as writer of Parliamentary sketch for that paper. In the rise of the Parnellite party in the House of Commons, he was well known in the Gallery as "The Silent Member," which pseudonym he composed his Parliamentary articles. For several years he contributed to the Penny Illustrated a series of articles, signed "The Lion." These were in great part witty and amusing satires on the follies and vices of the age. "Bird's-eye Views," in the same paper, were also devised by him, in collaboration with Mr. Harry Furniss. Mr. Latey has been a busy novelette writer, the Christmas Annuals of the Penny Illustrated Paper having been largely the work of his pen. He has also written a comedietta, "The Rose of Hastings," a "Life of General Gordon," and translations of Dumas' "Mohicans of Paris" (Routledge), and Paul Féval's "Fils du Diable," which in its English dress appeared as "The Three Red Knights." Mr. Latey was one of the founders of the London Press Club, and is a Fellow of the Journalists' Institute. Address: 10 Milford Lane, Strand, W.C.

LA THANGUE, H. H., A.R.A., was educated at Dulwich College, the Academy Schools, and the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris. His methods are rather French than English, and his broad realistic manner marks him out as one of the future leaders of a new school of English landscape art. He was elected A.R.A. in 1898, and of late years has exhibited the following Royal Academy pictures: "The Last Furrow" and "Clearing the Orchard," 1895; "A Little Holding," "In a Cottage Garden," and "The Man with the Scythe" (a most noteworthy allegorical picture), 1896; "A Summer Morning," "Travelling Harvesters" (a very fine painting), and "Gleaners," 1897; "Nightfall," "Bracken," "Harvesters at Supper," and "A Sussex Cider-Press," 1898; "Cider Apples," "Cutting Bracken," "Harrowing," and "Love in the Harvest Field," 1899. Address: Grafton, Petworth, Sussex.

LAUGHTON, John Knox, M.A., was born in Liverpool on April 23, 1830, and was educated at the Royal Institution School, Liverpool, and at Caius College, Cambridge. Appointed a Naval Instructor in 1853, he was present in the Baltic during the Russian War of 1854-55, and served in China during the second war of 1856-59, where he obtained a medal and three clasps. He subsequently served in the Mediterranean and the Channel, and was in 1866 appointed Mathematical and Naval Instructor at the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth. In 1873 he was transferred to Greenwich, in the same capacity, where he also lectured on Meteorology; and in 1876 he became Lecturer on Naval History at the same institution. Professor Laughton was in 1885 elected to the chair of Modern History at King's College, London, and in 1895 became an Hon. Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. He acted as President of the Royal Meteorological Society from 1882 to 1884. He is the author of "Physical Geography in its Relation to the Prevailing Winds and Currents," 1870; "A Treatise on Nautical Surveying," 1872; "Studies in Naval History," 1887; "Naval History," 1888; "Action Series," 1871; "Companions in Arms," 1872; edited "Memoirs of Lord Nelson," 1874; "Torrington," 1880; "Despatches of Lord Nelson," 1881; "The Spanish Armada," 1882; "Memoirs of Lord Nelson," 1883. Address: King's College, London.

LAURIER, The Right Hon. Wilfrid, Canadian statesman. Born at St. Lin, Quebec, Nov. 20, 1855. Educated at L'Assomption College, and law at McGill University, where he was admitted to the Bar in 1874. In 1874 he was in the Quebec militia, then entered the Dominion Militia, and in 1877 was appointed Minister of Revenue in the Mackenzie government, a position which he held until the fall of the Ministry in 1878. Mr. Laurier then edited Le Devoir, a daily paper, in the name of Mr. Blake for a short time, and in 1887, Mr. Laurier was again recognized as the head of the Canadian wing of that party, and was chosen to succeed Mr. Mackenzie in the general election in 1896, which was successful, and he was sworn in as President of the Privy Council that year. Notwithstanding his position he was able to settle the School question in such a way as to remove it from the domain of politics. In 1897 he took part in the London Diamond Jubilee, being elected to represent Mother Country in almost all his fine and romantic person. He headed the Colonial statesmen in the Jubilee Procession being at the head. As an orator he took first place. He advocated a closer union between Britain and her colonies and better trade arrangements, and at that time was approaching a time when pride and aspiration would demand as a right their share of broader citizenship which would embrace the whole empire, and whose seat is the Palace of Westminster. He also received with unusual honor the President of France and His Holiness the Pope. On his return to Canada he received splendid receptions in all the cities of his native land, where great enthusiasm was shown. He was in 1898 created a Commissioner for the settled territories in dispute between Canada and the United States. He was sworn in as a member of the Privy Council and created a Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George in the same year the honorary LL.D. was conferred on him by the University and also by Queen's University of Kingston. Honorary degrees ford and Cambridge University, and he was appointed to the Legion of Honour in

Henri Léon Émile, is the son of a famous novelist under the Second Empire, born at Orleans in April 1844. He was educated at the Lycée Louis le Grand, and immediately took up letters. He started by writing several smart Parisian papers, le Paris, Le Gil Blas, and in which he displayed talents of wit and mordant satire. He has since been reprinted in several works with the titles "Mam'selle" "Petites Fêtes," &c. But he has been on the stage. His first début at the Théâtre-Français was in a comedy in four acts, entitled "L'Amille" (May 1890), for which he won the Thoirac prize of the Académie. Two years later he wrote a satirical drama, "Les Deux Femmes," the subject was to contrast the life of the great aristocratic families of the past with the present, but it was refused, but, under the title "Le Prince d'Auree," it was produced at the Vaudeville (Paris) with immense success. In April 1894 he was elected to the Odéon, and in 1895 his "Viveurs" was produced at the Vaudeville. On Dec. 8, 1895, he was elected a Member of the Académie. He is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour, and his Paris address is 5 Rue d'Astorg.

He entered the Polytechnic in 1852, and in 1855 he was appointed to the Lycées of Versailles. He became a docteur ès lettres and a Professor of Modern History at the Sorbonne in 1888. He was elected to the French Academy in 1895 in the place of Admiral Jurien de la Gravière, having been created a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour in 1887. He is remarkable both for the lucidity and the elementary historical text-book quality of his historical writing. His chief study has been the history of France and the close relation between the present policy with its past. His works are: "Études sur l'Histoire de France," 1879; "Essais sur l'Allemagne," 1887; "La Jeunesse du Grand Frédéric," 1891; "Trois Empereurs d'Allemagne," 1888; studies of William I., Frederick III., and William II. Amongst his historical text-books may be cited: "Sully," 1880; "Histoire de France," 1890; and "La Première Année d'Histoire de France," 1876. He wrote an introduction to a translation of Professor Freeman's "Historical Geography of Europe," and he has written essays on university questions. He is a frequent writer in the Revue des Deux Mondes and the Revue de l'Enseignement Supérieur. His Paris address is 5 Rue de Médicis.

LAW, William Arthur, dramatist, was born on 22nd March 1844 at North Repps Rectory, near Cromer, Norfolk, his father being the Rev. Patrick Comerford Law, Rector of North Repps, and his mother Frances, daughter of the Right Rev. Alexander Arbuthnot, Bishop of Killaloe. His family is the Irish branch of the Scotch family of the Laws of Lauriston, which branch went over to Ireland with "Strongbow" in 1166, and his ancestor, Sir Michael Law, fought under William of Orange at the battle of the Boyne in 1690; and another ancestor, Lord Danganmore, fought on the opposite side for James, his title and estates being afterwards forfeited for high treason. He was educated at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and in 1864 obtained a commission in the 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, in which regiment he served at home and in Burma for eight years. In 1872 he went on the stage, his first engagement being at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh. After acting in the provinces and at the Surrey Theatre for two years he joined Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's Company in 1874, and was connected with it for five years. In 1877 he married Miss Fanny Holland of the same company, and from 1879 to 1881 he and his wife gave an entertainment of their own throughout the country. In 1881 Arthur Law was engaged at the Savoy Theatre, when he retired from the stage and devoted himself solely to writing plays. His first piece, "A Night Surprise," was produced at the German Reeds' entertainment on Feb. 12, 1877. He wrote 19 plays for the German Reeds, and up to the present has also produced 20 plays in the London theatres. At German Reeds' we may mention: "A Night Surprise," "A Happy Bungalow," "An Artful Automaton," "Enchantment," "£100 Reward," "Castle Botherem," "A Flying Visit," "A Merry Christmas," "All at Sea," "Cherry Tree Farm," "A Bright Idea," "The Head of the Poll," "Nobody's Fault," "A Strange Host," "Treasure Trove," "A Moss Rose Rent," "A Terrible Fright,"

LAWES. Sir John Bennet, Bart., F.R.S., D.C.L. Oxon., D.Sc. Camb., LL.D. Eng., son of the late Mr. John Bennet Lawes, of Rothamsted, Hertfordshire, by Marianne, daughter of Mr. John Sherman of Drayton, Oxfordshire, and widow of the Rev. D. G. Knox, was born at Rothamsted, Dec. 28, 1811, and succeeded to his estate there in 1822. He was educated at Eton and at Brasenose College, Oxford. On leaving the University he spent some time in London for the purpose of studying in a practical manner the science of chemistry. In October 1834 he started regular experiments in agricultural chemistry on taking possession of his property and home at Rothamsted, and from that date up to the present time he has unceasingly been applying his scientific knowledge to the solution of questions affecting practical agriculture. Among his earliest experiments, the effect of bones as a manure on land occupied his attention for some time. Mr. Lawes afterwards established large works in the neighbourhood of London for the manufacture of superphosphate of lime, by which name the manure is known which has produced quite a revolution in the science of agriculture. In 1843 Mr. Lawes engaged the assistance of Dr. Gilbert, the present director of Rothamsted Farm, and undertook with him a systematic series of agricultural investigations in the field, the feeding-shed, and the laboratory. Mr. Lawes was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1854, and in 1867 the Royal Medal was awarded to him conjointly with Dr. Gilbert by the Council of the society. He also received a gold medal from the Imperial Agricultural Society of Russia. In June 1881 the Emperor of Germany, by Imperial decree, awarded the Gold Medal of Merit for Agriculture to Mr. Lawes and Dr. Gilbert jointly. In 1893 the Society of Arts awarded the Albert Medal to Sir John Lawes and Professor Gilbert for their joint services to scientific agriculture. The results of the Rothamsted investigations are to be found in the Journals of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, the Reports of the British Association for the

Advancement of Science, the Transactions of the Chemical Society of London, the Journal of the Royal Society of London, the Journal of the Royal Society of London, the Reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, the Philosophical Magazine, the Transactions of the Chemical Society of London, and scattered pamphlets and paper letters. In 1871 he gave views on the valuation of manures; and in 1872 wrote a pamphlet on the same subject, with reference to the Irish Land. In 1892 he published a pamphlet on Rothamsted Farm. He has collected his papers on Agriculture from 1847 to the present, and put them into three quarto and six volumes, which he has presented to national institutions in different parts of the country. He was created a baronet in 1893. Address: Rothamsted, St. Albans.

LAWRANCE. The Hon. Sir John Compton, J.P., D.L., one of the Justices of the High Court, is the only son of Sir John Lawrance, late of Dunsby Hall, Lincolnshire, and was born in 1832. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1855, and created a Queen's Counsel in 1861. He was elected a Benchet of his Inn in 1862, and had been for some years the Benchet of the Midland Circuit. He has held the office of Recorder of Derby from 1862 to 1886, and presented South Lincolnshire for the Conservative interest from 1880 to 1886, and sat, until 1890, for the same constituency. He was returned for the county, his return was opposed in 1886. He was made a Justice of the High Court in 1890. He married, in 1861, the daughter of Major Smart. He was educated at Harrow and Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated M.A. in 1882. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1881, and has represented the Thirsk and Malton Division of Yorkshire as a Conservative member of the House of Commons since 1892. He is a Parliamentary Charity Commissioner, and one of the Deputy-Chairmen of Committees of the House of Commons. Addresses: 14 Arlington Street, S.W.; and Elm Bank, York.

LAWSON, Sir Wilfrid, Bart., M.P., eldest son of the late Sir Wilfrid Lawson of Aspatria, Cumberland, and of Caroline, daughter of Sir James Graham of Netherby, was born Sept. 4, 1829, and succeeded to the title and estates on his father's death in 1867. From an early age he has been an enthusiastic advocate of the temperance movement, and is now the leader and President of the United Kingdom Alliance, and is its spokesman in Parliament. At the general election of 1859 he stood, in conjunction with his uncle, the late Sir James Graham, as a candidate for the representation of Carlisle, and succeeded by a narrow majority over his opponent, Mr. Hodgson. In March 1864 he first moved for leave to introduce the measure now so well known as the Permissive Bill, the main principle of which is the giving to two-thirds of the inhabitants of any parish or township an absolute veto upon all licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors granted within their districts. It was supported by forty members. In 1865 he was displaced at the general election by his former opponent, Mr. Hodgson; but, at the general election of 1868, on appealing to the enlarged constituency as a supporter of Mr. Gladstone he was returned at the head of the poll. Sir Wilfrid Lawson succeeded, on June 18, 1880, in carrying his Local Option resolution by a majority of 26, and in 1881 and 1883 he again got it passed. In 1885 he stood for the new Cockermouth division of Cumberland, but was defeated by a Conservative majority of ten. In 1886, as a Gladstonian Liberal, he gained the seat by a large majority, and was again returned in 1892 and 1895. Sir Wilfrid is an advanced Radical, and is in favour of the disestablishment of the Church, and of the abolition of the House of Lords and of standing armies. He is

LEA, Arthur Sheridan, M.A., Sc.D., F.R.S. was born in New York, of English parents, on Dec. 1, 1853. He came to England in 1859, where he has since resided, and was educated in a private school, and at the Royal Institution School, Liverpool. He entered Trinity College, Cambridge, in October 1872, reading at first for Honours in Mathematics. In his second year he turned his attention to Natural Science, and was elected to a Foundation Scholarship in May 1875, being placed in the first class of the Natural Science Tripos in December of the same year. Immediately after taking his degree he proceeded to Germany and worked with Professor W. Kühne, of Heidelberg, in conjunction with whom he published his first paper, "Beobachtungen über die Absonderung des Pankreas" (Untersuch. Physiol. Inst. Heidelb., vol. ii.). After his return to England he acted as head-assistant to Professor Michael Foster, during which time he lectured on Chemical Physiology. He was appointed Lecturer to Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, in 1881, and University Lecturer in 1884. In October 1885 Gonville and Caius College elected him to a Fellowship, whereupon he migrated to this Society from Trinity. While actively engaged in teaching and in endeavouring to promote the progress of science he published a short series of papers, dealing chiefly with enzymes or soluble ferments, which appeared in the Journal of Physiology and in the Proc. Roy. Soc., the most important being "A Comparative Study of Artificial and Natural Digestions" (Jour. Physiol., vol. xi., 1890). He has further been responsible for the Appendix to the several editions of Foster's "Text-book of Physiology," publishing it in an enlarged and extended form as a separate volume in 1892. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1890. Address: Caius College, Cambridge.

LEBRET, M., French statesman, was born at Étampes in October 1853. After passing with distinction through the School of Law, he was in 1879 entrusted by the then Minister of Education with a mission to England and Scotland for the purpose of reporting on leases and agricultural legislation and usages. He published, on his return, a treatise enumerating the conclusions arrived at during his journey, and soon afterwards was appointed Professor of Law at the University of Caen. He was elected Deputy for the town of Caen in 1893, and at the general election in the summer of 1898 was re-elected. In October of the same year he was offered and accepted the portfolio of Minister of Justice in M. Charles Dupuy's Cabinet. M. Lebreton is new to ministerial work. He is Mayor of Caen, and, in his professional capacity, stands in considerable repute. He is probably one of the highest authorities on technical jurisprudence.

LECKY, The Right Hon. William Edward Hartpole, eldest son of John Hartpole Lecky, Longford Terrace, Dublin, and Maria, daughter of W. E. Tallents, Newark-on-Trent, was born at Newtown Park, near Dublin, March 26, 1838, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1859 and M.A. in 1863. Devoting himself to literature, he soon gained distinction as an author. His acknowledged works are "The Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland," published anonymously in 1861, and republished in 1871-72: "History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe," 2 vols., 1865 (fifth edit., 1872); "History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne," 2 vols., 1869; "History of England in the Eighteenth Century," vols. i. and ii. 1878, vols. iii. and iv. 1882, vols. v. and vi. 1887, vols. vii. and viii. (completing the work), 1890. A Cabinet Edition of the History in twelve volumes was published in 1892, the last five being devoted to Ireland and Irish affairs down to the Addington Ministry. Mr. Lecky published a small volume of poems (1891), and an important work on contemporary politics, called "Democracy and Liberty," in 1896, a second edition of which was published in 1899, and created some stir through its adverse comments on Mr. Gladstone. His first three works and a large part of his History of England have been translated into German, and some of them into other languages. Most of his works have gone through many editions in England. Mr. Lecky has received the honorary degree of LL.D. from his own University of Dublin, and from the Universities of St. Andrews and Glasgow; the degree of D.C.L. from the University of Oxford, and the degree of Litt.D. from the University of Cambridge. In 1894 he was elected Corresponding Member to the Institute of France. He is also an Honorary Member of the Royal Academy. In November 1895 he was elected member of Parliament for the University of Dublin, and is a prominent figure in the debates of the House. In 1897 he was made Privy Councillor. He has contributed occasionally, but not frequently, to periodical literature; and since the division in the Liberal party, in 1886, he has been an active member of the Unionist party. He married, in 1871, Elizabeth, Baroness de Dedem. Addresses: 38 Onslow Gardens, S.W.; and Athenæum.

He was likewise one of the originators and officers of the Order of Corporate Reunion, established in 1877. This body, confined exclusively to members of the Church of England, has exercised considerable influence, acquired rather by construction than reform, and has at the same time successfully perpetuated the best traditions of the Oxford Tractarians. Its special organ, The Reunion Magazine (1877-79) embodies its fundamental principles, set forth very clearly. He is the author of Poems," 2nd edit., 1855; "The Gospel Message," 1860; "The King's Highway, and other Poems," 2nd edit., 1872; "The Martyrs of Vienne and Lyons: an Oxford Prize Poem," 5th edit., 1894; "The Message of Reconciliation," 2nd edit., 1868; "Petronilla, and other Poems," 2nd edit., 1869; "The Beauty of Holiness," 4th edit., 1869; "Parochial and Occasional Sermons," 2nd edit., 1873; "Death, Judgment, Heaven and Hell," 3rd edit., 1870; "The Christian Doctrine of Prayer for the Departed," 2nd edit., 1875; "Memorials of the Rev. R. S. Hawker," 1876; "A Glossary of Liturgical and Ecclesiastical Terms," illustrated by A. W. Pugin, &c., 1877; "The Sinless Conception of the Mother of God, a Theological Essay," 1881; "A Manual of Politics," 1880; "The Validity of the Holy Orders of the Church of England Maintained and Vindicated," 1870; "The Bells of Botteville Tower," 1874; "The Words from the Cross," 3rd edit., 1880. As editor, Dr. Lee has issued two series of "Sermons," and one of "Essays on the Reunion of Christendom" (with a Prefatory Essay by Dr. E. B. Pusey). "Lyrics of Light and Life," 2nd edit., 1878. He wrote "Order out of Chaos," 1881; and has published "Altar Service Book of the Church of England," "The Book of Epistles," "The Book of Gospels," "Directorium Anglicanum," 4th edit. He has also written "Glimpses of the Supernatural," 2nd edit., 1877; "More Glimpses of the World Unseen," 1880; "Glimpses in the Twilight," 1885; and "Sights and Shadows: being Examples of the Supernatural," 1894. His work, "The History and Antiquities of the Prebendal Church of the B. V. Mary of Thame," an illustrated folio of considerable size, was published in 1883, and brought about the restoration of that church under Mr. J. Oldrid Scott. His studies in History, chiefly bearing on the Tudor changes in the sixteenth century, have resulted in the issue of "Historical Sketches of the Reformation," 1879; "The Church under Queen Elizabeth," 3rd edit., 1897; "Edward the Sixth, Supreme Head," 2nd edit., 1889; and "Cardinal Reginald Pole, Archbishop of Canterbury," 1888. In all of the above, numerous original MSS. have been largely made use of, and fresh light thrown upon past events. A metrical "Litany of the Faithful Departed," by Dr. Lee, approved for use by several Catholic dignitaries, used in various convents and religious communities, has had a very extended circulation in England, America, and Australia. Dr. Lee has likewise been a contributor to the Nineteenth Century, the Christian Remembrancer, the Contemporary Review, Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, the Naturalist, and other similar serials. Address: Lambeth.

LEE, Rev. Richard. Born Dec. 5, 1846, at Odogh, near Kesh, son of the late Rev. R. Lee, Scholar of Trinity College, Dublin. Curate of Odogh died May 1870. He was educated at St. Vincent's Hospital; 1865-69 at Jesus College, Oxford, of which College he took the degree of B.A. in 1869, and of second class of Classics in 1870. M.A. in 1872; and M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, 1873. He was admitted to Holy Orders by the Bishop of London, and ordained Priest in 1874. He came Curate of Holy Trinity, Dublin, in 1875, and was Lecturer in 1875 of St. Peter's, Whitechapel, and Curate of St. James's, Lothbury, in the Diocese of London. He was appointed Assistant-Master of St. Vincent's Hospital in 1871; and Lecturer in 1876. Address: City Hospital, E.C.

LEE, Sidney. editor of the Dictionary of National Biography. Biographer of Shakespeare, born on Dec. 5, 1859, was educated at the London School. Proceeded to Trinity College at Michaelmas 1878, where an Exhibition in Mathematics was awarded, and graduated B.A. with a First in the Final School of Modern Languages at Midsummer 1882. From 1882 to 1884 Mr. Lee interested himself in Shakespeare literature, and, while an undergraduate, he contributed to the Good Words two articles entitled respectively "The Original of Shylock," in February 1880, and "New Study of Love's Labour's Lost," in October 1880. New facts were then gathered together from an examination of the papers and contemporary literature, and new light was thrown on the circumstances under which two plays of Shakespeare were written. The paper attracted the favourable attention of Shakespeare scholars, and Mr. Lee's views on the questions at issue have been generally adopted by commentators. In 1882 Mr. Lee edited for the Early English Text Society a reprint of Lord Berners' early fourteenth century translation of the French medieval romance of "Huon of Burdeaux." At the end of 1884 he published another work entitled "Stratford-on-Avon: from the Earliest Times to the Death of Shakespeare," which reached a new edition in 1890. In 1886 he edited, with valuable additions, the autobiography of Lord Herbert of Cherbury; which

2 a bookseller who had the original publisher some of this work tried to sell in a new form as a new work by a new publisher. A petition was made for an order of the Court of Chancery, and the application failed, Mr. Lee on the principle of the transfer of the work to the Athenæum, which was printed as a pamphlet, versus Gibbings." Meanwhile, in 1883, Mr. Lee had become the editor of Mr. Leslie Stephen, of the House of National Biography, a house of biography, produced by Mr. George Smith (Co.). After taking a large part of editing the underwritten years, Mr. Lee was succeeded, in the spring of 1890, by Mr. Stephen, and a year after his retirement owing to ill health he came sole editor. Thirty volumes have been issued at quarterly intervals under his sole supervision. In 1897 Mr. Lee presided at a public meeting of the contributors to Mr. Leslie Stephen's Dictionary of National Biography. On the 8th July 1897 he was the guest of honor at a public banquet which was given by the publisher to the editor, and was attended by many persons. In January 1898 the Royal Institution gave a discourse on "National Biography," which was printed in the form of a pamphlet for March and circulated in pamphlet form. Besides his part as editor of the Dictionary, Mr. Lee has been a contributor, and nearly 800 articles have come from his pen. Each of the volumes of the "Dictionary" contains the work of the first important Elizabethan authors or chief contributions is the Shakespeare in the fifteenth century, published in June 1897, which is the first endeavour to co-ordinate coherently, facts about the great drama-works which antiquaries had during the past two centuries. Mr. Lee has since gone further and has published a succinct, yet coherent, Shakespeare, and has based the "Dictionary" a full biography of the poet, connecting newly-discovered facts. It is published in an index in this country and is likely to rank as the best on the subject. The Academy in January 1899 as one of the best books of 1898. Address: 11 Grosvenor Crescent, Kensington, W.

LEGOUVÉ, Ernest Wilfred, a French dramatist, the son of Gabriel Legouvé, author of "Mérîtes des Femmes," was born in Paris, Feb. 14, 1807. At an early age he wrote novels, plays, and poems, and his lectures on "L'Histoire Morale des Femmes" were published in 1848. In 1849, in conjunction with Scribe, he produced "Adrienne Lecouvreur," which gained great popularity through the personation of the heroine by Rachel. She, however, paid a fine of 5000 francs rather than perform in his "Médée," a play which in Montanelli's Italian version was in 1856 very successful with Ristori. In 1856 he succeeded Ancelot as a member of the Academy. Among his works are "Beatrice," 1861; "La Croix d'Honneur et les Comédiens," 1863; "Miss Suzanne," 1867; "Messieurs les Enfants," 1868; "La Bataille de Dames," 1873; "Études et Souvenirs de Théâtre," 1880; "Le Mérite des Femmes," 1882; "La Lecture en Action," 1883; "Une Éducation de Jeune Fille," 1884; "Soixante Ans de Souvenirs," 2 vols., 1886-87; "Fleurs d'Hiver," &c., and "Une Élève de Seize Ans," 1890. His collected plays were published in three volumes in 1887-90. He rose to the rank of Commander of the Legion of Honour in 1887, and has since been promoted a Grand Officer. He is by far the oldest member of the Academy, and may be styled the Grand Old Man of French Drama. His Paris address is 14 Rue St. Marc.

LEHMANN, Rudolf, artist, was born Aug. 19, 1819, at Ottensen, near Hamburg, and educated at Hamburg. His art education he received in Paris, Munich, and Rome, where he afterwards resided for some time, and where his studio was much frequented. He has lived in London since 1866. He obtained three Gold Medals at three Paris Exhibitions, and was created a Knight of the Order of the Falcon by the Grand-Duke of Saxe-Weimar. His portrait, painted by himself at the request of the Director of Public Galleries in Florence, is placed in the Galleria degli Uffizi of that city, in the room set apart for portraits of distinguished artists painted by themselves. M. Lehmann's chief pictures are "Sixtus V. Blessing the Pontine Marshes," bought by the French Government for the Museum at Lille (this is his largest work); a "Madonna," and a "St. Sebastian," ordered by the French Government for two churches in France; "Graziella," from Lamartine's "Confidences"; "Early Dawn in the Pontine Marshes"; numerous pictures of modern life and costume in Italy; numerous portraits of distinguished persons in England, amongst whom are

He has been Lord-Lieutenant of Northamptonshire since 1856, acted as High Sheriff of Sutton Coldfield from 1859 to 1861. He is a Governor and Trustee of the National School. He was sworn of the Privy Council in 1895. Lord Leigh was married, in 1861, to Lady Caroline Amelia Grosvenor, daughter of the 2nd Marquis of Westminster, K.G. Address: Stoneleigh, Kenilworth.

LEIGHTON, John, F.S.A., artist, descended from the Leightons of Ulysses-Forfarshire, was born in St. James's, Westminster, Sept. 15, 1822, became a member of the Royal Academy, and was one of the founders of industrial and technical education, aiding by example the action of the Department of Science and Art, by the foundation of the "Suburban Schools," of which the Prince of Wales was the Patron. His first publication, a series of outlines, came out in 1848, but he had previously contributed to many exhibitions. In 1848-50 he published several serio-comic brochures, on art principles (then little appreciated), under the name of "Luke Limb." In 1851 Mr. Leighton aided Owen Jones in arranging the first International Exhibition, about the same time published a series of twenty-four outlines, called "Money," and at the same time published "Suggestions in Design," which was greatly enlarged in 1881, and was the first ever issued in all styles. With Jones and several members of the Academy, he promoted a free exhibition of pictures, and with Roger Fenton founded the Photographic Society, of which he was the first President of the Royal Academy and the first Chairman. He was a member of the Copyright Committee of the Royal Society of Arts that met in 1858-59 and revised the law as it now stands, and has been at the International Copyright Conferences, at Antwerp, 1877, and Paris, 1889, under the chairmanship of M. Meisner. Mr. Leighton has had great graphical and typographical experience. He has lectured on "Libraries and the Book," "Oriental Art," and "Binocular Vision"; the "Advantages of a System of a Postal Ballot," and "Pictorial Advertising, its Use and Abuse"; and has also travelled in Russia, Caucasia, and Georgia, for the purpose of studying the Byzantine art of the Greek Church. In 1869 it was at Mr. Leighton's suggestion that Earl Sydney, the Lord Chamberlain, modified the Court costume at St. James's, making it more dignified than of yore. He has illustrated "Moral Emblems," "Lyra Germanica," "The Life of Man Symbolised," and "Madre Natura." In 1871 he edited, with illustrations, "Paris under the Commune." He is one of the original proprietors of the Graphic, and a founder of the Ex-Libris Society, and a Vice-President. Mr. Leighton served on the Commissions of the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862, also in Paris, 1855 and 1867, and Philadelphia, 1867, and was a Juror in Paris in 1878, where he first exhibited his scheme for the "Unification of London," preserving the City, the map now being in Spring Gardens. Mr. Leighton is also a herald, and it was at his suggestion that Wales desired to adopt an emblem for the Principality on the Royal Standard, and the Cross of St. David on the Union Jack, a plea for which he put forth in his "Book-Plate Annual." He has three times contested the Borough of North St. Pancras in the Liberal Unionist interest, and once retired when an Unionist was returned. Mr. Leighton is a life member of the Society of Antiquaries, the Society of Arts, the Royal Institute, the Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts, the London Archæological Society, the Zoological Society, the Corporation of the Artists and Literary Fund, the Ex-Libris, and many other kindred associations. He has recently published an important little work on a large subject, "The Unification of London: the Need and the Remedy" (with maps and plans). Address: Ormonde, Regent's Park, N.W.

LEIGHTON, Mrs. Marie Connor, novelist and critic, is the daughter of the late Captain James Nenon Connor, 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers, and was born in Clifton in 1869. She began to devote herself to literary work at a very early age, and was educated mainly at Marquise, Pas de Calais, France. At the age of fifteen she wrote and published "Beauty's Queen," a three-volume novel, which was followed by "A Morganatic Marriage" in 1885; "Sweet Magdalen," 1887; "Husband and Wife," 1888; "The Triumph of Manhood," 1889; "The Lady of Balmerino," 1891; and "The Heart's Awakening," 1893. In 1889 she married Robert Leighton, with whom in 1891 she joined the literary staff of the Messrs. Harmsworth, and has written for Answers and others of the Harmsworth

1. Pharmaceutical industry – The pharmaceutical industry is a major contributor to the U.S. economy, generating billions of dollars in revenue and creating thousands of jobs. However, it is also a major source of health care costs, with drug prices often being significantly higher than in other countries. The industry is heavily regulated by the FDA, and its activities are closely monitored by Congress and the public.

2. Health care providers – Health care providers, including hospitals, doctors, and nurses, are the primary providers of health care services in the U.S. They are responsible for diagnosing and treating patients, and for providing preventive care. The health care industry is a major employer in the U.S., and it is also a major source of health care costs.

3. Health insurance – Health insurance is a major source of funding for health care services in the U.S. It is provided by a variety of entities, including employers, the government, and private insurers. Health insurance coverage is not universal, and there are significant disparities in coverage and costs across different groups of people.

4. Medical devices – Medical devices, including diagnostic equipment, surgical instruments, and prosthetics, are essential for the delivery of health care services. The medical device industry is a major contributor to the U.S. economy, and it is also a major source of health care costs.

5. Biotechnology – Biotechnology is a rapidly growing industry that is revolutionizing the way we understand and treat disease. It is a major source of new drugs and medical devices, and it is also a major source of health care costs.

6. Public health – Public health is the branch of medicine that focuses on the prevention and control of disease. It is a major source of health care costs, and it is also a major employer in the U.S.

7. Health care reform – Health care reform is a major topic of debate in the U.S. It involves the restructuring of the health care system to improve access, quality, and cost. There are many different proposals for reform, and the debate is ongoing.

8. Health care financing – Health care financing is the process of raising the funds needed to pay for health care services. It is a major source of health care costs, and it is also a major employer in the U.S.

9. Health care delivery – Health care delivery is the process of providing health care services to patients. It is a major source of health care costs, and it is also a major employer in the U.S.

10. Health care research – Health care research is the process of conducting scientific studies to improve our understanding of disease and to develop new treatments. It is a major source of health care costs, and it is also a major employer in the U.S.

series of articles recently published, J. R. Gilmore, author of "Among the Pines," and formerly an editor of the New York Tribune, attributes entirely to Mr. Leland the so-called "Emancipation movement," during the Civil War, by means of which the Union men, who were still opposed to the Abolitionists, were reconciled to freeing the slaves, and he adduces the highest authority to prove that this emancipation policy, as conducted by Leland in the Continental, induced Abraham Lincoln to advance the emancipation by many months, a movement which, it is now generally conceded, perhaps saved the Union by greatly abridging the war. Even Lincoln and all his Cabinet deemed the act premature. He has of late lived chiefly in Italy. Address: Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co., 8 Bishopsgate Within, E.C.

LEMAIRE, Mme. Jeanne Madeleine, née Coll, French artist, born in 1850, at St. Rossoline, near Cannes, was brought up by her aunt, Mme. Herbelin. She from her earliest years imbibed a love of art from that eminent miniaturist. There was never any doubt as to what the pursuit of her life would be. As soon as the little girl could move about, a pencil was her greatest joy, so that even at the age of five or six the childish mind dictated attempts in imitative art. It is unfortunately but too seldom that the first efforts of those who afterwards become eminent in their profession are preserved, and we are not aware that any of Mme. Lemaire's juvenile artistic productions are in existence. Those, however, having charge of the child were, luckily, most careful not to neglect any evidence of unusual talent, so that at the age of nine the child was placed with a Mme. Cavá to learn drawing, this being followed by four years' instruction at M. Chaplin's school. In 1865, and when but fifteen years of age, the artist exhibited her first picture at the Salon—a portrait in oils of her grandmother—the talent in which was so fully recognised by the judges, that it was only the extreme youth of the artist that prevented a prize being adjudged for the work. Then followed a succession of pictures at the Salon—most of them being in oils—"A Columbine," an exceedingly clever work that was greatly admired, and one that at once foreshadowed the artist's future fame ; "Diana Vernon," and another fancy figure in "Corinne," showed a sense of beauty of form and colour that fairly took the public by surprise. Rapidly developing into a facile and productive painter, the artist's works became as numerous as they were diversified in manner. Season after season her works were to be seen at the exhibitions of the Société d'Aquarellistes Français, of which she was a member, her subjects embracing flowers, genre, and portraits. Mme. Lemaire also engaged somewhat extensively in book illustration, producing a series of forty water-colour drawings for the édition de luxe of "L'Abbé Constantin," by Ludovic Halévy, and a large number for the novel "Flirt," by Paul Hervieu. In 1890 the artist had two oil paintings—"Ophelia" and "Sonnail"—at the exhibition of the Société Nationale des Beaux Arts, in the Champ de Mars. In 1891 she exhibited "Five," and, in 1892, "Le Char des Fées," &c. In addition to all this, Mme. Lemaire has entered the field as a pastelist, for which branch of art French painters are noted. She is a member of the Société des Pastellistes Français, and a series of her drawings were at one time on view at the Goupil Gallery. Her Paris address is 31 Rue de Monceau.

LEMAÎTRE, François Élie Jules, French poet and critic, was born at Vennecy, April 27, 1853, and began his education at the seminary of the Chapelle St. Mesmin, near Orleans. He entered the École Normale in 1872, and became an assistant-master at the Lycée of Havre in 1875. In 1881 he passed to Algiers, then to Besançon; but in 1884 he deserted the ill-paid paths of professorial work, to devote himself entirely to literature. He became the editor of the Revue Bleue, in which several of his articles attracted much attention, especially one on Flaubert. But it is above all as a dramatic critic that he has earned his European reputation. Succeeding Weiss on the Journal des Débats in 1886, he has since then given to the world a weekly article on the drama that may be said to have revolutionised the methods of criticism; and, at any rate, to have created a new school of dramatic critics in England, of whom Mr. A. B. Walkley is the chief representative. He was elected to the Academy in 1895 in succession to Duruy. His first work of any size was "Les Contemporains," 1886-89, of which the studies on Zola, Ohnet, and Victor Hugo created a great impression. His dramatic criticisms have been collected into volumes entitled "Impressions du Théâtre," of which the tenth volume was published in July 1898. Although a critic of peculiarly sarcastic power, he has been unable to keep from writing plays himself. His first was "Révolte," which was played at the Odeon in 1889. This was followed by "Le Député Leveau" (1890), and by "Le Mariage Blanc," which was played at the Théâtre Français in 1891; as have been "L'Age Difficile" and "Le Pardon." His plays are noted for their advanced views, and are appreciated by large audiences. He now writes for the des Deux Mondes, and is a less impressionist and more realistic. As a playwright he deals with his own class. He is in the Legion of Honour. His address is: 39 Rue d'Artois.

LE MARCHANT, Francis, was born in 1844, and educated at Balliol College, Oxford. He took a first in Lit. Hum. 1866. He went to India as a member of the Council, and in 1896 was appointed to the Council of the Secretary of State.

LEMONNIER, Antoine Camille, Belgian critic and writer, born at Ixelles, near Brussels, 1835. He first attracted public notice by his criticisms on the salons in 1863-66. In 1887 he obtained the quinquennial Grand Prize given by the Government for a standard work on his "La Belgique." M. Lemonnier, however, best known as a writer of the naturalistic school, affecting a certain brutality in his methods. His works are "Contes Flamands et Wallons," 1881; "Les Charniers," 1881; "Les Concubins," 1885; and "Lupanar," 1886. In 1888 his play "Gil Blas," entitled "L'Enfant de la Rue," was stopped by the authorities for obscenity, to pay a fine of £40. He is a contributor to the Figaro, L'Echo de Paris, and other French papers.

LENBACH, Franz, a German portrait-painter, born at Schrobenhausen in Bavaria, 1836. He at first followed the trade of a master-mason, but on his father's death in 1856 he entered the Munich Academy to study painting, and afterwards became a pupil of Grade and Piloty. He turned himself to genre painting, and his "Family in a Storm" excited much interest. In 1858 he went with Piloty to Munich, where he painted a picture of the same subject, which by its realism and colouring created a great sensation in Munich. He then turned to portrait-painting, taking the example especially of Rembrandt, as his "Portrait of a Man" (1860) showed. In 1860 he received an appointment to the School of Art at Weimar, but in order to pursue further studies he resigned. In 1867 he exhibited a masterly portrait of the artist, Von Hagn; and in 1868 he made travels in Italy and Spain. He returned to Munich, and soon became famous for his portraits. Commissions came from all parts, and for some time he worked in Vienna, but in 1871 he returned again to Munich, where, when

Greece and Egypt, he has since

He is an honorary Professor at the Academy. Amongst his most famous pictures are portraits of Paul von Lachner, Moltke, Bismarck, Wagner, Liszt, the late King of Bavaria, Gladstone, the Emperor Joseph, and William I. of Ger-

3, Sir John, D.L., J.P., Senior of Parliament for the city of Dundee, born in Hull on April 10, 1828. He was the second son of the late Mr. Adam Leng, and the daughter of Mr. Christopher Lucan, a surveyor, Malton, Yorkshire, and the younger brother of Sir William Leng, of Sheffield. Sir John was educated at the Hull Grammar School and won the Head-mastership of Mr. J. D. In 1847, when only nineteen years was appointed sub-editor of the Dundee Advertiser, and thus began a very successful career as journalist. Four years afterwards (1851) he went to Dundee in the position of editor and general manager of the Dundee Advertiser. That had then passed its jubilee, having been founded in 1801, but although advocating advanced Liberal principles in accordance with the prevailing in the locality, it was so handicapped by the heavy paper stamp and advertising duties that its bi-weekly circulation was very limited, and its consequence was very limited, and its consequence was very limited. Sir John set vigorous work to improve and infuse new life into the Dundee Advertiser, which has since become a power of considerable influence, not only locally but throughout the country. About ten years after he took the management—that is, as “the taxes on knowledge” were reduced—the Advertiser was changed from bi-weekly to a daily journal, the price being reduced to one penny. In 1867 Sir John established the People's

a weekly paper whose circulation exceeded 250,000, there being twelve editions, specially adapted to the various districts of Scotland. Another success which has proved successful was the founding by Sir John, in 1877, of the Evening Telegraph, a daily halfpenny paper, the several editions of which have a very large circulation. Some years ago he had founded a literary journal the People's Friend, which was published monthly, but was received with such favour that it was changed into a daily. This publication has been the means of introducing many new writers to the public, such popular novelists as Annie and Adeline Sergeant having first appeared in print as contributors to its pages. In addition to the journalistic work, an extensive business in commercial printing and lithography is conducted under Sir John's management; and the small office which was sufficient for the Dundee Advertiser in 1851 has now developed into a very extensive establishment. The Liberal principles which Sir John professed in 1851, when he undertook the editorship of the Dundee Advertiser, have been consistently maintained and advocated by him in his various journals. He has from the first been an adherent of Mr. Gladstone; an advocate of Home Rule for Ireland, Scotland, England, and Wales; and a supporter of measures calculated to bring about conciliation between Capital and Labour; while on temperance questions he has striven to introduce measures whereby the liquor traffic would be controlled by the people. The prominence given to his political convictions on popular questions naturally suggested that he would be found of great service in Parliament, but he was reluctant to abandon his journalistic career, and it was after he had declined no fewer than fifteen invitations that he at length consented to enter the field of politics. The death of Mr. Firth in September 1889 caused a vacancy in the representation of Dundee, and Sir John was induced to become a candidate. On that occasion he was elected without opposition. At the general election in 1892 Sir John was returned at the top of the poll as representative for Dundee in conjunction with Mr. Edmund Robertson, Civil Lord of the Admiralty in Mr. Gladstone's fourth administration. On the distribution of birthday honours in 1893 he received a knighthood, and this dignity was accepted by him chiefly as an honour to the Press, and to the city of his adoption. He is a Magistrate for the counties of Forfar and Fife, Deputy-Lieutenant for Dundee, and President or Vice-President of numerous societies. Besides his journalistic work, Sir John has published a number of books and pamphlets, amongst which are the following: “Impressions of America,” 1876; “The Electric Light Recommended to Gas Companies and Corporations,” 1878; “Scottish Banking Reform,” 1881; “American Competition and British Agriculture,” 1881; “Practical Politics,” 1885; “How Best to Deal with the Unemployed,” 1886; “Trip to Norway,” 1886; “Home Rule all Round,” 1890; “Excessive Patent Fees,” 1891; “Canadian Cattle Importation,” 1893; “Disestablishment in Scotland,” 1894; “Nationalisation: the Dream of the Labour Party,” 1895; “Letters from India and Ceylon,” 1896; “Some European Rivers and Cities,” 1897. He married (1), in 1851, Emily Cook, of Beverley, who died in 1894; and (2), in 1897, Mary Low,

of Dundee. Address: Kinbrae, Newport, Fife.

LEONCAVALLO, Ruggiero, composer, was born in Naples on March 8, 1858. He enjoyed the friendship of Wagner, and for a long period of time lived in Paris, where he composed songs and occasional pieces, and planned his trilogy of Italian history, of which the "Medici" constitutes the first part. In May 1892 he produced his short dramatic opera, "I Pagliacci," at Milan, and in November 1893 his "Medici" was first performed in the same city. The success of Mascagni's short operas may be said to have paved the way for his own. His works have often been heard at Covent Garden.

LEOPOLD II (Leopold-Louis-Philippe-Marie-Victor), King of the Belgians, son of the late King Leopold I., upon whose death, which occurred Dec. 10, 1865, he succeeded to the throne as Leopold II., was born in Brussels, April 9, 1835, and married, Aug. 22, 1853, the Archduchess Marie of Austria, by whom he has had three children—two daughters and one son, the Duke of Brabant, who died in January 1869 at the age of ten. In 1855, in company with the Duchess of Brabant, he made a lengthened tour through Europe, Egypt, and Asia Minor. As Duke of Brabant, he took a prominent part in several important discussions in the Senate, especially in that relating to the establishment of a maritime service between Antwerp and the Levant. His Majesty has visited this country very frequently. General Gordon was his friend, and was in his service until ordered to leave Brussels for the Soudan. His "silver wedding" was celebrated with great rejoicing in August 1878. His Majesty takes a great interest in the development of the Congo Free State, was practically the founder of it, and is now its ruling sovereign. He has lately been zealously advocating the claims of his country in China, but without success. Having no son living, and daughters being excluded from the succession by the Belgian Constitution, the elder son of his brother, the Comte de Flandre, was heir-presumptive to the throne until his death, Jan. 23, 1891, aged twenty-two. Now Prince Albert, the only brother of the late Prince Baldwin, is heir-presumptive.

LEO THE THIRTEENTH, The Pope, is the son of Count Ludovico Pecci, by his wife Anna Prosperi. He was born at Carpineto, in the diocese of Anagni, in the State of the Church, March 2, 1810, and was baptized by the names of Vincenzo and Gioacchino. His mother always called him by his first name, which was also used by himself in the continuation of his studies, which he pursued under his second name, Gioacchino. His father sent him, when he was a boy, to his brother Giuseppe, to the town of Viterbo. There he studied law and humanities under the guidance of Leonardo Giribaldi, a man of letters, until the year 1824, when, on the death of his father, he was sent to Rome to an uncle, and took up his abode in an apartment of the palace of the Muti. In November 1824 he entered the schools of the Collegio Romano, which were then restored to the Jesuits, and became a pupil of the teachers Fathers Ferrucci and Giuseppe Bonvicini, both of whom were noted for eloquence and virtue of the order. Three years later he began to study mathematics. He was then a pupil of Father Giovanbattista Pecci, nephew of Leo XII., and of Father Carafa, a mathematician. His assiduity and talent, and his first prize in Physics, caused him to be promoted to the first accessit in mathematics, and he passed to the course of philosophy, and in the four years of his study he attended the lectures of Giovanni Perrone, Francesco Maria Zecchinelli, Cornelius Valerius, and Francesco Xaverio Patrizi, the late Cardinal Patrizi. When he began philosophy Pecci was so young, that in spite of his youth, he gave lectures on philosophy to the pupils of the College. In his third year he sustained a public dispute, and obtained the first prize. In the following year, being then twenty years old, he obtained the first prize in philosophy. Even in Viterbo he was noticed for his ability and perfect propriety of conduct, and seemed entirely devoted to study, took no part in entertainments, saziioni, amusements, or pleasures. At the age of twelve or thirteen he wrote prose or verse, with facility. It may be mentioned that since he has published a volume of his verses, which have been printed at Udine. He attended the College of Noble Ecclesiastics, where Abbate Pecci frequented, and then the Roman University to study civil law. Pecci and the Riario Sforza (afterwards Cardinal, and Bishop of Naples) were the youths who eclipsed all the other companions in study. Cardinal Sala took much interest in him, and assisted him with advice and encouragement. He became a Doctor in Law, and was created a Cardinal by Pope Gregory XVI., a deendary of the Segnatura, March Cardinal Carlo Odescalchi, his humility in renouncing to enter the Society of Jesus, in holy orders in the chapel of St. Las Kostka, in S. Andrea and on Dec. 23, 1837, conferred upon him in the chapel of St. Gregory XVI. bestowed the title of Prothonotary Apostolic, appointed him Apostolic Delegate to Ancona, Perugia, and Spoleto. In these important posts with firmness and prudence, and in Ancona he, by his energy, put an end to the brigandage which had before reigned in that district. In 1843 he was appointed by Pope Gregory XVI., as Nuncio to Belgium, and in that year he was created Bishop of Damietta, in partibus to qualify him for his office.

He remained in Brussels for two years, and was then nominated Bishop of Perugia on Jan. 19, 1846, about three years previous to the death of Gregory XVI. He was created and promoted Cardinal by Pius IX. in the month of Dec. 19, 1853. He was a member of several of the Congregations of the Holy See—among them those of the Rites, and of Bishops and Regulars.

In September 1877 he was appointed by Pope Pius IX. to fill the vacant office of Cardinal Camerlengo of the Holy Church, which post had been vacant by the death of Cardinal de Smedt. In that capacity, after the death of Pope Pius IX. (Feb. 7, 1878), he acted as head of the Church in temporal matters, and made arrangements for the last arrangements for the Pontiff, received foreign ambassadors, and superintended the preparations for the Conclave.

Cardinals attended the Conclave, which was closed in the Vatican on Feb. 18, 1878, and the Cardinal Camerlengo was made Pope by the election of all. The news was officially communicated to the outside world at about one o'clock from the gallery of the Sistine Chapel, when it was announced that His Holiness had assumed the name Leo XIII. On March 3 he was crowned in the Sistine Chapel, all the ancient ceremonies being observed, save the benediction et Orbi, from the loggia of St. Peter. At the end of 1887 the Pope celebrated his jubilee, commemorative of having been fifty years in the priesthood, on which occasion he received congratulations from all parts of the world. The Duke of Devonshire of England sent the Duke of Devonshire as her Special Envoy with valuable presents and an address of congratulation. In 1891 the Pope issued an important Encyclical Letter on Labour, which presents the Papacy in a new and liberal light. Later, His Holiness bade the French clergy recognise the Republic, the result being that many hitherto disaffected Monarchists have accepted the present order of things in France. On Feb. 19, 1893, His Holiness celebrated his episcopal Jubilee, and held a State celebration at St. Peter's before immense crowds of pilgrims. The English pilgrims on this occasion were headed by the Duke of Norfolk. In October 1894 the Pope summoned a conference of the Patriarchs of the Greek and other Eastern Churches at the Vatican, but the gathering was without results. In March 1895 considerable excitement was aroused in Austria owing to an announcement in the leading organ of the Christian Socialists' Party that the Pope had sent his blessing to the party, whose leader, the well-known Polish priest and Christian Socialist agitator, Father Stojalowski, was then awaiting his trial on a charge of inciting civil discontent, and to the journal itself. At about the same time an intimation was given to the world that, being approached by many English churchmen, both lay and clerical, who desired reunion with the Church if only certain restrictions, including the enforced celibacy of the clergy, could be withdrawn, the Pope was disposed to grant some mitigation as to celibacy, but, the English bishops being divided, nothing further came of the pronouncement. Following up this appeal to His Holiness, Viscount Halifax, as representing the English churchmen before mentioned, visited Rome and conferred with Cardinal Vaughan, the Pope's English Vicar, as to the conditions of reunion. The Pope did not endorse Cardinal Vaughan's conclusions favouring the promotion of individual conversions, but stated his desire to address an appeal to the English people. His famous utterance was published on April 20, 1895, inscribed "Ad Anglos," and the pathetic plea for the unity of Christendom was followed, in June 1896, by an Encyclical addressed to the Bishops of the Church, in which the conditions of unity—in brief, unqualified recognition of Rome—were laid down. As was observed at the time by all thinking people, not one word from the beginning to the end of this statement could be found to justify the assumption of Lord Halifax and kindred spirits that Rome would or could treat the question of reunion as a matter of negotiation or compromise. Although rebuffed, members of the English Church Union sought for the recognition by Rome of Anglican Orders, and the assistance of Mr. Gladstone was enlisted in that behalf. But neither Mr. Gladstone's touching persoral appeal to His Holiness nor the earnest, if misguided, efforts of the High Church Party availed. On Sept. 21, 1896, the now-famous "Papal Bull on Anglican Orders" was promulgated, and, to the keen disappointment of Mr. Gladstone and to the dismay of the English Extremists, the Pope unequivocally refused to recognise English ecclesiastical Orders, setting forth in his pronouncement an elaborate argument to justify Rome's reiterated negative. When receiving the Cardinals and his Court on the celebration of his 87th birthday in March 1897 the Pope emphasised the drastic nature of his Bull, which, he said, had been issued "in order to enlighten those who were honestly mistaken and to cut short sophistical evasions." His Holiness has not since made a further appeal to the English Church, convinced, probably, by the severe and discouraging criticism of both Prelate and laity that his Pontificate will never see the dawn of the reunion of the West. The only two recent intrusions of the Pope into English political life have been the bestowal, in March 1896, of his blessing on Mr. John Dillon as the new leader of the Irish Party, and his expressions of sympathy with the objects of the Irish Race Convention, which met in Dublin during September 1896. But the Pope's active interest in European affairs has of late been as keen as ever, and in 1896 he made various representations to the Governments of Hungary, Bulgaria, and Servia, concerning which it is impossible to comment here. An Encyclical was published in May 1897, exhorting the faithful, on the occasion of Pentecost, to pray for the unity of all Christians; and in the following month the Pope solemnly canonised two old priests, Anthony Zaccaria (1502-39) and Peter Fourier (1565), a ceremony which had not been seen in St. Peter's for thirty years. His Holiness at this time made an important statement as to the Church's attitude towards the French Republic, asserting that the supreme criterion of the common good imposed upon Catholics the acceptance of the existing form of government. On Aug. 14, 1897, the Pope received in audience Sir Wilfrid Laurier (q.v.) on his visit to Europe. This interview resulted in the appearance, on Dec. 24, 1897, of an Encyclical on the Manitoba Schools Question, in which, while asserting the concessions obtained by Catholics as inadequate, the Pope advised the faithful on their part not to refuse a partial compromise. On the previous day, Leo, speaking at his customary Christmas reception to the Cardinals, declared the hostility between the Vatican and the Italian Government to be "repugnant to the national traditions and that such a state of affairs supported by the Pope was a scandal to Catholics. In the spring of 1898 he endeavoured to act as mediator between Spain and America, without success, owing about the conduct of the American War, but when in June 1897 His Holiness, after a period of his early days as a poet, published "In Praise of Frugality," a translation of this poem, which was a model of the Epistles of Horace, by Mr. Andrew Lang (q.v.) in the World. The effort was an appeal for asceticism in the face of much astonishment was caused by a production from a statesman in years. From time to time in recent months 1898, and 1899, have been issued as to the Pope's Holiness's health, and but little has been issued with unusual regularity in the early part of 1899 a series of letters performed on His Holiness, but he has only partially recovered.

LÉPINE, Louis, French writer, was born at Lyon in 1846, and grew up at that town and at the Lycée de Grand, Paris. He was at the Lycée when the war of 1870 broke out, and he at once enlisted in the 1st of the Rhône, and after the war passed into a volunteer regiment, where by Colonel Denfert-Rochereau. In the war he was called to the front, and in 1877 was appointed Préfet at La Palisse. Having held this office at many towns, he was promoted Préfet of the Indre-et-Loire. From 1886 to 1891 he was Préfet of the Préfet de Police at Paris. He went to the Loire as Préfet, and was instrumental in arbitrating between masters and men during the strike of the glass-workers and engineers. He passed to the Seine-et-Oise, where he was recalled to Paris to deal with the riots of the students. On Sept. 1, 1891, he was appointed Governor of Algeria.

LE ROUX, Henri (known as Le Roux), French writer, was born at Havre in 1860, and early in life turned to journalism, and was a notable contributor to the Revue Politique et Littéraire. M. Jules Claretie (q.v.) became his friend, and he took his place on the Temps. His serious work was a translation of the Russian of Stepniak's "Siberia in Russia," and he has since published a quantity of novels, travels lettres. Among the most important these are "Les Âmes en Peine," "L'Enfer Parisien," 1888; "Entre," 1889; "Au Sahara," 1891, illustrated with photographs by the author; "En," 1891, travels in Spain, Morocco, Algeria; "Les Mondains," 1893. In an adaptation of the Russian novel by Tolstoy, entitled "Crime et Châtiment," was played at the Odéon. He is a member of the Legion of Honour, and his address is 167 Boulevard Malesherbes.

LESCHETIZKY, Theodor, musician, born at Langert, in Austrian Poland. He was educated by his father, Czerny and Sechter, and began to play at the age of 15. For many years he was Professor at St. Petersburg Conservatory, and first came to England as pianist in 1864. Afterwards, he settled in London, where he has acquired the reputation of being the finest pianoforte player in Europe. Among his pupils are Paderewski (q.v.), Mark Hamann, and Madame Essipoff, whom he recently married. In the autumn of 1881 he came to England on a visit to London, and gave several recitals at the Salle Érard and elsewhere, being enthusiastically greeted. His compositions include an opera, entitled "Die Erste Liebe," which was played at Prague in 1880, and numberless pieces for the piano.

LESLIE, George Dunlop, R.A., the youngest son of the late Charles Robert Leslie, R.A., was born at 12 Pineapple Street, St. John's Wood, London, July 2, 1825, and educated at the Mercers' School, City. From his father he received, besides a great deal of instruction in drawing, the pure and tender feeling, as well as the simplicity and method which distinguish so many works of the father, to be reflected in the productions of the son. Young Leslie was, however, influenced by his father at Mr. F. Cary's School of Art, Bloomsbury, whence he was admitted a student in the Life School of the Royal Academy in April 1854. The picture he exhibited, called "Hope," was purchased by Lord Houghton. In the same year two small pictures by him were hung at the Royal Academy, and he has since regularly exhibited. In the spring of 1859 his father died, leaving the young artist entirely to his own resources. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1868, and a full Academician, June 29, 1876. The principal pictures which he has exhibited are "The Defence of Lathom House," 1865; "Clarissa," 1866, which was also exhibited at the Paris International Exhibition; "Nausicaa and her Maids," 1871; "School Revisited" (his most celebrated picture), 1875; "Cowslips" and "The Lass of Richmond Hill" (his Diploma picture), 1877; "Home, Sweet Home," 1878; "Naughty Kitty" and "Alice in Wonderland," containing portraits of the artist's wife and daughter, 1879; "All that Glitters is not Gold," 1880; "Hen and Chickens," 1881; "Molly," "Sally in our Alley," "Pique," and "A Daughter of Charity," 1882; "Daughters of Eve" and "Wayside Rest," 1883; "A Girl with a Silver Bowl full of Roses" and "A Thames Boat-house," 1887; "Sun and Moon Flowers," 1889. More recently he has exhibited at the Royal Academy "November Sunshine," and "Toby," 1895; "Kathleen," and "September Sunshine," 1896; "The Day of Rest," 1897; "The Ash Grove," and "Arlington Row, Gloucestershire," 1898; "The Peaceful Highway," 1899. In 1881 Mr. Leslie gave up his house in St. John's Wood and removed with his family to an old-fashioned riverside house at Wallingford, where he has lived ever since. Mr. Leslie has at times used the pen as well as the pencil, being the author of "Our River," the first edition of which was published by Messrs. Bradbury & Agnew in 1881. In 1893 Messrs. Macmillan published his "Letters to Marco," which were written to Mr. Leslie's old friend, H. Stacy Marks, R.A., on subjects from natural history and country life. Both these books are illustrated by the author. In 1896 he published "Riverside Letters." Addresses: Riverside, Wallingford, Berks; and Athenæum.

LESSAR, Paul, was born in 1851, and comes of a Montenegrin family. He was educated at the École des Ingénieurs in St. Petersburg, and on account of his ability he was selected to accompany General Skobelev into Asia to survey for railways. In 1880 he joined General Komaroff as an expert in surveying and exploring the Turcoman country between the Caspian and Afghanistan. He established himself at Askabad, and in November 1881 he penetrated beyond Sarakhs, across the Afghan frontier, to within a few miles of Herat. In the course of two years he rode a distance of nearly 6000 miles, exploring the whole of the ground of the Russo-Persian and Russo-Afghan frontier. He became Diplomatic Attaché to the Governor of the Transcaspian, and to him was committed the real direction of the matter of the Afghan frontier. In 1885 he was sent on a special mission to London as geographical expert, to assist the Russian Ambassador in the negotiations which accompanied the despatch of the Afghan Boundary Commission.

LETHBRIDGE, Sir Roper, K.C.I.E., J.P., eldest son of the late Mr. E. Lethbridge, was born on Dec. 23, 1840, and educated at Exeter College, Oxford, where he graduated in double honours (classical and mathematical). He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1880. In 1868 he was appointed Professor in the Bengal Educational Department. He was subsequently elected a Fellow of the Calcutta University, and acted as an Examiner of that University (and also of the University of Lahore), at various times from 1868 to 1876, in Political Economy, History, English Language and Literature, Mathematics, and Mental and Moral Philosophy. In 1877 he was appointed Secretary to the Simla Educational Commission, and placed on special duty to write the articles on the Feudatory States for the "Imperial Gazetteer of India." In the following year he was transferred to the Indian Political Department as Political Agent and Press Commissioner under Lord Lytton's Viceroyalty. He was for many years editor of the only Indian quarterly, the Calcutta Review; and is the author of a "History of India," also a "History of Bengal," and many other works. In 1885 he was elected Conservative member for North Kensington, and was again returned in 1886. He was created a Companion of the Indian Empire in 1877, a Knight Bachelor in 1885, and a Knight Commander of the Indian Empire in 1890. Sir Roper is a J.P. for Kent, Lord of the Manor of Exbourne, co. Devon, and patron of one living. He married (1), in 1869, Eliza, daughter of Mr. W. Finlay, and grandniece of the Right Hon. John, 13th Lord Teynham (she died in 1895); and (2), in 1897, Emma, widow of the late Mr. Frederick Burbidge of Micklefield, Herts. By his first marriage he has issue: Francis Washington Lethbridge, Lieutenant Indian Staff Corps and Assistant Cantonment-Magistrate of Rawal Pindi, India; William Agar Lander Lethbridge, Lieutenant 4th King's Own Regiment; and Caroline Anne Roper, married to Mr. Frederic Gorell Barnes, M.P. for the Faversham Division of Kent. Sir Roper is Chairman of the Indian Constitutional Association, Member of Council of the East India Association and of the National Indian Association, and Member of the Indian Committee of the Society of Arts; and Governor of the Plymouth College. Address: 21 Cornwall Terrace, Regent's Park, N.W.

LEWIS, Mrs. Arthur. See TERRY, KATE.

LEWIS, Professor B. F.S.A., is descended from the celebrated Nonconformist of Matthew Henry the Unitarian and from a Huguenot. He seems to have migrated to England at the time of the Revolution, and was born in London in 1781, at the Islington Proprietary School, the late Dr. Jackson, a native of London, and at University College, London; he also read law under the late Mr. Charles Rann Kennedy, and the degree of B.A. at University College, London in 1843, with a Gold Medal and Scholarship in Classics, and was a Fellow of University College. He graduated M.A. at University College in 1849, with the Gold Medal awarded for the first time, and was appointed Professor of Latin at University College, Cork, in 1849. At the foundation of the Queen's University at Belfast he took an active part in the foundation, and held the office of Professor of Latin for four years. He was elected F.S.A. in 1865; and Foreign Honorary Associate of the National Antiquaries of France in 1871. Member of the Cambridge Archaeological Society, the Royal Historical Society, the Royal Archaeological Association of Ireland, the Huguenot Society of London. At the request of the Council of University College, London, he delivered a series of lectures on Classical Archaeology in 1874, in connection with the opening of the new Museum of Art. Professor Lewis has been employed for purposes of archaeological research in Ravenna, Brittany, Norway, Denmark, the south-west of France, Tarragona, Palermo, Corsica, Autun, Reims, Switzerland, Lyons, Besançon, the Middle Rhine, the Upper Danube, Pola, Aquileia, and the East. The results of these investigations have appeared in the Journal of the Archaeological Institute, 1875-1876. Facts have been mentioned to the English public was not previously acquainted, and ancient monuments have been specially considered as they appear in the Greek and Latin authors. His view of making classical instruction realistic and interesting. Professor Lewis has collected objects of art and antiquities for the museum of his college, and has laboured in various ways to improve the study of antiquities as an integral part of University education. He contributed to the second revised edition of William Smith's Latin Dictionary, and a part of his paper on Autun was translated into French and published by M. Eduenne, of which M. Bulliot, of Mont Beuvray, is the President.

LEWIS, Sir George Henry, senior of Lewis & Co., solicitors, was born in 1833, and educated at Edmonton University College, Gower Street. At the age of seventeen he was articled to his father, and was admitted as barrister in Hilary Term 1856, when he went into partnership with his father and uncle. He made his first mark by conducting the prosecution of the directors of Overend & Gurney's bank, and subsequently had the management of many other mercantile and financial transactions. He was engaged also in the prosecution of Madame Rachel, and in the Hatton Garden case; in the Hatton Garriamond Robbery case; in the Belt case; the Baccarat case; and later in the prosecution of the case for Mr. Parnell, the Irish party against the Times at the Parnell Commission. He has by far the greatest practice in criminal cases of any lawyer in London, and has been the counsel in most of the causes célèbres, and in the notable newspaper libel cases of recent years. He was knighted in June 1895.

In 1867 he married Elizabeth, daughter of F. Eberstadt. Addresses: 1, Strand Place, W.; Ely Place, Holborn, E.C.; and Walton-on-Thames.

LEWIS, George Pitt, eldest son of George G. Lewis of Exminster, and Jane Lewis, niece of Stephen Pitt of Cricchet St. Andrew, Somerset, was born at Honiton, Devon, 13, 1845. He was educated privately, and held a studentship of the Four Inns of Court in November 1869, and was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in June 1870. He became a Q.C. in 1885, and in the same year was appointed Recorder of Devon. He represented the Barnstaple division of Devonshire in the Liberal Unionist from 1885 to 1892, but voted against the Home Rule Bill of 1886. He was one of the originators of the Bar Council, now the Council of the Bar, and a member of it from its commencement. He was appointed Examiner for barristers to the Council of Legal Education in 1897, and is on the Board of Primary Examiners appointed by the Inns of Court in 1897. He is the author of "A Complete County Court Practice," which, after passing through several editions, is now merged in "The County Court Practice"; also of "The Insane and the Law," 1895. He is the editor of the 9th edition of "Taylor's Evidence," the author of "Inns of Court" and other articles in the "Encyclopedia of English Law," "The History of the Temple," &c., &c. He was appointed in 1898 one of the Honorary Counsel to the Honourable Society of the Baronetage. Address: 4 Paper Buildings, Temple, E.C.

LEWIS, Most Rev. John Travers, D.D., LL.D., Archbishop of Ontario, born in 1825 at Garrysloyne Castle, the son of the Rev. J. Lewis, of St. Anne's, Cork, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated as Senior Moderator in Ethics and Logic, and was Gold Medallist. He was ordained in 1848, and held the curacy of Newtown Butler; went to Canada in 1849, and was appointed by the Bishop of Toronto to the pastoral charge of the parish of Hawkesbury, which he exchanged in 1854 for the rectory of Brookville. He was consecrated first Bishop of Ontario, in Upper Canada, March 25, 1862. On Jan. 25, 1893, he was elected Metropolitan of Canada, and on Sept. 19 of the same year he was made Archbishop of Ontario at the General Synod held in Toronto for the Consolidation of the Church of England in Canada. Address: Bishopsleigh, Kingston, Canada.

LEWIS, The Right Rev. Richard, D.D., Bishop of Llandaff, was born in Pembroke, Pembrokeshire, March 27, 1821, and is the son of John Lewis. He was educated at Bromsgrove and at Worcester College, Oxford (B.A. 1843; M.A. 1846). He was instituted to the rectory of Lampeter-Velfry, Narberth, Pembrokeshire, in 1851, and was appointed Archdeacon of St. David's in 1875. In 1883 he was appointed Bishop of Llandaff in succession to Dr. Ollivant, and was consecrated to that See by the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Benson), in St. Paul's Cathedral on April 25 of that year. Addresses: The Palace, Llandaff; Heullan, Narberth; and Athenæum.

LEWIS, Professor William James, M.A., son of the Rev. J. Lewis, late of Bonvilston, born near Newtown, Montgomeryshire, Jan. 16, 1847, was elected a Scholar of Jesus College, Oxford, in October 1865, and obtained a first class in the University Examinations in Mathematics and Natural Science. He was elected a Fellow of Oriel College in April 1869. For some time he was Assistant-Master at Cheltenham College. He was a Member of the Total Eclipse Expeditions (English) of 1870 and 1871, and his observations on the polarisation of the corona have been published in the volume of "Solar Eclipses" issued under the auspices of the Royal Astronomical Society. In 1874 he began to study mineralogy, and for that purpose went to Cambridge, where he received the valuable assistance of Professor William Hallows Miller. He held an appointment in the Mineral Department of the British Museum from 1875 to 1877, in which latter year he resigned owing to ill-health. He has contributed several papers on Crystallography to the Philosophical Magazine. In the fishing population. The most worthy are: "The Visionary," 1870, was translated into English in 1894; "Three-Master Future," 1872; "The and his Wife," 1874, translated in "One of Life's Slaves," 1883, translated in 1896; "The Commodore's Daughter," 1886; and "Misa Ions," 1889. He published a volume of poems in 1866, and a play entitled "Lystiga Kmer" in

LIEBKNECHT, Herr, one of the most prominent of contemporary Socialism in Germany, was born at Giessen, March 29, 1826.

He attended the university of that town in his nineteenth year, and enthusiastically devoted himself to the study of philology, history, and philosophy, with the object of becoming a learned jurist or advocate. He followed socialistic tendencies at an early age, and, becoming enamoured of the writings of St. Simon, he hurried to Paris and aided in the February Revolution of 1848. Previously to this, however, he was expelled from Austria in 1846, and joined the ouvriers in Paris in 1847.

This chapter over, he assisted in a failed attempt to establish a republic in Germany, was arrested at Frankfurt and lay in prison for nine months before his trial. Soon after his liberation, Liebknecht came into collision with the authorities for trying to "impregnate" the trade unions of the Republic with Socialist principles. He was accordingly conveyed to the frontier of France, handed over to the police of that country, who conducted him to the coast, and safely and surely on a ship, and, as he says, "packed him off to England on a bale of contraband goods." From October 1862 he remained in England, leading a life of honourable privation at an "honest" occupation of journalism, and as the associate of Frederick Engels and Karl Marx, who were also temporarily exiled in this country. In 1862, on the occasion of an amnesty, Liebknecht returned to Germany, and "to the tender mercies of Prince Bismarck." He at once began work to further the Socialist cause as a journalist, schoolmaster, and lecturer. In 1865 he was again banished from Berlin to Russia. A candidate for Parliament in February 1867, he was arrested and imprisoned for three months, but was duly released seven months later for Schneeberg, in Saxony, and subsequently sentenced to Offenbach on the Main. In 1872 Liebknecht, Bebel (q.v.), and others were called to give testimony in the press and in court, against what they conceived "the fratricidal iniquity" of the Franco-German war. Arrested again, quite naturally, for high treason, Liebknecht with his colleagues was imprisoned for three months, and sentenced to two years' further incarceration. The "Man of Blood and Iron" passed his Anti-Socialist law in 1878, which continued in operation until 1890, when he retired. The effect of this law on Herr Liebknecht was to deprive him of all direct intercourse with his family for a period of twelve years. Opinions may differ with regard to the philosophy of Liebknecht, but as to the heroism and staunch conviction which have marked his career there can be no question. He visited this country in 1896, when he lectured throughout Great Britain, under the auspices of the Zurich International Socialist Committee, and returned to Germany to undergo another term of four months' imprisonment for lèse-majesté. His offence was the childish one of not rising to welcome the Emperor on his visit to open Parliament. His importance in German political life can be gauged by the fact that he has the high honour of representing Berlin in the Reichstag, in which assembly he is regarded as an "Incorruptible." He is also editor of Vorwärts, the leading Socialist organ in Germany, and is an eloquent parliamentary and public speaker.

LIEBLING, Alice, was born at Berlin, 27th November 1872, and was educated in that city and at Lausanne. Under the nom-de-plume of "Fred Aling" Madame Liebling has won a considerable reputation in Germany as a writer and a novelist. She contributed feuilletons and essays to the Berliner Tageblatt and the Montags-Welt, and in 1897 published her first novel, "Eltern Sünden" ("The Sins of the Parents"), which created some sensation in Germany on account of the boldness and vividness of the style, and the courage with which the psychological sides of the incidents were handled. "Fred Aling" has written some poetry, chiefly the ballet "Der Spielteufel," and two of her fairy tales inspired the composition of two of her husband's most famous piano pieces, "The Flower and the Butterfly" (Op. 11) and "The Star of Warsaw" (Op. 14), which were well received at the St. James's Hall in June 1898. Madame Liebling is now engaged in writing the libretto of Herr Georg Liebling's opera "Am Fjord," which will be produced shortly. "Fred Aling" has settled in the metropolis as special correspondent for Great Britain of the Berliner Kleines Journal, and of that Parisian curiosity, La Fronde, a paper written, printed, and published entirely by women. On the occasion of her husband's recital before the Queen at Osborne in August 1898. Madame Liebling had the honour of being presented to her Majesty.

LIEBLING. Georg. a German pianist, was born at Berlin, 22nd January 1865. As a child he showed remarkable musical ability both in composition and in execution. At the age of sixteen he became a teacher in the Kullak Conservatoire, Berlin, in the following year making his first tour through Germany and Austria, where he was enthusiastically received. He first studied the piano under Theodor and Franz Kullak, and learnt composition with Heinrich Urban and Alb. Becker. So promising was his future that, in 1884, Franz Liszt took him under his charge at Weimar, where he remained for two years, and thus completed his musical education. In October 1884 he gave his first Berlin concert, and from 1885 to 1889 travelled through Europe, performing before several of the Courts. He was appointed by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha as Court pianist and chamber virtuoso to his Court, and Liebling's career from that time has been one of increasing success. Although still young, he has become well known as a composer, fulfilling the promise of his early years in overtures, concertos, dances, and songs. He gave a series of ten recitals in London during 1897 and 1898 at the St. James's Hall, on each occasion receiving merited applause. His compositions, which are numerous, are widely known and played. Herr Liebling, on 4th September 1895, married, at Berlin, Alice, daughter of Herr Goldberger, an intimate acquaintance of the old Emperor, William I. On Aug. 14, 1898, Herr Georg Liebling played, by command, before her Majesty the Queen at Osborne, who expressed great delight at the performance, complimenting Herr Liebling on his skill as an executant and composer, and presenting him with a diamond pin as a memento of the occasion. In September 1898 Liebling was offered a professorship at the Guildhall School of Music, which, after some hesitation, he accepted, abandoning his projected American tour. He has played in several of the large provincial towns, such as Liverpool, Blackburn, and Manchester (at the Hallé concerts)—appearing with Patti at the Dome, Brighton—and has everywhere been received with great favour. Herr Liebling has settled, for the time being, in London. Address: 13B Hyde Park Mansions.

LI HSI, King of Corea, succeeded to the throne in 1864, and although he has the reputation of being a weak and vacillating ruler, owing to his country being the battle-ground of China and Japan, yet he has firmly held the Court of Peking in check, and to possess Chosen, and to prevent ambassadors to other countries. An Agent now resides at Seoul, regarded as the real King of Corea.

LI HUNG CHANG, Generalissimo Prime Minister of China, was born at Fei Shienn, in the Anhwei, Feb. 16, 1823. In 1850 he went with General Chen to suppress the Taiping rebellion, then Governor of the Thiang provinces. The other Thiang provinces fell under his rule, he was created Viceroy of the united countries May 1853. In the following year he was appointed Viceroy of the provinces of Kuang, and a Grand Marshal. After the Tien-Tsin massacre he was despoiled of his titles, and punished on the charge of treason. The General in command, by the reigning Emperor restored him, and to the office of Grand Marshal. He was the mediator for fixing the indemnity for the murder of Mr. Mayer, killed in 1876 while endeavouring to explore South-western China. He also negotiated important treaties with Peru and with Japan. Li Hung Chang was till lately the Viceroy of the metropolitan provinces of Peking, such was the actual ruler of the Empire. A traitor of the Chinese Empire, a man of liberal views, has been a mining and coast-steamer man, carried on by English companies, thought to be favourable even to the navy. He was the originator of the Chinese navy. During the recent war with Japan, General Li Hung Chang, the man, and more than once disgraced by the Emperor, in 1895 the whole burden of the Empire, which in a constitutional monarchy would be divided between various ministries, has performed the functions of the Ministry, Marine Ministry, Ministry, and that without any civil service to assist him. He issues edicts, but does not provide means for carrying them out. Li Hung Chang has devolved the whole providing means, whether in detail. Indeed, he has been regarded as the Atlas on whose shoulders the rotten fabric of Chinese Empire has rested for thirty years. At the beginning of the recent war, he was vested by the Emperor with the charge of the naval and military forces sent to Corea, but early in the war he was deprived of the Yellow J. Peacock's Feather, and w

the chief command. venient ascendancy which Britain might acquire at Peking. In March 1898 China acknowledged that the mission of her envoy, Li Hung Chang, to St. Petersburg, had been unsuccessful, and that she had no alternative but to agree to the Russian demands. It is impossible to trace here all the influences, direct and indirect, which Li Hung Chang exerted over the course of events. He evidently gave some measure of satisfaction to his Imperial master, for in June 1898 the Emperor conferred upon him the Chinese Order of the Double Dragon (third degree, first class), a distinction never before bestowed on a Chinese subject. Rumours were current in China during August 1898 reflecting doubtfully upon Li Hung Chang's integrity, and in September 1898 he was dismissed from the Tsung-li-Yamen by an Imperial decree. This momentous occurrence was regarded as a distinct success for British diplomacy, and, although Li was permitted to retain the position of Senior Grand Secretary, it was expected that, anticipating dismissal, he would resign. The cause of his disgrace was that he deceived the Tsung-li-Yamen as to the true nature of the terms of the Lu-han railway contract, and it was understood that, Li having served its purpose, Russia would abandon him. Towards the end of September 1898 rumour reached England that the Dowager Empress had recovered her ascendancy over the Emperor, and that consequently the return to power of Li Hung Chang, her lieutenant, was imminent. Whatever may be conjectured concerning his career as a diplomatist, admiration cannot be withheld from the elevating and distinguished efforts he has made to further the social and educational interests of his country. A recent writer, Mr. Valentine Chirol, has given the following portrait of this potent politician: "Gifted with no mean intelligence and with a double dose of Chinese cunning, he is too much of a sceptic to allow prejudices or principles of any kind to stand in his way. Brought more often than most of his fellow-countrymen into contact with Europeans, especially during his five-and-twenty years' residence at Tien-tsin, he has rubbed up acquaintance with Western modes of thought, and he has learned with some success the art of turning towards every European whom he meets that facet of his character which is most likely to impress his visitor. On proper occasions he will shed crocodile's tears over the iniquity of the opium trade, yet nowhere does the cultivation of the native poppy receive more encouragement than in the province which he rules or on his own vast estates. He will deplore the lamentable periodicity of families and yet will allow his subordinates to secure a gigantic corner in grain. It is difficult to believe that his own lands are clear when he is known to have amassed in the course of a long official career a colossal fortune, reputed by many to be the largest possessed by any single individual in the world, and certainly in Canada. His life was written by R. K. Douglas, and published in 1895.

LILLY, William Samuel, M.A., J.P., eldest son of the late William Lilly, of Windout House, near Exeter, was born at Fifehead, Dorsetshire, on July 10, 1840, and educated at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, where in 1858 he obtained the senior scholarship and the Classical Prize. He graduated in 1861 in the Law Tripos, and in the same year obtained an appointment, by open competition, in the Civil Service of India. He was sent to the Presidency of Madras, where, after filling various public offices, he was appointed, in 1869, Under-Secretary to the Government. He left India on account of ill-health in 1870. He was called to the English Bar in 1873, and in 1874 was appointed Secretary to the Catholic Union of Great Britain, which office he still holds. He published, in 1884, "Ancient Religion and Modern Thought"; in 1886, "Chapters in European History," 2 vols.; in 1889, "A Century of Revolution"; in 1890, "On Right and Wrong"; in 1892, "On Shibboleths" and "The Great Enigma"; in 1893 with J. E. P. Walsh a "Manual of the Law specially affecting Catholics"; in 1894, the "Claims of Christianity"; and in 1897, "Essays and Speeches," and is well known as a contributor to the Quarterly, Contemporary and Fortnightly Reviews, and to the Nineteenth Century, upon philosophical and historical subjects. He is a Justice of the Peace for the counties of Middlesex and London. He married, in 1878, Susannah, second daughter of the Rev. George Hall. Residence: 27 Egerton Terrace, S.W.; Club: The Athenæum.

LINCOLN, The Hon. Robert Todd, American statesman, is the son of the sixteenth President of the United States, and was born at Springfield, Illinois, Aug. 1, 1843. He was prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N.H., and graduated at Harvard in 1864. After a short stay at the Harvard Law School he was commissioned a Captain in the Union Army, and served through the final campaign of the Civil War. He pursued the study of law, was called to the bar, and began the practice at Chicago. All offers of office were steadily refused. He was Assistant Secretary of the War Department, and this became a source of controversy on account of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln. He was requested by President Grant to retain his seat, with a view to his accession to the presidency, but declined in 1865. In 1867 he resumed the practice of law at Chicago, where he remained until 1870, when he was called to the bar in Harrisburg, Pa., and returned to England. He resigned the beginning of Mr. Gladstone's Administration, and again resumed professional work in England.

LINDLEY, The Right Hon. Nathaniel, Master of the Rolls, eldest son of the late Dr. Nathaniel Lindley, F.R.S., Professor of Botany at University College, London, and daughter of a well-known botanical writer, was the daughter of Mr. George Lindley, of St. Margaret's, London, born at Acton Green, Middlesex, and educated at University College, London. He was called to the bar at the Middle Temple, in Michaelmas, 1852, and practised in the Chancery. In 1872 he obtained a silk and was appointed a Judge of the Chancery Division in May 1873, and was received the honour of a Knight of the Bath in 1875, and became one of the Lord Justices of the Court of Appeal in November 1875, and a member of the Privy Council the following month, and Master of the Rolls in Oct. 1897. In 1862 he was called to the bar at the Middle Temple, and in 1865 Chairman of the Council of Education. In 1868 he received the LL.D. of Edinburgh University. He is the author of an "Introduction to Jurisprudence," and of treatises on "Partnership and Companies," a fifth and sixth edition have been published. In 1858 he married the daughter of Edward John Taylor. Address: 19 Craven Hill, East Carlton, Norwich; At-life he has devoted himself to pursuits. During his residence in he became an intimate friend of the Gibson, and embracing art as a study enjoyed the advantage of the instruction of Ary Scheffer. Sir Coutts, whom professional artists used to consider as an amateur, has examined many pictures at the Royal Academy, notably the "Good Shepherd," and a portrait of Lord Somers. His most important work is, perhaps, to be found in the Upper House, the central hall of which is decorated entirely from his designs, and mainly by his own hand. He is imbued with the Early Italian style of painting, for decorative purposes, and on a plain ground, he has left in Mr. Lindsay's mansion a substantial record of his work.

LINDSAY, Sir Countess, married, J.P., D.L., born in 1824, Colonel Grenadier Guards; late commanding the Fife Rifle Volunteers; late Major commanding the 1st Battalion of the Italian Legion, was the eldest daughter of Sir Countess Lindsay. He succeeded his maternal grandfather in 1837. Since his retirement

He was on the English Commission, and a member of the Fine Arts Commission, of the Paris Exhibition. He was the owner of the Grosvenor Gallery in London, and of its greatness. In building it, he was not actuated by any spirit of competition to the Royal Academy, but by the idea of affording an increased opportunity for the exhibition of their works. He married in 1864 Blanche, daughter of the late Right Hon. H. FitzGerald, and well known as a painter and sculptress. Addresses: Balcarres, Colinsdale; and 4 Cromwell Place, S.W.

LINDSAY, David, F.R.G.S., Australian explorer, was born at Goolwa, on the Murray, South Australia, June 20, 1841. He is the younger son of John Scott Lindsay, a master-mariner, of Dundee. He was educated at the Goolwa School, and at the Rev. John Lindsay's Private School at Port Elliot; was a Painted Cadet in the South Australian Survey Department in June 1873, and in March 1874, Junior Surveyor of the Northern Territory in 1878, re-joined his post in the Government service in 1882, was appointed, by the South Australian Government, as Leader of the first Land Exploring Expedition in which journey much new territory was discovered and mapped down, and which hardship endured through short-rations, they having, for the last weeks, to subsist on horseflesh dried in the sun. The expedition lost sixteen men through accidents and starvation, and their horses were speared by natives at their camp. Mr. Lindsay carried out a long exploration at his own risk and went straight across Australia from South to North, occupying twelve months, from November 1885 to December 1886 (during this time only three showers of rain fell). He surveyed and marked on the ground the lines of Run boundary lines, connecting the Queensland border-line with the Adelaide and Port Darwin telegraph line; and discovered the "Rubies" in MacDonnell Ranges, Central Australia. The journals of these two explorations have been published in the South Australian parliamentary papers, and by the Royal Geographical Society of England. Mr. Lindsay is a Member of the Council of the South Australian Institute of Surveyors, Member of the Board of Examiners for Licensed Surveyors, Honorary Member of the South Australian branch, and Honorary Corresponding Member of the Victorian branch of the Royal Geographical Society of Australasia, and Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London.

LINGEN, Lord, Ralph Robert Wheeler Lingen, K.C.B., D.C.L., Baron Lingen of Lingen, in the county of Hereford, only son of Mr. Thomas Lingen, and of Ann, daughter of Mr. Robert Wheeler, of Birmingham, born in that town on Feb. 19, 1819, was educated at Bridgnorth Grammar School, whence he was elected, in 1837, to a scholarship at Trinity College, Oxford. He obtained the Ireland University Scholarship in 1838, the Hertford University Scholarship in 1839, graduated B.A. as a first-class in Classics in 1840, was afterwards elected to a Fellowship at Balliol College, and obtained the Chancellor's prize for a Latin Essay in 1843, and the Eldon Law Scholarship in 1846. He was elected an honorary D.C.L. in 1881. He studied in the chambers of the late Mr. Peter Brodie and the late Mr. Heathfield, and was called to the Bar in 1847, but shortly afterwards entered the Educational Department of the Privy Council, and in 1849 succeeded Sir J. P. Kay-Shuttleworth, Bart., as Secretary. In January 1870 he was appointed to succeed the Right Hon. G. A. Hamilton as Permanent Secretary of the Treasury, and held this post till 1885. He was nominated C.B. in 1869, and K.C.B. in 1878. He was created a Peer July 3, 1885, and elected an Alderman of the first London County Council in 1889, but resigned in 1893. He is a Governor of Rugby and Bedford Schools, and a member of the Committee for editing the Statutes and State Trials. He married, in 1852, Emma, second daughter of Mr. Robert Hutton, of Putney Park, Surrey, formerly M.P. for the city of Dublin. Addresses: 13 Wetherley Gardens, S.W.; and Athenæum.

LIPTON. Sir Thomas J. Kt., merchant and banker, born in Glasgow of Irish parentage, is the owner of extensive property in Ceylon, and is well known in within the reach of every purse. The porter of tea he has been a benefactor of the working-man, of the working-man's wife and child. On Thursday in Jubilee week he sprang into fame as the provider of drunk by some 300,000 poverty-stricken Londoners, in fifty-six different places where Jubilee dinners were provided for them at the kind instance of the Princess of Wales. To this tea-drinking Sir Thomas Lipton generously contributed £25,000. His tea earned its reward, and he was knighted. Address: Osidge, Southgate, N.

1. Lord, Joseph Lister, Bart., F.R.S., F.R.C.S., LL.D., President of the Royal Society, Surgeon-Extraordinary to the Queen, Emeritus Professor of Clinical Surgery in King's College, London, is the son of the late Joseph Jackson Lister, of Upton, Essex, and was born in 1827. He is a B.A. and M.B. of the University of London, 1852; a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, 1852; a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh, 1855. He was formerly Regius Professor of Surgery at the University of Glasgow, and afterwards Regius Professor of Clinical Surgery at the University of Edinburgh. In 1875 he was one of the members appointed to the General Medical Council for Scotland, and in 1880 he was elected to the Privy Council. In 1880 he received the Medal of the Royal Society; the following year the prize of the Academy of Paris was awarded to him for his observations and discoveries in the application of the antiseptic treatment to surgery, which has often been called "Listerism," and is now of world-wide fame and universal benefit. He received the degree of LL.D. from Glasgow University in 1879; D.C.L. from Oxford in 1880; LL.D. at Cambridge in 1883, and in 1883 was made a Baronet by the Queen on Gladstone's recommendation. He has been the recipient of many other degrees and distinctions. In 1896, he was elected President of the Royal Society, and elevated to the peerage, as Lord Lister of Lyme Regis, and is, if not the first man called to the House of Lords, the first to be called there in recognition of his great position as a surgeon. In the September of that year he was President of the British Association, and at the Liverpool meeting delivered a masterly and comprehensive address on "Listerism" and all that the word implies. Old pupils of his recognised the sum and substance of his teacher's teaching during many previous years, but the general public, profoundly ignorant of the recent march of surgical science, were none the less profoundly impressed with what to them proved a revelation. Since that date his lordship has taken much the same position in the world of English science as that taken by Huxley a decade or two ago. The Royal College of Surgeons of England has presented him with its medal, an honour granted to very few, and he has been fêted at a great banquet of the medical profession and of scientific men generally. His portrait, painted by Mr. O'Connell, R.A., and subscribed for by his admirers, was presented to him by Mr. Davis-Colley, on behalf of the surgical profession, in the theatre of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, in the hall of which it now hangs. More recently he was entertained by his former "dressers" at a banquet, of which Dr. St. Clair Thomson was secretary. At the Virchow address and dinner (October 1898), Lord Lister fitly presided, and was the object of the illustrious German savant's most fervent eulogy. During his address, Professor Virchow expressed the admiration felt for Lord Lister's grand scientific achievements by the Continent at large by one of those acts of spontaneous courtesy which, though rarely witnessed in this self-contained island, are an honour to foreign men of learning, for he turned round, at a critical point in his oration, and shook the subject of our notice warmly by the hand. It was a historic incident. In June 1899 the Council of the Royal Institution of Public Health awarded the Harben Gold Medal for 1899 to Lord Lister, "in recognition of his eminent services to preventive medicine." He is the author of papers "On the Early Stages of Inflammation," &c., in the Philosophical Transactions; "On the Minute Structure of Involuntary Muscular Fibre," in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Edinburgh; and of various other papers on "Surgical Pathology," &c. One of his latest papers on "Principles of Antiseptic Surgery" appeared in Virchow's Festschrift in 1891. He married, in 1856, Agnes, daughter of J. Syme. This lady died in 1893. Addresses: 12 Park Crescent, Portland Place, W.; and Athenæum.

LISTOWEL, Earl of, The Right Hon. William Hare, K.P., J.P., was born at Convamore, co. Cork, on May 29, 1833, and succeeded his father as 3rd Earl in 1856. Obtaining a commission in the Scots Guards in 1852, he was present at the battle of the Alma, where he was severely wounded, and retired as a Captain in 1856. He acted as a Lord-in-Waiting in 1880, was created K.P. in 1873, and is Vice-Admiral of the Province of Munster. Lord Listowel married, in 1865, Lady Ernestine Mary Brudenell-Bruce, daughter of the 3rd Marquis of Ailesbury. Addresses: Kingston House, Princes Gate, S.W.; and Convamore, Ballyhooly, co. Cork.

LITTLE, The Rev. William John Knox, M.A., Canon of Worcester, is a son of Mr. John Little, of Stewartstown, co. Tyrone, and was born in 1839. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1862 as a third class in the Classical Tripos, and proceeded M.A. in due course. He was successively assistant master in Lancaster and Sherborne Grammar Schools; curate of Christ Church, Lancaster; curate in charge of Turweston, Bucks; and curate of St. Thomas's, Regent Street. He was collated to the rectory of St. Alban's, Cheetwood, in 1875, and remained there until 1885, when he was appointed Vicar of Hoar Cross. In September 1881 he was nominated by Mr. Gladstone to the canonry in Worcester Cathedral that had been vacated by the promotion of Canon Bradley to the Deanery of Westminster. Canon Knox Little is well known as a most eloquent popular preacher of the High Church School, whose sermons suggest the grand flights of the Jesuit orators of the Roman Church. Perhaps his most memorable sermon is that which he delivered on the text in the "Song of Solomon," "He is chiefest among ten thousand; he is altogether lovely." He is the author of "Characteristics of the Christian Life," "Meditations on the Three Hours' Agony of our Blessed Redeemer," "Motives of the Christian Life," and a volume of "Sermons" and some novels, one of which is "The Child of Stafferton," 1889. One of his most recent publications is "The Christian House, its Foundation and Duties," 1891. He married, in 1866, Annie, eldest daughter of Mr. Henry Gregson, of Moorlands, Lancashire, and has issue. Address: The Vicarage, Hoar Cross, Burton-on-Trent.

LITTLER, Ralph Daniel Makinson, Q.C., C.B., is the son of the late Rev. Robert Littler of London, and was born on Oct. 2, 1835. He graduated B.A. at the University of London in 1854, was Common Law Prizeman, and is a member of the Convocation of the University. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1857, but was admitted a barrister at the Middle Temple in 1870, becoming a Q.C. in 1873, and a bencher in 1882. He practises on the Northern and North-Eastern Circuits, and is the author of "Practice and Evidence in Divorce Cases";

"Digest of Cases before the House of Commons." Address: 11, Pall Mall, E.C.

LIVEING, George D. D.Sc., F.R.S., eldest son of George D. Liveing of Nayland, Suffolk, born Dec. 21, 1827, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. He took his B.A. in 1850; M.A. 1853; and in the same year Fellow and Lecturer in John's College. He was a member of the Cambridge Essayists, 1855. He was Professor of Chemistry at Trinity College, Sandhurst, and of Chemistry in the University of Cambridge, 1861; and was elected a member of the Royal Society, 1870. He was born in Cambridgeshire. Professor Liveing is joint-author with Professor Dewar of "Ultra-Violet Spectra of Gases," in the Transactions of the Royal Society, 1883; and of many papers on scientific subjects in the Proceedings of the Royal Society, the Proceedings of the Philosophical Society, and the Nature Magazine; and of "Chemical Results of the Dissipation of Heat," 1885. Besides his scientific work, Professor Liveing's energies have been given to the spread of education. In 1852 there were no laboratories in Cambridge in which students could study the practical applications of science. In the year he established, at his own expense, the first chemical laboratory in Cambridge, and for twelve years, he presided over the laboratory built for him by the University College. This was the beginning of the system of experimental science in Cambridge, which has now so prominent a place in the University. In the first establishment of local examinations of the University, he took a leading part, and for many years he was the organising secretary of the examinations. During that time, to a great measure through his efforts, the examination and inspection of the University of secondary schools, and the admission of girls and girls' schools to the examinations were carried out. He also took an active part in the establishment, in 1873, of the Oxford and Cambridge Schools Examination, and in 1875 he promoted, and in 1876 he organised, the examination in State Medicine in the whole medical profession, since taken the name of Examinations in Public Health. It has been the model for similar examinations by other bodies. In recent years he has actively promoted the establishment of the School of Agricultural Science in Cambridge, which has received

ral county councils. Appointed President of Magdalen College, to examine into the working of University Colleges, he issued his "Report on University Colleges," in conjunction with Warren, in 1897. He married, Katharine, second daughter of John Ingram, rector of Great and Little Illingham, Norfolk, who died without issue. Addresses: The Cambridge; and Athenæum.

LIVERPOOL, Bishop of. See RYLE, THE REV. JOHN CHARLES.

LIVERSIDGE, Professor Archibald. M.A., F.R.S., President Royal Society of New South Wales, was educated at a private school, and by private study in science in London. He entered the Royal College of Chemistry and Royal School of Mines, London, 1866, and obtained the Royal Exhibition at these places; this privilege was tenable for three years with £50 per year and remission of all fees, equal to about £100 per annum. At the same examination he obtained Medals in chemistry, mineralogy, and metallurgy. During his first year as student at the Royal College of Chemistry he was given charge of the Chemical Laboratory at the Royal School of Naval Architecture for one term, during the illness of the lecturer, and published his first paper, "Super-saturated Saline Solutions." He was trained in Chemistry at the Royal College of Chemistry, under Professor Thomas Graham, F.R.S., D.C.L., &c. He took the studentship of the School of Mines, Royal College of Chemistry and Mining, 1870, after which he studied and passed in Physics under Professor Tyndall, Geology under Professor Ramsay, Mineralogy and Metallurgy under Sir W. Warrington Smyth, and Metallurgy under Dr. Percy. He spent some time in Dr. Frankland's private chemical laboratory, as a student upon research work. In 1871 he obtained an open scholarship in Chemistry at Christ's College, Cambridge. In his first year at Cambridge he held the office of Demonstrator of Chemistry in the University Laboratory for two terms in the absence of Dr. Hicks. He was one of the first two students in the new Geological Laboratory at Cambridge, created by Professor Michael Foster. He was elected to the Royal Society. In 1872 he offered the appointment of Professor of Chemistry and Mineralogy in the University of Sydney, and went out in the month of that year. He was a Representative Commissioner at the Paris Exposition in 1878, and a juror in chemistry and metallurgy. He has been a trustee of the Australian Museum, Sydney, since 1874, and during visits to Europe, America, &c., purchased most of the non-Australian mineral and geological collections which it possesses. Professor Liversidge has also been a member of the Sydney University Senate since 1878 and Dean of the Faculty of Science since the formation of that faculty in 1883. He made the chemical investigations upon the Sydney water supply for the Government in 1876; was one of the original members of the Board of Technical Education, and Hon. Secretary of the Royal Society of N.S.W. from 1874 to 1889, except when he was President in 1883-84. He was the President for 1889-90 (this being an annual office). He was elected to the Fellowship of the Royal Society, England, in 1882. He published a work on the minerals of N.S.W. in 1888, to show the progress made in the knowledge of the mineralogy of N.S.W. during the first 100 years of its history. He originated the Australasian Association for the Advancement of Science, as a centennial record of the progress of the colonies. This Association held its first meeting in Sydney in 1890. He has visited Tasmania and New Zealand several times, Fiji, Java, China, Japan, and the United States in 1887. Professor Archibald Liversidge is an Associate of the Royal School of Mines, London; Fellow of the Chemical Society, London; Fellow Inst. Chemistry of Gt. Brit. and Irel.; F.G.S.; F.L.S.; F.R.G.S.; Mem. Phys. Soc. London; Mem. Mineralogical Soc. Gt. Brit. and Irel.; Cor. Mem. Roy. Soc. Tas.; Cor. Mem. Senckenberg Institute, Frankfurt; Cor. Mem. Soc. d'Acclimat., Mauritius; Hon. Fel. Roy. Hist. Soc. Lond.; Mem. Min. Soc. of France; Professor of Chemistry in the University of Sydney; Editor for many years of the Journal of the Royal Society of New South Wales; and is the author of nearly a hundred scientific papers and reports on chemistry, mineralogy, &c. Address: Sydney.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources needed to complete each task.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress regularly to ensure that the project is on track.

5. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves comparing the actual outcomes with the objectives and goals to determine the effectiveness of the project and identify areas for improvement.

B, John, was born on Aug. 7, 1840, End New Town, in the county of Essex. After a creditable examination in 1862, he received a call to the Wesleyan Methodist ministry, but preferred a commercial sphere, remaining a teacher. In 1870 he established a journal, the Kingsland Monthly Messenger, which proved a success. In 1872 his services were transferred to the Evening Age, a weekly journal which had been established about twelve months, and a sale of about 5000 copies weekly. In a few years, by his energy, it reached a circulation of about 80,000 copies weekly. Mr. Lobb became the chief proprietor.

In 1876 he was urged by the late Samuel Morley, M.P., and George Peck, the well-known philanthropist, to contribute to the Rev. Josiah Henson, the original character of Mrs. Beecher's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Within a few months, by lectures and preaching, he raised for him upwards of £1000.

He edited the story of Mr. Henson, which also contained a preface by the Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury. Within six weeks upwards of 30,000 copies were sold. Subsequently the book was translated into twelve languages. A total of a million have been sold. On Friday, March 5, 1877, Mr. Lobb received Her Majesty's command to attend at Windsor Castle, with the hero of his book, and the honour of inscribing his name in Her Majesty's private album. At the next election of the London School Board of 1882, he was returned for the ward of Hackney, second on the poll, with 11,576 votes. In 1885, of the thirteen candidates he was returned at the head of the poll, polling 15,092. In 1888 he was returned at the head of the poll, with 17,360 votes; and at the triennial election of 1891 he was again at the head of the poll, polling 14,002. At the triennial election of 1894 he lost his seat, it being the first and only occasion on which Mr. Lobb had identified himself with any party.

Although known as an Independent, he was regarded as a "Diggleite." In 1894 he was again returned to the Board. It may be said in justice to Mr. Lobb, however, that he was strongly opposed to the proposal of Mr. Stanley Riley and his friends on the question of the new school. Mr. Lobb is known as a famous pamphleteer, on "School Extravagance," "The Scandals of the Board," "Pen and Ink Sketches of All Members," "A Twelve Years' Experience of the London School Board." His pamphlet, published in 1885, reached a circulation of 97,000 copies in six weeks. He was for nine years Chairman of the Stores Committee, and subsequently Chairman of the Finance Committee in succession to

Sir Richard Temple, Bart., M.P. In 1886 he edited and published "The Life and Times of Frederick Douglass," the famous runaway slave who was afterwards Marshal to the District of Columbia, U.S.A., to which the Right Hon. John Bright contributed a preface. In 1879 he published the "Life of the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.," and also "Arrows and Anecdotes and the Story of the Great Revival." In 1877 he published a weekly paper called the Daisy Family Story Paper, which in five years reached a weekly sale of 15,000 copies. In 1882 he received £1000 for the copyright of the Daisy, which was subsequently conducted by Mrs. Joseph Parker of the City Temple. He is a Guardian of the City of London Union, of whom there are ninety-four, being elected in 1885 for the parish of St. Bride, Fleet Street, E.C. He is a Member of the Metropolitan Asylums Board, and has published pamphlets on dementia, imbecility, and idiocy in its various forms. He is Ex-Chairman of the Lunatic Visiting Committee of the City of London Union, the Contract Committee, and is Vice-Chairman of the Finance Committee. In 1887 he was elected a Member of the Court of Common Council for the ward of Farringdon Without. He has served on the Central Markets, the Billingsgate Market, and was Vice-Chairman of the Finance of the Markets Committees. He has served for ten years on the Officers and Clerks Committee, and six years on the Freeman's Orphan School Committee, and was Chairman for two years in succession. He is also a Member of the Guildhall Library Committee, the Epping Forest Committee, and one of the Court of Assistants to the Honourable Irish Society. On the occasion of the German Emperor's visit to the City he was a Member of the Reception Committee, and in 1894 served on the Lord Mayor's Committee; and on the occasion of the Queen's visit to the City on June 22, 1898, was one of the five Common Councilmen appointed to receive her Majesty with the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs at Temple Bar. He has served for twelve years as a Governor of Lady Holles's Trust to the Ward of Cripplegate, E.C. He is a Governor of St. Bride's Foundation, a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, and the Royal Geographical Society. On July 21, 1891, he was publicly presented with a testimonial in the form of a cheque for £250 and an illuminated address, in the Mansion House, by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir Joseph Savory, Bart., M.P. A silver tea and coffee service was at the same time presented to Mrs. Lobb. In 1896 he was the recipient of another public testimonial in the form of a solid silver fruit-stand was Minister of Commerce under M. de Freycinet in 1886, and of Public Instruction in 1888 under M. Floquet; and in 1886 was charged with the organisation of the International Exhibition of 1889. In the September elections of 1889 he was elected for the Second District of the 11th Arrondissement of Paris, beating the Boulangist Massard by a large majority. M. Lockroy was for long an important member of Victor Hugo's circle, having married the widow of Charles Hugo in 1877. On the constitution of the Brisson Cabinet in 1898, he was offered, and he accepted, the Portfolio of Minister of Marine, a position on which he has laid the foundations of an European reputation. His statesmanlike reorganisation of the navy received such support from all responsible parties that, notwithstanding the overthrow of his colleagues, M. Lockroy retained office as Minister of Marine in M. Charles Dupuy's Cabinet of October 1898, and through this unusual opportunity was enabled to continue the most sublime whose foundations he

For this purpose he visited Egypt in 1891 and 1893; the results of his inquiries are included in his last published work. Sir Norman Lockyer is a Knight of the Brazilian Order of the Rose, and he received the distinction of C.B. for his public service on the occasion of the New-Year Honours in 1894, and K.C.B. on the occasion of the Queen's Jubilee in 1897. On Nov. 22, 1894, a complimentary dinner, attended by many eminent men of science, was given to Sir Norman Lockyer to commemorate the jubilee of Nature, of which he is the original editor. In 1858 Sir Norman Lockyer married Winifred, daughter of William James, Trehinshon, near Aber- gavenny. Addresses: 16 Penywern Road, Earl's Court, S.W.; and Athenæum.

LODER, Gerald Walter Erskine, M.P., LL.B., J.P., D.L., was born in Sussex on Oct. 25, 1861, and is the fourth son of the late Sir Robert Loder, Bart., M.P. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge (M.A.). Called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1888, he became private secretary to the Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, at that time President of the Local Government Board. From 1892 to 1896 he was private secretary to Lord George Hamilton, Secretary of State for India. Since 1889 he has represented Brighton as a Conservative, and is a Director of the London and Brighton Railway. He married, in 1890, Lady Louise, eldest daughter of the 10th Duke of St. Albans. Address: 48 Cadogan Square, S.W.

LODGE, Professor Oliver Joseph, D.Sc., LL.D., F.R.S., was born on June 12, 1851, at Penkhull, near Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, and is the son of Oliver and Grace Lodge, and grandson of Rev. Oliver Lodge, of Barking, Essex, and of Elsworth, Cambridgeshire (formerly of co. Tipperary), and of the Rev. Joseph Heath, of Lucton, Herefordshire. At the age of eight he went to Newport Grammar School, in the house of Rev. John Hea- wood; with whom also, when rector of Combs, Suffolk, he was under private tuition between the ages of twelve and fourteen. At fourteen he was taken into business to help his father, who was in failing health, and he continued in business till the age of twenty-one; matriculating at the London University and taking honours in Physics at the intermediate B.Sc., by evening work. He also obtained, through the Science and Art Department, a winter's work at the Chemical Labora- tory, South Kensington. In 1872 he was

proximo accessit to a scholarship at St. John's College, Cambridge, and in the same winter went to University College, London, to study mathematics under Professors Henrici and Clifford, and to work in Professor Carey Foster's laboratory. He took the D.Sc. degree, and married in 1877; lectured on Physics at the Bedford College (for ladies), became Assistant-Professor of Physics at University College, London, and, during the illness of Professor W. K. Clifford, took charge of most of his classes. In 1880 he was appointed Professor of Physics at the University College, then just established in Liverpool. This office he continues to hold. In 1887 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society; and in 1888 the honorary LL.D. of St. Andrews University was conferred upon him. He is best known as a teacher, and he has examined for both the London University and the Science and Art Department. His writings are a text-book of "Elementary Mechanics," 1877; and "Modern Views of Electricity," 1889; a treatise on the phenomena of lightning and other disruptive discharges called "Lightning Conductors and Lightning Guards," 1892; and a popular illustrated work on astronomical biography and discoveries called "Pioneers of Science," 1893. His scientific papers have appeared chiefly in the Philosophical Magazine, but he has written considerably in Nature and the Electrician; occasionally also in the Engineer. He has lectured at the London Institution on "Electricity and Light," and on "The Ether and its Functions"; also at the British Association at Montreal on "Dust"; and at the Royal Institution on the "Deposition of Dust Fume and Fog by Electricity," on "The Leyden Jar," on "Aberration," and (in 1897) to a Christmas audience on "The Principle of the Electric Telegraph." His chief experimental work has been connected with the alternating character of lightning and other discharges, and with the propagation of electro-magnetic waves (see Philosophical Magazine, August 1888). In this latter subject, he was on the track of the nearly simultaneous discoveries made by the late Dr. Hertz. These discoveries verify the electrical and optical theories of Clerk Maxwell, and owe their importance and rapid acceptance to his scientific insight. In conjunction with the late J. W. Clark, Professor Lodge discovered the now well-known power of electricity to coagulate or condense suspended particles of fume or fog. He has also written largely on electrolysis and on contact electricity, and has devised models illustrating Clerk Maxwell's theories. In 1891 he was President of Section A of the British Association at Cardiff, where he delivered an address, which is often quoted. His views on the need for scientific recognition of "occult" phenomena are, in fact, an active member of the Society for Psychical Research, and he has contributed to their Proceedings. For many years he was engaged on the question whether moving magnets would disturb the ether of space. His questions connected with astronomical aberration (Philosophical Soc., 1893, 1897). His theory of the ether is absolutely free from mechanical viscosity, and therefore not disturbed in a "rotational" motion by mechanical means. An experiment of importance, made with a lightning guard for cables, was manufactured by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, the fact that metals exert an electrical influence, a principle which led to the most sensitive electric waves known. Such waves from one station can be received at a distant station, and there by a receiver can be made to affect any telegraph instrument. This method of communication through space was demonstrated to a large number of persons, but most completely by Professor Lodge in 1894, though it has recently excited much interest in scientific circles. An account of his searches is contained in a paper published by the Electrician of London, entitled, "The Wave Theory and some of his Successors." In connection with Dr. A. Muirhead, Professor Loewe has now devised and executed a method for syntonising or tuning the receiver in wireless telegraphy. The response is discriminative as well as efficient, and he has made further experiments in the same direction by an apparatus which has not yet been published. It has been referred to by Professor vanus Thompson in a recent paper to the Society of Arts. In February 1898 he was elected President of the Physico-Mathematical Society of London. Professor Loewe was born in 1839, Mary F. A. Marshall, 2 Grove Park, Liverpool.

LOEWE, The Rev. Dr. born at Zülz, in Prussian Silesia, and was educated at Rosenbergschule, and subsequently at the theological schools of Lissa, Nicholasburg, and Breslau, University of Berlin. He was in 1839 Hebrew Lecturer at the University of Berlin. He was in 1856 Head-Master of the Jewish School in Finsbury Square; in 1858 Lecturer in Oriental Languages to the House of Preceptors; and in 1868 Director of Sir Moses Montefiore's Hebrew College at Ramsgate.

under the auspices of the Duke of Northumberland (see), the Earl of Munster, and Sir Sydney Smith, in 1837, 1838, in Egypt, Ethiopia, Syria, Palestine, Greece, and for the study of Arabic, Coptic, and Circassian languages. He accompanied Sir Moses Montefiore on nine of his philanthropic journeys to the East, and on four to Roumania, and Rome. He published "The Origin of the Hebrew Language," proved by the Analysis of the Hebrew Language, in the Asiatic Researches (London, 1839), in Dr. Philippson's Monatsschrift der Wissenschaften, Nos. 1-12, Leipzig, 1839; a at Vienna, National Astronomical Observatory; born at Vienna, April 18, 1811, one of the most distinguished astronomers of his time. In consequence of his Jewish origin he was not allowed to follow a scientific career in his own country. He was, however, co-discoverer of Uranus, and invited him to Vienna, where he became a naturalised citizen. On the re-organisation of the Observatory in 1873 he was made chief astronomer. He was appointed to the Bureau des Longitudes in 1874, and the next year a member of the Académie des Sciences, to the chair of Astronomy. He was nominated Sub-director of the Observatory in 1878, and remained in that position for 10 years. He is a member of the Académie des Sciences of Vienna and of the Royal Society, London, which he gained in 1889, and of the Legion of Honour. His chief work has been the determination of the longitudes of Vienna, Algiers, and Algiers, compared with that of Paris, by a new method that he has invented. His writings, which are exclusively scientific, have been published in the Mémoires of the Academy of Vienna, in the Comptes Rendus of the Academy of Sciences, and in the Annales of the Observatory; his articles deal with the determination of orbits of comets and planets and other astronomical and mathematical questions. Address: L'Observatoire, Paris.

LO FENG-LUH, Sir Chih Chen, K.C.V.O., is the seventh son of Lo Shao Tsung, a celebrated scholar and distinguished military officer of Foo Chow. He was born in 1850, and was educated privately by his father, and at the Imperial Naval College on the river Min, from which he passed out first in 1872. He subsequently came to London, and studied at King's College, and in 1877 was attached to Kosung Tao's Mission. From 1879 to 1881 he was at the Chinese Legation in Berlin, and in 1882 he became Secretary to Li Hung Chang (q.v.), accompanying him as First Confidential Secretary of his Staff on important foreign missions, among others, to Shimonoseki, where the Peace Treaty with Japan was signed (1895). He also formed part of the congratulatory Embassy to the coronation of the Czar and on the subsequent European tour (1896). In the next year he was appointed Chinese Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to London, which post he still holds. His Excellency became a Mandarin of the Fourth Rank in 1881, a Taotai in 1885, a Mandarin of the Second Rank in 1890, and in 1892 honours were awarded his ancestors for three generations. In 1896 he was created an Hon. Knight Commander of the Victorian Order, and he has also been decorated with Russian, German, Dutch, and Belgian Orders. He is the author of "Problems in Nautical Astronomy and Navigation," and "Solutions of Problems by Inter-Terminate Equations." Lady Lo, his wife, died in London in February 1899. Address: Chinese Legation, 49 Portland Place, W.

LOFTIE, Rev. William John, F.S.A., eldest son of John Henry Loftie and Jane Crozier, was born at Tandragee, in the county Armagh, July 25, 1839, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took the degree of B.A. in 1864. Subsequently he turned to literature, writing first on antiquarian subjects in the People's Magazine (S.P.C.K.), of which he became editor in 1872. Elected F.S.A. in 1872, he published a "Century of Bibles," and in 1873 "The Latin Year," a collection of hymns. After holding temporary Church appointments he became Assistant-Minister of the Chapel Royal, Savoy, 1871, holding that post until 1895, and in 1879 published "Memoirs of the Savoy"; meanwhile, having spent some winters on the Nile, he wrote "A Ride in Egypt," and has since published "An Essay of Scarabs," and written papers in the Archæological Journal on "Egyptology." Being also a student of old prints, he published, in 1877, a catalogue of the works of Hans Sebald Beham. He became connected with the Guardian in 1870, and was a weekly contributor for six years. In 1871 he joined the staff of the Saturday Review, and has written on art and archæology in the Portfolio, the Magazine of Art, and many other periodicals. In 1894 he joined the staff of the National Observer. The Art at Home Series, begun in 1877, resulted in the issue of twelve volumes, by various writers, including Mrs. Loftie, Mr. Andrew Lang, Mrs. Oliphant, and Mr. Walter Pater. He then turned his attention to municipal antiquities, and besides a short guide entitled "Through London," and other books, has published two editions of "A History of London," "Windsor," "Kensington, Picturesque and Historical," "Westminster Abbey," a volume on the "City" for Mr. E. A. Freeman's series of Historic Towns, the authorised "Guide to the Tower," for the Government, of which 10,000 copies were sold in the first three weeks, "The Cathedral Churches of England," 1892; and "Inns of Court and Chancery," 1894. Besides these literary labours, he was one of the founders of the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings. He married, in 1867, Jeannie, widow of J. J. Burnett, of Gadgirth, Ayr. Address: 3A Sheffield Terrace, Kensington, W.

LOFTUS, The Right Hon. Lord Augustus William Frederick Spencer, G.C.B., commonly called Lord Augustus Loftus, the fourth son of the 2nd Marquis of Ely, by the daughter of Sir H. W. Dashwood, Bart., was born on Oct. 1, 1817, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.A. Entering the Diplomatic Service, he was appointed Attaché at Berlin in 1837, and paid Attaché at Stuttgart in 1844. He accompanied Sir Stratford Canning (afterwards Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe) on his special mission to the Courts of Berlin, Vienna, Munich, and Athens, in March 1848. He was appointed Secretary of the Legation at Stuttgart in 1852, and in Berlin in 1853; and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in Vienna in March 1858.  even as a youth, exhibited a -faculty, almost amounting to
 -divining the possible bearings
 -en's discoveries, and of turning
 -ons to important use in the con-
 -of new methods. Gifted as he is rare art, Lombroso eagerly l the conclusions of Darwin as the latter's book, "The Origin s." An excellent critic has that Darwin's work "supplied, at time, an indispensable bio-
 -is, and furnished that atavistic
 -ich Lombroso was tempted to
 -rst so much use, sometimes, it must be added, so much abuse. These circumstances combined to render possible for the first time the complete scientific treatment of the criminal man as a human variety, while Lombroso's own manifold studies and various faculties had given him the best preparation for approaching this great task." Lombroso, with his usual acuteness, at once commenced an elaborate treatise on much the same lines that Darwin had followed, testing the latter's theories at many points, and specu-lating with considerable success on the important suggestions towards the study of man which "The Origin of Species" gave to the scientific world. Lombroso's great work, "L'Uomo Delinquente," was not published, however, until 1876—nearly twenty years after the undertaking was conceived—and the second volume ap-peared only in 1889. The influence of "L'Uomo Delinquente" in Italy, France, and Germany is said to have been as im-mediate and as decisive as that of "The Origin of Species." Despine's "Psycho-logie Naturelle," the greatest work on the criminal which had appeared before Lom-roso's, was partial; the criminal was therein regarded purely as a psychological anomaly.

 Lombroso first perceived the criminal as, anatomically and physiologically, an organic anomaly. He set about weighing him and measuring him, according to the methods of anthropology. Even on the psycho-logical side he gained new and more exact results. He went back to the origins of crime among plants and animals, among savages and children. He endeavoured to ascertain the place of the criminal in nature, the causes of his appearance, and his treatment. It need hardly be said that this momentous investigation has earned for its conductor a reputation almost exceeding that of any other scien-tific man of the day. The results of that work are daily used on the Continent in the administration of several State prisons and in the control and supervision of many private asylums. Lombroso's methods have never been adopted in England.
 Rich, laborious, various, Lombroso's life-
 -work has opened up so many new lines of investigation, and has suggested so many more, that it has everywhere been received as marking a new epoch. This distin-guished man works steadily on in Italy.
 The scientific world is enriched, almost every month, by some new study of his,
 conceived in a truly remarkable brain.
 He has frequently contributed to the Nineteenth Century and other important English magazines. The Monist, an American quarterly philosophical maga-zine, contained in its number of June 1898 a very suggestive essay by Lombroso on "Progressive Phenomena in Evolution."

His work has now many English students, largely through the medium of such popular and useful series as the Criminology Series (Fisher, Crwin), and the Contemporary Science Series (Walter Scott). Lombroso, as yet, exerts very little influence on English prison reformers who are considered by some to run the risk of sinking the scientific beneath the purely emotional or traditional.

LONDON, Bishop of. See CREIGHTON, THE RIGHT REV. MANDELL.

LONDONDERRY, Marquis of, The Right Hon. Charles Stewart Vane-Tempest-Stewart, K.G., LL.D., D.L., J.P., son of the 5th Marquis, and Mary, eldest daughter of Sir John Edwards, Bart., was born on July 16, 1852, and educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Oxford. As Viscount Castlereagh he unsuccessfully contested South Kensington in 1874, and Montgomery District in 1877, and sat for County Down from 1878 to 1881. On the death of his father in 1884 he succeeded to the title, and on the formation of Lord Salisbury's second administration in 1885, was appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. He remained at Dublin till 1889. He was Chairman of the London School Board from October 1895 until 1898, and in 1897 was appointed A.D.C. to the Queen. He married the eldest daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury, and is the owner of extensive collieries in Durham. His ancestor, the second peer, was the celebrated Viscount Castlereagh. Addresses: Londonderry House, Park Lane, W.; Wynward House, Stockton-on-Tees, &c.

LONG, John Davis, American jurist and statesman, was born at Buckfield, Maine, Oct. 27, 1838. Educated at Harvard University, and graduating there in 1857, he afterwards studied law, was admitted to the Bar in 1862, and practised his profession in Boston. He was a Member of the State Legislature of Massachusetts in 1875-78, being Speaker of the Lower House for the last three years; was Lieutenant-Governor of the State in 1879 and Governor in 1880, 1881, and 1882; was elected to the forty-eighth Congress, and re-elected to the forty-ninth and fiftieth Congresses. In 1897 he was appointed to be Secretary of the United States Navy under President McKinley.

LONG, The Right Hon. Walter Hume, M.P., J.P., D.L., President of the Board of Agriculture, is the eldest son of the late Richard Penruddocke Long, Esq., of Dolforgan, Montgomeryshire (who represented North Wilts from 1865 to 1869), by Charlotte Anna, daughter of W. Fitzwilliam-Hamilton, Esq., for Wicklow, and 1872-73 by Walter Long, Esq., for Wilts for thirty years. He was born at Bath, July 13, 1854, and was educated at Harrow and at Christ Church, Oxford. He represented North Wilts from 1880 to 1885, and was elected to that county for the 1892 election in July 1892, but was defeated; in the following year, however, he was elected for the Division of Liverpool. Since then he acted as Parliamentary Secretary to the Local Government Board, and in 1895 he became a member of the Board of Agriculture, and was appointed to the Privy Council. He is described as being a "Protege." He is a Major in the Wilts Yeomanry, and is married to Lady Dorothy Blanche, daughter of the 9th Earl of Cornwall. Addresses: 11 Ennismore Road, Road Ashton, Frowley.

LONGLEY, Sir Henry, Charity Commissioner for Wales, was born in 1834, the son of the late Archbishop Long, and daughter of the first Lord Long. He was educated at Rugby School, Oxford, where he took his B.A. in 1856, M.A. in 1859, and D.D. in 1860. He was called to the Bar in 1860, and after going to the Equity Bar and practising for a short time, ultimately became a member of the House of Commons. He was appointed a Poor-Law Commissioner in 1868, and was in charge of the Metropolitan Poor-Law District from 1874. In the latter year he was appointed Third Charity Commissioner on the transfer of the duties of the Schools Commissioner to the Charity Commission. He was appointed a Poor-Law Commissioner in 1879, and a Charity Commissioner in July 1885. He was created a Knight of Sir W. R. Seymour Fitzgerald. Sir H. Longley was created a Knight of the Order of St. Michael and K.C.B. in 1889. He is the author of a report of the Local Government made in 1873 on "Poor-Law Administration in London, with special reference to the disposal by Boards of Guardians of Applications for Relief." He was married in 1861, Diana, second daughter of the late Sir John Davenport, of Foxley, Herefordshire. Addresses: 8 Lowndes Street, S.W.; and 4, Whitehall, S.W.; and 4.

LOPES. The Right Hon. Sir Lopes Massey, Bart., of Maristow, Devon, M.P. for Westbury from 1857 to 1865, and for South Devon from 1868 to 1885, Civil Lord of the Admiralty from 1874 to 1880, D.L. for Wilts and Devon, was born on June 14, 1818, and educated at Winchester and Oriel College. Sir Massey had several parliamentary contests, but the most severe was that with Lord Amberley, son of the late Lord John Russell, for South Devon in 1868, which lasted sixteen weeks, and which Sir Massey won by a majority of upwards of 500 votes. During the thirty years he was a member of the House of Commons he took a very prominent part in all measures which had reference to the agricultural interest, and more particularly directed his attention to the subject of Local Taxation, contending that real property (i.e. land and houses) was very unjustly burdened with many charges which were national in their character, and ought therefore to be transferred to the Imperial Exchequer. Though at first there was much indifference on this subject among all parties, in and out of the House of Commons, and he met with comparatively little sympathy, he persevered every session in bringing this question before the House, and his able and exhaustive speeches in exposing the grievances and anomalies of the local taxpayer gradually created increasing interest in this subject until finally, in 1872, he carried a resolution "that it was expedient to remedy the injustice of imposing taxation of national objects upon one description of property, and that the ratepayers should be relieved from charges imposed upon them for the administration of

As Chairman of the Local Taxation Committee, which he initiated, Sir Massey consistently and successfully opposed several other measures which proposed to place further charges on the land... and when the late Mr. Stansfield brought forward the Public Health Bill, he carried an amendment that one half of the salaries of medical officers and inspectors should be defrayed by the National Exchequer. Mr. Goschen, who as President of the Poor-Law Board, was his chief opponent on these questions in the House of Commons, has since publicly admitted there that the credit of these changes for the relief of local rates was due to Sir Massey's advocacy, and that he was in error in his opposition to them, and has himself since proposed and carried other important measures which have tended to relieve the local taxpayer. During the six years Sir Massey held the office of Civil Lord to the Admiralty, he introduced many reforms in the secretariat and in the dockyards. He was Chairman of several committees which were appointed for this object. By his management of the Greenwich property, which was entirely under him, he very much increased the value and income of this property. This enabled him very considerably to increase the Greenwich Age Pensions, and the number of boys educated in the Greenwich School. Lord Beaconsfield was so satisfied with the way in which Sir Massey fulfilled his duties, that he offered him the higher office of Secretary to the Treasury, in succession to the late Mr. W. H. Smith, but Sir Massey was so interested in his work that he preferred to continue in it. Sir Massey resigned his seat for South Devon in 1885. He married (1) Bertha, only daughter of the 1st Lord Churston, who died Jan. 13, 1872, leaving one surviving son, Henry Yarde Buller Lopes, M.P. for Grantham, who married Lady Albertina, daughter of the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe; (2) in 1874, Louisa, daughter of Sir Robert William Newman, Bart., of Manhead. Addresses: Mavistow, Roborough, South Devon; 28 Grosvenor Gardens, S.W.

beth, eldest daughter of the Duke of Sutherland. He was born in 1842. He was elected M.P. for Argyllshire in 1868, and was a member of the same House of Commons until 1871. He married the daughter of Queen Victoria in 1871. The marriage was performed in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, by the Bishop of Exeter. He was created Viscount Lorne in 1872. He was sent to the Tropics and India in 1867: "Guide and Map of the Riviera" (a paper) 1877. Literally rendered in "The Life of Lord Palmerston" and "Castle"; and a "Diarmid," 1897. He accepted the post of Governor of the Dominion of Ceylon in 1883, when he was created a Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and George by the Princess of Wales. He was received with an enthusiastic reception during which he had been received throughout the island in 1883, when he was created Marquis of Lansdowne. He was written on Imperial Feats many public toasts. At election in 1885 Lord Lorne was elected as a Liberal in Holland. In 1892 he was elected Unionist for South Devon. He has been Governor of Wilts in 1892, and has the Victoria Long Service. Addresses: Palace, W.; Roseneath, Edinburgh; and Athenæum.

LOTHIAN, Marquis of. Hon. Schomberg Henry, LL.D., F.R.S.E., F.L.S. Dec. 2, 1833, is the 5th Marquis, and succeeded the 9th Marquis in 1870. He was born at Glenalmond, Elton, and Oxford. After serving on Sir John Lubbock's Staff in Persia, in 1857, he was appointed second Secretary at Frankfurt in 1862, and in 1865, in a capacity at Vienna in 1865. He was Secretary for Scotland, President of the Council of Scotland from 1887 to 1892, and in 1892, in the position of Lord Rector of the University from 1887 to 1892. He has been Lord Keeper of the P-of M. Ribot. In 1895 he was appointed President of the Senate, in succession to M. Challemel-Lacour, and filled that post with much distinction. He was a warm friend of M. Faure, and advised him on critical occasions. On the sudden death of the latter, Feb. 16, 1899, M. Loubet was called upon by the united votes of the Senate and Chamber to fill his place. He has been all his life remarkable for his devotion to work and for simplicity of manners, being a contrast to M. Faure, who was most attentive to ceremony and a slave to the protocol.

LOUGH, Thomas, M.P., was born in Ireland in 1850, and is the son of Matthew Lough, of Killynebber House, Cavan, and Martha, daughter of William Steel. He was educated at the Royal School, Cavan, and at the Wesleyan Connectional School, Dublin. Mr. Lough, who is a strong Radical, contested Truro in 1886, and entered Parliament for Islington in 1892, being re-elected in 1895. In 1886 he founded the Home Rule Union, of which he has been an Hon. Secretary. He has been a citizen of the Metropolis since 1880, his business being that of a tea merchant, and in October 1892 he started the London Reform Union, having for its main object the improvement of the municipal government of London. He is now Chairman of the Union, Mr. Passmore Edwards being President. He published, in 1888, "Glimpses of Early Ireland," and, in 1896, "England's Wealth, Ireland's Poverty." He married, in 1880, Edith, daughter of the late Rev. John Mills. Addresses: 29 Hyde Park Gate, S.W.; and Drummully House, co. Cavan.

LOUISE, H.R.H. Princess, Mar- chioness of Lorne, Louise Caroline
Alberta, is the fourth daughter of her Majesty, the Queen, and was born at Buckingham Palace on March 18, 1848.
She was married, on March 21, 1871, to the Marquis of Lorne, eldest son of the Duke of Argyll. The Princess devotes a good deal of time to painting and sculpture. She is an accomplished painter in water-colours, and an industrious hon.
member of the exclusive Old Water-Colour Society. She is also distinguished as one of the very few women sculptors in Great Britain. At an early age she is said to have watched the late Mrs. Thorneycroft at work, as the mother of the great sculptor modelled the young Royal Princes and Princesses at various ages. Afterwards she studied her difficult art under the late Sir Edgar Boehm, R.A., and under his influence produced her fine statue of the Queen, now placed in Kensington Gardens, between the east front of Kensington

Palace and the Round Pond. To execute this idealised representation of her royal mother she was chosen by the Committee of the Women's Jubilee Fund of 1887. The work was subscribed for by women, and is a conspicuous landmark in a park which contains only one other notable statue, that of Edward Jenner. Another fine example of her work is her marble bust of the Queen in the Gallery of the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours. Her studio is in her home in Kensington Palace. Princess Louise besides being a Princess of the United Kingdom, is Duchess of Saxony, and Princess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and V.A. and C.G.

LOVELAND, Richard Loveland, Q.C., D.L., Deputy Chairman of the County of London Sessions, was born in London, July 18, 1841, being the only surviving child of the late John Perry Loveland, J.P., Middlesex, and Harriet Hannah, only child of the late Richard Errington, of Beaufort, near Hexham, Northumberland, and granddaughter of Thomas Loveland of Park Place, Islington, London. By royal license, dated March 28, 1861, he was authorised to take the surname of Loveland instead of that of Oldershaw, and to bear the arms of Loveland quarterly with those of Oldershaw. He was educated at Kensington Grammar School privately, and at Pembroke College, Oxford. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, and Lincoln's Inn in 1865; and was Deputy-Chairman of Middlesex Quarter-Sessions, 1889-96. He was appointed Deputy Chairman of the County of London Quarter-Sessions in 1896, and Queen's Counsel in 1897. He is editor of Sir John Kelying's "Crown Cases"; Shower's "Cases in Parliament"; Hall's "Essay on Rights of Seashore," and joint-editor of Griffith and Loveland "On the Judicature Acts." Mr. Loveland is Past Master of the Worshipful Company of Turners of London, and was an Alderman of the Middlesex County Council up to 1896. He married Maria Elizabeth Oddie, fifth daughter of the Rev. P. H. Hind, Vicar of Woodcote-cum-Southstoke, Oxon. Address, 1 Gloucester Square, Hyde Park.

LOW, Lord, Alexander Low, J.P., is the son of James Low of "The Laws," Berwickshire, and was born in 1845. He was educated at Cheltenham College, St. Andrews University, and St. John's College, Cambridge, where he obtained first class honours on graduating B.A. He was called to the Scotch Bar in 1870, and was appointed a Lord of Session in Scotland in 1890, at the same time receiving the title of Lord. He was married in 1875 to Annie, daughter of Lord Mackenzie, Lord of Session. Address, Arden Gardens, Edinburgh, Scotland.

Ganlife, G.C.B. and K.C.M.G.
Sir John L. W. Ganlife, G.C.B., was born in the parish of Kemmerley, Devon. He entered the Army as a Lieutenant in 1861, and was promoted Captain in 1864, Major in 1867, and Colonel in 1873. He served in the Indian Mutiny, and in the Afghan War, and in the Boer War. He was mentioned in despatches on several occasions, including the action of Delhi, and in the Jhuggar district, and was awarded the Victoria Cross. He was mentioned in the London Gazette, and was thanked by the House of Commons for his services, receiving two clasps. He served in the second Boer War, and in the North West Frontier War, but never gave an opportunity, for as he was to the army at the time of the Boer War, he was Robert's invaluable assistant. He was awarded the Candabar Medal in addition to the Best V.A. medal at the action of Zama. He was mentioned in despatches, and received the command of a brigade in the Burmese War. He was a Brigadier-General, and was again mentioned in despatches. For his services in the campaign he was created a Knight of the Order of the British Empire, and was also promoted to Major-General command. He was promoted to the rank of full General in 1900. That campaign is considered one of the "Art of War," and is an issue to which it was of a very great means to the British. As a reward for his services he was created a G.C.B. and before conferred upon him the rank of full General in 1900. He was promoted to the rank of full General in November 1896. He married Constance, daughter of the late Taylor, H.E.L.C.S. Address, India.

LOWE, Canon Edward Clarke, D.D., born at Everton, near Liverpool, Dec. 15, 1823, youngest son of S. Lowe, Esq., solicitor, formerly of Whitchurch, Salop, and subsequently of Liverpool, was educated at Liverpool at a private school, and afterwards at Oxford, where he entered under Rev. W. Jacobson (who became Bishop of Chester) at Magdalen Hall in 1842, whence he was elected to the Bible Clerkship at Lincoln College in June 1844, where he was a pupil of the late Mark Pattison. He graduated B.A. in 1846 (third cl., Lit. Hum.), and the following year became Second Master of the King's School, Ottery St. Mary, and was ordained Deacon by Bishop Philpotts in September of the same year, and Priest in September of the year following. In 1849 he joined, at Shoreham, the Rev. N. Woodard, who had just begun his effort to found, by public boarding schools, a system of Church of England education for the middle classes. In January 1850 he opened, as Head-Master, at Hurstpierpoint, the first middle school of the system, and remained in that office till the end of 1872, when he was appointed Provost of the Midland district of St. Nicolas College, as head of the Society of SS. Mary and John of Lichfield in union with St. Nicolas College, and directing the large schools at Denstone and Ellesmere for boys, and two for girls at Abbot's Bromley, as well as a boys' day-school at Dewsbury. In 1891, on the death of Canon Woodard, he was elected Provost of St. Nicholas College in succession to the founder, and returned into Sussex. In September 1872 he was preferred to a Canonry in Ely Cathedral, upon a vacancy falling to the Crown, and since 1891 up to the present time has represented the Chapter as Provost in Convocation. He has published several small educational works, among others, "Porta Latina, Exercises Colloquies," "An English Primer," and an annotated edition of G. Herbert's "Church Porch" Addresses. The College, Ely, and Hoxfield, Sussex.

LOWE, Edward Joseph, F.R.S., J.P., D.L., eldest surviving son of the late Alfred Lowe, Esq., J.P., of Highfield, near Nottingham, was born at Highfield, Nov. 11, 1825, and in 1840 began that valuable series of daily meteorological observations which were continued to April 1882. In 1846 he published 'A Treatise on Atmospheric Phenomena.' About 1848 he assisted the late Professor Baden Powell in the meteor observations for the British Association and was the first to point out the convergence of meteors to a point in the heavens. "Prognostications of the Weather," a small work by him, appeared in 1849. In 1850 he became a member of the Royal Meteorological Society, of which he was one of the founders. In 1853 he wrote two valuable local works, entitled "The Climate of Nottinghamshire," and "The Conchology of Nottinghamshire." In the same year he likewise assisted the late Prof Edward Forbes in the compilation of his work on "British Mollusca," and issued the first parts of the well-known "Natural History of British and Exotic Ferns." His next work, on "British Grasses," appeared in 1858, and he subsequently wrote two other botanical works on "Beautiful-leaved Plants," and "New and Rare Ferns," in 1861 and 1862; "Our Native Ferns," in 1865; and "Chronology of the Seasons," &c. In 1860 he was one of those who accompanied the Government expedition to Spain for the purpose of observing the solar eclipse, and was placed in charge of the meteorological departments in the Santander district. In 1866 he was local secretary to the British Association. In 1868 he was President of the Nottingham Literary and Philosophical Society. Besides being the author of the works enumerated, Mr Lowe has contributed many papers on scientific subjects to various learned societies, and to the British Association; and he sent daily meteorological telegrams to the Board of Trade, and synchronous meteorological observations to the United States.

He unsuccessfully contested the East Lindsey Division of Lincolnshire, November 1885, also North Cumberland at the general election of 1886; but was returned for the Isle of Thanet Division of Kent, in June 1888, and again in 1892 and 1895. Mr. Lowther is a magistrate, deputy-lieutenant, and county alderman for the North Riding of York. He is well known as a member of the Jockey Club. Addresses: 59 Grosvenor Street, W.; and Wilton Castle, Redcar.

LOWTHER, The Right Hon. James William, M.P., LL.M., J.P., is the eldest son of the Hon. William Lowther, formerly M.P. for Westmoreland, and was born on April 1, 1855. He was educated at Eton, King's College, London, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he obtained honours in both the Classical and Law Tripos. He was called to the Bar in 1879, and was elected a Conservative member of the House of Commons for Rutlandshire in 1883. After unsuccessfully contesting Mid-Cumberland in 1885, he was, in the following year, elected Member for the Penrith Division of the same county; he still retains this seat in the Conservative interest. Mr. Lowther acted as an unpaid Charity Commissioner from 1887 to 1891, was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs from 1891 to 1892, and he represented this country at the Venice International Sanitary Conference in 1892. Since August 1895 he has filled the offices of Deputy-Speaker and Chairman of Ways and Means. He was married in 1886 to Mary Frances, daughter of the late Right Hon. A. J. Beresford Hope. Address: 16 Wilton Crescent, S.W.

LOYD, Archie Kirkman, Q.C., M.P., J.P., was born in 1847, and is the son of the late Thomas Kirkman Loyd, Bengal Civil Service. He was educated at Brighton College, and in 1867 entered the Indian Civil Service. He was prizeman in English Law and in Hindi at the further examinations, but retired from the Civil Service in 1869. He was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1868, joined the Norfolk and then the Midland Circuit, became Q.C. in 1892, and Bencher in 1894. From 1880 to 1881 he was Secretary to the Macclesfield Corrupt Practices Commission. He is a J.P. for Berks, and was elected to Parliament as Conservative member for the North or Abingdon Division of Berkshire in 1895. He is joint-editor of recent editions of Sir John Hyles's work on Bills of Exchange. He married, 1885, Henrietta, daughter of the late E. L. Clutterbuck, of Hardenhuish, Wilts. Addresses: Hodcott, W. Halsey, Berks; 60A Cadogan Square, S.W.; Lamb Buildings, Temple.

LOYSON, Charles, known as Père Hyacinthe, born at Orleans, March 10, 1827, was educated at Pau by private professors, where his father was Rector of the University. His mother was of the noble family Burnier-Fontonel, of the Château de Requier, Savoy. In 1845 he entered St. Sulpice, was ordained priest after five years of theological study, taught philosophy at the great Seminary at Avignon, and theology at that of Nantes, and officiated in his ecclesiastical capacity at St. Sulpice, in Paris. He afterwards spent two years in the convent of the Carmelites at Lyons, entered that Order, and attracted much attention by his preaching at the Lycée of that city. In June 1869 Père Hyacinthe delivered before the International League of Peace an address, in which he spoke of the Jewish religion, the Catholic religion, and the Protestant religion as being "the three great religions of civilised peoples." This expression elicited severe censures from the Catholic press. On Sept. 20 of the same year Père Hyacinthe published his famous Manifesto, addressed to the General of the Barefooted Carmelites at Rome, but evidently intended for the governing powers of the Church, in which he protested against the "sacrilegious perversion of the Gospel," and went on to say: "It is my profound conviction that if France in particular, and the Latin races in general, are given up to social, moral, and religious anarchy, the principal cause is not Catholicism itself, but the manner in which Catholicism has for a long time been understood and practised." This manifesto against the alleged abuses in the Church created intense excitement, not only in France, but throughout the civilised world, and the young monk was hailed as a powerful ally by all the open opponents of the Papacy. Soon after this he left France for America, landing in New York, Oct. 18, 1869. He was warmly welcomed by the leading members of the various Protestant sects in the United States, but, though he fraternised with them to a certain extent, he constantly declared that he had no intention of quitting the Catholic faith. On Sept. 3, 1872, he was married in London, at the Marylebone Registry Office, to Emilie Jane, daughter of Mr. Amory Butterfield, and widow of Captain Edwin Rutlven Meriman, of the United States. The late Dr. Stanley, Dean of Westminster, and

—t of Science Commission, the Commission, the Gold and Commission, and Chairman of the which settled the designs of pins. He was also for some man of the Public Accounts. It is, however, by his works on the vestiges and remains of our John Lubbock has most distinguished himself. He has written "Pre-historic Times, as illustrated by Ancient Monuments," 1865 (5th edit., 1889); "Origin of Civilisation and the Condition of Man," 1870, which like the preceding work, passed through several editions, and which has been translated into all the principal languages; "Origin and Metamorphoses of Insects," 1874; "On British Wild Flowers, and their Relation to Insects," 1875; "Aphididæ of the Thysanura and Coleoptera," two volumes of Lectures and a work on Ants, Bees, and was published in less than a year ran through five editions; "The Pleasures of the Garden," this is the most popular of Sir John Lubbock's works, and has run through over thirty editions, of which more than a million copies have been sold; "The Wild Animals," "Fifty Years of my Life," "Flowers, Fruits, and Leaves," "Plantation," "Chapters in Popular History," "The Beauties of the English Lake," "The Use of Life," "The History of Switzerland" (2nd edit.), and a hundred separate memoirs on zoological, physiological, and archæological subjects in the Transactions of the Royal Society, the Society of Antiquaries, the Ethnological, Geological, and Natural Societies, and the British Association. He was chosen as President of the British Association for the "Jubilee" (1883), and presided over the meeting at Manchester. He is now President of the Entomological Society. He has been President of the Zoological and Entomological Society, and of the Anthropological Society. Vice-President of the British Association, and of the Royal Society. Lubbock was twice chosen to represent Maidstone in Parliament. In 1870, after he had been defeated as a Liberal candidate for West Kent by 1,000 votes, he was returned for the county of Kent, an honour which was renewed at the general election of 1874; however, he lost his seat, but was immediately returned by the University of London, for which he now sits. In the House of Commons he has spoken frequently on financial and educational matters. He has been so fortunate as to have carried more than twenty public measures, including the

Bank Holidays Act (1871), by which four new statute holidays were added to the two previously in existence. Amongst the other measures were: the Absconding Debtors Bill, the Apothecaries' Company Medical Act Amendment Bill, the University of London Medical Act Amendment Bill, the Falsification of Accounts Bill (by which, for the first time, it became an offence to falsify accounts for the purpose of fraud), the Bankers' Books Evidence Bill, the College of Surgeons Medical Act Bill, the Factors Acts Amendment Bill, Shop Hours Regulation Act, and the Bills of Exchange Act, which consolidates and confirms the whole law relating to bills of exchange, cheques, and promissory notes; the Public Libraries Amendment Act, the Open Spaces Act, and the Metropolis Management Act. More recently his name has been associated with the "Ancient Monuments Bill," which has received the sanction of the Legislature. In 1877 he moved the "previous question" to Mr. Gladstone's famous resolutions on the Eastern Question. In March 1878 he was appointed a Trustee of the British Museum, in the place of the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell. In the same year the University of Dublin conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL.D. He is also a D.C.L. of Oxford, LL.D. of Cambridge and of Edinburgh, and M.D. of Würzburg. He has had the honour of being elected an honorary member of many foreign scientific societies, both on the Continent and in America. He was Vice-Chancellor of the University of London for eight years, but resigned the office on his election to represent the University in Parliament. This seat he held without a contest till 1886, but on the dissolution Mr. Frederic Harrison was brought forward as a Home-Rule candidate, Sir J. Lubbock standing as a Unionist. The latter easily won the seat, polling 1314 votes against Mr. Harrison's 516. On the formation of County Councils he stood for the City on a requisition signed by the leaders of all parties, and out of 10,000 votes recorded, received 8900, the largest number of votes recorded for any candidate in the whole country. He was unanimously elected Vice-Chairman of the London County Council, and re-elected 1889; and in 1890 was elected Chairman, on the resignation of the Earl of Rosebery, and occupied this post to 1892. He is President of the London Chamber of Commerce, and was till 1899 President of the Working-Men's College, where he is now succeeded by Prof. A. V. Dicey. Several of his books have been translated into the French, German, Spanish, Italian, Danish, Swedish, Russian, Polish, Bohemian, Roumanian,

LUDLOW, Sir Henry, Knt., Chief-Justice of the Leeward Islands, was born in 1838, and is the son of Mr. George Ludlow, late of Hertford, who was first cousin to Mr. Serjeant Ludlow, sometime Recorder of Bristol. Sir Henry was educated at Christ's Hospital and St. John's College, Cambridge, and graduated as B.A., 8th Wrangler, in 1857, and subsequently became M.A. and Fellow of St. John's. He obtained, in 1861, the student-ship granted by the Inns of Court to the student who passed the best examination previous to his call to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn; and was called to the Bar in 1862, and appointed Attorney-General of Trinidad in 1874, and Chief-Justice of the Leeward Islands in 1886. In conjunction with E. Chisholm Batten he published "Batten and Ludlow on the Jurisdiction of the County Courts in Equity," and in conjunction with H. Jenkyns, Esq., published "Ludlow and Jenkyns on Trade-Marks." He married, in 1876, Alice, daughter of Thomas Swordes. Address: St. John's, Antigua, West Indies.

LUDLOW, Lord, The Right Hon. Henry Charles Lopes, D.L., third son of the late Ralph Lopes, the second baronet of Maristow, Devon, by Susan Gibbs, eldest daughter of the late A. Ludlow, Esq., of Heywood House, Wiltshire, was born at Devonport, Oct. 3, 1828, and received his education at Winchester School, and at Balliol College, Oxford (B.A. 1850). He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, June 7, 1852, and for some time he practised as an equity draughtsman and conveyancer. In 1857 he joined the Western Circuit, of which he became, in course of time, the leading "stuff gown." Mr. Lopes was made Recorder of Exeter in 1867, obtained his silk gown in 1869, and was elected a Bencher of his Inn shortly afterwards. In April 1868 he was returned to the House of Commons, in the Conservative interest, as member for Launceston. He was re-elected in December 1868, and he continued to sit for that borough till January 1874. The Warrington Park property having in the meantime changed hands, it then became necessary for Mr. Lopes either to oppose the new owner or to seek for another seat. Choosing the latter alternative, he determined to stand for Frome, near which borough he had a residence and property. After a severe contest he was returned by 642 votes, against 557 recorded in favour of Mr. Willans, the Liberal candidate. He continued to represent Frome until his elevation to the judicial bench. Mr. Lopes was a frequent speaker in the House of Commons, and he succeeded in carrying through that House a Jury Bill containing more than a hundred sections, but there was not sufficient time to get it passed by the House of Peers. On Nov. 3, 1876, Mr. Lopes accepted the vacant judgeship in the Court of Common Pleas, in succession to the late Mr. Justice Archibald, and very shortly afterwards he received the honour of knighthood. In November 1876, on the death of his maternal uncle, Sir Henry Lopes became the owner of Heywood, near Westbury, Wiltshire, a place which had been for many years in his mother's family, and where he now resides. On Dec. 1, 1885, he was appointed a Lord Justice of Appeal, and subsequently sworn of the Privy Council. He retired from the Court of Appeal in 1897, and was raised to the peerage as Lord Ludlow of Heywood, being granted an annuity of £3500. In 1854 he married Cordelia Lucy, daughter of Erving Clarke, Esq., of Efford Manor, near Plymouth, and thus became connected with the old Cornish families of Molesworth and Trelawney. She died in December 1891. Sir Henry was Treasurer of the Inner Temple for the year 1890; and has been a Member of the Council of Legal Education. He was appointed Chairman of the Wilts Quarter Sessions in 1895. Addresses: Heywood, Westbury, Wilts; 8 Cromwell Place, S.W.; and Athenæum.

LUGARD, Colonel Frederick J. D., C.B., D.S.O., who comes of a race of fine soldiers, is a nephew of the late General the Right Hon. Sir Edward Lugard, G.C.B. He was born at Fort George, Madras, in 1858, his father being an army chaplain there at the time. He was educated at Rossall, and passed from that school into Sandhurst direct. He entered the army as a second lieutenant in the 86th Foot, the Royal Irish Rifles, and soon after joined the Norfolk Regiment. In 1879 he went to India, and was attached to the expedition despatched to avenge the murder of Sir Louis Cavagnari. He saw a good deal of service in the Afghan War, and was present at the affair at Saidabad. Mr. Lugard occupied his leisure during the next three or four years in preparation for different army examinations, and in studying the phases of animal life, thus gaining a knowledge which stood him in good stead when he wrote the zoological part of his work on Africa. In 1885 he was promoted captain, and was appointed, by telegram, transport officer of the Indian contingent under General Hudson for Suakin. He was mentioned in despatches, and received a medal with clasp, and the Khedive's Star, for his services in Egypt. In 1886 Captain Lugard went as transport officer to the Ruby Mines Column in Burma. As there are no roads in the portion of the country through which he journeyed, and the way led over mountains 8000 feet high, and through a dense bamboo jungle, the difficulties in the path were very great, but so successfully did Lugard overcome them that he was made a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order, then recently instituted. In 1888 he commanded an expedition which was sent against slave-traders on Lake Nyassa, when he was severely wounded. Afterwards, during sick-leave, he was appointed Representative in Uganda of the British East Africa Company, and on his return to England in 1893 published his important work on "The Rise of our East African Empire; or, Early Efforts in Uganda and Nyassaland," and in a series of public lectures and letters to the Times strenuously advocated the retention of those countries under British rule, in which efforts he has been successful. In 1894 Captain Lugard was employed by the Royal Niger Company in command of the expedition to Borgu, which was organised to negotiate treaties between England and the native potentates. He was created a C.B. in May 1895, and in the following year was sent in charge of an expedition to Lake Ngami. He was shortly after appointed Commissioner and Commandant of the Forces in Nigeria and Lagos. Colonel Lugard, on account of ill health, returned to England in August 1898. Club: Junior Army and Navy.

LUITPOLD, Prince Charles Joseph William Louis, Regent of Bavaria, was born at Würzburg, Mar. 12, 1821, and is the second son of King Louis I. of Bavaria. He is General and Inspector-General of the Bavarian Army, Chief of the Regiment of Bavarian Artillery, and proprietor of the first regiment of Austrian Artillery. He married, April 15, 1844, the Princess Augusta, Archduchess of Austria, and has four children. On the death of Louis II., King of Bavaria, on June 10, 1886, he was appointed Regent on account of the mental derangement of Prince Otto, the succeeding titular king.

LUMSDEN, General Sir Peter Stark, G.C.B., C.S.I., D.L., son of the late Colonel Thomas Lumsden, C.B., was born on Nov. 9, 1829. He entered the Indian Army in 1847, and has risen to his present rank by constant and active service, principally on the North-West and other frontiers of India. In 1857 he was employed in a difficult mission to Afghanistan, at the crisis of the Indian Mutiny, and creditably discharged his arduous and perilous duties. He served in Central India in 1858, under Major-General Sir R. Napier. He accompanied the expedition to China in 1860, and was present in all the actions there, including the assault and capture of the Taku Forts. He was Quartermaster-General of the Army in India from 1868 to 1873, and Adjutant-General from 1874 to 1879, and Chief of the Staff to the Commander-in-Chief, Sir F. P. Haines, during the last Afghan War. He was appointed Commissioner for the demarcation of the North-Western Boundary of Afghanistan, July 16, 1884. After the Penjdeh "incident," Sir Peter Lumsden returned home to report on the state of things to the British Government, and his place was taken by Colonel (now Sir West) Ridgway. He attained General's rank in 1890, and joined the Indian Staff Corps in that year. Sir Peter Lumsden was a member of the Council of India from 1883 to 1893, and was made a G.C.B. July 3, 1885. He married, in 1862, Mary, daughter of J. Marriott. Address: Buchromb, Dufftown, Scotland.

LUNN, Henry Simpson, M.D., F.R.G.S., editor of Travel, was born at Horncastle, in Lincolnshire, on July 30, 1859, and is the eldest son of Henry Lunn. He was educated at the Horncastle Grammar School, and at Dublin University, where he graduated B.A., M.D., B.Ch. In 1887 Dr. Lunn left England for the Indian Mission field as a medical missionary. As correspondent to the Pall Mall Gazette he attended the Indian National Congress, becoming intimately acquainted with the leaders of the movement, and lecturing to large assemblies of educated Hindus on the development of their national life. The vigour with which he threw himself into his Indian work was responsible for a series of attacks of malarial fever, and he was ordered home only twelve months after he had entered the work. He was at once invited to become the colleague of the Rev. H. Price Hughes at St. James's Hall, and for two years was actively engaged in the work of the West London Mission. During this period he wrote a series of articles for Mr. Hughes's paper, the Methodist Times, which led to a grave controversy and to a special Commission, of which the Right Hon. Sir Henry Fowler, Sir George Chubb, and others were members. The report of the Commission was indecisive, but the bitterness aroused was so great that Dr. Lunn resigned the Methodist ministry, and accepted an appointment as Sunday Evening Lecturer at the Regent Street Polytechnic. At this date he published his Indian experiences, under the title of "A Friend of Missions in India." In 1890 Dr. Lunn founded the Review of the Churches, a magazine expressing the increasing desire for inter-denominational comity. In this he was assisted by an editorial staff, including Dean Farrar, Rev. Donald Fraser, D.D.; Rev. John Clifford, D.D.; Rev. John Mac-kennal, D.D.; and Mr. Percy Bunting. In 1892 he founded the Grindelwald Conference for the consideration of the question of Christian unity, and was supported in arranging these gatherings by the Bishops of Ripon and Worcester, Earl Nelson, Dean Fremantle, the Moderator of the Church of Scotland, the Moderator of the English Presbyterian Church, the Moderator of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and a number of influential Nonconformist divines. In 1895 Dr. Lunn visited America and lectured on Christian Unity and on the Religions of India to large and enthusiastic audiences in New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Toronto, and Boston. He also delivered lectures at the Universities of Harvard, Brown, and Boston. During late years he has devoted considerable energy to the development of the tours which grew out of the Grindelwald Conference, and which have assumed a special educational character, and in connection with this development, he has published a series of guide-books entitled "How to Visit Switzerland," "How to Visit Italy," "How to Visit Northern Europe," and "How to Visit the Mediterranean." Recently Dr. Lunn has taken an active part in the organisation of Free Church Councils, and spoke at the last gathering of the National Federation of Free Churches in Bristol on the relation of the Free Churches to journalism. He is also a member of, and lecturer for, the Eighty Club. He was one of the original founders of the Liberal Forward Movement, and is a member of the Executive Committee. Dr. Lunn is married to Ethel, eldest daughter of Canon Moore, of Midleton Rectory. Address: 5 Endsleigh Gardens, N.W.

LUSHINGTON, Sir Godfrey, K.C.B., G.C.M.G. (1899), M.A., fifth son of the late Right Hon. S. Lushington, M.P., was born in 1832. He was educated at Rugby and Balliol College, Oxford, where he took a first class in Classical Moderations in 1853, and also a first class in the Final School of Lit. Hum. in 1854; he was also elected a Fellow of All Souls' College. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1858, became counsel to the Home Office in 1869, and was appointed Assistant Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in 1876. Sir G. Lushington was, from 1883 to 1895, Permanent Under-Secretary at the Home Office, and was created a K.C.B. in 1892. Formerly a member of the London County Council, he was elected Alderman (Moderate) until 1900, but resigned his Aldermanship in March 1898. He was married, in 1865, to Beatrice, daughter of S. Smith, of Embley, Romsey, Hants. Addresses: 34 Old Queen Street, S.W.; Stokke, Great Bedwyn, Hungerford; and Athenæum.

LUXEMBURG-NASSAU, Grand-Duke of, Adolphus-William-Charles-Augustus-Frederick, was born at Biebrich, July 24, 1817, and married, at Dessau, April 23, 1851, his second wife, Princess Adelaide of Anhalt; his first wife, the Grand-Duchess Elisabeth Michailovna of Russia, having died in 1845 without issue. His only daughter, Princess Hilda, was married to the Crown Prince Frederick of Baden in 1885, a grandson of the Emperor William I., with a settlement of a million sterling. The Hereditary Prince Alexander is likewise an only son, born in 1852, and serves as major-general in the Austrian army. Should his sister die without issue, her dower will ultimately revert to him, and he will be one of the wealthiest princes in Europe, his father possessing, in addition to a fortune of at least three millions sterling, vast estates in Austria and Germany. Prince Alexander married, on June 21, 1893, Marie-Anne, Princess of Braganza. Through this union his family hope to secure the succession to the Luxemburg throne in the direct line, thus eventually avoiding complications with Prussia.

LYALL, Sir Alfred Comyn, K.C.B., G.C.I.E., son of the Rev. Alfred Lyall, was born at Coulston, Surrey, in 1835, and educated at Eton. He was appointed Home Secretary in India in 1873; Foreign Secretary in 1878; and Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Provinces in 1882, having in the previous year been created a K.C.B. He was formerly Secretary to the Order of the Star of India, and the Order of the Indian Empire. Sir Alfred Lyall, who is no less distinguished in literature than in the public service, is the author of "Asiatic Studies, Religious and Social" 1882, and of a volume of poems. In 1886 he published a biography of Warren Hastings in the English Men of Action Series, and in 1891 delivered the Rede Lecture at Cambridge on "Natural Religion in India." In 1893 appeared his "Rise of the British Dominion in India" (3rd edit., 1893). In January 1888 he was appointed a member of the Council of India. He has the honorary degree of D.C.L. at Oxford and of LL.D. at Cambridge. In 1863 he married Cora, daughter of P. Cloete. Addresses: 18 Queen's Gate, S.W.; and Athenæum.

LYALL, Sir Charles James, K.C.S.I. C.I.E., LL.D., Edinb., late Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces of India, was born March 9, 1845, and educated at King's College, London, and at Balliol College, Oxford. In 1867 he entered the Bengal Civil Service, and was Assistant-Magistrate for Meerut until 1871, when he was appointed Under-Secretary for the N.W. Provinces. After holding other under-secretaryships, he became Secretary of the Chief Commission of Assam in 1880; and Secretary to the Government of India for the Home Department, 1889-95, when he was appointed to the post of Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, India. In 1898 he was appointed Secretary of the Judicial and Public Department of the India Office. He has translated several texts from the Arabic. Address: Government House, Nagpur.

LYALL, Edna. See BAYLY, ADA ELLEN.

LYDEKKER, Richard, F.R.S., F.G.S., F.Z.S., J.P. for Hertfordshire, eldest son of the late G. W. Lydekker, was born in 1849, went to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1868, and in 1871 was second in the first class of the Natural Science Tripos, the late Mr. A. H. Garrod being senior. In 1874 he went with three friends on a tour to Kashmir, and while there in the autumn was appointed by Lord Salisbury (then Secretary for India) to the Geological Survey of India. He held this appointment until 1892, when he resigned on his marriage with the elder daughter of the Rev. Canon Davys, Rector of Wheatthampstead, Herts, for which county he became J.P. during the same year. During his service on the Geological Survey of India, he surveyed nearly the whole of the territories of the Maharaja of Kashmir.

The results of this difficult work were written after the author's return home, and published, with a map, by the Government of India in the Memoirs of the Geological Survey of India. In the winters during his Indian service, Mr. Lydekker was occupied in descriptions of the large series of vertebrate fossils from the Siwalik Hills at the foot of the Himalayas, this being continued (by special grant from the Indian Government) after his return to England. The results were published by the Indian Government in the Palæontologia Indica. In 1884 Mr. Lydekker undertook for the Trustees the writing of catalogues of the fossil mammalia, birds, reptilia, and amphibia in the British Museum. Of this work the mammalia occupy five volumes; reptiles and amphibians four, and the birds one volume. In 1893, and again in 1894, Mr. Lydekker, under the auspices of the Royal Society, went out to Argentina to study the fossil mammals in the La Plata Museum, the results of his investigations having been published in two volumes, illustrated by folio plates. He has written a number of papers on vertebrate palæontology, published in the Records of the Geological Survey of India, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Proceedings of the Zoological Society, Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, &c. While in India he was a Fellow of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. In 1880 he was elected a Fellow of the Zoological Society, and in 1883 he became a Fellow of the Geological Society, and was elected a member of the Council of the latter Society in 1886, and again in 1893, while in the following year he was chosen one of the Vice-Presidents, and in 1898 was elected on the Council of the Zoological Society. Mr. Lydekker is also joint-author with Professor H. A. Nicholson of the only "Manual of Palæontology" extant in this country; while, in co-operation with Sir W. H. Flower, then Director of the British Museum (Natural History), he has written "The Study of Mammals." To the general public he is, however, probably better known as the editor and chief author of the "Royal Natural History." Among his other contributions to scientific literature may be mentioned: an illustrated monograph of "The Deer of all Lands," "A Geographical History of Mammals," "Horns and Hoofs," "Forms and Phases of Animal Life," and "Life and Rock," three volumes of Allen's Naturalists' Library. He married, in 1882, Lucy Marianne, eldest daughter of Canon Davys. Address: The Lodge, Harpenden, Herts.

LYNE, The Rev. Joseph Leycester, called "Father Ignatius," son of Francis and Louisa Genevieve Lyne, was born Nov. 23, 1837, at Trinity Square, by the Tower of London, educated at St. Paul's School, then by Rev. G. N. Wright, at Ayscough Free Hall, Spalding, Lincoln, and Britannia House, Worcester; next at Trinity College, Glenalmond, Perth. He was ordained in 1860 to the curacy of St. Peter's, Plymouth, and was then Mission Curate to the late Mr. Lowder at St. George's in the East, but left him in 1862 to begin the attempt of restoring monasticism in the Church of England. He began at Claydon, near Ipswich, and moved to Norwich, Jan. 30, 1863. Next he moved to the Isle of Wight, to a house of Dr. Pusey's, at Chale, then to Laleham, Chertsey, for three years, and finally he purchased land among the Black Mountains, and built Llanthony Abbey, five miles beyond the old ruined Llanthony Priory. There is a Priory of Nuns attached to the Church, as well as an Abbey for Monks, after the example of many of the old double monasteries of the Saxon Church. The monks claim to follow the ancient rule of St. Benedict, and use the Benedictine Breviary for Choir Office and the Sarum Missal of the ante-Reformation Church of England. They wear the old English Benedictine dress. Mr. Lyne's monastic name is "Ignatius of Jesus." During the last few years Father Ignatius has inaugurated a special crusade in defence of the Holy Scriptures and Orthodox Christianity against the "Higher Critics" and other opponents of Orthodoxy within the Church of England. During the year 1893 he initiated at Llanthony Abbey a petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Convocation, praying that Church authority should arrest the attacks upon the Faith of Christ now so common among the clergy. The petition was largely signed first in Oxford, then throughout the country. It was presented by the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. In the early part of 1893 the Monk's preaching at the University Church of St. Mary the Virgin in Oxford caused much excitement, being commented on as a significant fact by the Times and most newspapers throughout the country. Never had such vast congregations of men assembled in this historic church for centuries. "The feat of filling and more than filling St. Mary's with men only has not been accomplished by any other preacher," was the statement made by one of the chief Church papers at the time. At the Church Congress at Birmingham in 1893 Father Ignatius denounced the author of "Lux Mundi" as "an impugner of Holy Scripture and of our Lord Jesus Christ." He is the author of many published sermons, poems, hymns; the "Tales of Llanthony," "Brother Placidus," "Leonard Morris," and "Tales of the Monastery." He is the composer of many pieces of sacred music, 1860-98; also editor of

"Llanthony Monastery Tracts." In the years 1890 and 1891 the Welsh Monk made a missionary tour in America. From Quebec to the southernmost point of civilisation in Florida he preached the old-fashioned Gospel message, receiving invitations from bishops and clergy, from Baptist, Congregational, Presbyterian, and Methodist ministers to preach in their places of worship. He was asked by the Superior of a Roman Catholic College to address their students, and in Chicago he preached in the Cathedral and in Mr. D. L. Moody's Tabernacle. The Monk's visit to North America was certainly, from an ecclesiastical point of view, unique. In the summer of 1892 he was ordained Priest at Llanthony Abbey by Archbishop Mar Timotheus, of the Syrian Church, and afterwards issued a manifesto with regard to his ordination, in which he maintained the validity of the orders he had received. Address: Llanthony Abbey, near Abergavenny.

LYNN, William Thynne, B.A., F.R.A.S., eldest son of the late William Bewicke Lynn, F.R.C.S., for many years one of the surgeons of Westminster Hospital, and descended from a family long resident in the county of Durham, was born at Chelsea, Aug. 9, 1835, and educated privately in the neighbourhood of Esher, Surrey. His first appointment, after a short preliminary training at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was that of an assistant at the Cambridge Observatory, under the late Professor Challis, in the year 1855, whence, in the following year, he returned to Greenwich as a member of the staff of the Royal Observatory, where Professor (afterwards Sir George) Airy was Astronomer-Royal. For several years he superintended the greater part of the astronomical calculations, during which he found time to devote some of his evenings to attending lectures at King's College, London, of which he was elected an associate in 1862. In that year he also graduated as B.A. in the University of London, after passing the requisite examinations in 1860 and 1861. In February 1862 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, to the Monthly Notices of which he from time to time contributed papers, of which the last appeared in 1896. In 1863 he published a small educational work called "The First Principles of Natural Philosophy." A long and serious illness compelled him to desist from night exposure, in consequence of which he retired from the Observatory in the month of February 1880. He continued, however, to give much of his time to astronomical literature, and numerous contributions from his pen appeared in the pages of the Observatory, the Athenæum, the Companion to the British Almanac, and other periodicals; besides his editing and revising various astronomical works. In 1884 he published a concise and popular summary of the most interesting facts known respecting the heavenly bodies (especially their movements) under the title "Celestial Motions: a Handy Book of Astronomy," of which a ninth edition appeared in 1897. In 1886 he was elected an Honorary Associate of the Liverpool Astronomical Society. In 1880 he had been admitted a Lay Reader in the diocese of Rochester; and in 1889 he published two small volumes, intended chiefly for Sunday-school teachers, on "Bible Chronology," and "Brief Lessons on the Parables and Miracles of our Lord," and early in 1891 a third, entitled "Eminent Scripture Characters," and in 1892 a "Short Catechism of English Church History" in pamphlet form. In 1893 appeared also a small treatise on "Remarkable Comets" (of which a sixth edition was published in 1898), and "Brief Lessons on Astronomy," and in 1896 a companion volume to the former, entitled "Remarkable Eclipses," which is now in its third edition. The columns of Notes and Queries since 1882 contain a large number of contributions from his pen on literary, scientific, and Biblical subjects. "Celestial Motions" has been translated into French. Address: 3 South Vale, Blackheath, S.E.

LYONS, Sir Algernon M'Lennan, G.C.B., D.L., Admiral of the Fleet, was born in August 1833. He is the son of the late Lieutenant-General Humphrey Lyons by Eliza, daughter of Henry Bennett, Esq., of Fir Grove, Liverpool. He entered the Navy in 1847, and was promoted Lieutenant in June 1854, serving in that rank throughout the Russian War in the Black Sea. He commanded the boats of H.M.S. Firebrand in the destruction of Russian works on the Danube, and was mentioned in despatches. He was also present at the bombardment of Sebastopol, and as Flag-Lieutenant to the Commander-in-Chief assisted in subsequent operations in the Black Sea, including the capture of Kertch and Kinburn. Sir Algernon commanded H.M.S. Racer on the American Station during the Civil War, and in 1875 he was appointed Commodore on the West Indian Station. He was promoted Rear-Admiral in 1878, and became successively Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific, on the North American Station, and at Devonport, where he succeeded H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. From 1875 to 1878 he was an Aide-de-camp to the Queen, becoming First and Principal Naval A.D.C. to Her Majesty in 1895. Sir Algernon was appointed K.C.B. in 1889, and promoted to G.C.B. in 1897. He holds the Crimean and Turkish Medals and the Medjidieh of the fifth class, and is a Deputy-Lieutenant and J.P. for the county of Glamorganshire. He married, in 1879, Louisa, daughter of Thomas Penrice, Esq., of Kilvrough, Glamorganshire. Address: Kilvrough Park, Mill, R.S.O.

LYTE, Sir Henry Churchill Maxwell, K.C.B., F.S.A., Deputy-Keeper of the Records, Royal Commissioner on Historical MSS., is the son of the late J. W. Maxwell Lyte, Esq., grandson of the Rev. H. F. Lyte, the well-known hymn-writer, and the representative of the families of Lyte of Lytescary, co. Somerset, and Maxwell of Falkland, co. Monaghan. He was born in London on May 29, 1848, and educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took honours in Law and History and became M.A. In 1875 he published a "History of Eton College," of which a new edition, revised and enlarged, was issued in 1889. In 1880 and 1881 he contributed to the Archæological Journal a series of papers on "Dunster and its Lords," which was afterwards reprinted with additions as a volume for private circulation. This was followed, in 1886, by a "History of the University of Oxford from the earliest times to the year 1530." In the meanwhile Mr. Maxwell Lyte had been acting for some years as an Inspector for the Historical Manuscripts Commission. Reports by him on the Collections of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, the Duke of Rutland, and upwards of twenty other owners, have at different times been presented to Parliament. In January 1886 he was appointed Deputy-Keeper of the Records, in succession to the late Sir William Hardy, and as such was entrusted with the direction of all official publications and arrangements connected with the national archives, upon which he presents an annual report. In the following month he was nominated one of the Royal Commissioners on Historical Manuscripts. He was made a C.B. in January 1889, and a K.C.B. in 1897. He married, in 1871, Frances Fownes, daughter of the late J. C. Somerville, Esq., of Dinder, co. Somerset. Addresses: 3 Portman Square, W.; and Athenæum.

LYTTELTON, Hon. Alfred, M.P., M.A., is the eighth son of the 4th Lord Lyttelton, and was born on Feb. 7, 1857. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and was captain of both his school and university cricket elevens. He graduated B.A. in 1878, was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1881, and joined the Oxford Circuit. He acted as Legal Private Secretary to Sir Henry James, when Attorney-General, from 1882 to 1886, was appointed Recorder of Hereford in 1894, and in the following year became Recorder of Oxford. Mr. Lyttelton has represented Warwick and Leamington as a Liberal Unionist Member of the House of Commons since 1895, and he was chosen to second the Address in the Lower House in 1897. Address: 16 Great College Street, Westminster, S.W.

LYTTELTON, Hon. Canon Edward, M.A., the seventh son of the 4th Lord Lyttelton, and Mary, daughter of Sir S. Glynne, born July 23, 1855, was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he was foundation scholar, and where he gained a second-class in the Class. Tripos in 1878. He was assistant-master at Wellington College, 1880-82; assistant-master at Eton College, 1882-90; and was appointed headmaster of Haileybury College in 1890. He was made an Honorary Canon of St. Albans in 1895. He married, in 1888, Caroline Amy, younger daughter of the Very Rev. John West, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin. Mr. Lyttelton is the author of a "Handbook on Cricket," 1890; "Mothers and Sons," 1892; and "Shall we go on with Latin Verses?" 1897. He served on her Majesty's Royal Commission on Secondary Education, 1894-96. As a cricketer, moreover, Mr. Lyttelton has made his mark, and forms with his two brothers a remarkable trio of experts at this fine old English game. Residence: Master's Lodge, Haileybury College, Hertford.

M

MAARTENS, Maarten, novelist, was born in Holland, and received his education in Germany, and at the University of Utrecht. He is a barrister by profession, but for years now he has devoted himself entirely to literature. Some of his best-known books are: "The Sin of Joost Avelingh," "An Old Maid's Love," "A Question of Taste," "God's Fool" (perhaps his most popular work), and "The Greater Glory." These works, originally written in excellent English, are also published by the author in his native tongue. They present a not over-pleasant picture of bourgeois existence in the Netherlands, but are admitted by Dutchmen to be singularly true to life. On the occasion of her Majesty, Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, ascending the throne on Aug. 31, 1898, Mr. Maarten Maartens published a charming poem in the Daily Chronicle of that date, hailing the youthful Sovereign as "Queen of the Lowlands by the Northern Sea."

MACALISTER, Alexander, M.D., LL.D., D.Sc., F.R.S., F.S.A., second son of Robert Macalister, Esq., was born in Dublin on April 19, 1844, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He became L.R.C.S. in 1861, L.R.C.P. 1862, and subsequently M.A. and M.D. of the Universities of Dublin and Cambridge, LL.D. of the University of Glasgow and of McGill University. In 1869 he was appointed Professor of Zoology in Dublin University, and of Anatomy in 1872. In 1883 he was appointed Professor of Anatomy at Cambridge, and he was elected a Fellow of St. John's College. He is F.R.S. and member of the Senate of the Royal University of Ireland, and has published "Introduction to Animal Morphology," 1876; "Morphology of Vertebrate Animals," 1878; "Text-Book of Human Anatomy," 1889; and a number of papers on anatomical and other subjects. Address: Torrissdale, Cambridge.

MACALISTER, Donald, M.A., M.D., Cantab., B.Sc. London, F.R.C.P. London, was born May 17, 1854, at Perth, Scotland, and is the son of Donald MacAlister, Esq., formerly of Tarbert, Lochfyne, representative of the ancient family who were hereditary keepers of Tarbert Castle. He was educated at Aberdeen and at Liverpool Institute, and his scholastic successes were probably unique. He took the highest place in successive years in Oxford Senior, Cambridge Senior, and London Matriculation; five Gold and Silver Medals in the Science and Art Examinations; Gold Medal of the Royal Geographical Society; and five scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge. He entered St. John's College, Cambridge, October 1873, gained all College honours open to him, including the Herschel prize for Astronomy; graduated B.A. as senior wrangler and first Smith's prizeman 1877, and B.Sc. London the same year. He was Master at Harrow in 1877, and subsequently examiner, and was elected Fellow of St. John's in the same year. He studied medicine at Cambridge and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, where he was Lecturer in Natural Philosophy, and graduated M.B. in 1881. He made researches in the physiology of heat-production under Professor Ludwig at Leipzig in 1881, and studied the mechanism of the heart and the architecture of bones, on which he has published papers. He graduated M.D. in 1884, and was elected Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, 1886; appointed Gulstonian Lecturer 1887, and first Croonian Professor 1888; Secretary and Recorder in the Section of Mathematics and Physics of the British Association for Advancement of Science, 1879-84, and Vice-President 1886; is member of the Council, and Linacre Lecturer, St. John's College; Physician to Addenbrooke's Hospital; Member and Secretary of the University Council of Senate, 1886-98; Secretary of the Special Board for Medicine, Examiner and University Lecturer in Medicine, Accessor to the Regius Professor of Physic; Elector to the Professorships of Medicine, Surgery, Anatomy, Zoology, and Pathology; member of the General Board of Studies, and of the Local Examinations and other Syndicates; Representative of the University on General Medical Council (elected 1889); Examiner in Medicine at Victoria University; Thomson Lecture at Aberdeen, 1889; late editor of the East and of the Practitioner; member of the editorial committee of the British Pharmacopoeia, 1898; and editorial referee of the British Medical Journal. He has published an English edition of "Ziegler's Pathological Anatomy," 1885-86 (3 vols., 3rd edit., 1897-98), and is the author of "The Nature of Fever," 1887; "Antipyretics," 1888; "Law of the Geometric Mean," 1879; "Advanced Study and Research in Cambridge," 1896; and other literary, scientific, and professional Memoirs. He is also a Fellow of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, and of the Physical, Mathematical, and Physiological Societies of London; a Member of the Permanent International Commission of Hygiene and Demography (Madrid, 1898); and a Justice of the Peace for the county of Cambridge. He married Edith, eldest daughter of Professor A. MacAlister, in 1895. Addresses: Barrmore, Cambridge; St. John's, Cambridge; and Athenæum.

MACALISTER, John Y. W., son of Donald MacAlister, Esq., formerly of Tarbert, born at Perth in 1857, was educated at the High School, Liverpool, and Edinburgh University. For two years he studied medicine, but his health broke down, and when he recovered he chose librarianship as a vocation. In 1878 he entered the Liverpool Library as sub-librarian, and two years later was appointed Librarian of the Leeds Library, where he superintended the erection of the new buildings, the internal portion of which was designed by himself. He catalogued the collection of some 90,000 volumes, and classified the whole library on a system devised by himself. Recognised as an expert, he was invited by the Yorkshire College to assist in planning and arranging their new library, for which he received the cordial thanks of the College. While in Leeds he contributed many literary and antiquarian articles to eds Mercury and Yorkshire Post, and successful lecturer. In 1887 he was appointed first librarian of the Gladstone Library. As soon as this appointment was made Mr. Gladstone invited Mr. MacAlister to Hawarden in order to discuss the plans of the new library, and to examine the statesman's ingenious methods of arrangement and classification. Immediately afterwards he was elected Librarian of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society (the "Academy of Medicine" of Britain), and the Committee of the Gladstone Library reluctantly released him from his engagement. He, however, continued as Librarian of the Gladstone Library for some months in an honorary capacity, and started the work on new lines with a well-selected nucleus of books. In his new position he made his energy felt. The Society housed in such cramped and ill-lighted quarters in Berners Street, that the retention of its valuable library was impossible in the cellars, while its income was not sufficient for its needs. He submitted a scheme to the Council, which proposed that they should build new and ample premises on such a scale and on financial terms as, without cost to the Society, would place it ultimately in the possession. The scheme seemed sanguine and risky that it was strongly opposed until Mr. MacAlister obtained the powerful support of Sir Andrew Clarke. In accordance with the scheme the Society purchased the freehold of 20 Hanover Square. Handsome premises were erected, which have become the home of most of the leading scientific and literary societies in London. Mr. MacAlister's most sanguine expectations were realised, and the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society is now not only the pre-eminent medical society, but one of the highest scientific societies of the kingdom.

In 1892 Mr. MacAlister was appointed Chairman of the Editing Committee of the International Congress of Librarians. In 1887 he was elected Honorary Secretary of the Library Association, and in that position has done great service to the library movement. In 1886 he founded Library, a monthly magazine devoted to the work and literature of libraries, which soon became an established success. He has also edited the "Public Library Year-Book," the "Library Year-Book," and the "Library Association Series" of handbooks. In 1890 he took up the question of library legislation, then in a state of chaos, and was mainly due to his efforts that in 1892 Sir John Lubbock was able to submit to Parliament a Bill consolidating and amending the different Acts, which soon became law, and is now the law under which all public libraries are conducted. In 1892 he visited the principal libraries of France, and was invited by the late Duc d'Aumale to visit him at Chantilly, and to examine his magnificent library. He obtained from the duke an invitation to the Library Association to visit Chantilly, which they did when, later on, its annual meeting was held in Paris. His latest service to the cause of libraries was to secure for the Association, through the powerful influence of Lord Dufferin, Lord Windsor, and Sir John Lubbock, a Royal Charter of Incorporation, which was granted in February 1898. Mr. MacAlister numbers amongst his friends many men of light and leading in the world of literature. He was very intimate with the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, who shortly before his death sent him a complete set of his works, each volume containing an appropriate autograph quotation. Dr. Nansen is an intimate friend of his, and it was Mr. MacAlister who presented a library of well-selected books to the Fram. Among his most-treasured possessions are souvenirs from the famous expedition, which Dr. Nansen sent to him on his return. "Mark Twain" is another of Mr. MacAlister's many friends, and when in London, the greatest of humourists often smokes the pipe of peace at 20 Hanover Square with his friend. Mr. MacAlister is a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, and of the Royal Geographical Society, and a well-known "Savage." His official address is 20 Hanover Square, W.

MACARTHUR, The Right Rev. James, D.D., Bishop of Bombay, was educated at the University of Glasgow, where he graduated M.A. in 1868. Becoming a Scotch Barrister in 1871, he was, three years later, called to the English Bar at the Inner Temple. Relinquishing the legal profession, Mr. Macarthur spent a year at Cuddesdon Theological College, and was ordained in 1878. After serving a curacy at St. Mary, Redcliff, Bristol, for two years, he was presented to the Rectory of Lamplugh, Cumberland, in 1880, and in 1887 he became Vicar of St. Mary, Tothill Fields, London. He was subsequently transferred to the Vicarage of All Saints, South Acton, in 1892, and was appointed Rural Dean of Ealing in 1894. In 1898 Mr. Macarthur was consecrated Bishop of Bombay.

M'ARTHUR, W. A., M.P., D.L., is the eldest son of Alexander M'Arthur, M.P., and was born in 1857, and educated privately. Entering upon a business career, he became partner in the firm of W. & A. M'Arthur, Australian merchants, and was Commissioner for New South Wales to the Colonial Exhibition in 1886. He is also a Director of the Bank of Australasia, and a D.L. for London. His parliamentary career dates from 1886, when he contested Buckrose, Yorks., but was unseated on a scrutiny. In 1887 he was returned as a Liberal for the St. Austell Division of Cornwall, and was again returned in 1892 and 1895. He was a Junior Lord of the Treasury from Aug. 1892 to July 1895, and since March 1894 has been second Liberal Whip. He has acted as Hon. Sec. and unofficial whip to the Committee of Radical members. Address: 14 Sloane Gardens, S.W.

MACARTNEY, Sir Halliday, K.C.M.G., son of Robert Macartney, of Dundrennan, Kirkcudbrightshire, was born in 1833, and was educated for the medical profession at the Edinburgh University. In 1856, during his student days, he joined a contingent of volunteers being raised for the Turkish army, and served through the Crimea, studying Turkish at the same time. Returning to Edinburgh he graduated M.D., and entered the Army Medical Service as Surgeon in the 99th Regiment, at that time under orders for India, where the Mutiny had broken out. The regiment arrived too late at Calcutta for its services to be required, and was sent on to China, where Macartney was present at the taking of the Taku Forts, the attack on Peking, and the sacking of the Summer Palace. Remaining in China after the peace, he took service under the Imperial Government, 1862, being granted military rank and command together with General Gordon, of whom he was the friend. As an officer in the Celestial army, he drilled a force of 3000 men, which operated with success against the Taepings. He also established a military arsenal at Nankin, of which he was Governor for twelve years till 1876. He was then sent to England on a special mission in connection with the Margary incident. A permanent mission being resolved upon by China, he became its European Secretary, and as such paid frequent visits to the principal European capitals. He attended the coronation of the present Czar's father, and has been present at many of the principal State functions at home and abroad. He is officially described as Councillor and English Secretary to the Chinese Legation in London, and his unrivalled knowledge of the Chinese language, customs, and policy, has led to his being described by Anglo-Chinese officials as "a thorough Chinaman." He received the honour of the C.M.G. in 1881, and the K.C.M.G. in 1885, and has been decorated with the Orders of the Precious Star and the Double Dragon. In 1884 he married Jean, daughter of J. L. de Santos. Address: Portland Place, &c.

MACARTNEY, William G. I. M.P., is the eldest son of Mr. J. W. I. Macartney, M.P., of co. Tyrone and was born in 1852. He was educated at Exeter and Exeter College, Oxford, where he graduated with a first class in History in 1875 (B.A.) He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1876, and was in the South-Eastern Circuit. In 1885 he entered Parliament as Conservative Member for South Antrim, which he continues to represent. In 1895 he was appointed Secretary to the Admiralty. Address: Clogher Park, Tyrone, and Palace Chambers, Westminster, S.W.

MACAULAY, James, M.A., M.D. eldest son of Alexander Macaulay, M.D. was born at Edinburgh, May 22, 1811. His early education was received at the Edinburgh Academy, where he was from 1824 to 1830. The Rector of the school in those years was the Venerable Archdeacon Williams, Tail, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, was "Dux" of the school in 1826. In 1830 he entered the University of Edinburgh, where he took degrees in arts and in medicine, attending also the classes in theology. After graduating in 1841, Dr. Macaulay studied in Paris and travelled in Italy and Spain. In 1843 he became joint-editor of the Lancet and Gazette, on the retirement of William Jerdan, and retained the appointment till 1857. In the following year he became editor of the Leisure Hour and the Sunday at Home. From the Leisure Hour office was issued, about twenty years ago, the Boys' Own Paper, which was started in order to take the place of the pernicious weekly literature which had previously been provided; and was followed by the Girls' Own Paper. Both were founded by Dr. Macaulay. He has also written many books of biography, travel, and adventure, some of them chiefly for juvenile reading, such as "All True," "Stirring Stories of Peace and War," "Wonderful Tales from Real Life," "Anson's Voyage Round the World," and his story, "From Midway to Admiral of the Fleet." The last of these Christmas books is entitled, "Strange yet True: or, Interesting and Memorable Stories retold." "Notes of a Tour in the United States," which first appeared in the Leisure Hour, was afterwards issued as a volume, entitled "Across the Ferry," which passed through several editions. "The Truth about Ireland" contains the result of personal observation during repeated visits. One of Dr. Macaulay's volumes in the Pen and Pencil Series is "Sea Pictures," which Mr. Ruskin said was the best book he had ever seen on the subject. He has also published books on Luther, Dr. Johnson, and General Gordon; and in 1887, "Victoria R.I., her Life and Reign." On the occasion of the silver wedding of the Prince and Princess of Wales he issued an annotated collection of the "Speeches and Addresses of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales during twenty-five years, 1863-88." Dr. Macaulay has been for thirty-five years the editor-in-chief of the Religious Tract Society's periodicals. He is now Consulting Editor of its magazines, and only an occasional contributor to the Leisure Hour and Sunday Home, to which he devoted so long a service as editor. He retired from the editorship of the Leisure Hour in 1895. He married, in 1860, a daughter of the late Rev. G. Stokes, vicar of Hope-Hanley. Address: 4 Wynnstay Gardens, Kensington, W.

MACBETH, Robert Walker, A.R.A., R.S.A., was born in Glasgow on Sept. 30, 1848, and is the second son of Norman Macbeth, R.S.A. He was educated in Edinburgh and abroad, and received his early training at the Royal Scottish Academy schools. He came up to London in 1871, and for a time drew for the Graphic. He became an Associate of the Royal Watercolour Society in 1874, and is an original member of the Painter-Etchers, as well as a Correspondent of the Institut de France. He has been a constant exhibitor at the Royal Academy, and of late years has had the following pictures hung: "Unenvied, Unmolested," and "Dunster Castle," 1895; two illustrations to "The Fair Maid of Perth," "Cider Making," an etching of Sir E. Burne Jones's "Chant d'Amour," &c., in the Black and White Room, and "Marauders from the Moor," "Sweethearts and Wives," a water-colour, 1896; "The End of a Good Day," a portrait sketch of Alfred Gilbert, R.A., and another of Philip H. Calderon, R.A., 1897; "In Cloudland," "Sparklets," and, in the Black and White Room, two etchings of Mr. MacWhirter's "Affric Water," and another of his, "End of a Good Day." In 1899 he exhibited "Favourites of the Hunt," "Naval Manœuvres," and, in the Black and White Room, "Midnight Moths." He married, in 1887, Lydia, eldest daughter of General Bates. He lives at Washford, not far from Dunster Castle, in Somersetshire, and his London studio is 28 Tite Street, Chelsea, S.W.

M'CALLUM, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Edward, R.E., K.C.M.G., Governor of Newfoundland, was born in 1882, and is the son of Major H. A. M'Callum,

R.M.L.I. He passed out of Woolwich first in 1871, and was appointed Superintendent of Telegraphy in the Southern District in 1874. Subsequently he became Private Secretary to Sir William Jervois in the Straits Settlements, and prepared plans for the defence of Singapore. In 1879 he was at Woolwich at the Works Office, and in 1880 became Colonial Engineer of the Straits Settlements, and in 1884 Surveyor-General, when he constructed the new fortifications of Singapore. He was created a C.M.G. in 1887, and promoted Knight Commander in July 1898. He was Governor of Lagos until September 1898, when he was appointed to his present post in succession to Sir H. H. Murray, K.C.B.

M'CALMONT, Major Harry Leslie Blundell, M.P., J.P., D.L., was born in 1861, and is the eldest son of H. B. B. M'Calmont, Esq., barrister-at-law. He was educated at Eton, and in 1881 entered the 1st battalion of the 6th Royal Regiment, subsequently joining the Scots Guards in 1885. He retired in 1889, and is a Major in the 4th Battalion Royal Warwickshire Regiment (militia). In 1895 he was elected as a Conservative to represent Newmarket. He is well known as an owner of racehorses, especially of "Isinglass," winner of the "triple event" in 1893, i.e. the Derby, St. Leger, and the Two Thousand Guineas, and also of the Ascot Cup in 1895. He is a member of the Jockey Club and of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and owns the steam yacht Giralda. He married, in 1885, Amy H., daughter of Major-Gen. John Miller. This lady died in 1889, and he is now married to Winifred, daughter of General Sir Henry de Bathe, Bart. Addresses: 11 St. James's Square, S.W.; Cheveley Park, Newmarket, &c.

He is a Fellow of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical and Hunterian Societies, and has contributed important articles to Quain's and Heath's Dictionaries. Address : 1 Cambridge Place, Victoria Road, Kensington, W.

McCARTHY, Justin, M.P., eldest son of the late Michael Francis McCarthy, was born at Cork on Nov. 22, 1830. After receiving a liberal education there, he became attached to the staff of a Liverpool paper in 1853. He entered the Reporters' Gallery of the House of Commons in 1860 for the Morning Star, became foreign editor of that paper the following autumn, and chief editor in 1864; he resigned the latter post in 1868, and travelled through the United States for nearly three years, visiting thirty-five of the thirty-seven States. Since that time he has more than once revisited America. Mr. McCarthy has contributed to the London Review, the Westminster Review, the Fortnightly Review, the Nineteenth Century, the Contemporary Review, to several English magazines, and to many American periodicals, including the North American Review, and the Forum. He is the author of "The Waterdale Neighbours," 1867; "My Enemy's Daughter," 1869; "Lady Judith," 1871; "A Fair Saxon," 1873; "Linley Rochford," 1874; "Dear Lady Disdain," 1875; "Miss Misanthrope," 1877; "Donna Quixote," 1879; "The Comet of a Season," 1881; "Maid of Athens," 1883; "Camisola," 1885 (novels); of "Con Amore," a volume of critical essays; and "Prohibitory Legislation in the United States," an account of the working of the Liquor Laws in Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Iowa, and other States of the Union. In collaboration with Mrs. Campbell-Praed he has written three novels: "The Right Honourable," 1886; "The Rebel Rose," 1887; and "The Ladies' Gallery," 1888. More lately he has published "The Dictator," a novel, 1893; and "Red Diamonds," a novel, 1893. Mr. McCarthy's most important work is "A History of Our Own Times" (1878-80), being an account of what happened in these countries, from the accession of Queen Victoria to the general election of 1880. He has published the first and second volumes of a "History of the Four Georges." He has also written a short history of "The Epoch of Reform," the period between 1830 and 1850, published in 1882, and a "Life of Sir Robert Peel," in the series called "The Prime Ministers of Queen Victoria," published in 1891; in 1895 a "Life of Leo XIII."; in 1897, 5th vol. of "History of Our Own Times," up to June of that year; in 1898, "The Story of Gladstone's Life." Mr. McCarthy was for twenty-five years a political writer for one of the London daily papers. He was elected to Parliament as member for the county of Longford, Ireland, in March 1879, and was re-elected when the dissolution took place in 1880, in both instances without a contest. At the general election, 1885, he contested Derry, and was defeated by a majority of 29, but was immediately elected for Longford, by an immense majority. In 1886 he contested Derry again, and was defeated by a majority of 3, while at the same time he was returned unopposed for Longford. He claimed the Derry seat and obtained it on petition, and then elected to sit for Derry. He has since lectured in America. He is a Home Ruler, and was Vice-Chairman of the Irish parliamentary party in the House of Commons before the rejection of Mr. Parnell by the majority, when Mr. McCarthy was by them elected Chairman. He married, in 1855, Charlotte, daughter of the late W. G. Allman; she died in 1879. Address pro tem.: 11 Roxburgh Road, Westgate-on-Sea.

McCARTHY, Justin Huntly, author, was born in 1860, and is the son of Justin McCarthy, M.P. He was educated at University College School and College, and on his leaving the latter, travelled extensively and entered upon a career of journalism. He has written largely for the newspapers and magazines, and has published many books, including the following: (Poetry) "Serapion," "Hafiz in London," "Harlequinade"; (fiction) "Doom," "Dolly," "Lily Lass," "A London Legend," "The Royal Christopher"; (history) "An Outline of Irish History," "England under Gladstone," "Ireland since the Union," "The French Revolution"; (plays) "The White Carnation," "The Highwayman," "The Wife of Socrates," &c. He has also translated "Omar Khayyam," the "Arabian Nights" and Hafiz. He sat in Parliament as an Irish Nationalist from 1884 to 1892. In 1894 he married the accomplished Miss Cissy Loftus. Address : 31 King's Road, Brighton.

M'CLELAN, The Hon. Abner Reid, Lieut.-Governor of New Brunswick, was born at Hopewell, N.B., Jan. 4, 1831, of a family that had emigrated from Londonderry towards the end of the last century. He was educated at Mount Allison Academy, and for several years was a successful merchant at Hopewell. In 1854 he entered the N.B. Assembly as representative for Albert, and sat until the Union in 1867, which he aided to bring about, being Chief Commissioner of Public works at the time. In 1867 he was called to the Canadian Senate, where he sat until his appointment as Governor in 1896. Address : Government House, Frederickton, N.B.

M'CLINTOCK, Admiral Sir (Francis) Leopold, K.C.B., D.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S., &c., is second son of the late Henry M'Clintock, Esq., uncle to the first Lord Rathdonnell, and of a daughter of Archdeacon Fleury. He was born at Dundalk in 1819, and entered the navy in 1831. After some years of foreign service, during which he was promoted to Lieutenant for special services in the recovery of H.M.S. Gorgon when stranded in South America, he returned to England about the time when great anxiety began to be felt for the safety of Sir John Franklin and his companions. He accompanied Sir James Clarke Ross as Second Lieutenant on board H.M.S. Enterprise, in the Arctic Expedition sent out by the Admiralty in 1848. Returning unsuccessful in November 1849, M'Clintock joined a second expedition sent out early in 1850, under the command of Captain Horatio Austin, as Senior Lieutenant of H.M.S. Assistance, Captain (Sir) Erasmus Ommaney. It was their fortune, in August 1850, to see, at Cape Riley, the first traces of the missing expedition. In the following spring, whilst frozen up at Griffith's Island, he signalised himself by an unprecedented sledge journey of eighty days and 760 geographical miles, reaching the most westerly point which had then been attained from the east, in the Arctic regions. Upon the return of this expedition to England in October 1851, Lieutenant M'Clintock was promoted to the rank of Commander. The following spring he again proceeded to the Arctic regions in command of H.M.S. Intrepid, one of five vessels composing the third searching expedition, under Sir Edward Belcher's command. In accordance with instructions from the Admiralty, the Intrepid, in company with the Resolute, Captain Kellett, wintered at Melville Island, in order to search for the heroic Captain M'Clure and his companions ; and most fortunately they were discovered and rescued, after their three years' imprisonment in the ice. M'Clintock again distinguished himself by his sledge journey of one hundred and five days and 1210 geographical miles, into the hitherto unexplored region northward of Melville Island. The comparative perfection to which Arctic sledge-travelling has been carried is almost entirely due to the improvements effected by him. Abandoning four out of the five ships embedded in the ice, and also M'Clure's ship the Investigator, the personnel of this expedition, with M'Clure and his companions, returned to England in October 1854, in the depot ship North Star, and two relief ships, freshly arrived out, under Captain Inglefield. M'Clintock was now advanced to the rank of Captain. In 1857 he accepted the command of Lady Franklin's own search expedition—to be fitted out at her expense. He selected, and appropriately equipped, the steam yacht Fox, of 177 tons, and with twenty-four companions sailed on July 1, 1857. He returned on Sept. 20, 1859, having discovered, upon the north-west shore of King William's Island, a record announcing the death of Sir John Franklin and the abandonment of the Erebus and Terror. M'Clintock brought home intelligence of their great discoveries and the fate of their crews, and many relics of the bold expedition. He published a very interesting account of his most important and successful searching voyage. Captain M'Clintock was received with great distinction. Knighthood, the Freedom of the City of London, and the highest degrees of the chief Universities were conferred upon him. Her Majesty, by her Order in Council, sanctioned his time in the Fox to count as sea-time served in the navy, for having brought home the only authentic intelligence of the death of Franklin and the fate of his companions. During the next six years Sir Leopold commanded, in succession, H.M.S. Bulldog, Doris, and Aurora, fulfilling various important and delicate duties abroad. From 1865 to 1868 he served as Commodore of the Jamaica Station. From 1868, until promoted to Rear-Admiral in 1871, he was a naval Aide-de-camp to the Queen ; from 1872 to 1877 Admiral-Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard, when he was promoted to Vice-Admiral ; and from 1879 to 1882 he served as Commander-in-Chief of the North American and West Indian Stations. In 1884 he became a full Admiral and also an Elder Brother of the Corporation of the Trinity House ; in 1887 he was selected for one of the few pensions open to admirals, for

"good and meritorious services"; and in 1891 he was created a Knight Commander of the Bath. He is the author of "The Voyage of the Fox in the Arctic Seas," which has gone through five editions. In 1870 Sir Leopold M'Clintock married Annette Elizabeth, second daughter of Robert Foster Dunlop, Esq., of Monasterboice House, co. Louth, by Anna Elizabeth, sister of 10th Viscount Massereene and Ferrard, and has issue. Address: 8 Atherstone Terrace, Gloucester Road, S.W.

MACCOLL, Canon Malcolm, was born March 27, 1838, on a sheep farm occupied by his father, a man of some distinction in mathematical sciences, in Inverness-shire, and was educated at Edinburgh, at Trinity College, Glenalmond, and at the University of Naples. He was appointed assistant-curate of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, in 1861; chaplain to the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, 1862-63; curate of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, 1864-67. He spent the period between 1867 and 1869 in Southern Italy, chiefly in the study of theology, literature, and foreign politics. In 1871 he was collated to the rectory of St. George's, Botolph Lane, in the City of London. In 1884 he became a Canon residentiary of Ripon. He is the author of "Mr. Gladstone and Oxford," by "Scrutator," 2nd edit., 1865; "Science and Prayer," 4th edit., 1866; "Is there not a Cause? a Letter to Col. Greville Nugent, M.P. (late Lord Greville), on the Disestablishment of the Irish Church," 2nd edit., 1868; "The Reformation in England," 2nd edit., 1869; "The Ober-Ammergau Passion Play," 10th edit., 1870; "Is Liberal Policy a Failure?" by "Expertus," 1870; "Who is Responsible for the (Franco-German) War?" by "Scrutator," 2nd edit., 1871; "The Damnatory Clauses of the Athanasian Creed rationally explained," in a letter to Mr. Gladstone, 1872; "Lawlessness, Sacerdotalism, and Ritualism," 3rd edit., 1875; "The Eastern Question: its Facts and Fallacies," 1877; "Three Years of the Eastern Question," 3rd edit., 1878; "Christianity in Relation to Science and Morals," 5th edit., 1889; "Life Here and Hereafter," 2nd edit., 1896; "England's Responsibility towards Armenia," 4th edit., 1895; "The Sultan and the Powers," 2nd edit., 1896; besides contributions to periodical literature, and, in 1886, a pamphlet on the Irish Question, which passed through nine editions in the course of the year. In foreign politics he has made a special study of Mohammedanism as a theocratic system of government, inconsistent, as he contends, with civilisation, and fatal to the moral and intellectual development of any people who embrace it. This is his conclusion from the history and tenets of Islam, confirmed by his own observation in various Mohammedan lands. Address: The Residence, Ripon.

MACCOLL, Norman, M.A., editor of the Athenæum, was born in 1843, and educated at Downing College, Cambridge, of which he was a Fellow. He was Harve Prizeman in 1868, and was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1875. He has published a work on "Greek Scepticism from Pyrrho to Sextus," 1869. Address: 1 New Court, Carey Street, W.C.; and Athenæum.

M'CONNELL, W. R., Q. C., J. P., D. L. Chairman of the County of London Court of Sessions, was born on July 2, 1837, at Belfast, being the only child of David M'Connell, J. P., of Castlereagh House, co. Down, and Jane, his wife, daughter of Alex. M'Connell. He was educated at the Royal Academical Institution, Belfast, at a private school in England, at Heidelberg, and the University of London, where he graduated B.A. in 1858. After being called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple in 1862, he joined the Northern Circuit in 1863. He was appointed Revising Barrister for Liverpool in 1868; one of the Counsel to the Board of Trade in 1875; and Counsel to her Majesty's Board of Customs in 1876. He was Royal Commissioner to inquire into Corrupt Practices at Parliamentary Elections in the city of Gloucester in 1880. He became a Queen's Counsel in 1897, and was appointed Chairman of the Court of Quarter Sessions for the County of London in August 1897. He is a Magistrate for the counties of Down and London, a Deputy-Lieutenant, and a F.R.G.S. Mr. M'Connell is married to Minnie, daughter of Edward Marshall. MAC CORMAC, Sir William, Bart. K.C.V.O., D.Sc., M.A., M.Ch. honoris causa, President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and Member of the Court of Examiners, Royal College of Surgeons, and now Examiner for H.M. Naval Medical Service, was born at Belfast, Jan. 17, 1836, being the eldest son of Henry Mac Cormac, M.D., and Mary Newsam. He was educated in the Belfast Institution, in Dublin, and in Paris; he became Bachelor and Master of Arts, also Master in Surgery, and Doctor of Science honoris causa of the Queen's University, and received its gold medal. He was afterwards a Member of the Senate, and Examiner in Surgery of the University.

as appointed Surgeon, and subsequently Consulting Surgeon, to the Belfast Hospital. He saw service at Metz Sedan, during the Franco-German 1870-71, as Surgeon-in-Chief of the -American Ambulance, and during Franco-Servian war, 1876. He was one of the Senior Surgeons, and Lecturer on Surgery at St. Thomas's Hospital during many years; is Consulting Surgeon and Lecturer on Clinical Surgery to the French Hospital, the Italian Hospital, Queen Charlotte's Hospital. He is a member of the English and Irish Colleges of Surgeons, and lately Examiner in Surgery in the University of London, and Examiner in Surgery for her Majesty's Land and Indian Medical Services. He is a member of the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. In 1897 he acted as Hon. Secretary-General of the International Medical Congress in London, and in consideration of his services in this capacity the Queen conferred on him the honour of knighthood. In 1898 he was created a baronet on the occasion of her Majesty's Jubilee, and appointed Baron in Ordinary to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, whom he attended in July 1898, when H.R.H. was suffering from the effects of an accident. He was elected President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England for the third year in July 1898. In November 1898 he and Sir Francis Laking were created baronets in the Victorian order. In December 1898, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the St. Petersburg Academy of Medicine, he was elected an Hon. Member of the Academy. M'CORMICK. The Rev. Joseph, D.D., was born in the year 1834, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge (1857, M.A. 1860, D.D. Dublin ad eam, 1884). While at Cambridge he was a member of the University Eight, and was a member of the University Eleven. He was ordained in 1858, and was for two years curate of St. Peter's, Regent Square, London; he was then appointed Rector of Dunmore East, Waterford, Ireland, where he remained until 1864, when he became Assistant-Minister of St. Stephen's, Marylebone. In 1867 he was appointed Perpetual Curate of St. Peter's, Deptford, and in 1875 he accepted the important Vicarage of Hull. He was made Rural Dean of Hull in 1875, Prebendary of York in 1884, and Hon. Chaplain to the Queen in 1890. In 1894 he was appointed Vicar of St. Augustine's, Highbury. Address: 1 Highbury Quadrant, N.

MAC CUNN, Hamish, composer of dramatic music, was born at Greenock, March 22, 1868, and is the second son of James Mac Cunn, formerly shipowner in Greenock. He was educated at various schools in Greenock, and by private tutors, and commenced the study of music at the early age of six years. In 1883 he gained an Educational Scholarship for composition at the then newly-established Royal College of Music, London. There he studied principally under Dr. C. H. Hubert Parry until 1886, when he resigned his scholarship. His first introduction to the public was at the Crystal Palace in 1886, when at one of the Saturday concerts Mr. Manns produced his overture entitled "The Land of the Mountain and the Flood," which gained for its composer immediate fame. His principal works are: "Chior Mhor," overture for orchestra; "Bonnie Kilmeny," cantata for soli, chorus, and orchestra; concert overture, "The Land of the Mountain and the Flood"; "Lord Ullin's Daughter," ballad for chorus and orchestra; "The Ship o' the Fiend," ballad for orchestra; "The Dowie Dens o' Yarrow," ballad—overture for orchestra; "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," dramatic cantata for soli, chorus, and orchestra; "Album of Ten Songs"; "Cycle of Six Love-Lyrics"; "The Cameronian's Dream," a ballad for baritone solo, chorus, and orchestra; "Three Songs from William Black's 'Rhymes by a Deerstalker'"; (November 1894) an opera, produced at Edinburgh, and entitled "Jeanie Deans"; "Queen Hynde of Caledon," a dramatic cantata for soli, chorus, and orchestra; "Suite of Six Scotch Dances"; "Three Romantic Pieces," for 'cello and pianoforte; suite for orchestra, "Highland Memories"; ballad for male voice, chorus, and orchestra, "The Death of Parcy Reed"; and a grand opera, "Diarmid," libretto by the Marquis of Lorne, produced at Covent Garden in October 1897. Besides the above mentioned, he is the author of many other songs, part-songs, &c. In June 1889 he married the only daughter of the late John Pettie, R.A. Address: 21 Albion Road, South Hampstead, N.W.

MACDONALD, The Most Rev. Angus, D.D., Roman Catholic Archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, was born at Borrodale, in Inverness-shire, on Sept. 18, 1844, and is the youngest son of the late Angus Macdonald, Esq., of Glenaladale, and Mary, daughter of Hugh Watson, Writer to the Signet. He was educated at St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, and is a B.A. of London University. He was ordained priest in July 1872, and was consecrated Bishop of Argyll and the Isles in 1878, when the Hierarchy of Scotland was restored in March of that year. He was translated to his present see in 1892. Twenty years before that date the staunch Protestants of St. Andrews used to aver that there were only two Roman Catholics in the ancient University city, but under Archbishop Macdonald the Church of Rome has made converts in the diocese. Address: 42 Greenhill Gardens, Edinburgh.

MACDONALD, Sir Claude Maxwell, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., British Minister to the Court of China, son of the late Major-General J. P. Macdonald, was born in 1852. He was educated at Uppingham and at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and entered the army as a Lieutenant of the 74th Highlanders in March 1872. He was promoted Captain in 1881, and Major in 1882, in which year he went to Egypt and took part in the campaign, being present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. He was mentioned in despatches, and obtained the brevet of Major, the Khedive's Star, and medal with clasp. He remained in Egypt on special service, and in 1884 volunteered for the 1st Battalion of the Black Watch, which was attached to the Suakin Expedition, and took part in the battles of El-Teb and Tamai, where he was wounded. He obtained two clasps to his medal and the Osmanieh of the Fourth Class. From February 1883 until June 1887 he was attached by the War Office to the Agency at Cairo. He retired from the army in 1887, and was appointed Acting-Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar. In 1888 he became Commissioner on the West Coast of Africa, and the following year proceeded on a special mission to the Niger Territories. Subsequently at Berlin he took part in the delimitation of the boundary between the Oil Rivers Protectorate and the Cameroons, and then became Commissioner and Consul-General in the Oil Rivers Protectorate and the adjoining native territories. Sir Claude Macdonald was appointed in 1891 Commissioner and Consul-General in the Niger Coast Protectorate, Consul to the Islands of Fernando Po, and also Consul in the Cameroons. He was created K.C.M.G. in 1892, and K.C.B. in 1898. In January 1896 he was appointed Envoy-Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking. Since his appointment, China has been passing through the most critical stage in its history; and although the British policy in the Far East has been severely criticised, yet Sir Claude Macdonald has secured some substantial concessions. Among them should be mentioned the decision of the Chinese Government to open all inland waters to navigation, whether by foreign or native steamers, and the assurance that no portion of the provinces adjoining the Yangtse-Kiang valley should be alienated to any other Power. It is also, in great measure, due to Sir Claude Macdonald that the Government undertook that, so long as British trade continued to exceed that of any other Power, the Inspector-General of Maritime Customs should be a British subject. In May 1899 he returned to England to take a short holiday, his health having been much impaired. Sir Claude married, in 1892, Ethel, daughter of Major W. Cairns Armstrong, widow of P. C. Robertson, Esq., of the Indian Political Service. Address: British Legation, Peking, China.

MACDONALD, Frederic William, born in Leeds, Feb. 25, 1842, is the son of the Rev. G. B. Macdonald, a well-known Wesleyan minister, and grandson of the Rev. James Macdonald. He was educated at St. Peter's Collegiate School, London, at Oxenford House, Jersey, and Owens College, Manchester, where he was Senior Prizeman in Classics, Greek Testament, and English Literature, session 1861-62. He entered the Wesleyan ministry in 1862. First stationed at Burslem, afterwards in Liverpool, Waterloo, Manchester, Southport, Kensington, and Clifton. In 1869 he was the representative of the British Methodist Conference to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States at Cincinnati. In 1881 he was Fernley Lecturer on "The Dogmatic Principle in Relation to Christian Belief," and was appointed Professor of Systematic Theology at the Birmingham branch of the Wesleyan Theological Institution. In 1885 he published "The Life of Fletcher of Madeley"; and in 1887 "The Life of William Morley Punsbon, LL.D." He was assistant-editor of the London Quarterly Review, 1872-76, and was elected a member of the Birmingham School Board in 1888. In 1891 he retired from his professorship to become Secretary of the Wesleyan Foreign Missionary Society, and in this capacity travels largely at home and abroad.

MACDONALD, George, LL.D., poet and novelist, was born at Huntly, Aberdeenshire, in 1824, and was educated at the parish school there, and at King's College and University, Aberdeen. After taking his degree he became a student for the ministry at the Independent College, Highbury, London, and was for a short time an Independent minister, but soon retired, became a lay member of the Church of England, and settled in London to pursue a literary career. His first work was "Within and Without, a Dramatic Poem," 1856; followed by "Poems," 1857; "Phantastes, a Faerie Romance," 1858; "David Elginbrod," 1862; "Adela Cathcart," 1864; "The Portent, a Story of Second Sight," 1864; "Alec Forbes of Howglen," 1865; "Annals of a Quiet Neighbourhood," 1866; "Guild Court," 1867; "The Disciple and other Poems," 1868; "The Seaboard Parish," 1868; "Robert Falconer," 1868; "Wilfrid Cumbermede," 1871; "The Vicar's Daughter," and "Malcolm," 1874; "St. George and St. Michael," 1875; "Thomas Wingfield, Curate," 1876; "The Marquis of Lossie," 1877. Besides these Mr. Macdonald has written books for the young; "Dealings with the Fairies," 1867; "Ranald Bannerman's Boyhood," 1869; "The Princess and the Goblin," 1871; "At the Back of the North Wind," 1870; and others. He is also the author of "Unspoken Sermons," 1866; and a treatise on the "Miracles of our Lord," 1870. In 1877 he received a Civil List Pension of £100, in consideration of his contributions to literature. His later works are "The Gifts of the Child Christ, and other Poems," 2 vols., 1882; "Castle Warlock," 3 vols., 1882; "The Princess and Curdie," a fairy romance, 1882; "Weighed and Wanting," 1882; "The Wise Woman," a parable, 1883; "There and Back," a novel; and "A Rough Shaking," 1891; "Vicar's Daughter," 1893; "Lilith," 1895; "Salted with Fire," and "Rampolli," 1897. In May 1893 his poetical works were published in two volumes. For some years past Dr. Macdonald has lived principally at Bordighera, but pays annual visits to England. Address: Casa Coraggio, Bordighera.

MACDONALD, Greville, M.D., eldest son of George Macdonald, LL.D., the novelist and poet, was born in Manchester on Jan. 20, 1856. He was educated at King's College School, subsequently obtaining his medical education at King's College Hospital, where he gained several scholarships and prizes. In 1879 he took the membership of the Royal College of Surgeons; in 1881 he graduated with honours at the University of London, taking the degree of M.B., and his M.D. in the following year. After travelling in the East and on the Continent for some years, he was appointed Resident Medical Officer to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat in 1886; since which time he has devoted his attention solely to the study of affections of the nose, throat, and ear. In the following year he was appointed Honorary Physician to the same institution, which office he holds at the present time. In 1893 he was appointed Throat Physician and Lecturer on Diseases of the Throat and Nose to King's College Hospital. During the year 1888 Dr. Macdonald devoted his attention specially to a scientific investigation of the functions of the nose; the results of his experiments being published in a volume entitled "On the Respiratory Functions of the Nose." He had previously published (1887) a brochure entitled "The Forms of Nasal Obstruction in Relation to Throat and Ear Disease." He has since added to these "Board School Laryngitis," 1889; "A Treatise on Diseases of the Nose and its Accessory Cavities" (2nd edit.), 1892; "Hay Fever and Asthma," 1893. Besides the above he has contributed many articles and papers to the medical societies and journals, and is one of the editors of and contributors to the Medical Annual. One of his most recent papers is on "The Forms of Epithelial Hypertrophy in the Larynx" (International Clinics), 1895-96. Address: 85 Harley Street, W.

MACDONALD, Colonel Hector Archibald, C.B., D.S.O., Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, was born April 13, 1852. He joined the Gordon Highlanders as a private soldier, and served in the ranks for over nine years. He first saw active service in the Afghan War of 1879-80, and for his conduct at the affair at Karatiga he was mentioned in despatches. He was attached to the Maidan Expedition, and was present at the engagement at Charasiah, and also took part in the operations round Cabul in December 1879. He accompanied Lord Roberts in the famous march to Cabul, and was present at the battle of Candahar, after which he was promoted Lieutenant for his distinguished conduct in the field. He also received a medal with three clasps and a bronze decoration. Lieutenant Macdonald went to South Africa in 1881, and took part in the Boer War, and was present in the engagement at Majuba Hill. In June 1885 he joined the Egyptian Constabulary, and served in the Nile Expedition of that year as Garrison-Adjutant at Assiout.

M'DONALD, John Blake, R.S.A., a descendant of the family of McDonalds of Keppoch, was born in the parish of Bonmahon, Morayshire, in 1829. When very young his family removed to Deeside, where he was educated, and early developed a taste for art. He removed to Edinburgh in 1852, where he attended the Board of Trustees' School of Art for several years under Robert Scott Lauder and John Ballantyne, who were at that time the teachers, receiving previous to 1862 from the Royal Scottish Academy several prizes, and in that year the first prize for painting from life. In the same year he was elected Associate of the Royal Scottish Academy. In 1862 he painted "Prince Charlie leaving Scotland, or the

MACDONALD. John Denis, R.N. M.D., F.R.S., Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, youngest son of the late James Macdonald, Esq., of Cork, and Catherine his wife (daughter of the late Denis McCarthy, Esq., of Killeleeman), was born Oct. 26, 1826, and educated under his father's supervision. In 1841 he became the apprentice and pupil of the late Dr. Wm. L. Meredith, House-Surgeon to the South Infirmary, Cork; and commenced his professional studies in the Cork School of Medicine, but completed them in King's College, London, where he succeeded Dr. Martin Duncan, F.R.S., as prospector to the late Professor R. B. Todd, F.R.S., and Sir William Bowman, Bart., then joint-professors of physiology. Here he had the advantage of attending the Botanical Lectures of the late Professor Edward Forbes and the Zoological of Professor T. Rymer Jones, who he said to have first inspired him with a taste for natural history. He was the inner of Sir William Fergusson's in Surgery, the Medical Society's and a Certificate in Medicine, while associated with the College. Having passed the College of Surgeons he entered the service as Assistant-Surgeon in 1849; was attached to the Royal Naval Hospital, Greenwich; took charge of the Medical Department, and made numerous pathological dissections and records, preserved in the Museum. Subsequently he was appointed to the S.S. Herald, Captain Henry Manglesham, F.R.S., Feb. 18, 1852, for surveying and exploring service in the S.W. Pacific. Before proceeding to join the service Dr. Macdonald profited much by the knowledge and information communicated to him by Professor Huxley, whose discoveries in the South Sea fauna he afterwards had numerous opportunities of verifying, and of himself studying the topography and natural history of the different localities visited either in the ship or in the tender the Torch. These included the coasts of the Australian Continent, the Islands in Bass's Strait, the Percy Islands, New Hebrides, New Caledonia, the Isle of Pines, and the Group of the Sandwich Islands. Microscopical drawings and dissections of all the more important organisms and products of dredge and net obtained in the expedition were communicated from time to time to the learned societies at home. He also fully assisted Mr. John Macgillivray, appointed naturalist, and Mr. Frederick New Rayner, the surgeon, in making a large collection of objects of natural history which were sent home, and presented by the Lords of the Admiralty to the British Museum. He headed a perilous exploring expedition into the interior of New Guinea, ascending the Rewa river to a distance of 100 miles at the Moli vei tala, with a clear horizon, for nearly a month. A sketch of the report sent home by the Captain was published by the Geographical Society in the volume for 1857. After this, the Rev. Mr. Baker, an American Missionary, and a party of teachers were clubbed and eaten in the Solo ira district. Much information was furnished from time to time to the Colonial Office, and on leaving Hong Kong a gold chronometer was presented to Dr. Macdonald by the Governor-General, Sir William Denison, R.E., F.R.S., Members of the Legislative Assembly, and Gentlemen, in recognition of services rendered. He was also made Corresponding Member of the Australian Museum by the late William Sharp Macleay, Esq., of the "Horæ Entomologicæ," whose splendid library at Elizabeth Bay was frequently consulted when objects of interest presented themselves. On arriving in England in 1859, at the age of 33, he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and was promoted and appointed the same year to H.M.S. Icarus (Commander, now Sir Nowell Salmon, G.C.B., V.C.), and in the West Indies encountered almost single-handed (two medical officers dying in succession) one of the most formidable epidemics of yellow fever on record. Some of the particulars connected with it will be found in the article on Yellow Fever in Reynolds's System of Medicine. He was awarded the M'Dougall Brisbane Gold Medal of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, was also adjudged but not awarded the Keith prize, the technical reason being that he could not be called a Scottish Naturalist, as specified in the bequest. He gained the Sir Gilbert Blane Gold Medal for the journal of H.M.S. Lord Wariden flag-ship, Mediterranean Station (1871), and was frequently engaged as one of the medical board of examiners, and he subsequently superintended the Naval Medical Officers entering the Army Medical School, as Professor of Naval Hygiene and a member of the Senate. Dr. Macdonald was promoted to the rank of Inspector-General of Hospitals, &c., in 1880; appointed to the Royal Naval Hospital, Plymouth, in 1883; and placed on the retired list in 1886. The following are some of his published works: "Sound and Colour," setting forth the undulatory theory as the only trustworthy basis of analogy, 1869; "Guide to the Microscopical Examination of Drinking-Water," 1875; "Outlines of Naval Hygiene," 1881; "A Guide to Microscopical Examination of Drinking-Water," 1883. He became Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces in 1891, Acting Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in 1893, and Member of the Viceroy's Council in the same year. In 1895 he was promoted to his present post and was created a G.C.S.I. in 1897. In October 1898 he was entertained at a banquet in London by his friends and admirers. Address: Government House Allahabad.

McDOUGALL, The Hon. William C.B., Q.C., and a Privy Councillor in Canada, was born at Toronto, Jan. 25, 1822. His grandfather, John M'Dougall, served through the American Revolution in the British Commissariat. He was educated at Toronto and at Victoria College, and afterwards studied law. From 1848 to 1858 he conducted at Toronto a monthly journal on agriculture, and from 1855 edited the North American, which was merged in the Toronto Globe in 1857. He was first elected to Parliament as a Reformer in 1858; was appointed Commissioner of Crown Lands, and a Member of the Executive Council in a Reform Ministry in May 1862; and resigned office with his colleagues in March 1864 on questions of constitutional changes; in June of the same year accepted the office of Provincial Secretary in a coalition ministry formed to carry a measure to unite British America under one government. During the Fenian troubles in the summer of 1866 Mr. McDougall was charged with the duties of Minister of Marine. In the first Dominion Government of 1867 he was made Minister of Public Works, which position he held until 1869. In 1868 he and Sir George Cartier were sent to England to confer with the Imperial Government on some questions that had arisen between the Provinces, including the acquisition of the North-West Territory and Rupert's Land then claimed by the Hudson Bay Company, under its charter from Charles II. After five months' negotiations the delegates concluded the purchase of nearly one half the North American continent for £300,000, and one twentieth of the prairie land surveyed within twenty years. In 1869 he was commissioned Lieut.-Governor of Rupert's Land and the North-West Territories, but the half-breed rebellion, under the provisional government of Louis Riel, at the time prevented his entering the country. Returning to Ottawa he resumed his place in Parliament, and declined to assume the Governorship after the suppression of the outbreak. In 1873 he was Special Commissioner of the Dominion Government to confer with the Imperial authorities on the subject of the Fisheries and Emigration. Mr. McDougall sat for South Simcoe in the Ontario Legislature from May 1875 to September 1878, when he resigned to contest Halton in the Dominion Parliament, which he represented until 1882. He was offered the Governorship of British Columbia or the Chief-Justiceship of Manitoba in 1878, both of which he declined. He resumed the practice of his profession at Ottawa as Consulting Counsel in special cases. In 1867 he was created C.B. (Civil), and subsequently became a Puisne Judge in the Province of Quebec.

MACEVILLY, The Most Rev. John, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Tuam, Primate of Connaught and Metropolitan, was born in Louisburgh, co. Mayo, on April 24, 1817, of respectable parents of the farmer class. He was educated at St. Jasteth's, Tuam, then graduated at Maynooth College, and after having earned the highest collegiate honours was a scholar of the Dunboyne Establishment for three years, and was ordained Priest in 1840. He was appointed Professor of SS. Scripture in St. Jasteth's in 1842, and in course of time became President of that College, which position he held up to the year 1857. In March 1857 he became Bishop of Galway, and in 1866 was also appointed temporary Administrator of Kilmacduagh and Kiltenera, remaining still Bishop of Galway. Between 1852 and 1894 he wrote a full Commentary in the English language on the entire New Testament, except the Apocalypse or Revelation. It has achieved a wonderful success, is used as a class book in almost all Colleges, and has reached (at anyrate the Epistles and leading Gospels) the fifth edition. It is in great request at home and abroad, especially in America. The Archbishop, who is now in his eighty-second year, administers the largest Diocese in Ireland with wonderful vigour and vigilance. McKINLAY, Mrs. John, née Antoi- nette Sterling, by which name she is known professionally, was born at Sterling- ville, Jefferson Co., in the State of New York, in 1850, and is the youngest daugh- ter of James Sterling, of old New England descent. She was educated as a vocalist under Abella, Marchesi, Pauline Viardot, and Manuel Garcia. She made her début at one of the Covent Garden Promenade Concerts in 1873, and at once became a general favourite for ballads and Scotch songs. Her rendering of "The Better Land" and "The Lost Chord" is cele- brated. In 1875 she married Mr. John McKinlay. He died in 1893. She is a vice-president of the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union. Address: 125 Ashley Gardens, S.W.

McKINLEY, Hon. William, twenty- fourth President of the United States, was born at Niles, Ohio, Jan. 29, 1843. He was educated at the public schools, and at the Poland (Ohio) Academy. In 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil War, he enlisted as a private in the Union army, and before its close had risen to the rank of captain and brevet major. In 1867 he was admitted to the bar, and began the practice of the law at Canton, Ohio. He was chosen prosecuting attorney of Stark Co., Ohio, in 1869, and in 1871 was elected a Representative in Congress, and was continuously re-elected until 1891. Mr. McKinley was Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means that framed the Revenue Bill of 1890, and hence that measure has been known as "the McKinley tariff." He was elected Governor of Ohio in 1891, and re-elected by an increased plurality in 1893, serving until the close of 1895. As his name was closely connected in the minds of the people with the principles of a protective tariff, both these elections were contested on the national question of tariff policy, and this point was fully discussed by orators on both sides all over the country, so that when Mr. McKinley's election in 1893 was found to be more pronounced than it had been in 1891, it was considered an indication that he would be the candidate of his party for the Presidential election in 1896. This nomination took place at a Convention of Delegates from the party in all parts of the country, which was held at St. Louis, Missouri, in June 1896. Soon after (July 7, 1896) the Democratic Convention was held in Chicago, and selected as their candidate Wm. Jennings Bryan, with a platform of principles advocating the unlimited coinage of silver, a low tariff, and the non-interference of the Federal authorities in local affairs, even when national interests were involved. In the ensuing election (November 1896) Mr. McKinley received the votes of many who were Democrats with reference to the tariff, while his opponent received many Republican votes in the west and south because of his views concerning silver. The tariff question was discussed during the canvass, but it did not take the pre-eminent place it had before occupied, and as a result the old party lines were much broken up. Mr. McKinley received a plurality over Mr. Bryan of over 600,000 votes, and was inducted into office Mar. 4, 1897. As the tariff of 1894, shorn of the income-tax feature, did not produce sufficient revenue for the support of the Government, an extra session of Congress was called to meet Mar. 15, 1897, and a new tariff, with strongly protective features (known from the name of the chairman of the committee in which it originated as "the Dingley Bill"), was agreed upon. In the meantime relations between the United States and Spain were becoming more and more strained because of the sympathy of the Americans with the sufferings of the people in Cuba, occasioned by the restrictions of the Spanish authorities growing in part out of the insurrection there. This tension was greatly increased by an explosion by which the U.S. battleship Maine was destroyed in the harbour of Havana on the night of Feb. 15, 1898, together with the lives of two of her officers and more than 250 of her crew. A careful investigation failed to show with certainty the cause of the explosion, but there were strong indications that it came from a point outside the ship, and other events occurring which increased the existing irritation, war was declared in April following. Within four months the power of Spain on the sea had been destroyed, her army in Eastern Cuba had surrendered, and lodgments by the American land forces had been effected in Porto Rico and in the Philippine Islands. Spain then sued for peace, and a protocol was signed August 12, stopping hostilities and providing for the appointment of Peace Commissioners to settle the details with reference to the Spanish islands in the Pacific, her army to be withdrawn entirely from her West Indian possessions, and Porto Rico to be ceded to the United States. During the war the President has enjoyed a vast popularity in the States.

M'LACHLAN, Robert, F.R.S., F.C.S., F.E.S., was born in London, April 10, 1837, and educated principally at Ilford, in Essex. His father, Hugh M'Lachlan, a native of Greenock, settled in London early in life, and was eminently successful as a chronometer maker. His mother, whose maiden name was Thompson, was from Northamptonshire. Robert, the youngest of five children, early showed a taste for natural history, which, as years sped on, concentrated itself upon botany, and subsequently upon entomology. A voyage to New South Wales and China in 1855-56, led to his collecting Australian plants; and on his return to England his desire to have them named led to his acquaintance with Robert Brown, then Keeper of the Botanical Department of the British Museum. Contact with this celebrated botanist had a distinct influence on his subsequent scientific career. In 1858 he was elected a Member of the Entomological Society of London, of which he became successively Secretary, Treasurer, and President, the latter in 1885-86, and is again Treasurer. He was elected, in 1862, a Fellow of the Linnæan Society, and of the Royal Society in 1877, and is also a Fellow of the Zoological and of the Royal Horticultural Societies, and on the Honorary List of the New Zealand Institute, the Royal Society of Liège, the ological Societies of Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Sweden, Russia, &c. Attention has been directed to entomology in general, and he has, on several occasions, acted as scientific adviser to the Colonial Office. Repeated visits to the continent have kept him in frequent intercourse with the entomologists of other countries. Amongst his general works are the principal articles on "Entomology," in the 9th edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and "The Entomological Results of the last Arctic Expedition," published in the Journal of the Entomological Society. As a specialist he has particularly attended to the Order Neuroptera, upon which his publications are very numerous, the principal separate work, a 3vo, of upwards of 600 pages, with plates, "Revision and Synopsis of the Neuroptera (or Caddis-flies) of the European Fauna, with Supplement," 1874-84, an attempt which has been made at going out exhaustively a special group of insects on characters based on certain general peculiarities, and which has been regarded as a departure in the case of insects of other groups. In 1893 came out "Catalogue of the Library of the Entomological Society." Mr. M'Lachlan has been a frequent contributor to most of the Natural History Journals during his life, and was for seventeen consecutive years contributor to the Zoological Record, and acted as an editor of the Entomological Monthly Magazine since its establishment in 1864. Address: 23 Clarendon Road, Lewisham, S.E.

MACLAGAN, Sir Douglas, eldest son of the late David MacLagan, M.D., F.R.S., Physician to the Forces, and Lecturer in Ordinary to the Queen in Scotland, was born at Ayr, N.B., in 1812, and educated at the High School of Edinburgh and subsequently at the University of Edinburgh. He became Fellow of the College of Physicians, Edinburgh, and has been President of both the Royal College of Surgeons and of the University of Edinburgh, an honour held only by his father; he has been P.R.S.E., and City-Lieutenant of the City of Edinburgh.

He was Professor of Medical Jurisprudence and Public Health in the University of Edinburgh from 1862 to 1878. Sir D. MacLagan holds the following appointments: Surgeon-General of the Royal Army of Archers, the Queen's Body-Guard for Scotland; Brigade-Surgeon Colonel Forth Infantry Brigade.

Medicæ," and of numerous papers on Medical Jurisprudence, and on Materia Medica and Therapeutics, in the medical journals. He was made Knight Bachelor in 1886. Address: 28 Heriot Row, Edinburgh.

MACLAGAN, Thomas John, M.D., Edin., received his medical education at the University of Edinburgh, and in Paris, Munich, and Vienna. He was at one time Examiner in Medicine at the University of Aberdeen, and is a Fellow of the Roy. Med. Chir. Soc., member of various medical societies, and Physician in Ordinary to Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. He has contributed articles on Rheumatism, Cholera, &c., to the Lancet, a paper with the title "Is Typhoid Fever Contagious?" to the Nineteenth Century, 1879, and has published "The Germ Theory Applied to the Explanation of the Phenomena of Disease: the Specific Fevers," 1876; "Rheumatism: its Nature, its Pathology, and its Successful Treatment," 1881; "Fever, a Clinical Study," 1886; and a translation of Bouehard's "Cerebral Hæmorrhage." Address: 9 Cadogan Place, Belgrave Square, S.W.

MACLAGAN, The Right Hon. and Most Rev. William Dalrymple, D.D., D.C.L., Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan, brother of Sir Douglas MacLagan, born at Edinburgh in 1826, and educated there. In early life he served in the army in India, and retired with the rank of lieutenant in 1852. Then he went through the ordinary university course at St. Peter's College, Cambridge (B.A. 1856, M.A. 1860, D.D. jure dignatus 1878). He was ordained deacon in 1856, and priest in 1857. He served the curacies of St. Saviour, Paddington, and St. Stephen, Marylebone, till 1860, when he was appointed Secretary to the London Diocesan Church-Building Society. In 1865 he was appointed Curate-in-charge of Enfield, and in 1869 Lord Chancellor Hatherley gave him the Rectory of St. Mary, Newington. When Newington was transferred to Rochester, the Bishop of London, in order to retain Mr. MacLagan in his diocese, promoted him to the vicarage of St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, where he remained till 1878, when he was nominated by the Crown, on the recommendation of Lord Beaconsfield, to the Bishopric of Lichfield, which had become vacant by the death of Dr. Selwyn. He was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral, June 24, 1878. In 1891 he was translated to York. The same year he was made an Hon. Fellow of Peterhouse, Cambridge, and a D.C.L. of the University of Durham, the latter degree being conferred by diploma. In October 1894 he became President of the Church Sanitary Association, and of the Church Society for the Promotion of Kindness to Animals. Dr. MacLagan has published one or two detached sermons; a Charge delivered to the Clergy and Churchwardens of his Diocese in 1880; and several other addresses to the Clergy, and Parochial Papers. In conjunction with Dr. Archibald Weir, he edited "The Church and the Age: Essays on the Principles and present Position of the Anglican Church," 1870; and in 1891 published his "Pastoral Letters and Synodal Charges." He married (1), in 1860, Sarah Kate, daughter of George Clapham; and (2), in 1878, Augusta, daughter of the 6th Viscount Barrington. Addresses: Bishopsthorpe, York; and Athenæum.

MACLAREN, Ian. See WATSON, THE REV. JOHN.

M'LAREN, Lord, John M'Laren, LL.D., D.L., J.P., Lord of Session, Scotland, was born in Edinburgh in 1831, and is the eldest son of Duncan M'Laren, M.P. He was educated at the University, Edinburgh, and became an Advocate in 1856. He was Sheriff of Chancery from 1869 to 1880, when he became Q.C. and Lord Advocate. He represented Wigtown District in Parliament in 1880, and was returned for Edinburgh in 1881. He was appointed Lord of Justiciary in 1885, and was raised to the Bench in 1881. He has published a "Treatise on the Law of Wills," and married the daughter of a German gentleman resident in Glasgow, in 1868. Address: 46 Moray Place, Edinburgh.

MACLEAN, James Mackenzie, M.P., President of the Institute of Journalists, is the son of Mr. Alexander Maclean, and was born near Edinburgh on Aug. 13, 1835. Intending to enter at Trinity College, Cambridge, he was, however, compelled by circumstances to forthwith earn his own livelihood, and he took up journalistic work. After working on the staff of the Newcastle Chronicle for a short time, he became its editor in 1855, and continued in that position until 1858. He then worked as leader-writer on the Manchester Guardian for nearly two years, and in 1859 went out to India as editor of the Bombay Gazette. Becoming in 1863 proprietor of that paper, he kept up his connection with it until 1879, when he effected a sale and left India for good. Whilst living at Bombay Mr. Maclean interested himself greatly in municipal matters; was one of the first members of the newly-created Corporation, and for a time the office of Chairman of the Town Council. In 1882 he became proprietor of the Western Mail, and still continues to contribute. Mr. Maclean was elected Coroner for Oldham in 1885, and he came out at the head of the poll in the largest vote given in the country; however, in 1892 he lost his seat and remained out of Parliament for several years. Cardiff, which had been a stronghold for forty years, was won by the Conservative Party by him in 1894, and he still sits as member for that constituency. He is a Fellow of the University of Cambridge, and has been a member of the Council and a Vice-President of the Royal Society of Chambers of Commerce in England. He was elected President of the Institute of Journalists in 1896. On the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to India he published a "Guide to Bombay," which is a historical handbook for all who visit India from before the English conquest to the present day. He married Anne Whitehead in 1867. Address: 10 Grosvenor Square, Earl's Court, S.W.

MACLEOD, Mrs Alick. See MRS. FREDERICK.

MACLEOD, The Very. Rev. D.D., one of the Queen's Chaplains in Scotland, and editor of Good Words, was born at Campsie, Stirlingshire, the son of the late Norman Macleod, first editor of Good Words, and chiefly famous, in the opinion of the present generation, for the beauty of his sermons in the sixties. He graduated at the University of Glasgow, and travelled, after which he became minister of the parish of Lauder, and subsequently of Linlithgow. He was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in 1895-96, and since 1888 has been minister of the Home Mission Committee of the Kirk. He has for nearly thirty years been minister of the parish of Paisley, having been called thither in 1867. Dr. Macleod is famous not only as a minister and man of letters, but as a leader of the Church and organizer of mission work. Among his publications we may note his "Memoir of Norman Macleod, D.D.," and his edition of the Bible in three volumes. Address: 10 Grosvenor Square, Earl's Court, S.W.

MACLEOD, Fiona, authoress, born in the Hebrides, where she spent the greater part of her childhood. She of the leading spirits of that "Renaissance" which has done so much to revive the interest of intelligent people in the literature and traditions of the Celts. Her first book, "Pharais," published in 1894 at Derby, at once attracted the favourable attention of prominent men and women of letters. Her subsequent works have been: "The Mountain-Lovers," and "The Sin-Eater," 1895; "The Washer of the Ford," "Green Fire," and "From the Hills of Dream" (verse), 1896; "The Laughter of Peterkin, Old Celtic Tales Retold," and a collected edition of some of her more important works, 1897. Her most recent work is the "Dominion of Dreams," 1899. From internal evidence derived from the writings of Miss Fiona Macleod and Mr. William Sharp (q.v.), it has recently been conjectured (Jan. 1899) that they are one and the same person. This, however, is not the case. Address: c/o Miss Rea, The Columbia Literary Agency, 9 Mill Street, Conduit Street, W.

MACLURE, The Very Rev. Edward Craig, D.D., Dean of Manchester, eldest son of the late John Maclure, and eldest brother of Sir J. W. Maclure, Bart., M.P., was educated at the Manchester Grammar School, where he was the exhibitor of his year. He graduated B.A., M.A., and D.D. at Brasenose College, Oxford, of which he was a scholar and Hulmeian Exhibitioner. After occupying curacies at St. John's, Ladywood, Birmingham, and St. Pancras, Middlesex, he became vicar of Habergham Eaves, Burnley, in 1863, where he remained for fourteen years Chairman of the Burnley School Board. On the death of Dr. Molesworth in 1877 he was appointed vicar of Rochdale by the late Bishop of Manchester. In 1878 he became Honorary Canon of Manchester, and in 1879 Rural Dean. In Rochdale, and previously at Burnley, he had carried out important works of church restoration and extension. Dean Maclure has always undertaken a very considerable share of diocesan work, having been honorary secretary of the Diocesan Conference and the Diocesan Board of Education. He is also honorary secretary to the Training College at Warrington. In 1888 he was one of the honorary secretaries of the Church Congress in Manchester, and was appointed Dean of Manchester in July 1890. He has twice been Chairman of the School Board, Manchester, and is Governor of Owens College, the Grammar School, and of Hulme's Trust and Chetham's Hospital, besides holding other public offices. He is also Chairman of the School Boards Association of England and Wales, and he is prominent in all educational matters. He married the eldest daughter of Johnson Gedge, of Bury St. Edmunds. Address: The Deanery, Manchester.

MACLURE, Sir John William, Bart., M.P., D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S., was born in Manchester on April 22, 1835, and is the son of John Maclure, of Manchester, and Elizabeth, daughter of William Kearsley, of Kearsley. He was educated at Manchester Grammar School. He has been one of the most actively benevolent of Manchester public men. He founded, with the late Canon Richson, the Manchester and Salford Sanitary Association, and has laboured from the first to improve the homes and the sanitation of large and overcrowded towns. He was founder of the Cotton Famine Fund, and was its Hon. Sec. from 1862 to 1866. With the then Premier, the late Lord Derby, and other influential men, he distributed more than a million and a half among the starving or distressed cotton operatives of the north. As Churchwarden of Manchester he raised nearly £50,000 towards the restoration of the ancient Parish Church at Manchester, which has since become the Cathedral. He is P.G. Deacon of Freemasons in England, a Knight of Grace of St. John of Jerusalem, Director of numerous public companies, Trustee and Treasurer of the Cotton Districts Convalescent Fund, F.R.G.S., F.S.S., J.P. for Lancashire and Manchester, has been Major of the 40th Lancashire Rifles, and was created a Baronet in 1898. He has sat as a Conservative for the Stretford Division of Lancashire since 1886. He married, in 1859, Eleanor, daughter of Thomas Nettleship, of East Sheen. London address: Victoria Mansions, 26 Victoria Street, S.W.

MACMAHON, Major Percy Alexander, R.A., D.Sc., F.R.S., is the second son of the late Brigadier-General P. W. MacMahon, C.B., and was born at Sliema, in the island of Malta, Sept. 26, 1854. He was educated at the Proprietary School, Cheltenham, and afterwards at Cheltenham College, where he obtained the Junior Mathematical Scholarship in January 1868. He entered the Royal Military Academy as a cadet in January 1871, and subsequently, in September 1872, entered the Royal Artillery as a Lieutenant. He was promoted Captain in October 1881, and in March 1882 was appointed Instructor of Mathematics at the Royal Military Academy. From that date he has been engaged in research in Pure Mathematics. Numerous memoirs from his pen, chiefly connected with Higher Algebra, have been published in the American Journal of Mathematics, the Quarterly Journal of Mathematics, the Proceedings of the London Mathematical Society, the Messenger of Mathematics, and the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in June 1890; was President of the London Mathematical Society, 1894-96; was in 1897 elected honorary member of the Cambridge Philosophical Society; and the degree of Doctor of Science (honoris causa) was conferred upon him by the University of Dublin. Address: 52 Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

MACMILLAN, The Rev. Hugh, D.D., LL.D., F.R.S.E., F.S.A. Scot., Chief of the Clan Macmillan, born at Aberfeldy, Perthshire, Sept. 17, 1833, was educated at Breadalbane Academy and Edinburgh University. He was appointed Free Church Minister of Kirkmichael, Perthshire, in 1859, translated in 1864 to Free St. Peter's Church, Glasgow; and in 1878 to the Free West Church, Greenock, his present charge. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of St. Andrews in February 1871; was elected two months afterwards F.R.S.E. In April 1879 the degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by the University of Edinburgh; and in 1883 he became an F.S.A. Dr. Macmillan is the author of "Bible Teachings in Nature," 1866, now in its 25th edition, translated into Danish, Swedish, German, and other Continental languages; "First Forms of Vegetation;" "Holidays on High Lands;" "The True Vine;" "The Ministry of Nature;" "The Garden and the City;" "Sun-glints in the Wilderness;" "The Sabbath of the Fields," translated into Danish and Norwegian; "Our Lord's Three Raisings from the Dead;" "Two Worlds are Ours," translated into German; "The Marriage in Cana of Galilee;" "The Olive Leaf;" "Roman Mosaics; or, Studies in Rome and its Neighbourhood;" "The Riviera;" "The Mystery of Grace;" "The Gate Beautiful, and other Bible Teachings for the Times;" "My Comfort in Sorrow;" "The Daisies of Nazareth," 1894; "The Clock of Nature," 1896; "The Spring of the Day," 1898. Nearly all these books have passed through numerous editions, have been popular in this country and America, and have been translated into the leading European languages. Dr. Macmillan has published besides numerous contributions to quarterly reviews and religious and scientific periodicals. He delivered the "Thomson Lectures" on Science in the New College, Aberdeen, in 1886; and he was appointed to give the "Cunningham Lectures" on the Archæology of the Bible in the light of recent researches, in the New College, Edinburgh, in 1894, and the

"Gunning Lectures" on Science and Religion, in 1898, in the University of Glasgow. He served as Moderator of the Church of Scotland during 1897-98. Address: 70 Union Street, Greenock.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
WASHINGTON, D.C.
JANUARY 10, 1968

HACROIE. The Right Rev William Kennard. Bishop of the diocese of London, is the author of "The History of the Church of England from its first establishment to the present time," which has been published by Messrs.
Longman & Co., 15, Abchurch Lane, London. It is a work of great value, and one which every student of the history of the Church of England should possess. It is written in a clear and concise style, and contains much valuable information. It is now published in two volumes, and is sold at the price of 10s. per volume.
It is a work of great interest and importance, and one which every student of the history of the Church of England should possess.

[illegible][illegible]

M'Vail, and studied Medicine in Anderson's College, Glasgow. He is L.R.C.P. Edin., 1866; M.B. Glasgow, 1876; F.F.P.S. Glasg., 1878; and was formerly House Surgeon in Alnwick Infirmary, late Professor of Physiology in Anderson's College, and subsequently Lecturer on the Practice of Medicine in the Western Extra-mural School, and Member of the General Medical Council of the United Kingdom. At the present time he is Extra Physician to the Glasgow Royal Infirmary, and Professor of Clinical Medicine in St. Mungo's College, Glasgow. Dr. M'Vail is the author of various valuable contributions to medical literature, principally with reference to diseases of the respiratory organs, e.g., "The Mechanism of Respiration in Normal and Abnormal Conditions," Lancet, 1882; "The Wavy Respiratory Sound of Phthisis," British Medical Journal, 1882; "Pathology of Pulmonary Emphysema," Ibid. 1884, &c. He is widely known in connection with what may be termed academic politics. For the past decade he has been the acknowledged and energetic leader of the reform party in the University of Glasgow; and it is very largely to him, and to the movement in which he has taken so active a part, that the recent thoroughgoing Universities (Scotland) Act is due. The main plank of the reform platform has been the destruction of the practical monopoly of teaching, of examining, and of degree granting, enjoyed by the professors in the Scottish Universities, while the principal means urged for the accomplishment of this object have been an entire re-casting of the governing body of the Universities, the fuller recognition of extra-mural teaching, the prohibition of the degree-examination of candidates by their own teachers, and the affiliation of new colleges. Dr. M'Vail has also been the moving spirit in the erection and incorporation of St. Mungo's College, the medical faculty of which is in intimate connection with the Royal Infirmary of Glasgow. On the board of directors of the College he occupies a seat as one of the representatives chosen by the managers of the Royal Infirmary. He was elected in 1891 a member of the Court of Glasgow University, and in 1892 he was appointed by her Majesty to be Crown member for Scotland of the General Medical Council. Address: 3 St. James's Terrace, Glasgow.

MACWHIRTER, John, R.A., was born in 1839, at Slateford, near Edinburgh, and educated at Peebles. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Scottish Academy in 1863. In the following year he came to London, and was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy on Jan 22, 1879, and R.A. in 1893. He was elected an Honorary Member of the Royal Scottish Academy in 1882; elected member of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colours, same year; exhibited in R.A. 1884, "The Windings of the Forth," "A Sermon by the Sea," and "Home of the Grizzly Bear"; 1885, "Track of a Hurricane," "Iona," "Loch Scavaig"; "The Three Witches," 1886. Mr. Macwhirter has painted "Loch Coruisk Skye," 1867; "A great while ago the world began, with hey ho, the wind and the rain," 1871; "Caledonia," 1875; "The Lady of the Woods," 1876; "The Three Graces," 1878; "The Valley by the Sea," 1879; "The Lord of the Glen," 1880; "Sunday in the Highlands," and "Mountain Tops," 1881; "A Highland Auction" and "Ossian's Grave," 1882; "Corrie, Isle of Arran," "Sunset Fires," "Nature's Mirror," "A Highland Harvest," 1883; and "Edinburgh from Salisbury Crag," 1887. More recently he has exhibited "A Highland Storm," and a set of three pictures, "The Shamrock," "The Rose," and "The Thistle," 1893; and "Subsiding Flood," "Nature's Archway" (diploma work, deposited on his election as an Academician), and three other pictures in 1894, since which date he has been a constant exhibitor at the Royal Academy of his characteristic landscapes. His principal Highland pieces have been: "Glen Affaric," 1895; "The Sleep that is among the Lonely Hills," and "Bonnie Scotland," 1896; "Affaric Water" (two pictures), 1897; "Morning Isle of Arran," 1898; "Dark Loch Coruisk," and "The Silver Strand, Loch Katrine," 1899. He married, in 1872, Katherine, daughter of Professor Menzies, of Edinburgh University. Addresses: 1 Abbey Road, N.W.; and Athenæum.

MADAGASCAR, Queen of Sa
RANAVALO MANJAKA III.

MADAN, Falconer, M.A., born April 15, 1851, is the fifth son of the Rev. George Madan, then Vicar of Cam in Gloucestershire (afterwards Vicar of St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, and Rector of Dursley), and of his wife Harriet, née Gresley. He was educated at Marlborough College from 1864 to 1870, and at Brasenose College, Oxford, where he obtained an open scholarship. He was twice Proxime Accessit for the Hertford Scholarship; graduated B.A. in 1874, M.A. in 1877; was a Fellow of his College from 1876 to 1880, and was again elected to that position in 1889. On June 15, 1880, he was elected a Sub-Librarian of the Bodleian Library, and in 1889 was appointed Lecin Mediæval Palæography in the University of Oxford—positions which he holds. In 1874 he won the University Fives Prize. His chief works "A Bibliography of Dr. Henry Ferrell," 1884; "Books in Manuscript," 1893; "The Early Oxford Press, 1467 to 1640," 1895; "A Summary Catalogue of Western MSS. in the Bodleian Library," vols. iii.-iv., 1895-97 (in progress); "The Gresleys of Drakelow," a family history, 1898. He married, on 9, 1885, Frances Jane, daughter of John Hayter, Esq., Past President of the Institution of Civil Engineers; and one daughter. Addresses: 90 Banbury Road; Brasenose College, Oxford.

MADDEN, The Right Hon. Dodgson Hamilton, M.A., LL.D., son of the Hugh Hamilton Madden, M.A. (Recorder of Templemore and Chancellor of the County of Wick), by Isabella, daughter of H. J. Mason, Esq., LL.D. (author of "An History of the Irish Parliaments," "Life of John Bedell," and other works), was born at Loughgall, co. Armagh, Mar. 28, 1847. He entered Trinity College, Dublin, 1864, and obtained a Classical Scholarship, a Gold Medal and Moderatorship in Ethics and Logics, Chancellor's Prize for English Composition, and other honours. He graduated B.A. and M.A., and in 1891 the University conferred on him the honorary degree of LL.D. He was called to the Bar in 1864, appointed Q.C. in 1880, Third Counsel-at-Law in 1887, Solicitor-General in 1888, Attorney-General in 1889, and a Justice of the High Court, Queen's Bench, in 1892. In 1896, under a provision introduced into the Land Act of that year, he was appointed Additional Judge for the purposes of the Localisation of Title Act, a measure which was successful in passing, when Attorney-General for Ireland, in 1891. He entered the University of Dublin in 1887 (1887-92), and was appointed Chancellor of the University in 1895, on the retirement of the Right Hon. John Lubbock, LL.D. He is Vice-Chairman of the Board of Intermediate Education for Ireland. He published works on the History of Deeds, 1868, and the History of the Land Judges' Court, 1870, 1889; and is the author of "The Story of Master William Silence: a Study of Shakespeare and of Elizabethan Storytellers," 1897. He married (1), in 1871, Minnie, daughter of Lewis Moore, D.L., Cremorgan, Queen's County; (2), Jessie Isabelle, daughter of John Warburton, Esq., D.L., Garry-King's County. Address: Nutley, Kesh, co. Dublin.

MADDEN, Hon. Sir John, K.C.M.G., Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court of Victoria, was born in 1844, and educated at Melbourne University, where he graduated B.A. in 1863, and LL.D. in 1866. In the same year he was called to the Australian Bar, and in 1889 was appointed to his present post. He was created K.C.M.G. at the New Year 1899. He married, in 1872, Gertrude Frances, daughter of F. J. Stephen. Address: Cloyne, St. Kilda, Melbourne.

MADDEN, Thomas More, M.D., was born in the island of Cuba, where his father, the late Dr. R. R. Madden, F.R.C.S. Eng., then filled the office of British representative at the Havanna, in the International Commission for the Abolition of the Slave-Trade, to which he was appointed by Lord Palmerston, and for which he had relinquished his practice as a London physician. Dr. Madden, senior, who died in 1886, was not only a prominent member of the anti-slavery party, but was also a prolific and well-known writer, having in the course of his long and varied life published more than forty volumes. Amongst these we may here mention his "Travels in the East," "History of the United Irishmen," "Life and Correspondence of Lady Blessington," "Biography of Savonarola," "The Infirmities of Genius," "History of Periodical Literature," &c., &c. Dr. More Madden entered on medical studies at the age of fourteen, when he was apprenticed to the late Mr. Cusack, Surgeon-in-Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland. Shortly before the completion of pupillage, however, he was forced by symptoms of pulmonary disease to remove to a more genial climate, and the next few years he passed in the South of Spain, Italy, and France, completing his professional studies in Malaga and at the University of Montpellier. Having graduated as a physician, after he returned home in 1862 he became a member of the London College of Surgeons, and is also a Member of the Dublin College of Physicians, and a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh. After a further period of health-travel in Southern Europe, Egypt, Africa, and Australia, he settled down in practice in Dublin. In 1868, having adopted obstetric and gynecological practice as a specialism, Dr. More Madden was appointed Assistant Physician to the Rotunda Lying-in Hospital. On retirement from that office three years later, he was accorded the special thanks of the governors for "zealous and efficient discharge of his duties, and uniform kindness to the patients." In 1872 he received the French bronze cross, in recognition of his services in connection with the organisation of the Irish Ambulance Corps employed during the Franco-Prussian War. In that year, being also Examiner in Obstetric Medicine in the Queen's University, he was appointed Physician to the newly-established Hospital for Sick Children, Dublin; and not long afterwards became Obstetric Physician and Gynæcologist to the Mater Misericordiæ Hospital. In addition to these appointments Dr. More Madden is Consultant to the National Lying-in Hospital, and other institutions. In 1878 he was elected Vice-President of the Dublin Obstetrical Society; in 1885 Vice-President of the British Gynæcological Society; in 1886 President of the Obstetric Section of the Academy of Medicine; and more recently he held the office of President of the Obstetric Section of the British Medical Association. He received the degree of M.D. (honoris causa), from the Medical College of Galveston in 1890; and was accorded a Gold Medal by the Associazione dei Benemeriti Italiani. In 1892 he was Hon. President of the first International Congress of Obstetrics and Gynæcology at Brussels. He has been also made Honorary or Corresponding Member or Fellow of many medical and scientific societies at home and abroad. In 1895 he received the degree of Master of Obstetrics (honoris causa), from the Royal University of Ireland. Besides a vast number of contributions to medical journals, and several articles in Quain's "Dictionary of Medicine," and other standard books, Dr. More Madden's writings include the last edition of "The Dublin Practice of Midwifery"; "Change of Climate in Chronic Disease," 3rd edit., 1876; "Spas of Germany, France, and Italy," 1874; "Contributinal Treatment of Chronic Uterine Disease," 1878; "Mental and Nervous Disorders peculiar to Women," 1883; "Child Culture—Mental, Moral, and Physical," 3rd edit., 1890; "On Uterine Tumours," 1887; "Treatment of Dysmenorrhœa and Sterility," London, 1889. In 1893 he edited "A Manual of Obstetric and Gynæcological Nursing"; and in the same year was published in Philadelphia and in London his "Clinical Gynæcology—a Handbook of Diseases of Women," profusely illustrated. Finally, in the list of this writer's works may be mentioned "The Health Resorts of Europe and Africa," 3rd edit., 1891. The latter work has been also republished in America. The latest publication of this writer on a professional subject is one on "The Special Hygiene and Management of Childhood and Youth," 1897. Besides these Dr. More Madden has also contributed to non-professional literature several works, amongst which are his "Memoirs from 1798 to 1886 of Dr. R. R. Madden, formerly Colonial Secretary of Western Australia," 1891; "Genealogical and Historical Records of the O'Maddens of H. Mary," 1894; "Episodes in Irish History," 1897; and "A New Edition of the Lives and Times of the United Irishmen of 1798 and 1803, by the late Dr. R. R. Madden," 1898. Dr. More Madden married the eldest daughter of the late Thomas McDonnell Caffrey, Esq. of Crosthwaite Park, Kingstown, by whom he has two sons and one daughter surviving. Of his sons the eldest, Dr. Richard R. More Madden, follows his father's profession in London, where he is one of the Visiting Physicians to the Infirmary for Consumption, Margaret Street, Cavendish Square, and the youngest, Captain T. McD. Madden, is an officer in the Wicklow Artillery. Address: 55 Merrion Square, Dublin.

MADGE. See HUMPHRY, Mrs.

MAETERLINCK, Maurice, Belgian dramatist and poet, was born at Ghent in 1864. At an early age he took to literature, and wrote what Mr. W. L. Courtney once called "some youthful absurdities," among which were "Serres Chaudes" and "La Princesse Maleine." The latter, a strange old-world invention, introduced Maeterlinck to England, and was translated by Mr. Alfred Sutro into English with a preface by Mr. Hall Caine, in 1892. "L'Intruse," "Les Sept Princesses," and "Pelléas et Melisande" followed, suffused with an arresting mysticism, and widening considerably the author's sphere of influence. Miss Alma Tadema translated the last play in 1895. In June 1896 "Pelléas et Melisande" was produced at the Lyceum Theatre by Mr. Forbes Robertson and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and, albeit its run was short, special matinées were given during the "Macbeth" season in the following autumn. Naturally Mr. Forbes Robertson's venture attracted widespread attention, and curiously varying estimates were made of M. Maeterlinck's work. Succeeding contributions from M. Maeterlinck were received with much interest, especially his best-known book, "Le Trésor des Humbles" (1897), which threw a wholly new light on the author's aims. This was introduced to the British public by Mr. A. B. Walkley and translated by Mr. Sutro. The current notion of him as a kind of fantastic decadent gave place to a conception of a new and suggestive but modest seeker after the mystery of existence. Some of his prose essays, it was said, were "empty enough," and others were of "a sort of etherealised Emerson, tender, fascinating, and almost beautiful." "Aglaraine and Selysette" (1897) struck a deeper note, and many adverse comments appeared as a result. On Oct. 15, 1898, "Wisdom and Destiny" was published simultaneously in London, Paris, and New York, Mr. Sutro again being the translator, and was hailed with a round of approval. In fact M. Maeterlinck has undoubtedly laid the foundations of a growing contemporary reputation, and whilst it is too early to assert that he will make some contribution to "the stock of enduring wisdom," a surmise may be hazarded that "the Belgian Shakespeare," as he has been called, will in the coming century receive some commensurate measure of recognition.

MAGNUS, Sir Philip, J.P., second son of Jacob Magnus, was born in London on Oct. 7, 1842. He was educated at University College School from 1854 to 1858, and afterwards at University College, London, where he obtained the Andrews Scholarship for Mathematics. He graduated B.A. (first class with honours in Philosophy and Physiology) in 1863, and 3.Sc. (first class with honours) in 1864 at the University of London. In 1865-66 he was a student at the University of Berlin. During his residence in Germany he made inquiries into the German system of education, visited schools, and studied methods of teaching. He embodied the results of these inquiries in a paper first read to the members of a College Society and afterwards published. This was his earliest essay on educational subjects. On his return to England he was busily engaged in tutorial, literary, and examining work, and held for some years the Professorship of Applied Mathematics at the Catholic University College. As a result of his lectures in Physics there appeared, in 1875, the first edition of his "Lessons in Elementary Mechanics" (Longmans, Green & Co.), which he re-wrote in 1890, and of which more than 40,000 copies have been sold. Later he was associated with Professor Carey Foster in editing for the same publishers a series of Science Class-books, to which he contributed the volume on "Hydrostatics and Pneumatics." Subsequently he became editor of Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench & Co. of a series of books on educational topics, called the "Education Library," to which in 1888 he contributed a volume consisting of reprints of essays and addresses delivered at various times, under the title of "Industrial Education." Since then he has contributed to different periodicals articles and essays on Educational and Commercial Subjects. In 1880 Sir Philip (then Mr.) Magnus was appointed Organising Director and Secretary of the newly formed Association of Livery Companies, known as the City and Guilds of London Institute for the Advancement of Technical Education. At that date little or nothing was known of technical education, and the wide development of that movement during recent years has followed pretty closely the lines laid down by those originally responsible for the organisation of the City Guilds Institute. In 1881 Mr. Magnus was a member of the Royal Commission on Technical Instruction. The Commission sat for three years, during which Mr. Magnus, together with his colleagues, devoted all the time he could spare from official duties to the inspection of schools and factories in France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Switzerland, Austria, and England. In 1883 he was appointed Principal of the Finsbury Technical College, and delivered his inaugural address on Feb. 19 in that year. In 1884 he was Chairman of the Technical Section of the International Conference on Education held in London, and presided over by Lord Reay. In 1886 he received the honour of knighthood, and in the autumn of that year he represented this country at an Educational Conference held in Bordeaux. In 1890 Sir Philip Magnus was co-opted a member of the School Board for London, but did not seek re-election when the Board dissolved. In the same year he was elected by Convocation on the Senate of the University of London, to the work of which he had devoted considerable time. Sir Philip Magnus is a member of the Physical and Mathematical Societies, a Life Governor of University College, London, Honorary Fellow of College of Preceptors, Member of the Technical Education Board of London County Council, Representative of University of London on Joint Board for University Extension, and member of the governing body of more than one of the London polytechnics and other educational institutes. He is President of the National Association of Manual Training Teachers, and also of the Joint Scholarship Board, and Education Adviser to the London Polytechnic Council. He is J.P. for the county of Surrey. Sir Philip Magnus was married in 1870 to Katie, only daughter of the late Alderman E. Emanuel, J.P., of Southsea. Addresses: 16 Gloucester Terrace, Hyde Park; Tangle Hill, Chilworth, Surrey; Athenæum.

MAGRATH, The Rev. John Richard, D.D., late Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford, son of Nicholas Magrath, Surgeon, R.N., of Manor House, Guernsey, was born in Guernsey, Jan. 29, 1839, and educated at Elizabeth College, before proceeding to Oxford, where he gained a Scholarship at Oriel College. At the University he obtained (1860) the Stanhope Prize for an essay on "The Fall of the Republic of Florence." He graduated B.A., with a first class in Lit. Hum. in 1860, was Johnson's Theological Scholar, 1861, and took his M.A. degree, 1863. From 1860 to 1878 he was Fellow of Queen's College; Chaplain from 1867 to 1878, and Bursar from 1874 to 1878. He was Select Preacher before the University in 1867-69, and Senior Proctor in 1877-78. In 1878 he was elected Provost of Queen's College, and he took the degrees of B.D. and D.D. Dr. Magrath has published "A Plea for the Study of Theology in the University of Oxford," 1868; "Selections from Aristotle's Organon," 1868 (2nd edit. 1877); "Two Papers on University Reform," 1876. He was Chairman of the Oxford Local Board from 1882-87. He is a Justice of the Peace for Oxfordshire, Alderman of the City of Oxford, Member of the Hebdomadal Council of the University since 1878, and was Vice-Chancellor from 1894 to 1898, when he was succeeded by Sir William Anson. He married, in 1887, Georgiana Isabella, daughter of the Ven. W. Jackson, D.D., formerly Archdeacon and Canon of Carlisle and Provost of Queen's College, Oxford, 1862-78. Address: Queen's College, Oxford.

MAHAFFY, Professor the Rev. John Pentland, D.D., seventh and youngest child of the Rev. Nathaniel B. Mahaffy and his wife Elizabeth Pentland, was born on Feb. 26, 1839, at Chapponnaire, near Vevay, on the Lake of Geneva, in Switzerland, and was never at school, being educated in Germany by his parents, till he entered Trinity College, Dublin, in 1856. He was elected to a scholarship in 1858, and obtained two Senior Moderatorships (in Classics and in Philosophy) at his degree in 1859; gained his Fellowship (by competition) in 1864; was appointed Precentor of the Chapel, with control of the college choir in 1867; Professor of Ancient History, 1871 (which offices he now holds); and Donnellan lecturer in 1873. He was decorated with the Gold Cross of the Order of the Saviour by the King of Greece in 1877, and was elected an Honorary Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, in 1882, and a Corresponding Member of the Vienna Academy in 1896. He is a J.P. for the co. Dublin, on the Grand Jury of the co. Monaghan, and one of the Governors of the Irish National Gallery. Professor Mahaffy has published a translation of Kuno Fischer's "Commentary on Kant," 1866; "Twelve Lectures on Primitive Civilisation," 1868; "Prolegomena to Ancient History," 1871;

"Kant's Critical Philosophy for Readers," 1871; "Greek Social History from Homer to Menander," 1874 (2nd edit., 1898); "Greek Antiquities," 1877, adopted in French, Russian, and English schools; "Rambles and Studies in Greece," 1876 (3rd edit., 1887); "Greek Education," 1879; "A History of Classical Literature," 2 vols., 1880 (3rd edit., 1890); "A Report on the Irish Grammar (in the Royal Commission of 1878); "The Decay of Modern Preaching," 1880; "The Story of Alexander's Empire," 1887 (2nd edit., 1897); "The Art of Conversation," 2nd edit., 1889; "The World under Roman Sway," and "Pictures," 1890, and "Problems of History," 1892; "The Empire of Ptolemies," 1896; "A Sketch of the Life and Teaching of Descartes," 1898; edited the English edition of "Roman History," 1883-86; also edited and edited the Petrie papyri for the Irish Academy (Cunningham vols. viii. and ix.), 1891-93; besides many in periodicals and reviews. Mahaffy is at present Science Examiner and Lecturer in Trinity College, Dublin, in Classics, Philosophy, and in Modern Languages. He was a member of the Athenæum by election in 1884. He married Frances, daughter of William Esq., J.P., &c., of Howth, co. Dub. He has two sons and two daughters: Trinity College, Dublin; Great George's Street, Dublin; Baldoyle; and Athenæum.

MAHAN, Alfred T., American officer and author, was born in Sept. 27, 1840, and is the son of H. Mahan, Professor of Military Engineering, U.S. Military Academy. He entered the navy in 1856, was midshipman in 1859, and promoted to Lieutenant in 1865. At the close of the war between the States in 1865 he had become a Lieutenant; was made Commander in 1885, and Captain in 1885. The U.S. Naval War College at Newport received a great deal of his attention; he has done much special work having been President of it for several years. He was placed on the retired list on his own request in November 1890, and is widely known as an able writer on naval topics, and his work on the "Sea Power upon History," published in 1890, is standard. He has also published "The Gulf and Inland Waterways," 1892; "Influence of Sea Power upon the American Revolution and Empire," 1892; "Admiral Farragut," 1894; "The

MALABARI, Behramji Merwanji (né Mehta), an Indian poet, philanthropist, and national reformer, was born at Baroda in 1853, and is the son of Dhanjibhai Mehta, a poor Parsi clerk, who was in the service of the Gaekwar of Baroda, and died when his son was only two years of age. The child was adopted by a maternal relative, named Merwanji Nana-bhai Malabari, who subsequently became his stepfather, and whose name the orphan boy took, in lieu of Mehta. His mother, whose name was Bhikhibai, was a remarkable woman, possessing the rare qualities of irrepressible energy combined with great gentleness of disposition. Her large-years of dear and loving company for the friendless, procured for her the esteem of all who had the happiness to know her. She died when her son was eleven years of age. The enormous influence of her character for good was manifest in the fact which has made him the philanthropist that he is, one who has sacrificed his fortune and devoted his life to the amelioration of the condition of the girls and women of India; and who, in the name of God and of humanity, has undertaken a noble crusade against infant marriages and enforced widowhood among the Hindu races. Malabar began life as a poet, and of his "Niti Vinod" it has been said that some of the poems will live as long as the vernacular of Gujarati endures. He has likewise written English verse which has elicited the admiration of Lord Tennyson, Professor Max Müller, and others. His poetical works are "Niti Vinod," "Wilson Vinod," "Tasud-i-Ittefaq," and "The Indian Muse in an English Garb." He has also written "Gujarat and Gujaratis," which has passed into three editions, and is esteemed for its humor and picturesque style. Mr. Malabari is editor and proprietor of the Indian Spectator, the leading native journal of India, which is known to have done most valuable service to the state and the country; and also of the Voice of India. He has written largely on important political and moral questions, and is the greatest social reformer in India, known to be in touch with high authorities and leading thinkers in this country. He visited England in 1880, and his "Appeal from the Daughters of India," with his eloquent pleadings on their behalf in the Times and other journals, created a profound impression in the highest circles. An influential committee was formed to aid his efforts. It consisted of former Secretaries of State for India, Viceroys, Governors, high legal and medical authorities, and prominent representatives of Church and State. Mr. Malabari visited this country again in 1891, and continued the agitation commenced in the previous year against infant marriage in his own country. By great personal exertions, and with the aid of influential persons here, whom he interested in the cause of the helpless Indian child-wife, he succeeded in moving the Government of India to take legislative action in the matter. The famous Age of Consent Bill, introduced by Sir Andrew Scoble, the legal member of the Viceroy's Council, as the direct outcome of Mr. Malabari's long and persistent crusade, became law, after bitter discussions. The Age of Consent Act, the practical outcome of Mr. Malabari's labours of a lifetime, will remain his best claim to the gratitude of the Indian people. In passing we must not forget to mention his efforts to decrease the number of widows and to improve the physical condition of Indian girls and women. The educative influence of his work is, however, its chief merit. The next generation will rise to higher and much less material education. A few years after he raised the question of the Joint Conjugal Rithis, which was decided in 1891 for a more better community. Sir Andrew Scoble and Sir Alexander Miller, in 1891, all to mitigate the rigours of the law; but owing to the valourance of the new Government, it was withdrawn. During the years Mr. Malabari has been in his pen again, and published literary works all of which have a cordial reception both in this country and in England and America. "Indian Eye on English Life" in 1893, he has given his impressions and manners English in humorous style. The book has through several editions in a short time. Mr. Malabari has also written in and his two brochures, "The Problem" London and Bombay in 1897. "India in 1897" London, 1897, some of the most burning of current Indian politics in a passionate manner, characteristic of a publicist. Nor has Mr. Malabari his poetic muse amid political and thropic labours, all-engrossing have been. He has added to his works two volumes of verse in his tongue, Gujarati, "Anubhavika," "Experiences of Life" (1894), and "his World" (1898), which have enhanced his fame as a genuine poet. Malabari has also interested himself in Miss Florence Nightingale's scheme Indian Village Sanitation, for which he is doing much in a quiet manner. In the last two or three years of trouble and disasters through which India has passed, Mr. Malabari has been busy in assisting the plague-stricken and famine-stricken people in the provinces, and by long and arduous tours he has kept himself in touch with the operations and measures started and worked by the official authorities throughout as a welcome intermediary between the people and their alien rulers.

MALCOM KHAN, His Highness Prince, Nazem ud Dowleh, was born at Ispahan in 1832, and is descended from a noble family of great antiquity in ther, Yacoub Khan, was one of the and most learned statesmen of . After receiving a careful training under his father's immediate care, m Khan was, at the age of twelve, Paris, where he successfully applied himself to the study of mathematics and sciences, literature, &c., and more ally to the study of the institutions of Europe as compared with those of . When he returned to Persia he was once appointed Conseiller Intime, A.D.C. to the Shah at Teheran. At the age of twenty-two Malcom Khan was sent to Europe with the special mission of negotiating and concluding treaties of friendship and commerce with the Governments of Europe and of the United States of America. On his return to Persia he ardently promoted the introduction of reforms in the Persian administration. To this end he had already written several pamphlets and books on political, religious, and political subjects connected with Persia. As an author he introduced into the Persian language the clear and best style of European writers, and entirely transformed the diplomatic language of Persia. In 1860 the ideas of Malcom Khan were found too advanced for immediate realisation; he therefore obtained leave of absence and went to take up his residence at Constantinople, where he married, in 1865, the Princess Dadian, by whom he has had three children, three daughters, and a son who was educated at Eton. In 1872 he was asked to draw up a comprehensive programme of reforms to be carried out in Persia; and was recalled to Teheran and appointed the post second to that of the Grand Vizier, in which position all the great and foreign affairs of the State passed through his hands; and in consequence of many important reforms realised under his immediate direction, he was appointed Nazem ud Dowleh (Reformer of the Empire), a title which ranks among the highest in the land. One of his best successes was to decide the Shah to undertake his first journey to Europe in 1873. Prince was accordingly sent on an extraordinary mission to all the Courts of Europe to prepare for the visit of his sovereign. After accompanying the Shah on his tour, Prince Malcom Khan, on returning to Persia, remained in Persia as Persian Minister at the Courts of London, Vienna, Berlin and other countries. During the Shah's second visit to Europe in 1878, Prince Malcom Khan was sent to the Congress of Berlin as Persian plenipotentiary, where he succeeded in obtaining the restitution by Turkey of a lost province, and on that occasion was raised to the rank of Highness.

Prince Malcom Khan has constantly promoted various reforms; finding that the regeneration of Oriental countries could be effected only by radical religious transformations, and by a new system of public instruction, he devoted a large portion of his time and means to modify the Arabic alphabet. He recently published an edition of the celebrated "Gulistan" and other works in his new phonetic system of Arabic writing. It is generally considered that the improvement of the relations between Great Britain and Persia, and the success which attended the visit of the Shah to this country in 1889, are due mostly to Prince Malcom Khan. Upon his sovereign's return to Persia he resigned the Embassy of London, on account of personal differences with the acting Grand Vizier. In the early part of June 1890 the Shah offered him the Persian Embassy at Rome, but his Highness declined the appointment on the plea of his health. In February 1899 his appointment was announced as Persian Minister in Rome, in succession to General Neriman Khan.

MALET, The Right Hon. Sir Edward Baldwin, G.C.M.G., G.C.B., born at the Hague, Oct. 10, 1837, is the son of Sir Alexander Malet, K.C.B., formerly British Minister at Frankfort. He was educated at Eton and at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and entered the diplomatic service in 1854 as attaché at Frankfort. In 1858 he was transferred to Brussels, to Rio de Janeiro in 1861, and to Washington in 1862, where he was made Second Secretary. In 1865 he served at Lisbon and Constantinople; was appointed to act temporarily as a supernumerary Second Secretary at Paris, in July 1867, and was transferred to Paris in January 1868. During the Commune he was Chargé des Archives; was made a C.B. July 10, 1871, and promoted to be Secretary of Legation at Peking in August of the same year. From 1873 to 1875 he was acting Chargé d'Affaires at Athens, and then proceeded to Rome as Secretary of Embassy. In connection with the renewal of the treaty of commerce with Italy, Sir Edward Malet visited the manufacturing districts, and was appointed with Mr. Kennedy to confer with the Italian Commissioner in November 1875 with respect to the renewal of the treaty of Aug. 6, 1863, between Great Britain and Italy. On April 29, 1878, he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary at Constantinople in the absence of the Ambassador. The following year he went to Egypt as Agent-Consul-General, and as Minister Plenipotentiary in the diplomatic service. He was made a K.C.B. in 1881, and received the medal and Khedive's star for his services in Egypt in 1882. In August 1883 he was promoted to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Brussels, and Ambassador at Berlin, Sept. 20, 1884. He was also accredited as Minister Plenipotentiary to Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Saxe-Weimar, Anhalt, Oldenburg, and Brunswick. In 1895 he retired on a pension. He was British Plenipotentiary at the Congo Conference in 1884-85, and at the Samoa Conference in 1889. Sir Edward Malet was sworn a Privy Councillor in March 1885, and in June of the same year was made a G.C.M.G., and G.C.B. in February 1886. He married Lady Ermyntrude, daughter of the Duke of Bedford, in 1885. Addresses: 85 Eaton Square, S.W.; Wrest Wood, Bexhill.

MALLOCK, William Hurrell, son of the Rev. Roger Mallock, of Cockington Court, South Devon, was born in Devonshire in 1849. His mother is a daughter of the late Ven. R. Hurrell Froude, Archdeacon of Totnes, and sister of Mr. Anthony Froude, the historian. Mr. Mallock was educated by a private tutor, the Rev. W. B. Philpot, of Littlehampton, Sussex, and afterwards at Balliol College, Oxford, where in 1871 he gained the Newdigate Prize Poem, the subject being "The Isthmus of Suez." He took, at Oxford, a second class in the final classical schools. Mr. Mallock has never entered any profession, though at one time he contemplated the diplomatic service. "The New Republic," most of which he wrote when he was at Oxford, was published in 1876, having first appeared in a fragmentary form in Belgravia. A year later he published "The New Paul and Virginia." In 1879 he published "Is Life Worth Living?" which first appeared in fragments in the Contemporary Review and the Nineteenth Century. In 1880 he brought out a small edition of "Poems," written, most of them, many years previously. The following year he published, "A Romance of the Nineteenth Century"; and in 1882 "Social Equality: a Study in a Missing Science," the substance of which had already appeared in fragments in the Nineteenth Century and the Contemporary during the three previous years. In 1884 he published "Property and Progress," an examination of the theories of contemporary radical and socialistic agitation. This had been formerly published in the Quarterly Review in the shape of three essays. The year following he published "Atheism and the Value of Life, or Five Studies in Contemporary Literature," being criticisms of Professor Clifford, Lord Tennyson, George Eliot, the author of "Ecco Homo," and Herbert Spencer.

In 1886 he published "The Changes," a novel which first appeared in the National Review. His other works are: "A Human Document" and "In an Enchanted Island," "Labour and the Popular Welfare," edition of the Letters and Remains of the 12th Duke of Somerset, and "Verses," 1893. In 1888 he published his experiences in Cyprus, under the title "In an Enchanted Island." Moreover he has written in the newspapers his most effective attacks being on socialistic doctrinairism. In 1896 he published "Classes and Masses," and in 1897 "Aristocracy and Evolution." In 1898 he became editor of the "British Review," a new weekly, now amalgamated with the "National Observer." Address: Bexhill near Exeter.

MANCHESTER, Bishop of MOORHOUSE, THE RIGHT REV. JAMES

MANCHESTER, Dean of MACLURE, THE VERY REV. EDWARD CRAIG.

MANCHESTER, Duke of, William Angus Drogo Montagu, was born in London in 1877, and is the son of the Duke, and Consuelo, daughter of Don Antonio Yznaga de Valle, of Louisiana. He was educated at Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge, and succeeded his father in 1890. He is a lieutenant in the 1st Battalion of the King's Royal Rifles. Addresses: Kimbolton Castle, St. Neots, and 45 Portman Square, W., &c.

MANN, Horace, son of Thomas Mann Esq., solicitor, and afterwards Chief Clerk in the General Register Office, was born Oct. 4, 1823, and educated privately at Mercers' School, London. He entered at Lincoln's Inn in 1842, and was called to the Bar in 1847, practising on the Home Circuit until, in October 1850, he was appointed Assistant-Commissioner for conducting the Census of 1851. In that capacity he wrote special Reports on "Education" and "Religious Worship." In June 1855 he was appointed Registrar, and in December 1875 Secretary to the Civil Service Commission, from which post he retired, on pension, 1887.

MANN, Tom, was born at Foleshill, Warwickshire, on April 15, 1856. As a lad he worked in a mine till he was fourteen years of age, when his people removed to Birmingham. In 1877 he came to London, and became connected with the Amalgamated Engineers. He was employed at Messrs. Thorneycroft's, but in 1889, during the great dock strike, devoted himself to labour organisation among the dock labourers. He was elected President of the Dock, Wharf, Riverside, and General Labourers' Union, but retired from that position in September 1892. At the Bristol Conference of 1893 he accepted the position of Hon. President. In 1892 Mr. Mann became a member of the Royal Commission on Labour, and also gave evidence before the Commission. The London Reform Union being formed in 1893, he accepted the Secretaryship. In 1894 he became Secretary of the Independent Labour Party, which office he held for three years, resigning in order to devote himself more effectually to the International Federation of Ship, Dock, and River Workers, which came into existence in June 1896. For organising purposes Mr. Mann has visited France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Spain, but owing to the opposition of the authorities he has been expelled from France, Belgium, and Hamburg. He is now engaged in the organisation of the Workers' Union, which it is hoped will draw into the ranks of Trade Unionism large numbers of those who have up till now stood apart. Address: 34 Minford Gardens, West Kensington.

MANNS, August, well known as a musical conductor, was born on March 12, 1825, at Stolzenburg, in Prussia. He showed great ability in conducting at Krolls, in Berlin, from 1849 till 1851, and afterwards from 1851 till 1854 as Director of Herr von Roon's Regimental Band in Cologne, and was appointed in 1855 musical director of the Crystal Palace, where for nearly forty-three years he has wielded the baton at the famous winter and spring Saturday Concerts. During this long period he has done much to popularise certain French, German, and other foreign masters who would otherwise have remained comparatively unknown to the English music-loving public. It may be said that the liberal spirit in which musical art has been nursed by the concerts under his conductorship has prepared the way for that general progress of musical art in Great Britain which now gives so much enjoyment to lovers of good music in London, and in most of the large provincial towns. In 1883 he became conductor to the Handel Festival in succession to Sir Michael Costa, who retired owing to ill-health. He has conducted at all subsequent Handel Festivals. Address: Crystal Palace, S.E.

MAPLE, Sir John Blundell, Bart., M.P., Governor of Maple & Co., of the Tottenham Court Road, London, was born in 1845, and is the son of Mr. John Maple, upholsterer. He was educated at Craufurd College and King's College School, and since 1887 has represented the Dulwich Division of Camberwell in the House of Commons, where he votes as a Conservative. He entered the London County Council for South St. Pancras in 1895, and has found the funds for rebuilding University College Hospital at a cost of £120,000, on ground rendered partially vacant by the demolition of some of his workshops. He was created Baronet at the Jubilee in 1897, having been previously knighted. He is very well known in the racing world. He married Emily, daughter of Mr. Merryweather, in 1874, and their only daughter was married to Baron von Eckhardstein of the German Embassy, in 1896. Addresses: 8 Clarence Terrace, N.W.; and Childwickbury, St. Albans.

MAPOTHER, Edward Dillon, born at Fairview, Dublin, Oct. 14, 1835, of a leading Roscommon family, and was educated in the Queen's University. Before he had attained his nineteenth year he was elected Demonstrator of Anatomy in the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, and in 1867 became its Professor of Physiology, and afterwards filled the presidential chair in that institution. He was also President of the Statistical Society of Ireland. In 1888 he resigned his official position to practise in London, having purchased the residence of the eminent surgeon Quain, a house also interesting as having been the abode successively of three famous portrait-painters, Francis Cotes, R.A., George Romney, and Sir M. A. Shee, P.R.A. Dr. Mapother's writings include "A Manual of Physiology," 3rd edit., 1882; "Lectures on Public Health," 2nd edit., 1867; "Lectures on Skin Diseases"; "The Body and its Health" (six editions). By this primer a knowledge of Physiology and Hygiene has been diffused in the National Schools of Ireland and of most other English-speaking countries. He also gained the Carmichael Prize (£200) for an essay on Medical Education, and has contributed many medical biographical sketches and proposals for hospital reform. Address: 32 Cavendish Square, W.

MARCET, William, M.D. Edin., F.R.C.P. Lond., F.R.S., received his medical education at Edinburgh, and graduated M.D. in 1850. In 1859 he became a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, London, and a Fellow of the Royal Society. He has been Assistant-Physician at the Brompton Hospital for Consumption, is Consulting Physician in London for the Invalid Ladies' Home at Cannes, and LUSHINGTON, Sir Godfrey, B.C.L. (b. 1849), eldest son of the late Richd. Hon. Lushington, B.C.L., was born in 1849. He was educated at Rugby and Balliol College, Oxford, where he took a first class in classical Moderation in 1870, and also a first class in the Final School of Law in 1871. He was also elected a Fellow of Balliol College. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1875, became counsel in the Home Office in 1880, and was appointed Assistant Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in 1878. Sir G. Lushington was from 1881 to 1890 Permanent Under-Secretary at the Home Office and was created a B.C.L. in 1892. He is a member of the London County Council. He was elected Alderman Alderman until 1904, but resigned his Aldermanship in March 1899. He was married in 1875 to Beatrice daughter of S. Smith of Ipswich, Essex. Home-Addresses: 10, Old Queen Street, S.W. Stock Great Heathway, Hingston, and Athenaeum.

LUXEMBURG-KASSAT, Grand-Duke of Adolphus William-Charles-Augustus-Frederick was born at Barchin, July 24, 1857, and married at Dessau April 25, 1875, his second wife, Princess Adeline of Anhalt, his first wife, the Grand-Duchess Elisabeth Michailovna of Russia, having died in 1867 without issue. His only daughter, Princess Edith, was married to the Crown Prince Frederick of Baden in 1880, a grandson of the Emperor William I. with a settlement of a million sterling. The Hereditary Prince Alexander is likewise his only son, born in 1882, and serves as major-general in the Austrian army. Should his sister die without issue, her dower will ultimately revert to him, and he will be one of the wealthiest princes in Europe, his father possessing, in addition to a fortune of at least three millions sterling, vast estates in Austria and Germany. Prince Alexander married, on June 21, 1893, Marie-Anne, Princess of Baganza. Through this union his family hope to secure the succession to the Luxembourg throne in the direct line, thus eventually avoiding complications with Prussia.

LYALL, Sir Alfred Comyn, K.C.B., (b. 1835), son of the Rev. Alfred Lyall, was born at Coultan, Surrey, in 1835, and educated at Eton. He was appointed Home Secretary in India in 1873; Foreign Secretary in 1878, and Agent-Governor of the North West Provinces in 1882, having in the previous year been created a

B.C.L. He was formerly Secretary of the State of India and of the Indian Empire. He is a writer of no less distinguished work than in the public service, including "Asian Studies" (Kington and Co. 1882) and of a volume of poems in 1882. He published a biography of Warren Hastings in the English Men of Letters Series in 1891, delivered the Boscawen lectures on "Natural Religion" in 1890, appeared in "The India Dominion" in India, and in 1890. In January 1898 he was appointed member of the Council of India. He has honorary degrees of B.C.L. and D.C.L. at Cambridge. He is the father of a daughter, Miss Lyall, who is married to a Quaker, Geo. S.W. Atherton.

LYALL, Sir Charles James F. (b. 1840), B.C.L., Esq., late Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces (from March 1895), and educated at College, London, and at Balliol College. In 1867 he entered the Civil Service, and was Assistant-Magistrate until 1871, when he was Under-Secretary for the N.W. After holding other under-secretary posts he became Secretary of the Commission of Assam in 1880, and Secretary of the Government of India for the Department, 1889-95, when he was appointed to the post of Chief Commissioner Central Provinces, India. He was appointed Secretary of the Joint Public Department of the India. He has translated several texts in Arabic. Address: Government Nagpur.

LYALL, Edna. See BA ELLEN.

LYDEKKER, Richard F.G.S., F.Z.S., J.P. for Hertfordshire, eldest son of the late G. W. Lydekker was born in 1849, went to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1868, and in 1871 in the first class of the Natural Tripos, the late Mr. A. H. Garfield senior. In 1874 he went with them on a tour to Kashmir, and when in the autumn was appointed by the Government (then Secretary for the Geological Survey of India) to his appointment until 1892, when he was on his marriage with the eldest daughter of the Rev. Canon Davys, Rector of Hampstead, Herts, for which he became J.P. during the same year. During his service on the Geological Survey of India, he surveyed nearly the territories of the Maharaja of Assistant-Physician at the Westminster Hospital. He was president from 1888 to 1890 of the Royal Meteorological Society, and is President of the Edinburgh Medical Society and Fellow of the Roy. Med. Chir. Soc. Perhaps his best-known book is the reprint of his Croonian Lectures, delivered at the Royal College of Physicians in 1895, and entitled "A Contribution to the History of the Respiration of Man." Addresses: Flowermead, Wimbledon Park, Surrey; and Athenæum.

MARCHAND, The Hon. Felix Gabriel, Canadian author and statesman, was born at St. John's, Lower Canada, in 1832. He studied law, and entered the Legislative Assembly of Quebec in 1867. In 1878 he became Provincial Secretary, and for a short while was Commissioner of Crown Lands. In 1887 he was Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. He has been a constant writer in most of the French-Canadian papers, notably Le Franco-Canadien, which he founded. He has also written comedies for the stage, such as "Erreur n'est pas Compte," and "Un Bonheur en Attire un Autre." In 1879 he received the decoration of Officier de L'Instruction Publique from the French Government.

MARCHAND, Major Thomas, French explorer and "emissary of civilisation," is the son of a carpenter of Thoissey, in the department of the Saône-et-Loire, and was born in 1863. He was educated at the local college, and for five years served as a clerc de notaire. At eighteen he wished to volunteer for the army, but gave way before his mother's entreaties. However, in 1883 he served his regulation time, and having re-engaged himself, he soon gained a commission. In 1896 he joined the staff of M. Liotard, the Commissioner of the Upper Congo, and reached Loango in July of that year. He left Brazzaville, the capital of the French Congo, in March 1897, and steamed up the M'bomo River, hauling his boats through forests and over the mountains between the Congo and Nile Basins. In September 1897 he reached M'bima on the Boku River, the extremity of the Congo basin and the limit of the French Congo Protectorate. He then despatched Captain Baratier to reconnoitre the Sueh River, a tributary of the Bahr-el-Ghazal, one of the heads of the Nile. This river having been mapped out, he made a road 100 miles long by 16 feet wide, over which he carried his loads, two gunboats and ten steel boats. By November he reached the Sueh, and then worked his way down to the Bahr-el-Ghazal and so on to the Nile, establishing himself at Fashoda by July 1898. After the battle of Omdurman on Sept. 2, Lord Kitchener steamed up the Nile, warned Major Marchand that he was in Egyptian territory. The Major refused to move until he had received orders from the French Government. He sent Captain Baratier with his report to Paris on the Nile, and himself left Fashoda to submit that report in October 1898. The Government having given him orders to leave Fashoda, he marched through the desert to Djibouti, arriving at Tona in May 1899, where he was received with great enthusiasm. His reception in France was phenomenal.

MARCONI, William, electrical engineer and inventor of "wireless telegraphy," was born at Marzabotto, Bologna, in 1875, his father being Italian but his mother English. He was educated at Livorno under Professor Rosa and at Bologna under Professor Righi, where he first attracted public attention with his system of wireless telegraphy. He visited England in 1896, and became acquainted with the labours of Mr. W. Preece, C.B., F.R.S., Engineer-in-Chief of the Post Office, Signor Marconi went to him for advice, and his apparatus was tested between Penarth and Weston, with a completely favourable result. Return to Italy, he secured support from the Italian Minister of Marine, and experiments were carried out, firstly at Rapallo and subsequently at Spezzia, where messages were sent from the shore to an island ten miles away. His most important experiments, however, have been recently (1898) undertaken at Dublin in King's Harbour, with the object of sending the results of the yacht races from the harbour to the offices of the Dublin Daily Express, whose editor, Mr. T. P. Gill, organised the trial. Signor Marconi, with the aid of a transmitter, a receiver, an ordinary Morse tapping machine, and two batteries attached to a width of wire-netting stretched to the top of an improvised mast, succeeded in signalling to a distance of more than ten miles. The use that this system might be to lighthouses in foggy weather and to armies in the field can be easily imagined. Signor Marconi has a permanent installation working over a distance of 14½ miles between Bournemouth and Alum Bay on the Isle of Wight, and another between Dover and Cape Grisnez.

MARGOLIOUTH, Professor D. Samuel, Laudian Professor of Arabic at the University of Oxford, son of Elias Margoliouth, was born in London on May 17, 1858, and educated at the Harewood Collegiate School; afterwards he was a scholar of Winchester College, 1872

he became scholar of New College 1877-81, where he gained most of university scholarships for Classics and Oriental languages. In 1881 he was Fellow of New College, where he was subsequently Lecturer, Tutor, and Librarian. In 1889 he was elected to the Professorship of Arabic at Oxford. He published his critical edition of "Agamemnon" of Æschylus; in Analecta Orientalia ad Poeticam Græciam; in 1889 "The Commentary of Ibn Ali on Daniel"; in 1893, Homothia Baidawiana and "Arabic in the Bodleian Library." He followed Dr. Edersheim in his commentary on Isaiah in the "Speaker's Commentary." Since 1896, with Mrs. Marguerite J. Payne Smith, and a daughter-in-law, late Dean of Canterbury, he has been engaged in completing the Syriac Lexicon of the late Dean Payne.

He has also published various papers in learned journals chiefly connected with Arabic literature. Address: 12 Woodstock Road, Oxford.

MARIA CHRISTINA, Queen of Spain, born July 21, 1858, second daughter of the late Archduke Charles of Austria. She married, Nov. 29, 1879, Alfonso XII., King of Spain, as his second wife, and upon his death on Nov. 25, 1885, she was appointed Regent. Her son, the present King, was born at Madrid on May 17, 1886, where her eldest daughter, the Infanta Maria Mercedes, was born on Sept. 11, 1880, and her youngest daughter, the Infanta Theresa, on Nov. 12, 1882. As she has proved herself a monarch of singular courage and supreme devotion to her son and his cause. The opening of the Cortes at the beginning of the Spanish-American War showed her in an heroic light.

MARINDIN, Sir Francis Arthur, K.C.B., R.E., Senior Inspecting Officer of Railways, Board of Trade, was born at South on May 1, 1838, and is the youngest son of the late Rev. S. Marindin, formerly in the 2nd Life Guards, and his wife, Isabella, daughter of A. Wedderburn. He was educated at Eton and at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, entered the Royal Engineers in 1854, and rose to the rank of Major. He served in the East in 1855-56, was Adjutant-General and Private Secretary to Sir John Stevenson, K.C.B., Governor of Cyprus, from 1860 to 1863, and was in civil service in Madagascar in 1861. From 1866 to 1868 he was Adjutant at the School of Military Engineering at Chatham, and was Brigade-Major from 1869 to 1874. He became attached to the Board of Trade in 1877. He was created C.M.G. in 1887 for work done on the Egyptian State Railways, and became K.C.M.G. in 1897, at the Jubilee. He married, in 1860, a daughter of Sir William Stevenson, K.C.B. Addresses: 3 Hans Crescent, S.W.; and Craigflower, Dunfermline.

MARKBY, Sir William, K.C.I.E., D.C.L., J.P., fourth son of the Rev. William Henry Markby, B.D., rector of Duxford St. Peter, in the county of Cambridge, was born at Duxford on May 3, 1829, and was educated at King Edward's School, Bury St. Edmunds, and Merton College, Oxford (B.A. 1850, M.A. 1853, D.C.L. 1879). He was called to the Bar, 1856, and became Recorder of Buckingham, 1865-66; Judge of the High Court at Calcutta, 1866-78; Vice-Chancellor of the University of Calcutta, 1887-88; and was appointed Reader of Indian Law in the University of Oxford, 1878, which office he still holds. He is a Fellow of All Souls' and of Balliol Colleges, and Justice of the Peace for the county of Oxford. In 1892 he was appointed a Commissioner to inquire into the administration of justice in the island of Trinidad. He has published "Lectures on Indian Law," and "Elements of Law considered with Reference to General Principles of Jurisprudence" (Clarendon Press), 5th edit., 1896. Addresses: Headington Hill, Oxford; and Athenæum.

In 1890 he became President of the Hakluyt Society. In 1893 he was elected President of the Royal Geographical Society. In 1895 he was President of the International Geographical Congress; and in 1896 was created a K.C.B. He is the author of "Franklin's Footsteps," 1852; "Cuzco and Lima," 1856; "Travels in Peru and India," 1862; "A Quichua Grammar and Dictionary," 1863; "Spanish Irrigation," 1867; "A History of the Abyssinian Expedition," 1869; "A Life of the Great Lord Fairfax," 1870; "Ollanta, a Quichua Drama," 1871; "Memoir on the Indian Surveys," 1871 (2nd edit., 1878); "General Sketch of the History of Persia," 1873; "The Threshold of the Unknown Region," 1874 (four editions); "A Memoir of the Countess of Chinchon," 1875; "Missions to Tibet," 1877 (2nd edit., 1879); "Peruvian Bark," 1880; "Peru," 1880; "The War between Chili and Peru," 1879-81 (3rd edit., 1883); "The Fighting Veres," 1888; "Life of John Davis the Navigator," 1889; "Life of Columbus," 1892; "History of Peru," 1893; "Life of Major Bennett," "Major James Rennell and the Rise of Modern English Geography," 1895. In 1893 the National Congress of Peru voted him a Gold Medal for his historical works. He has translated and edited twenty works for the Hakluyt Society, and has contributed numerous papers to the Royal Geographical Society's Journal. He also wrote the reports on the Moral and National Progress of India for 1871-72 and 1872-73; and the Peruvian chapters for Winsor's "History of America." Sir C. Markham was editor of the Geographical Magazine, 1872-78. In 1857 he married Minna, daughter of the Rev. J. H. Chichester, Rector of Arlington, co. Devon. Addresses: 21 Eccleston Square, S.W.; and Athenæum.

MARKHAM, Lieut.-General Sir Edwin, K.C.B., Inspector-General of Ordnance at Headquarters, is the son of W. Markham, Esq., of Becca Hall, Yorkshire, and was born in March 1833. He entered the army as a Lieutenant of the Royal Artillery in Dec. 1850, and was promoted Captain in Nov. 1857. Major in 1872, and Colonel, by brevet, in Jan. 1881. He first saw war service in the Crimea, and was present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and also at the siege of Sebastopol. He took part in the repulse of the sortie of the 26th Oct. For his services he was created a Knight of the Legion of Honour, and received a Crimean medal with three clasps and a Turkish medal. In 1856 he arrived in India during the Mutiny, and took part in the action of Secundra. For several years he was Assistant-Adjutant-General at Woolwich, and was appointed Colonel of the Staff in command of the Royal Artillery at Gibraltar in November 1882. In April 1885 he became Director of Artillery Studies at Woolwich, which appointment he gave up on being selected Deputy Adjutant-General of Royal Artillery Headquarters. Colonel Markham was promoted Major-General in April 1890, and went to Jersey in 1892 as Lieut.-Governor and Commander of the Troops. He was promoted a supernumerary Lieut.-General on taking over his present appointment in March 1895. Sir Edwin Markham was created a K.C.B. in 1897. He married, in 1877, Evelyn, a daughter of Admiral the Hon. Sir Montague Stopford. Address 68 Chester Square, S.W.

MARKS, Harry Hananel, M.P. J.P., is the fifth son of the Rev. Professor Marks and Cecilia, daughter of the Mosely Wolff, of Liverpool. He was born on April 9, 1855, and educated at University College, London, and the Athénée Royale, Brussels. After considerable journalistic experience in the United States he returned to London in 1884 and founded the Financial News, of which he is editor and chief proprietor. He initiated in the columns of that journal the Metropolitan Board of Works exposures, which led, in the first place, to the appointment of a Royal Commission, whose report was followed by the abolition of the Board of Works and the establishment of the London County Council. Mr. Marks took a leading part in the conduct of the inquiry before the Commission, and one indirect consequence of his labours was the passing of Lord Randolph Churchill's Act for the prevention and punishment of the acceptance of bribes by officers of municipal bodies. In 1889, largely as a consequence of his action with reference to the Metropolitan Board of Works, Mr. Marks was elected to the London County Council for East Marylebone. In 1892 he unsuccessfully contested North-East Bethnal Green in the Unionist interest. In March 1895 he was elected to the London County council for St. George's-in-the-East, and in the following July was returned to Parliament for the same constituency, defeating Mr. J. W. Benn, the Vice-Chairman of the London County Council. A petition against his return was unsuccessful.

On the London County Council Mr. Marks was largely instrumental in securing payment for coroner's jurymen. He is J.P. for Kent. Addresses: 6 Cavendish Square, W.; Callis Court, St. Peter's, Thanet.

MARLBOROUGH, Duke of, James Richard John Spencer-Churchill, was born at Simla on Nov. 10, 1871, and is the son of the 8th Duke and Albertha, daughter of the 1st Duke of Abercorn, K.G. He succeeded his father in 1892, was appointed Chancellor of the Primrose League in 1897, and in February 1899, Paymaster-General. He married Consuelo, the daughter of the millionaire, Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, in 1895. Address: Blenheim, Oxfordshire.

MARRIOTT, The Right Hon. Sir William Thackeray, Q.C., M.P., son of the late Mr. Christopher Marriott, of Drumpsall, and of Jane Dorothea, daughter of John Poole, Esq., Cornbrook Hall, near Manchester, was born in 1834. He took his degree at St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1854, and the same year he was ordained a Deacon, and appointed to the curacy of St. George's Church, Hume. The population amidst which he worked was composed chiefly of the working classes, and in 1860 he published a pamphlet, which had a wide circulation, on "Some Real Wants of the Working Classes," in which he advocated the formation of parks, playgrounds, gymnasiums, and clubs for the people. He started what is believed to be the first working-men's club in 1859, called the "Holme Athenæum," which consisted entirely of working-men, and was managed by themselves, and there was a gymnasium, with rooms for fencing and boxing, and rooms for cards and bagatelle and dominoes. When the time came for him to take priest's orders he hesitated and eventually declined, and gave his reasons in the preface to his farewell sermon, entitled "What is Christianity?" which was published in 1862. He then studied for the Bar, and was called at Lincoln's Inn in 1864, became a Queen's Counsel in 1877, and was made a Bencher of his Inn in 1879. He first entered Parliament in 1880 as Liberal member for Brighton, acknowledging Lord Hartington as his leader, and not Mr. Gladstone. When Mr. Gladstone again took the leadership, and became Prime Minister and formed his Cabinet, he soon began to show signs of dissatisfaction with his post, and in 1882 he moved the amendment against the Government on the Closure question. In 1883 he published a pamphlet, condemning strongly the revolutionary radicalism of Mr. Chamberlain, and in 1884 differed so from the Ministry in their policy in Egypt and the Soudan, that he took the "Chiltern Hundreds," and offered himself to his constituency as a supporter of Lord Salisbury. He was returned by a majority of 1457, and again in 1886 and 1892. In Lord Salisbury's first administration he held the post of Judge-Advocate-General, and was made a Privy Councillor, whilst he received the same appointment in Lord Salisbury's second administration, holding it from 1886 to 1892. In 1887 and 1888 he acted for the Khedive Ismail Pasha and other members of his family in settling their claim against the Egyptian Government, and in the latter year he received the honour of knighthood. In 1893 he resigned his seat in the House of Commons, but he still continues to be an active supporter of the Unionist party and the Primrose League. In his younger days, as student and barrister, he was a frequent contributor to the daily and weekly press, and occasionally now articles by him appear in the monthly magazines. He is married to Charlotte, daughter of Captain Tennant. Addresses: 56 Ennismore Gardens, S.W.; and 6 Crown Office Row, E.C.

MARRYAT, Florence (Mrs. Francis Lean), sixth daughter and tenth child of the late Captain Frederick Marryat, R.N., O.B., F.R.S., and Catherine, eldest daughter of Sir Stephen Shairp of Houston, Linlithgowshire, was born at Brighton, in Sussex, and educated at home. She began to write in 1865, when her first novel, "Love's Conflict," was published, since which time she has written some seventy-five novels, most of which have been republished in America and Germany and translated into French, German, Russian, Flemish, and Swedish. She was appointed editor of London Society in 1872, and has been a constant contributor to magazines and newspapers. She is known on the stage as an operatic singer and high-class comedy actress, and has been most successful as an entertainer and lecturer. Several of her works deal with spiritualism, in which she takes much interest. The last-named are: "There is no Death," 1891, of which several editions have been published; "The Risen Dead," a novel, 1893; "The Spirit World," 1894; and "A Soul on Fire." Permanent address: Langham Lodge, 26 Abercorn Place, N.W.

MARSDEN, Alexander, M.D., F.R.C.S., F.R.A.S., Consulting and Senior Surgeon to the Royal Free and Cancer Hospitals, London, is the son of the late William Marsden, M.D., founder of the above institutions. He was born Sept. 22, 1832, and educated at Wimbledon School and King's College, London. He entered the army in 1854, and served at the General Hospital, Scutari. Early in 1855 he was appointed Surgeon to the Ambulance Corps before Sebastopol, was engaged in several actions with the enemy, and remained on active service till the end of the Crimean War, when he received the Crimean and Turkish War Medals. On his return home in 1856 he had the honour of being presented to her Majesty the Queen by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge. He was also appointed full Surgeon to the Royal Free and Cancer Hospitals, and subsequently Curator of the Museum and General Superintendent of the former institution. For fifteen years Dr. Marsden worked at these two hospitals, seeing as many as 300 patients a week at the Royal Free, and about 70 to 80 at the Cancer. During the last twenty years he has devoted himself to the latter institution only. He is the author of "A New and Successful Mode of Treating Certain Forms of Cancer," "Cancer Quacks and Cancer Curers," "The Treatment of Cancer by Chian Turpentine and all other Methods," "Our Present Means of Successfully Treating or Alleviating Cancer and Tumours of the Breast, Tongue, Lip," &c. He is editor of the fourth edition of the late Dr. W. Marsden's "Treatise on the Nature and Treatment of Cholera," and is the author of numerous other papers. Address: Coombe, Nightingale Lane, S.W.

MARSDEN, The Right Rev. Samuel Edward, D.D., is the son of Thomas Marsden, merchant, of Sydney, N.S.W., and grandson of the Rev. Samuel Marsden, known as the Apostle of New Zealand, for many years Principal Chaplain of N.S.W. Bishop Marsden was born in Sydney, and educated at private schools and at Trinity College, Cambridge (M.A.). He was Curate of St. Peter's, Hereford, from 1855 to 1858, Curate of Lilleshall, Salop, 1858 to 1861, Vicar of Bergerwick, Worcestershire, 1861 to 1869, and Inspector of Schools for Rural Deanery of Evesham. He was appointed Bishop of Bathurst, N.S.W., in 1869, and consecrated by Archbishop Tait and other Prelates, Bishop Selwyn preaching the sermon on the occasion. Bishop Marsden took part in the formalities of the General Synod of the Church of England in Australia and Tasmania. He resigned his See at the end of 1885 in consequence of ill-health. He was appointed in 1892 Assistant of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, and was Administrator of the Diocese of Bristol during vacancy of the See. He is now Assistant Bishop of the Diocese of Gloucester, married an Australian lady in 1870, was present at the Lambeth Conference, 1897. Address: Clifton Park, Clifton, Bristol.

MARSH, Miss Catherine, youngest daughter of the late R. Marsh, Rector of Beddington, Surrey, died in 1864. Her best-known works are "English Hearts and English Homes," "Memorials of Captain Hedley," and the "Life of the Rev. William Marsh," a volume of songs and hymns, "Memory's Pictures," and "Light and Line; or, the Story of Thomas the Railway Workman," also "Brief Life of the late Earl Cairns." Miss Marsh resided for some time at Beckenham, Kent, to the then rector of which her sister is married. During the prevalence of cholera in 1866, whilst watching and nursing sufferers from that disease in the wards of the London Hospital, she founded the Valescent Hospital at Blackrock, which has since been established as a permanent institution.

MARSH, Howard, F.R.C.S., received his medical education at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and became a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, Eng., in 1866. He is a member of Council and of the Court of Examiners of the College, and in July 1898 was appointed Vice-President of the College. As Hunterian Professor of Pathology and Surgery he lectured in 1889 on "The Influence of Inflammation in some of its Surgical Aspects." He is Examiner in Surgery at the University of Cambridge, Surgeon and Lecturer in Surgery at St. Bart's., and Consultant Surgeon at the Hospital for Sick Children, besides being a Fellow of the Royal Society, the Royal Chir. Soc., and member of various other societies. He has published a work on "Joints and Spine," 1895, has edited the first and second editions of Sir Paget's "Clinical Lectures and Demonstrations," besides contributing articles on setting, joints, fractures, &c., to the various medical journals and manuals. Address: 30 Bruton Street, Berkeley Square.

MARSHALL, Professor, M.A. Camb., Hon. LL.D. Elected to the Chair of Mathematics in London on July 26, 1842, and educated at Merchant Taylors' School, he obtained the title to a professorial fellowship at St. John's College, Cambridge, awarded for classical attainments, but preferring mathematical studies he proceeded to St. John's College, Oxford, where he was Second Wrangler is elected Fellow of his College in the year, and Lecturer on Moral in 1868. He held this position, when he was appointed Principal of University College, Bristol. In the same year he married Miss Mary Paley, daughter of Rev. Thomas Paley, and in conjunction with her he published in 1879 the "Principles of Industry." His health broken down, he resigned his post and went abroad. In 1883 he was elected Lecturer on Political Economy of University College, Oxford, and in 1884 he became a Fellow of that College. In the year he was elected to the Chair of Political Economy at his old University, but by Professor Fawcett's untimely death in the following year he was elected a Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford. In 1889 he delivered the opening address at the Co-operative Congress in London; and was President of Section B of the British Association for 1890. He was a member of the Royal Commission on the Poor Law, 1891. In 1896 he was made an honorary Fellow of Balliol and a Foreign Honorary Member of the Accademia Reale dei Lincei. He published the first volume of his "Principles of Economics" in 1890, and an abridgement of the second edition of that work in 1892, under the title "Elements of Economics of Industry." A list of his writings may be found in the "Handbuch der Staatswissenschaften" of his name. Address: Balliol Croft, Oxford.

MARSHALL, George William, F.S.A., genealogist, born at Wardle, co. Warwick, April 19, 1839, is the son of George Marshall of Wardle and Eliza Henshaw, youngest daughter of Comberbach. He was educated at Radley College, Radley, under private tuition, and at Peterhouse, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1860, and as LL.D.

He became a Barrister of the Temple in 1865, is a J.P. for co. Warwick, a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, and an Honorary Member of the American Antiquarian Societies; he is also a Knight of the Croix Pursuivant of Arms 1877. He has edited a number of genealogical works, among them: "The History of Nottinghamshire," and "Leaves from the Harleian Society," for the Harleian Society, in which he has been a member of the Society since its foundation; "A Handbook of the Ancient Courts of Probate"; the first seven volumes of the Genealogist's Magazine, which magazine was founded by him in 1875. He is probably best known as the compiler of "The Genealogist's Handbook," a work which contains between 100,000 and eighty thousand references to names, and which has passed through three editions, the first having been issued in 1879. Permanent addresses: Sarnesfield Court, Weobley, R.S.O.; and Herald's College, E.C.

MARSHALL, Herbert Menzies, R.W.S., youngest son of the late Mr. T. H. Marshall, Judge of the County Court, Leeds, was born at Leeds, Aug. 1, 1841, and educated at Westminster School, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1864 second class in the Natural Science Tripos. In the same year he went to Paris for the purpose of studying architecture, and entered the atelier of M. Questel, architect to the Château of Versailles. On his return from Paris, 1867, he became a student of the Royal Academy, and in the following year obtained there the Travelling Studentship in architecture. The result of travelling in Italy and of constant sketching under a bright sun was to weaken his eyesight so much that he was obliged to give up all work for two years, and especially any architectural drawing. This accident induced him to turn his attention to water-colour painting as being less trying to the eyes, and in 1871 he exhibited his first drawing at the Dudley Gallery. In 1879 he was elected an Associate of the Society of Painters in Water-Colours, and became full Member in 1882. Mr. Marshall has held two exhibitions, in 1886 and in 1890, at the galleries of the Fine Art Society, illustrating the scenery of London, his special aim being to show how beautiful and mysterious is the common life of the streets and on the river when seen under the atmospheric effects which are found only in London. Address: 1 Victoria Mansions, Westminster, S.W.

MARSHALL, John, LL.D. Edinburgh, Rector of the Royal High School, Edinburgh, was born in that city on March 9, 1845, and is the eldest son of P. Marshall of Edinburgh. He was educated at Newington School, Edinburgh, and at the Training College, Moray House, Edinburgh, where he qualified as a certificated teacher of the first class. At Edinburgh University he gained class medals and other distinctions in every department, and on graduating with first-class honours in Classics in 1869, was awarded the Greek Travelling Fellowship as first graduate of his year. He proceeded to the University of Halle, in Saxony, where he attended lectures on classical subjects by Bemhardy, Keil, and others. In the autumn of the same year he gained the Ferguson Classical Scholarship open to all Scottish graduates, and was admitted a Foundation Exhibitioner at Balliol College, Oxford. In the following year (1870)

MARTIN, Sir Theodore, K.C.B., V.O., LL.D., J.P., son of the late James Martin, Esq., solicitor, of Edinburgh, was born there on Sept. 16, 1816, and received his education at the High School and at the University of his native city, of which he is an honorary LL.D. After practising as a solicitor in Edinburgh for several years he came, in 1845, to London, where he established himself with great success as a parliamentary agent. He first became known as an author by his contributions to Fraser's Magazine and Tait's Magazine, under the signature of "Bon Gaultier," and in conjunction with the late Prof. Aytoun he composed the "Book of Ballads" which bears that pseudonym, and a volume of translations of the "Poems and Ballads of Goethe," 1858. He prepared a translation of the Danish poet Henrik Hertz's lyrical drama, "King René's Daughter," the principal character, Iolanthe, being played by Miss Helen Faucit, who in 1851 became Sir T. Martin's wife. She died in 1898. His translations of Ehlenschläger's dramas, "Corzio," and "Aladdin, or the Wonder-Lamp," published in 1854 and 1857, have made these masterpieces of the Danish poet's genius familiar to a large circle of English readers. His metrical translation of the "Odes of Horace" appeared in 1860, and was immediately republished in the United States. It was followed, ten years later, by a critical essay on Horace's Life and Writings, the Ancient Classics for English Readers. In 1882 Sir T. Martin completed his Horatian labours in a translation of Horace's whole works, with a life and notes, in 2 vols. His poetical translation of Catullus, 1861 (2nd edit., 1875), was followed by a privately printed volume of Poems, Original and Translated," 1863, a translation of the "Vita Nuova" of Dante, and a translation of the first part of Goethe's "Faust." In 1866 he published a metrical version of the second part of "Faust." In 1867 he published a memoir of Professor Aytoun. It was while he was engaged on this biography that he was requested by the Queen to write the "Life of His Royal Highness the Prince Consort," the first volume of which appeared in 1874. His metrical version of Heine's "Poems and Ballads" appeared in 1878. The fifth and concluding volume of the "Life of the Prince Consort" was published on March 15, 1880, and five days afterwards the author received from the hands of the Queen the honour of knighthood, and was invested with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Bath. On Nov. 25, 1880, he was elected Rector of the University of St. Andrews. In 1883 he published a "Life of Lord Lyndhurst," founded on papers furnished by his lordship's widow and family. His last published works are "The Song of the Bell, and other Translations from Schiller, Goethe, Uhland, and others," 1889; "Madonna Pia, and other Dramas," 1894; and a translation of "The Æneid of Virgil, Books i.-vi.," 1896. He is a J.P. for Denbighshire, where he has considerable property, and he resides at Bryntysilio, near Llangollen, during the summer months. Addresses: 31 Onslow Square; Bryntysilio, near Llangollen; and Athenæum.

MARTIN, Sir Thos. Acquin, Agent-General to the Government of Afghanistan, was born in 1850, and was educated at the Oratory at Birmingham. He is the head of the firm of Martin & Co., civil engineers, of Calcutta and London, and was appointed to his present post in 1895. He received the honour of knighthood at the New Year, 1896. Addresses: 3 Esplanade, Calcutta; Silverlands, Eridge, Sussex.

MARTINEAU, James, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L., Litt. D., younger brother of the late Miss Harriet Martineau, was born at Norwich, April 21, 1805, and educated at the Norwich Grammar School, Dr. Lant Carpenter's School at Bristol, and Manchester New College, York. He was appointed second minister of Eustace Street Presbyterian Meeting-House, Dublin, in 1828; second minister of Paradise Street Chapel, Liverpool, in 1832; sole minister three or four years after; Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in Manchester New College in 1840; removed to London, 1857; was minister of Little Portland Street Chapel, 1859-72; and was appointed Principal of Manchester New College, London, in 1869. His opera, "Thaïs," was performed at the Paris Opera, Mar. 16, 1894, the libretto having been adapted from the novel of Anatole France; while in May of the same year a short one-act piece, "Le Portrait de Manon," was performed at the Opéra

MASSIE. In 1857 he wrote the History of the Daily Chronicle, which was published in the Daily Chronicle.

MASSIE THOMAS GEORGE, better known as MASSIE, was born of very poor parents at Wallingford near Reading in Berkshire Aug. 20, 1817, and received a common education at the British and Foreign School. At eight years of age he was working seven hours a day in a mill, and at the age of fifteen he was a clerk in a mill and could write an excellent hand. At twenty-one he became editor of the British and Foreign School. The following year he was one of the secretaries of the British and Foreign School and a personal friend of Thomas Carlyle and J. F. Massie. In 1840 he published The History of the British and Foreign School, which entered the third edition at the end of the year. He then joined the staff of the Chronicle, and for ten years wrote a considerable number of its reviews. In 1850 he wrote of literary subjects in the Quarterly Review. At last in 1851 Mr. Massie began to write a great number of historical, geographical, and literary subjects and he has since delivered many lectures on such subjects, both in London and abroad. He has written an English Literature, Ancient and Modern, twice from New York to San Francisco, where he is better known and more highly thought of than in England. Of late years he has written very little poetry, but has recently published the Chronicle Poems, in 1 vol. under the title of My Lyrical Life. He has also reviewed the work of the Secret Drama of Shakespeare, Shakespeare, 1854-1855. His principal works are Traces of Fiction and Lyrics of Love, 1851; The History of the British and Foreign School, 1852; Was Water, 1855; Chatterbox Castle, 1856; Havelock's March, 1859; A Tale of Eternity, and other Poems, 1860; Concerning Spiritualism, 1872; A Book of the Beginnings, 1872; The Natural Genesis, 1874; My Lyrical Life, 1879; besides numerous contributions to English and American periodical literature. Address: Alton, Norwood S.E.

MASSINGHAM, Henry William, editor of the Daily Chronicle, son of John Massingham, was born at old Catton, Norwich in 1830, and was educated under Dr. Jessop at Norwich Grammar School, of which he was head boy when he left. He entered journalism as a member of the staff of the Norfolk News and of the Daily Press, Norwich, coming to London as one of the editors of the National Press Agency. He became assistant editor of the Star upon its foundation, and eventually succeeded

Mr. T. F. O'Connor as editor of the Star. Mr. Massingham joined the staff of the Daily Chronicle as a reader. He became successively literary assistant-editor. He was the special representative of the Chronicle in the Commons from 1872 to 1882, when he was appointed editor of the paper. Mr. Massingham has contributed many reviews, and is author of a Day in a London Daily Press. He is a member of the Order of the Bath and Order of the Star. Office: First St. E.C.

MASSON, David, LL.D., LL.M., Historiographer-Royal for Scotland, was Professor of Rhetoric and Literature in the University of Edinburgh was born Dec. 2, 1822. He was educated at Marischal College in Scotland and at the University of Edinburgh. He began his literary career at the age of twenty as editor of a Scottish Review, newspaper, and remaining in it till 1848, where he remained about a year, contributed to Fraser's Magazine and other periodicals. He established himself in Edinburgh for two or three years as a writer for periodical publications, being among special engagements with the Monthly Chronicle, but returned to London in 1847, where he resided for some years, editing and contributing to Macmillan's Magazine from 1850 to 1853 and was appointed to the Chair of English Language and Literature at Trinity College, London on the resignation of the late Professor Clough in 1853. He retired from his posts in October 1860, having been appointed Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the University of Edinburgh, a post from which he retired in 1865. He contributed numerous articles to the Quarterly National British Quarterly and North British Review, to the Encyclopaedia Britannica and the English Cyclopaedia. His papers on Carlyle, Later-Day Pamphlets, Dickens and Thackeray, Rabelais, Literature and the Labour Question, Pre-Raphaelism in Art and Literature, Theories of Poetry, Shakspeare and Goethe, Hugh Miller, and De Quincey and Prose-writing, are the best known. His Essays, Biographical and Critical, chiefly on English Poets, appeared in 1856, and have been reprinted with additions, in 3 vols., 1874, one being entitled specially, Chatterton: a Story of the Year 1770; his classic Life of John Milton, narrated in connection with the Political, Ecclesiastical, and Literary History of his Time, vol. i. was published in 1858, vol. ii. in 1871, vol. iii. in 1873, and vols. iv. and v. in 1878. He is also author of British Novelists and Styles: a Critical Sketch of the History of British Prose Fiction," in 1859; on the History of British Philosophy; a Review of the History of Criticism, including some Remarks on the History of Mill's Answer to Sir W. Hamilton," an explanation of some lectures delivered at the Royal Institution of Great Britain in 1865. Other important publications from his pen are an edition of Milton's complete works, called "The Cambridge Edition," in three volumes, with Introductions, Notes, and an Essay on Milton's life, and a smaller edition of the same, called "The Golden Treasury Edition," in three volumes, with Introductions, Notes, and a Memoir. Both appeared in 1874. In 1873 he published a biography of the Earl of Drummond, entitled "Drummond of Bornden: the Story of his Life and Works"; in 1874 "The Three Devils: Shakespeare, Milton's, and Goethe's"; and in 1875 "De Quincey," in the English Men of Letters Series. He has edited "De Quincey's Collected Works," in 14 volumes. His most recent works should be mentioned "Edinburgh Sketches and Memoirs," 1892; and his contribution to "In the Footsteps of the Poets," 1893. In 1894 he was appointed Historiographer-General for Scotland, and has edited the History of the Privy Council of Scotland, vol. iii. to xiii. (1578-1625), published in 1880-96. He is married to Rosa, eldest daughter of Charles Orme. Addresses: Gowan Lee, Juniper Green, Edinburgh; and Athenæum.

MASTERS, Maxwell Tylden, M.D., Corresponding Member of the Institut de France, Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, born April 15, 1833, at Canterbury, is the youngest son of Alderman Tylden, and was educated at King's College, London, after which he practised medicine for some years. He held the Chair of Botany at St. George's Hospital from 1855 to 1868, and became the principal editor of the Gardener's Chronicle in 1865. Dr. Masters has been Botanical Lecturer in the University of London. He is Chevalier of the Order of Leopold; Fellow of the Royal, Linnean, and Royal Horticultural Societies; an Associate of the Royal College, London; an honorary corresponding member of the principal horticultural societies of the Continent, America, and of the Royal Society of Sciences of Liège, the Society of Natural Sciences of Cherbourg, the Botanical Society of France, and correspondent of the Institut (Académie des Sciences), the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. His works consist of a treatise on "Vegetable Teratology," which has been translated into German (with additions by the author), of "Botany for Beginners," and of "Plant Life" (of both which French, Dutch, and Russian translations have been made), and of numerous monographs and papers on subjects relating to botany, vegetable physiology, and horticulture. He is a frequent contributor to scientific periodicals, and has taken part in Oliver's "Flora of Tropical Africa," Hooker's "Flora of British India," Von Martius's "Flora Brasiliensis," "Flora Capensis," De Candolle's "Prodromus," the "Encyclopædia Britannica," the "Pinetum Britannicum," and other works, besides preparing, either alone or in collaboration with Messrs. G. Murray and Arthur Bennett, the second, third, and fourth editions of Henfrey's "Elementary Course of Botany." Addresses: 41 Wellington Street, Covent Garden, W.C.; and 9 Mount Avenue, Ealing.

MATHERS, Helen Buckingham.
See REEVES, MRS. HENRY.

MATHESON, Rev. George, D.D., F.R.S.E., was born at Glasgow, March 27, 1842, and educated at Glasgow Academy and the University of Glasgow. He lost his sight in youth by a gradual process of internal inflammation, beginning at the age of 18 months and recurring intermittently until his twentieth year, from which time he has been practically blind. During this gradual decline he was able with his own eyes to acquire a knowledge of Latin, Greek, French, and German, and to learn penmanship. At the Glasgow Academy he carried off the first prizes in every department. He then entered the University of Glasgow in preparation for the ministry, and took a leading place in Classics, Philosophy, and Theology; carried off the first prize in the senior division of Logic, and the prize essay for the best specimen of Socratic dialogue in 1860; took the first prize for Moral Philosophy in 1861; graduated M.A. with honours in Philosophy in 1862, and B.D. in 1866. He was licensed to the ministry of the Church of Scotland in 1866; appointed assistant to Dr. Macduff of Sandyford Church, Glasgow, in 1867; chosen by popular election parish minister of Innellan in 1868; received in 1880 a unanimous call to succeed Dr. Cumming, London, but declined it; and was appointed Baird Lecturer for 1881, and one of the St. Giles' lecturers for 1882. His ministry in Innellan was highly popular, the summer visitors flocking to his church in great numbers. His preaching is in expression purely extemporaneous, though he keeps in his mind a carefully studied train of thought. In 1886 he was translated to the parish of St. Bernard's, Edinburgh. In 1879 the University of Edinburgh conferred on him the degree of D.D. In 1890 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. In 1886 he preached before the Queen at Balmoral with such acceptance that he was requested by Her Majesty to forward a printed copy of his sermon. On that occasion the Queen, taking into account his inability to appreciate a portrait, presented him with a small bust of herself. In Edinburgh he is known as the Poet-Preacher; and he has gathered round him a congregation from all parts. He is extremely popular with all denominations. As an instance of this, the first year after his translation to Edinburgh he was invited to deliver the inaugural address to the theological students of three different colleges—the Edinburgh University, the United Presbyterian Hall, and the Free Church College of Glasgow. He is a representative of the Broad-Church party, and the uniform aim of his teaching has been to discover a basis for the reconciliation of the conflicting creeds of Christendom. In 1897, through the pressure of accumulating work and the desire for more literary leisure, he associated with himself a colleague in the ministry of St. Bernard's, his duties in that sphere being now limited to the services of the pulpit. In 1892 he acquired a knowledge of the Braille system for the blind, which he has found of inestimable value. In preparing for the press his practice is to write each day in Braille what he deems an adequate amount, and on the following day to read off this in dictation to his secretary. In 1874 he published "Aids to the Study of German Theology"; in 1877, "Growth of the Spirit of Christianity," 2 vols.; in 1881, "Natural Elements of Revealed Theology" (Baird lecture); in 1882, "Confucianism" (in the St. Giles' lectures—"Faiths of the World"); and a devotional volume, "My Aspirations" (translated into German); in 1884, "Moments on the Mount," also a devotional volume, and in the same year a paper on "The Religious Bearings of the Doctrine of Evolution" (delivered at the Pan-Presbyterian Council, Belfast, and published in its Transactions); in 1885, "Can the Old Faith Live with the New?" or the problem of evolution and revelation; in 1887, "The Psalmist and the Scientist," or the modern value of the religious sentiment; in 1888, "Landmarks of New Testament Morality," and another devotional volume, entitled "Voices of the Spirit"; in 1890, a volume of hymns, entitled "Sacred Songs"; in 1891, "Spiritual Development of St. Paul"; in 1892, "Distinctive Messages of the Old Religions"; in 1895, "Searchings in the Silence"; in 1896, "Words by the Wayside" (translated into German, and greatly admired by the Queen of Roumania); and "Lady Ecclesia" (a religious allegory picturing the early history of the Church). In 1898, "Sidelights from Patmos," the course of 1897 he contributed the biographies to the volume issued by Dr. Lyman Abbot of New York, "Prophets of the Christian Faith." Dr. Matheson has contributed to the Contemporary British Quarterly, Modern Review, Review, Interpreter, Expositor, Good Sunday Magazine, and Sunday School (Philadelphia). His article in the temporary Review, entitled "The Origin of the Character of Christ," has been printed in the United States, and has recently been translated into French. He has also contributed to the revision of the "Scottish Hymnal," the hymn beginning "O Love that wilt not let us go" for the use of which he has received applications from all parts of the world. Address: 19 St. Bernard's Crescent, Edinburgh.

MATHEW, The Hon. Sir Charles, LL.D., Judge of the High Court of Justice, is son of Charles Matheson, of Lehenagh House, Cork, by Mary, daughter of James Hackett, of Cork. He was born at Lehenagh House, July 10, 1830, and received his education at Trinity College, Dublin, where he was senior wrangler and gold medallist in 1860. He came to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1854, having in the previous year obtained an open studentship. Mathew was a Member of the Eastern Circuit, when in March 1854 he was appointed by the Crown a Judge of the Queen's Bench Division of the Court of Justice. Shortly before this time he had acted as a member of the Committee on the subject of Costs Proceedings. His appointment to the Bench is one of the few instances in which a member of the Junior Bar being promoted. He was knighted on his promotion, and was created LL.D., honoris causa, by the University of Dublin. He was the first Catholic Judge appointed in England since Catholic Emancipation, the two previous ones being Mr. Justice Shelle and Mr. Justice Hayes. In 1892 Sir James Matheson presided, at Dublin, over the sittings of the Tenants' Commission, which began on November 8. Against the proceedings of this Commission Mr. Matheson, Q.C., as representative of Lord Cairns, continuously protested, and was ordered to withdraw by Sir James Matheson, who refused to hear counsel or to allow the methods of legal procedure in the Commission of witnesses. In this case Matheson was generally supported by the other lawyers. In 1895 he was appointed ommercial Court, which was justly by City men. He married, in 1861, h, eldest daughter of the Rev.

Biron, vicar of Lympne, Kent.
es: 46 Queen's Gate Gardens, nd Athenæum.

MATHEWS, George Ballard, M.A., eldest son of George and Harriet Mathews, was born in London, he was educated at Ludlow Grammool, University College, London, John's College, Cambridge. He a Professor of Mathematics in the ity College of N. Wales, 1884-96, published Part I. of a "Treatise Theory of Numbers," and, in conwith Professor A. Gray, a "Trea-Bessel Functions and their Applito Physics." He has contributed papers on mathematical subjects
Messenger of Mathematics, the Quar-
tern Journal of Mathematics, and the Pro- ceedings of the London Mathematical Society. s: 10 Menai View Terrace, Upper N. Wales.

MATILDE, Princess Mathilde
a Wilhelmine Bonaparte, r of the ex-King Jerome and s Catherine of Würtemberg, and to Napoleon III., was born at May 27, 1820, and married at e, Oct. 10, 1841, to the Russian Anatole Demidoff. This union was opy, and in 1845 they separated by consent, her husband being compy the Czar to allow the Princess ity of 200,000 roubles. From 1849 marriage of Napoleon III. she did ours at the palace of the President, ons which have made her salon.

The Princess, who was a pupil of ud, is an accomplished artist, and ibited some of her pictures upon occasions at the Salon de Peinture.
ained honourable mention in 1861.

MATHEWS, Charles Willie, is son of the late Charles Matthews, don, comedian, and was born at ork on Oct. 16, 1850. He was ed at Eton, and was called to the the Middle Temple in 1872. He is Western Circuit, and was appointed er of Salisbury in 1893. Address: Court Temple, E.C.

MATHEWS, The Right Hon.
See LLANDAFF, VISCOUNT.

MATTINSON, Miles Walker, is the son of Thomas Mattinson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and he entered as a student at Gray's Inn in 1874; he obtained the Bacon Scholarship in 1874, a first class Studentship in 1875, a certificate of Honour in 1876, and was called to the Bar in 1877.
He practices on the Northern Circuit, and was appointed Recorder of Blackburn in 1886. Mr. Mattinson is the author of "Law of Corrupt Practices at Elections," and "Selection of Precedents in Pleading." Address: 1 Garden Court, Temple, E.C.

MAUDE, Cyril, actor, was born in London on April 24, 1862. He is the son of Captain Charles Henry Maude, formerly of the 14th Madras Infantry, grandson of Viscount Hawarden, and the Hon. Mrs.
Maude, daughter of the third Baron Sudeley. He was educated by Charles Kingsley's great friend, Cowley Powles, and afterwards at Charterhouse, Godalming.
He first went on the stage in the spring of 1883, playing at Denver, Colorado. He continued acting in the American and English provinces until the autumn of 1867, when he made his first London success in a play called "Racing," at the Grand Theatre, Islington. Shortly afterwards he distinguished himself in a play by Hamilton and Quinton called "Hand-fast." He was a member of the Gaiety Company during the autumn and winter of 1887. He joined the Vaudeville Company in 1888, remaining there for three consecutive seasons. He then joined Mr.
Wyndham's forces at the Criterion, and after shorter seasons with Henry Arthur Jones at the Avenue, with Mrs. Langtry at the Haymarket, at the Shaftesbury, and with Mr. Alexander in "The Second Mrs.
Tanqueray" at the St. James's, he played for three years at the Comedy Theatre under Mr. Comyns Carr's management. He then played at the Lyceum, and in 1896, together with Mr. Frederick Harrison, he started in management at the Haymarket Theatre, and has up to the presant date most successfully produced "Under the Red Robe," "A Marriage of Convenience," and "The Little Minister," the last-named piece breaking all the previous historically successful Haymarket records. Mr.
Maude is chiefly, and justly, famous for his impersonations of old men, which remind one of the most finished French acting.
He was married in 1888 to Miss Winifred Emery (q.v.), and has two daughters, Margery, born in 1889, and Pamela, born in 1893. Address: 33 Egerton Crescent, S.W.

ISABEL WINIFRED M. E.

MAUDSLEY, Henry, M.D., F.R.C.P., LL.D., third son of the late Thomas Maudsley, was born near Giggleswick, Settle, Yorkshire, Feb. 5, 1835, and educated at Giggleswick School and University College, London. He studied medicine at University College, and graduated M.D. at the University of London in 1857. Dr. Maudsley was Physician to the Manchester Royal Lunatic Hospital, 1859-62; was made Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in 1869; and was appointed Galstonian Lecturer to the College in 1870. He is a Fellow of University College, London; was lately Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in University College, and is Consulting Physician to the West London Hospital; and an honorary member of various learned societies in Paris, Vienna, Italy, and America. He has been President of the Medico-Psychological Association of Great Britain and Ireland, and was editor of the Journal of Mental Science. Dr. Maudsley is the author of "The Physiology of Mind," "The Pathology of Mind," "Body and Mind," "Body and Will," "Responsibility in Mental Disease," and "Natural Causes and Supernatural Seemings" (3rd edit., 1897). He is married to Ann Caroline, youngest daughter of the late John Conolly, M.D., D.C.L., Lawn House, Hants. Addresses: 12 Queen Street, Mayfair; and Heathbourne House, Bushey Heath, Herts.

MAUREL, Victor, French singer, was born at Marseilles, July 12, 1848. His father being an architect, he first studied painting, together with music, but he soon devoted himself entirely to the latter. He studied at the Conservatoire of his native town, and in Paris, where he carried off the two chief prizes in 1867. The next year he was engaged at the Opéra as understudy for the chief baritone singers. He preferred, however, Italian opera, and in 1869 he went to the Scala at Milan, to which he has often returned. Subsequently he travelled in America, Egypt, and Russia, returning to Italy in 1873, when he made a great success in Marchetti's "Ruy Blas" and Gomez's "Fosca." At the end of 1879 he was singing again at the Paris Opéra, and appeared in "Hamlet" and "Don Juan," 1880. The same year he created the part of Amonasro in Verdi's "Aida," and he is acknowledged to be one of the best interpreters of that composer's music. In 1883 he attempted to restore Italian opera in Paris, and took the Théâtre des Nations, where he was assisted by the best European singers. He produced there "Simon Boccanegra," by Verdi, Massenet's "Hérodiade," Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia," and other classical works: but the enterprise was a ruinous one, and he was compelled to desist at the end of 1884. M. Maurel was well known at Covent Garden, where he appeared in Verdi's "Falstaff," creating the part of the Scalinotto. He has recently lectured on musical operatic history, illustrated by songs of song. His Paris address is 1, rue Lesueur.

MAXIM, Hiram Stevens, C.E., was born in the town of Tangersville, St. Maine, U.S.A., on Feb. 5, 1840. His parents were also born in the State of Maine. His grandparents were born in the State of Mass., and were of English Puritan descent, and were among the early settlers in Northmouth County, Mass. He attended the common schools in the State of Maine, which only gave him the foundation of education, since which time he has been engaged in educating himself in various different branches of science with his work. His work has brought him in contact with men who have always had a great liking for mechanical work, and while still a mere boy was able to operate almost any kind of tool, and to do very good work. Before the age of twenty-one years he had served an apprenticeship and had also been foreman. At the age of twenty-four he was in the machine works of his uncle, Levi S. at Fitchburg, Mass. Later on he became a mechanical draughtsman in Boston, and also acted as foreman in the manufacture of gas machines and philosophical instruments. At twenty-eight he became draughtsman in a large steamship building establishment in New York, where shortly after this he invented a gas locomotive headlight, which was of general use. He also did much to put automatic gas machines for use in private houses out of the reach of gas. These machines went into large use, and are still being made in great quantities. In 1877 he took up the question of electricity, and was among the first to make dynamo-electric machines and electric lamps in the U.S.A. He was the first to make incandescent lamps by the process known as "the Maxim process," that is, a process of building up a carbon rod, and standardising the carbon electrically heating them in an atmosphere of hydro-carbon vapours. This process which rendered it possible to make incandescent lamps which would stand. Unfortunately for Mr. Maxim, his process, which is much used, has become common property. In 1881 he exhibited at Paris the first electrical current transformer ever made for electric lamps, a regulator maintained a constant pressure of current quite irrespective of the lamps in the circuit, and for this reason he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour by President Grévy. At this time he took out a great many patents on electrical machinery, including incandescent lamps, search lamps, dynamo-electric machines, chemical processes relating to electricity, &c. In 1874 he took up the question of automatic guns.

He believed that the recoil energy of a gun, which was only a disturbing element in firing, could be turned to use, and that the energy was always sufficient to perform all the necessary operations of loading and firing. Accordingly he made a species of a dynamometer with which he was able to measure the force of the recoil, the duration of the recoil, and everything relating to loading and firing a gun. This gave him the necessary data, and he made the first automatic gun in Hatton Garden in 1884. It was a nine days' wonder in London.

People at first would not believe that it was possible for a gun to load and fire itself without any one touching it, and a great many people came to see the gun, from the Prince of Wales downwards. Competitive trials with other guns operated by hand were held, and he exhibited his automatic gun in various countries, and received very large orders. The amalgamation of the Nordenfelt Company with the management of the company was passed into the hands of a board of directors. Mr. Maxim writes characteristically of the guns: "I think it is now proved that these automatic guns have proved themselves superior to all others. In the late war with the Matabele they were used without a hitch, and it was these guns that saved the British column from annihilation. I have received many compliments from the officers in command, and will attribute their wonderful success to the remarkable killing power of these guns, and they say that no soldier, no matter how brave, could stand up before them."

Six hundred rounds a minute from a gun barrel is rather too deadly a fire to stand up against; in fact, the slaughter was so great that the matter was seriously discussed in Parliament as to whether the British were justified in slaughtering the Boers in such numbers." The French Government has adopted the fully automatic gun, using a barrel of 1½-inch bore, and cast-iron explosive projectiles, and French officers, in describing the fire, say it was literally a rain of iron. When the question of smokeless powder came before Europe Mr. Maxim was among the first to go to England to commence experiments, and he found that very excellent results could be obtained by combining gunpowder of the highest degree of nitration

—commonly called tri-nitrocellulose—and nitro-glycerine with a small percentage of a suitable oil. He found that the violence of the nitro-glycerine could be modified to any extent in this way, and with such a compound detonation was absolutely impossible. After a large number of experiments he produced most excellent results. The powder was found to be a stable compound not affected by heat and moisture, and to give very high muzzle velocities and low pressures without any smoke at all. This was the first compound of the kind ever made. About nine years ago he took up the question of aerial navigation, and made a large number of experiments with a view of ascertaining exactly how much power was required to perform artificial flight on the aeroplane system, the aeroplane being propelled by screws. The experimental apparatus was placed on the end of a very long rotating arm, so that the apparatus passed around a circle, the circumference of which was 200 feet. After this he commenced experiments on a very much larger machine to run in a straight line on a railway track; but it was first necessary to produce some kind of motive power which should be much lighter and stronger than anything else in existence, and this he has succeeded in doing. He has, he avers, been able to get a horse-power out of every 10 lbs. of motor, a result which, he thinks, has never been attained before. His large machine is driven by twin screws, and the thrust of these screws is over 2100 lbs. when the engines are running at full speed. The machine is provided with all sorts of instruments and tachometers, so as to measure the thrust of the screw, the speed and the lifting power of the aeroplane as the machine runs on the railway track. An inverted rail is provided on each side of the machine to prevent it from leaving the track. These are the first experiments that have ever been tried with a machine running in a straight line, and it is the first time that any considerable weight has been lifted by an aerial apparatus not provided with a gas bag. Mr. Maxim is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour, Member of the Society of Arts, Member of the English Society of Mechanical Engineers, Member of the London Chamber of Commerce, Member of the Bridgeport Scientific Society, and has lately been decorated by the Sultan of Turkey with the Grand Order of the Medjidieh.

MAX-MÜLLER, The Right Hon. Professor Friedrich, K. M., LL. D., D.C.L., son of Wilhelm Müller, the German poet, was born at Dessau, Dec. 6, 1823. In 1850 he took one of his Christian names as his surname. He was educated at the public schools of Dessau and Leipzig, attended lectures in the Universities of Leipzig and Berlin, and took his degree in 1843. He studied Arabic and Persian under Professor Fleischer; Sanskrit and comparative Philology under Professors Brockhaus, Bopp, and Ruckert; philosophy under Drobisch, Weisse, and Schelling. He published, in 1844, his first work, a translation of "The Hitopadesa," a collection of Sanskrit fables; and then proceeded to Berlin, to examine the collection of Sanskrit MSS. there. In 1845 he went to Paris to continue his studies under Eugène Burnouf, at whose suggestion he began to collect materials for an edition of the "Rig-Veda," the Sacred Hymns of the Brahmans, and the Commentary of Sāyanāchārya. After copying and collating some of the MSS. in the Royal Library at Paris, he repaired to England in June 1846, in order to collate some more MSS. at the East-India House and the Bodleian Library. When he was on the point of returning to Germany he made the acquaintance of the late Baron Bunsen, then Prussian Minister in London, who persuaded him to stay in England, and on his and the late Professor Wilson's recommendation the East-India Company engaged him to publish the first edition of the "Rig-Veda" at their expense. In 1848 he settled at Oxford, where his work was to be printed, and the first volume of 1000 pages quarto appeared in 1849. He was invited by the University to give some courses of lectures on Comparative Philology, as Deputy Taylorian Professor, in 1850; was made honorary M.A. and member of Christ Church in 1851; was elected Taylorian Professor, and received the full degree of M.A. by decree of Convocation in 1854; was made a curator of the Bodleian Library in 1856; and elected a Fellow of All Souls' College in 1858. He was in 1860 an unsuccessful candidate for the Professorship of Sanskrit at Oxford, being opposed by a coalition of theological parties. From 1865 to 1867 he was Oriental Librarian at the Bodleian Library. In 1868 the University founded a new Professorship of Comparative Philology, and the statute of foundation named him as the first Professor. In 1872 he was invited to lecture in the reconstituted University of Strassburg as Professor of Sanskrit. He declined the appointment, but gave some courses of lectures there in 1872. As he refused to accept any salary, the University of Strassburg founded a triennial prize for Sanskrit scholarship in memory of his services. On Dec. 3, 1873, at the invitation of Dean Stanley, he delivered in Westminster Abbey a lecture on the

"Religions of the World," the only address ever delivered by a layman within the Abbey. In 1875 he wished to resign the Professorship at Oxford, intending to return to Germany, but the University requested him to remain at Oxford, and entrusted him with the editing of a series of translations of the "Sacred Books of the East," appointing at the same time a Deputy-Professor, Mr. Sayce. Five volumes of this series have been published, of which the first contains Max Müller's translation of the "Upanishads" (1879), and the tenth his translation of the Dhammapada from Pali, 1881. In 1877 he delivered in the Chapter-House of Westminster a course of lectures on "The Origin and Growth of Religion, as Illustrated by the Religions of India" (2nd edition, 1891). These lectures were the first of those delivered under a bequest made by the late Mr. Hibbert. On Nov. 13, 1877, Professor Max-Müller was elected a delegate of the University Press. On Oct. 28, 1881, he was re-elected Curator of the Bodleian Library in place of the late Professor Rolleston. In 1882 he was invited by the University of Cambridge to give a course of lectures on India, specially intended for the candidates for the Indian Civil Service. These lectures were published in 1882, under the title of "India: What can it teach us?" In addition to the "Hitopadesa" he published at Königsberg, in 1847, "Meghadūta, an Indian Elegy," translated from the Sanskrit, with notes in German; in the Reports of the British Association, 1847, an "Essay on Bengali and its Relation to the Aryan Languages"; in 1853, an "Essay on Indian Logic," in "Archbishop Thompson's Laws of Thought"; in 1854, "Proposals for a 'Uniform Missionary Alphabet' and 'Suggestions on the Learning of the Languages of the Seat of War in the East, with Linguistic Map,'" republished in 1855 under the title of "A Survey of Languages." In 1854 appeared his "Letter to Chevalier Bunsen on the Classification of the Turanian Languages" in Bunsen's 'Christianity and Mankind'; in 1857, at Leipzig, "The Hymns of the Rig-Veda, together with text and translation of the Prātisākhya, an ancient work on Sanskrit Grammar and Pronunciation," in German; and "Buddhism and Buddhist Pilgrims"; in 1858, "The German Classics from the Fourth to the Nineteenth Century" (new edition, 1886), and "Essay on Comparative Mythology," in the Oxford Essays, translated into French by Ernest Renan; in 1859, "History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature" (2nd edition, 1860), and "Lectures on the Science of Language," two series, delivered at the Royal stitution (last edition, 1888); a thoroughly revised edition of this work was published in 1891, under the title "The Science of Language, founded on Lectures delivered at the Royal Institution." He published a "Sanskrit Grammar for Beginners" (2nd edition, 1870). In 1868 he delivered the Rede Lecture at Cambridge, "On the Stratification of Languages," and in 1870 a course of lectures "On the Science of Religion" at the Royal Institution, published in 1873 under the title of "Introduction to the Science of Religion," with "Two Essays on False Analogies and the Philosophy of Mythology" (last edition, 1882). In 1873 he gave another course of lectures at the Royal Institution on Darwin's Philosophy of Language, published in Fraser's Magazine. Most of his essays have been collected in "Chips from a German Workshop," 4 vols., 1868-75:—vol. i., Essays on the Science of Religion; vol. ii., Essays on Mythology, Tradition, and Customs; vol. iii., Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities; vol. iv., Essays on the Science of Language. A selection of them was published under the title of "Selected Essays," 2 vols., 1882, followed by a later edition of four volumes. In 1869 he published, as a specimen, the first volume of his translation of the Rig-Veda "Hymns to the Ruts, or the Storm-Gods." In 1873 appeared his edition of the two texts of the Rig-Veda (2nd edition, 1877), and in 1874 the sixth and concluding volume of a large edition of the Rig-Veda with Yana's Commentary. A new edition of his work in four volumes, published at the expense of the Mahārājāh of Vizianagram, appeared in 1891. Since the year 1879 Professor Max-Müller devoted himself to the teaching of several Buddhist priests who had been sent to him from Japan to learn Sanskrit. This led him to the discovery that the oldest Sanskrit MSS. existed in Japan. With the help of these Japanese MSS. he published the Sanskrit originals of several Buddhist texts, such as the Sukhāvatīvyūha (Journ. Roy. Asiatic Soc., 1880), the Vajracchedikā, in the Anecdota Bononiensis, 1881, while one of his pupils, Bunyiu Nanjio, compiled a complete catalogue of the Buddhist Tripitaka, the Sacred Canon of the Buddhists in China and Japan, published by the Clarendon Press, Oxford, in 1883. In 1881, in commemoration of the centenary of its first publication, he brought out a new translation of Kant's Critique of Pure Reason, preceded by a historical introduction by Professor L. Noiré. Of the "Critique" alone a second edition was published in 1897. In 1884 he published a volume of "Biographical Essays"; in 1887, "The Science of Thought"; in 1888, "Biographies of Words and the Home of the Aryas." In 1888 he was appointed Gifford Lecturer in Natural Religion in the University of Glasgow, and his first course of lectures was published in 1889, under the title of "Natural Religion"; the second course, "Physical Religion," in 1891; the third volume of lectures in 1892, "Anthropological Religion"; the fourth in 1893, "Theosophy, or Psychological Religion." He was re-elected Gifford Lecturer in 1891. Professor Max-Müller, who has contributed numerous articles to the Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews, the Times, and various literary journals of England, America, Germany, and France, is one of the eight foreign members of the Institute of France, one of the thirty Knights of the Ordre pour le Mérite, one of the ten foreign members of the Reale Accademia dei Lincei of Rome, and has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws and Philosophy at Cambridge, Dublin, Edinburgh, Bologna, and Budapest. In 1889 he was elected First President of the Aryan Section at the International Congress of Orientalists held in Stockholm and Christiania, and received the Northern Star (first class) from the King of Sweden. In 1892 he was chosen President of the International Congress of Orientalists held in London; in 1894 President of the Ethnological Section of the British Association. In 1893 he visited Constantinople, and was decorated by the Sultan with the Turkish Ordre pour le Mérite (Liakat) and the Star of the Medjidieh. On the fiftieth anniversary of his Doctorate (September 1893) the University of Leipzig presented him with an honorary Diploma, and on his seventieth birthday (Dec. 6, 1893) he received numerous addresses from academies and learned societies to which he belongs. In May 1896 he was made a member of the Privy Council, and in the autumn of the same year received the insignia of a Knight Com. of the Légion d'Honneur. He is also Knight Com. of the Corone d'Italia and of Albrecht the Bear. Professor Max-Müller published in February 1898 a volume of reminiscences, "Auld Lang Syne," which has passed through several editions. Permanent addresses: All Souls' College; and 7 Norham Gardens, Oxford.

MAXWELL, The Right Hon. Sir Herbert Eustace, 7th Bart., M.P., F.R.S., of Monreith, only surviving son of Sir William Maxwell by his wife Helenora, daughter of Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, 5th Baronet of Ardgowan, Lord-Lieutenant of Renfrewshire, was born on Jan. 8, 1845, and educated at Eton and at Christ Church, which he left without taking a degree.

After leaving college he joined the Militia, and served for twenty-one years, finally retiring as a Major and Lieut.-Colonel. MAY, Phil, who is now credited with being able to earn as much as his father by his drawings, was born at Leeds, April 22, 1864, and is the second son of Philip May, engineer. He was educated at St. George's School, Leeds. He began his artistic career when he was seven years old, at which time the Grand Theatre, Leeds, opened, and he became acquainted with the son of the local scene painter, and helped to mix the distemper. Mr. May used to sketch sections of buildings, people's designs of costumes, and eventually he designed comic dresses. This brought him to the notice of Frederick Stimpson, who engaged him to do small parts and do six sketches for advertisement window bills. He was then engaged to design the dresses for the Leeds pantomime in 1882, but he declined to come to London as his finances at the time could not support him. An aunt had been an actor there, and he sought his uncle he was next day despatched in to Leeds, but he left the train and walked back to London. Then ensued a life of great privation, and the first turn of good fortune he had was when he met the owner of a photograph shop, who took a drawing of Irving, Bancroft, and Toole, and published it. At last a drawing by one of Mr. Bancroft in Society brought him to the notice of the St. Stephen's Review, where he was set the task of designing a cartoon, illustrations, cover and so on for a Christmas number. A week was given him to do this in. He worked night and day and finished the whole in a week. He was employed on the illustrations of the Review till an agent came from Sydney to secure an artist. He went to the Colonies, and in fine air has found out what he is, but he says the trials of his early days made him an artist. He spent three years on the Sydney Bulletin. He is now an artist on the staffs of the Illustrated and Punch, for both which journals he continues to do notable and characteristic work. He has travelled for the Illustrated in America. Since 1892 he has published "Phil May's Annual," and has given to the world "The Parson and the Painter," 1891; "Phil May's Gutter-plates," "Phil May's Sketchbook," 1896, &c. Address: Holland Park Road, Kensington, W.

MAY, William Charles, was born in Reading early in the fifties. After studying at South Kensington he proceeded to the Royal Academy Schools, where he gained a silver medal and honorable mention for the historical gold medal which that year was won by Mr. John Thornycroft. For some time Mr. May was the pupil and assistant of the Signor Monti, sculptor of the celebrated group, "The Sleep of Sorrow and the Dawn of Joy," which attracted so much attention at the Great Exhibition of 1862. He has been more particularly successful as a portrait sculptor, but has executed a large quantity of ideal work. His finest work in marble was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1877, and is entitled "The Death of Panthea." An exceptionally good engraving of it was published in the Art Journal in 1884, and attracted much attention. A beautiful monument in Remenham Churchyard, Henley-on-Avon, illustrative of the words "He will give His angels charge over thee," was dedicated by this artist to the memory of the late R. A. Cosier, a well-known art patron, and was also greatly admired on a representation of it being published in the Builder in 1886. Mr. May was the sculptor of the memorial subscribed for by the nation, erected on Plymouth Hoe in 1892, in commemoration of the tercentenary of the defeat of the Armada. His only son, Mr. Charles Albert Victor May, is also a sculptor.

MAYER, Michael Leopold, born Nov. 6, 1832, is a naturalised Englishman of Franco-German descent. With the exception of his boyhood, he has spent all his life in London, where, for the last quarter of a century, he has been one of the central figures of the theatrical world. Formerly a journalist, he became the lessee of the Princess's Theatre in 1875, and produced "Round the World in 80 Days," an adaptation by himself from Jules Verne's popular romance and play, "Le Tour du Monde en 80 Jours." It was a great success, and was followed by "Heartsease," an adaptation by James Mortimer of "La Dame aux Camélias," by the younger Dumas. It is, however, as the founder of a regular season of French plays that Mr. Mayer is best known to the present generation. After introducing to London the leading artists of the French stage, he, by arrangement with Mr. John Hollingshead, the then lessee of the Gaiety Theatre, brought over the whole company of the Théâtre Français for a season of six weeks, during which they performed about sixty of their most successful plays, both classic and modern. This was the first introduction to London of Madame Sarah Bernhardt. Since 1879 there has been a season of French plays every summer, and in some years a winter season too. All the leading French actors and actresses, including Mesdames Sarah Bernhardt, Hading, Bartet, and Chaumont; MM. Coquelin, Mounet-Sully, Got, Delaunay, &c., have performed in London under Mr. Mayer's management, and have at various times occupied the boards of the Lyceum, Gaiety, Adelphi, Comedy, Daly's, Royalty, Opera Comique, and the old Her Majesty's theatres. At the last-named, Mr. Mayer also gave a season of French grand opera; and at the Lyceum, about eight years ago, he gave a season of Italian opera, introducing to London for the first time Verdi's "Otello," with the whole of the famous orchestra and chorus of La Scala, Milan, under their late eminent conductor, Signor Faccio.

MAYNARD, Constance Louisa, was born in London on Feb. 19, 1849, her father belonging to the family of the Viscounts Maynard, and her mother being of French Huguenot origin. She was educated at home, with the exception of one year at Belstead, Mrs. Umphelby's School, near Ipswich, and entered Girton College, Cambridge, in 1872, where she successfully passed the Moral Sciences

English in 1874, being the first volume in the series. The series has since been continued, and the volume now published is the 10th. The series is published by the Cambridge University Press, and is one of the most important series of books published by that press. He entered the army as ensign of the 40th Regiment, served through the second Afghan the Gwalior campaigns in India, was severely wounded, and received medals. He joined the 10th Hussars in 1846, and sold out in 1851. From 1851 to 1854 he was editor of Bombay Telegraph and Courier. In 1854 he was sent to Paris by the Daily Telegraph in conjunction with Mr. Blanchard, as one of the special correspondents.

the Paris Exhibition of that year. From 1855 to 1870 he was a frequent contributor to the Daily News, Household Words, and All the Year Round. From 1866 to 1870 he was editor of the Weekly Register. In 1870 he went abroad as special correspondent of the New York Herald with the French Army. After Sedan he accepted an offer from the Daily Telegraph, and remained in France as special correspondent of that paper until the end of the war, and afterwards, for two years, as correspondent for the same journal at Paris and Versailles. He joined the staff of the Hour in 1873. In 1865 he published "The Bubbles of Finance," and in 1866 "The Profits of Panics," both being descriptions from life of the joint-stock windles of the day. In 1868 he published a small volume on "Turf Frauds"; in 1875, "Three Months after Date, and other sales"; and in 1886, "Sir William's Speculations." He has contributed to the Month, the Dublin Review, Belgravia, Fraser, Macmillan, the Whitehall Review, and other periodicals.

MEATH, Bishop of. See KEENE, THE MOST REV. JAMES BENNETT.

MEATH, Earl of, The Right Hon. Reginald Brabazon, P.C., was born in London on July 31, 1841, and is the son of the 11th Earl, whom he succeeded in 1887, and of Harriet, daughter of the late Sir Richard Brooke, of Norton Priory, Cheshire. He was educated at Eton and in Germany, and entered the Foreign Office, after competitive examination, in 1863. Five years later he exchanged into the diplomatic service, and was successively at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Berlin, The Hague, and Paris until 1873. For many years Lord Meath has been exceedingly busy as a public benefactor. As Lord Brabazon, in 1874, he became first Hon. Secretary of the Hospital Saturday Fund; in 1879 he was first Chairman of the Young Men's Friendly Society. In 1882 he founded and became first Chairman of the Metropolitan Public Gardens Association, which has for its object the acquisition and laying-out of open spaces, such as disused burial-grounds, the planting of trees, the provision of seats, the supply of children's gymnasiums, protection of commons and existing open spaces &c. He was first President of the British College of Physical Education, and of the Church Reform Association. His work on the London County Council, of which he was for some years an Alderman, has been important. He was first Chairman of the Parks Committee. Latterly he has turned his attention to Dublin city and county, of which he has been since 1898 Lord-

Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum. He is Hon. Colonel of the 5th Batt. R.D. Fusiliers. He married, in 1868, the only surviving daughter of the 11th Earl of Lauderdale. Addresses: 83 Lancaster Gate, W.; and Kilruddery, Bray, Ireland.

He is honorary and corresponding member of several foreign societies; and was awarded the Indian Mutiny Medal for special service as a Volunteer. He was appointed to the Geological Survey of Ireland, 1851; transferred to the English Survey, 1853; to the Indian Geological Survey and as Professor of Geology at the Roorkee College of Civil Engineers, 1854; Director of the Geological Survey of India, 1876-87, when he retired. He has published "A Manual of the Geology of India" (in part), 1879; scientific papers in the Journal of the Geological Society, 1868; five "memoirs" and forty-four "records" of the Geological Survey of India series, 1860-87; and pamphlets entitled "Agnosticism and Faith," 1888, and "Evolution of Mind in Man," 1892. He married Louisa, second daughter of the Rev. D. H. Maunsell. Address: c/o H. S. King & Co., 65 Cornhill, E.C.

MELBA, Madame Nellie, prima donna (Mrs. Armstrong), was born in one of the Australian Colonies on May 19, 1865. As a little child of six she sang ballads to her own accompaniment at a public concert. Subsequently she was sent to Europe, and studied under Madame Marchesi in Paris. She first appeared on the stage in October 1887, singing in "Rigoletto" at the Théâtre de la Monnaie in Brussels. The year after she appeared before a London audience as Lucia at Covent Garden Opera House. She played Ophelia at the Paris Grand Opera in 1889, and also appeared as Juliet in London. Bemberg specially wrote "Elaine" for her, and she appeared in this opera in London in 1892. In 1893 she achieved great success in "Pagliacci" at Covent Garden. In 1894 she sang at Handel Festival, and has been much before the public in principal parts during her operatic seasons. Address: Rue de Paris.

MELBOURNE, Bishop of See
THE RIGHT REV. FIELD FLOWERS

MELDOLA, Professor J. F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry in the City and Guilds Technical College, City and Guilds London Institute, was born July 19, 1828, in Annette Crescent, Essex Road, Islington. His father, Samuel Meldola, was a printer and his grandfather, the Rev. Dr. Raphael Meldola, Chief Rabbi of the Congregation of Spanish and Portuguese Jews in London (1805-28). An obituary notice of the Chief Rabbi, who was widely esteemed for his scholarship by all denominations, appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine in 1828. The history of the family can be traced back without a break through eleven generations to Rabbi Isaiah Meldola described in the pedigree as "one of the sages of Castile," who died as head of the college at Mantua in 1340. Many members of the family have been distinguished divines, physicians, scholars, and writers on various subjects. Professor Meldola received his early education in private schools, first at Bristol, where his mother's family resided, and afterwards at Epsom and Bayswater. He received his scientific training at the Royal College of Chemistry in Oxford Street, having entered as a student under Dr. Edward Frankland in 1866. His first appointment was as Junior Assistant in the laboratory of the late Dr. John Stenhouse, F.R.S., where he imbibed the taste for organic chemistry which he has since cultivated. From the laboratory in Pentonville Professor Meldola transferred his services to a firm of colour manufacturers at Brentford, where he acquired his first experience as a technologist, and in 1872 he again entered the Royal College of Chemistry, then transferred to the South Kensington establishment, in the capacity of Demonstrator under Dr. Frankland. In 1874 he became associated with Mr. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S., and assisted this well-known investigator in many of his researches in Spectrum Analysis. While in the laboratory of Mr. Lockyer, Professor Meldola was sent out by the Royal Society in charge of the Nicobar Island branch of the expedition commissioned to make observation on the total eclipse of April 5, 1875. Two years after his return to England he again gave his services to chemical technology, having accepted in 1887 the post of scientific chemist in one of the leading coal-tar colour factories in this country. In the laboratory of this firm at Hackney Wick worked at chemical research for eight years, and made many discoveries of scientific and technical importance which are associated with his name. He was appointed to the professorship which he now holds in 1885. The list of chemical papers embodying the results of original investigations carried out by Professor Meldola alone, or by him in conjunction with his assistants and students, is a very long one, numbering about seventy memoirs and notes contributed to the recognised scientific periodicals in England and Germany. Although his work has been chiefly in the domain of chemistry, he is also an enthusiastic naturalist and geologist, and much of his early work was in connection with the application of the Darwinian theory to the problems of animal coloration. His first published scientific papers were on biological subjects, and he has contributed about thirty entomological notes to various natural history journals. He is still warmly interested in the subject, and devotes most of his leisure time to collecting and observing in the field. English biologists owe to Professor Meldola the translation of Weismann's "Studies in the Theory of Descent" (1881-82), a work which first brought into notoriety in this country the eminent German biologist, and which also embodied in the form of notes many of the translator's own observations. In 1886 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and he belongs to most of the scientific societies in London and to many foreign societies. He is one of the original Fellows of the Institute of Chemistry and of the Physical Society, and an Hon. Member of the Institute of Brewing. He has been Secretary, three times Vice-President, and was President of the Entomological Society, 1896-97; he is also Foreign Secretary of the Chemical Society, a Member of Council of the Royal Society and of the British Association, and was President of the Chemical Section for the Ipswich Meeting in 1895. In connection with the British Association he has done much in helping to promote and consolidate the work of the local scientific societies throughout the country, and is Chairman of the Corresponding Societies Committee of the Association. His tastes as a field naturalist led him to take an active part in 1880 in the formation of the Essex Field Club, of which he was the first President, and has since been a warm supporter. In addition to his official addresses and scientific papers published by the Club, he (in conjunction with Mr. W. White) drew up an exhaustive "Report on the East Anglian Earthquake of 1884," which forms the first volume of the Club's Special Memoirs. His experience as a technologist as well as a scientific teacher has enabled Professor Meldola to take an active part, outside his immediate professional duties, in the Technical Education Movement. In 1886 he read a paper on "The Scientific Development of the Coal-Tar Colour Industry" before the Society of Arts, for which he was awarded a silver medal. In 1891 he delivered a course of Cantor Lectures on Photographic Chemistry before the Society of Arts. Professor Meldola's name has long been familiar as a reviewer in the pages of Nature and other journals, although much of his writing in this category is anonymous. For many years he was associated with Land and Water as natural-history correspondent in the time of Frank Buckland and John Keast Lord. He has contributed articles on special subjects to the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," to "Watt's Dictionary of Chemistry" by Morley and Muir, and to "Thorpe's Dictionary of Applied Chemistry." He is the author of a little manual of "Inorganic Chemistry," Murby, 1874; the "Chemistry of Photography," Macmillan, 1889; and "Coal, and what we get from it," published by the S.P.C.K. in 1891. Prof. Meldola has acted as an Examiner for the University of Cambridge. He was the recipient of a Jubilee Medal from the Queen in 1897. Professor Meldola married, in 1866, Ella Frederica, daughter of Dr. Maurice Davis, J.P. Permanent address: 6 Brunswick Square, W.C.

MELDRUM, Charles, C.M.G., LL.D., F.R.S., was educated at Aberdeen University, and entered the Bombay Educational Department in 1846. He was appointed Professor of Mathematics at the Royal College, Mauritius, in 1848, was in 1851 Secretary and one of the Founders of the Meteorological Society of that colony, and in 1862 was appointed Government Meteorological Observer and in 1875 Director of the Royal Alfred Observatory. In 1876 he was elected F.R.S. For ten years he was Member of Council of the Government of Mauritius. He is an authority on sun-spots and rainfall, and these form the subject-matter of several reports made by him to the British Association and to Nature. Address: 25 South Parade, Southsea.

MÉLINE, M., French statesman, was born in the Vosges in 1838. After a distinguished career as a student he was called to the Paris Bar, and espoused journalism as a writer for the Opposition newspapers under the Empire. He entered the Chamber in 1876, and held the portfolio of Minister of Agriculture in the Ferry Cabinet from 1883 to 1885. He was elected President of the Chamber in 1889, and became best known as a Protectionist leader, and by taking a prominent part in opposing the income-tax scheme of the Bourgeois Ministry. In 1896, on the fall of M. Bourgeois, M. Méline succeeded, after several vain attempts by other statesmen, in forming a Cabinet composed wholly of Moderates. The Ministry's declaration of policy expressed a desire to re-establish the indispensable harmony of the two Houses, promised fiscal reforms, agricultural legislation, and announced that the various labour bills would be at once pushed forward. During 1896 M. Méline received a deputation on tariffs, and stated his views with regard to Agricultural Depression, Free Trade and Protection, Bimetallism, Sugar Bounties, and on Rentes Taxation. In October 1897 the Premier made an important statement on his policy, which he defined as being "neither revolution nor reaction." "The best way," he said, "of combating Socialism was to do all that was practicable for the amelioration of the lot of the masses, who would soon judge between empty flatterers and sincere friends." On the General Elections, which were held on Sunday, May 9, 1898, M. Méline's Government was returned by a majority of from 12 to 15, but this support was anything but certain, as was shown by the narrow election to the temporary Presidency of M. Deschanel (q.v.), the Government's nominee. We cannot enter here into the Dreyfus imbroglio, in which the Cabinet became involved, as so many points were thereby raised, but suffice it to say that during his whole period of office the War Minister, General Billot (q.v.), supported the action of his predecessor, General Mercier, and refused to allow the case to be re-opened. The Government was short-lived, for soon after the inaugural address of M. Deschanel, who had previously been definitely elected Vice-President of the Chamber of Deputies, M. Méline resigned office, notwithstanding the urgent representations which the President made against that decision. After some delay M. Brisson (q.v.) succeeded in the task of forming a combination of a distinctly Radical tinge.

MELLOR, Right Hon. John William, M.P., D.L., Q.C., is the eldest son of the late Right Hon. Sir J. Mellor, and was born on July 26, 1835. He completed his education at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and in 1857, when he took his B.A. degree, was eighth Senior Optime (M.A. 1860). In 1860 he was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, and went on the Midland Circuit. He took silk in 1875, and became a Bencher in 1877. He was Recorder of Grantham from 1872 to 1874, which he subsequently represented in Parliament from 1880 to 1886; the latter year became Judge-Advocate-General. He was sworn of the Privy Council in the same year. In July 1882 he was elected Member of Parliament for the Gladstonian Liberal interest for the Sowerby Division of Yorkshire, in 1885 was appointed Chairman of Committees of the House of Commons, and subsequently, until 1895, presided over many of the contentious discussions which arose out of the Home Rule Bill debates. In 1895 he was re-elected Liberal Member for the Sowerby Division of Yorkshire. He is a J.P. and D.L. for the county of Somerset, and J.P. for Devon. He married, in 1881, Caroline, daughter of the late Charles Paget, M.P., of Ruddington Grange, Notts. Addresses: 68 St. George's Square, S.W.; Culmhead, Pitminster, Somerset.

MELVILLE, George Wallace, American naval officer, was born in New York City, Jan. 10, 1841. He was educated in his native city, and entered the United States Navy as third assistant-engineer in July 1861, with rank of midshipman, and has passed through all the intermediate grades to that of Chief Engineer, with the rank of Lieut.-Commander, which he attained in 1881. He was engineer of the Jeannette, which sailed from San Francisco, July 8, 1879, under command of Lieutenant George W. de Long, on a voyage of polar exploration. After the sinking of the Jeannette, on June 13, 1881, Engineer Melville accompanied De Long over the ice to Bennett Island, and, after the party had divided, he commanded one of the Jeannette's boats on the passage to one of the mouths of the Lena delta, which was reached Sept. 17, 1881. He now searched for Lieutenant de Long and his party, and obtained from the natives some of his records; in the following spring he explored the delta thoroughly for traces of the missing party, and about the end of March the remains of de Long and his eleven companions were found. On his return to the United States he was appointed Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineers with the rank of Commodore, Aug. 8, 1887, and Engineer-in-Chief of the U.S. Navy. He published "In the Lena Delta," 1885; and has had an important part in constructing the modernised U.S. Navy.

MENDELÉEFF, Dmitri Ivanovich, Russian chemist, was born at Tobolsk, Feb. 7, 1834. He was educated at the Pedagogic Institute at St. Petersburg, and then came to Paris, where he was one of the most brilliant pupils of Wurtz. He then studied the chemical properties of petroleum in the mines of Caucasia and ylvania. In 1866 he became Professor of Chemistry in the University of Petersburg. He may be said to have a wide reputation, and to be familiar with every section of chemical science; he is best known by his law of chemical combination at his name is chiefly known. This led to the discovery of more than one chemical element. His "Principles of Chemistry" was published in Russian in 1860, and was translated into English in 1862. He is a D.C.L. of the University of Oxford, and a member of the Académie des Sciences, of Paris. Address: University of Petersburg.

MENDÈS, Catulle, a French author, born at Bordeaux on May 22, 1841. When he established in Paris La Revue littéraire, in which he published "Le d'une Nuit," a drama in verse, he resulted in the author being condemned to two months' imprisonment and a fine of 500 francs, although he was still a young man. At that time he belonged to the group of artistic poets called "Les Symbolistes," whose aim was the careful choice of words and the introduction of various rhythmical innovations. His works include: "Philomèle," a volume of poems, 1864; "Hesperus," a poem, 1865; "La Colère d'un Franc-tireur," 1866; "Lettre Guerrière," 1871; "Contes," 1872; "Les Soirs Moroses," 1873; "Le d'un Minuit" (poésies), 1872, republished in 1876 under the title of "Poésies"; 11 novels, "Les Folies Amoureuses," 1874; "Les Mères Ennemies," 1880; "La d'Adventure," 1881, in conjunction with Lesclide; "Le Rose et le Noir," 1882; "Le Roi vierge," "Zo' har," "La d'ore Maitresse," reckoned his masterpiece in realistic fiction; "Méphisto," 1890; "Le Chemin du Cœur," 1891, and various pieces for the theatre, as "Le Capitaine Fracasse," 1870, Gauthier's romance; "Le Châti-ment," 1887; and "Fiammetta," 1889. In 1898 Madame Bernhardt produced a production of "Medea" at the Renaissance.

M. Mendès has been described as a good second in almost every department of literature, but first in none. In style he has written after the manner of Victor Hugo, Le Conte de Lisle, Théodore de Banville, and Verlaine, and only just falls below the level of each of these masters. His short stories are only inferior to those of the Symbolists, although a good deal better; his realistic novels only below those of Zola, and his society scandals only below those of Maupassant. He turns out an enormous quantity of work yearly. On Dec. 6, 1898, his play "Fiammetta" was produced with great success at the Odéon. It had previously been seen at Antoine's Théâtre Libre, and had been refused by the Français. In 1866 he married Mlle. Judith Gautier, from whom he has since been legally separated as the result of a somewhat famous trial. Address: 44 Rue Lafayette, Paris.

MENELEK II., Emperor of Abyssinia and King of Shoa, G.C.M.G., was born in 1843. He succeeded to the throne on the death of Johannes II., with whom he had been constantly at war. In 1877, as King of Shoa, Menelek was totally defeated in a great battle, and it was currently reported that he had been killed by Johannes. Upon the death of the latter in 1889, Menelek assumed the chief power in Abyssinia, and was crowned in November as Negus Negusti, or King of Kings in Ethiopia. For some time after his accession many attempts were made by various chiefs to overthrow him, but he defeated all their efforts. In the first year of his reign Menelek concluded a treaty with Humbert, King of Italy, which practically placed Abyssinia under the protection of the Italians, who, at the same time, agreed to lend him 4,000,000 francs. In consequence of disputes in connection with this treaty, known as the Ucciali Treaty, and the continual encroachments of the Italians, especially from the direction of Erythrea, war broke out in 1895. Menelek raised a large army and inflicted a serious reverse upon the advance-guard of the Italian forces at Ambalagi in December. Many minor engagements followed, with the result that the Negus made propositions for peace, which, however, the Italian Government declared were such as they could not accept. They included a demand for the retirement of the Italians from positions recently occupied by them, and a modification in the Treaty of Ucciali. On Feb. 24, 1896, Menelek concentrated his forces near Adowa, where he was at once pursued by the Italian troops under the command of General Baratieri (q.v.). A general advance upon the Abyssinian position was made on the 29th, the Italians attacking in three columns; but the difficulties of the ground enabled Menelek to concentrate his forces on the left column, and the other columns being unable, owing to the hills and to bad generalship, to succour it, a terrible defeat was sustained by the whole force. The Italians lost in killed and wounded over 7000 officers and men. After this reverse, which caused the fall of the Italian Ministry under Crispi, the idea of an Italian Protectorate over the country was abandoned, and in May General Valles was appointed with full powers to treat with the Emperor Menelek for the settlement of all questions at issue between Italy and Abyssinia, with the result that a treaty was signed recognising the absolute independence of the latter country. The defeat inflicted by the Abyssinian monarch upon a European Power greatly increased his prestige, and he at once renewed his negotiations with France, which had lapsed since 1891, in which year he had presented President Carnot with a decoration and two tame lions. He also sent a mission to St. Petersburg to obtain the Czar's sympathy for the Abyssinian Christians. In February 1897 he concluded a commercial treaty with the French, who despatched a Mission under M. Lagarde to Menelek in the following March. The Mission was very cordially received. In the early part of 1898 a Mission under Sir Rennell Rodd was sent to Abyssinia to negotiate a treaty between Menelek and England, with very successful results. The British Mission met with a handsome reception, 20,000 warriors being present and several Europeans, among whom were Colonel Léontieff, the head of a Russian mission, and Prince Henri d'Orléans, who were endeavouring to induce Menelek to thwart British efforts in the Soudan. By a curious coincidence the average height of the officials composing the British Mission was over 6 feet, and their striking appearance made a great impression. The more important points of the treaty, which was ratified by the Queen in July, were the settlement of the frontiers of the British Somali Protectorate; the keeping open to British commerce the caravan route between Zeila and Harar, and the prevention of the transit through Abyssinia of arms and ammunition to the Mahdists, whom Menelek declared to be the enemies of his country. In a letter to the Queen he expressed the following sentiment: "The treaty of peace which is now between your Government and our Government, we hope it will increase in firmness and last for ever." In April Lieutenant Harrington was sent to the Emperor's capital as Diplomatic Agent. During October 1898 it was reported that Ras Mangascia, Governor of Tigre, had shown signs of rebellion against Menelek's supreme authority. A large expedition was sent against the Ras, but upon negotiations being opened the difficulty was amicably arranged. The etiquette of the Abyssinian Court is very minute in its regulations, and among other usages distasteful to Europeans is that of kissing the ground on approaching the royal presence. Menelek, however, is careful not to offend foreign susceptibilities, and he never requires a stranger to go through any ceremony to which he objects. He is gifted with a capacious memory, and is very energetic, rising at 3 A.M., and devoting the first hour of the day to prayer. From four to six he works with his grand-son who is practically his only minister, and publicly administers justice and settles all the affairs of State personally. He is very kind to his people and to all. Since his accession to the throne he has done much to consolidate the empire and has very largely promoted commerce. Menelek claims to be a direct descendant of Solomon by the Queen of Sheba, a descent is recorded on the coins he had struck at the Paris mint some years ago. The large silver piece bears the name of Menelek, with the inscription "Kings of Ethiopia, 1887." The reverse has a lion crowned and the words "Lion of the House of Judah conquered," this being the motto of the House of David. On the edge of the coins are the words, "Ethiopia strengthens her hands to God alone." His Queen Taitou.

MENPES, Mortimer, artist, born in South Australia, whence at the age of nineteen, he came to London with his father. He chose the career of an artist and studied at South Kensington under Poynter and Sparkes, winning the first prize for the best drawing done at the English art school. He then spent three years in picturesque Britain. In 1880 exhibited etchings at the Royal Academy, which were much praised for their excellence. In 1885 he became a member of the Society of British Artists and in 1887 went out to Japan, returning with that unique collection of brilliant Japanese views for which he is famous. These were exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1888. Mr. Mortimer also twice visited India, and has exhibited in Venice, exhibiting the results of his artistic studies and appreciations at notable exhibitions, held respectively in 1891 and 1892. In the Academy he exhibited, in the Black and White Room, "Osaka, Japan," and in 1899 a water-colour and three drawings in black and white. He has written in the Magazine of Art. Address: 10, Langham Gardens, S.W.1.

MENZEL, Adolf Friedrich, German historical painter, born Dec. 8, 1815, at Breslau, Prussia, and in 1830 with his parents to Berlin. He studied art at the Academy of Berlin. After his father's death he had to support himself and first began by selling his pencil drawings. In 1836 he made his first attempt in oil painting, "The Players," followed by several other pictures; but from 1839 to 1842 he devoted himself to the illustrations to Kugler's "History of Frederick the Great." Marius Jean Antonin, a or, was born at Toulouse, He was a pupil of Falguère and studied at the École ts. In 1868 he obtained tome, and the same year edallion at the Salon. In om Rome a plaster statue d "Delilah," a bust; and in /ictis," a group in bronze, a attention, and was pur- Government. "The Genius intended for the grand e Louvre, was exhibited plaster model of the bas- tomb of Michelet in Père 1879; and a statue of 1880. Besides these he has is portrait busts, including of medallions. M. Mercié was decorated with the Legion of Honour in 1874, and made a Commander in 1889. In 1887 the Institute voted him their biennial prize of 20,000 francs, and the Academy of Fine Arts elected him one of their members in 1891. He is Professor of Drawing and Sculpture at the Beaux-Arts. His Paris address is 15 Avenue de l'Observatoire.

MERCIER, Auguste, French general, and former Minister of War, was born at Arras, Dec. 8, 1833. He entered the École Polytechnique in 1852, and came out second two years after. He entered the Artillery, and by successive promotions attained the rank of General of Division in 1889. He was distinguished during the campaign of Mexico for his bravery at the siege of Puebla, for which he was decorated with the Legion of Honour. During the Franco-Prussian War he took part in the battles round Metz, and was made prisoner after the capitulation of that city. After the conclusion of peace he took part in the battles of the Communards, and subsequently was appointed to the command of the artillery at Angoulême. In 1888 M. de Freycinet called him to the War Office, and in 1889 he took a conspicuous part in the manœuvres around Beauvais. Mercier being appointed to the command of the 18th Corps d'Armée at Bordeaux in 1893, the Prime Minister, M. Casimir-Perier, offered him the Ministry of War in December of the same year, which he accepted, and kept throughout the Dupuy Ministry. His tenure of office was distinguished for indefatigable work and firm decision. This was noted in his attitude with regard to M. Mirman, who was, at one and the same time, a soldier and a member of Parliament. He absolutely refused to treat him differently to other soldiers. But a much more famous case was that of Captain Dreyfus, in which he asserted the absolute guilt of the accused, and in spite of all outside influence retained his obstinate opinion and dragged him before the Council of War, which condemned him to life-long penal servitude and to public degradation from his rank (Dec. 22, 1894). On the fall of the Dupuy Cabinet in January 1895 General Mercier was appointed to the command of the 4th Corps d'Armée at Le Mans, in place of General Zurlinden. In 1895 he was promoted a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour.

MEREDITH, George, novelist and poet, born in Hampshire on Feb. 12, 1828, and educated partly in Germany, was brought up to the law, which he quitted for literature. He has written "Poems," 1851; "The Shaving of Shagpat, an Arabian Entertainment," a burlesque prose poem, 1855; "Farina, a Legend of Cologne," 1857; "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel," a philosophical novel, bearing upon the more serious questions of moral education, 1859; "Evan Harrington," a serial tale of modern life, first printed in Once a Week, and republished in a separate form, 1861; "Modern Love: Poems and Ballads," 1862; "Emilia in England," 1864; "Rhoda Fleming," 1865; "Vittoria," 1866; "The Adventures of Harry Richmond," 1871; "The Egoist," a novel, 3 vols., 1879; "The Tragic Comedians," 2 vols., 1881, a novel founded on the life and tragic fate of Ferdinand Lassalle, the German Socialist; "Poems and Lyrics of the Joy of Earth," 1883; "Diann of the Crossways," 1885; "Ballads and Poems of Tragic Life," 1887; and "A Reading of Earth," 1888. His novel, "One of Our Conquerors," was published in the Fortnightly Review in 1890, and "Lord Ormont and his Ancestors," appeared in the summer of 1894. This was followed in 1895 by "The Aunt's Marriage," which is supposed to introduce us here to the late Robert Louis Stevenson; "The Case of General Opie and Lady Cowper," "The Tale of Chloe," and "The House on the Bench"; and in 1897 by "Comedy, and the Uses of the Comic Spirit," recently translated into French by M. Henry Davray. In 1892 appeared the "Empty Purse," a volume of poems, and in the autumn of that year Mr. Meredith was elected President of the Incorporated Society of Authors in succession to Lord Tennyson. A style of much obscurity and an excess of epigram have long prevented Mr. Meredith's works from becoming popular with the average novel-reading public, but among the cultured and critical few he has always been regarded as the first of our living novelists. Strong expression was given to this sentiment of admiration on Feb. 12, 1898, when he completed his seventieth year, and was presented with a letter of congratulation signed by thirty of the first of English men and women of letters. The letter ran as follows: "Some comrades in letters who have long valued your work send you a cordial greeting upon your seventieth birthday. You have attained the first rank in literature after many years of inadequate recognition. From first to last you have been true to yourself, and have always aimed at the highest mark. We are rejoiced to know that merits once perceived by only a few are now appreciated by a wide and steadily growing circle. We wish you many years of life, during which you may continue to do good work, cheered by the consciousness of good work already achieved, and encouraged by the prospect of a hearty welcome from sympathetic readers." Address: 11, St. John's Surrey.

MERIVALE Herman, Esq. of the late Herman Merivale, Esq. Under-Secretary of State for India, and afterwards for India, was born in London, Jan. 27, 1839, at Harrow and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1861. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1864, and served in the Western Circuit and Eastern Circuit. He afterwards practised in the Council on Indian Affairs. He served on the Board of Directors of the late Lord Beaconsfield's Education Commission in North Wales. From 1871 to 1875 he was editor of the Annual Register, and owing to ill-health, was obliged to give up the legal profession. Since then he has occupied himself with literature for a time with politics. MEURICE, François Paul, French novelist and dramatist, and brother of the famous jeweller, was born at Paris in February 1820. He had a brilliant career at the Collège Charlemagne, and one of its most momentous episodes was a resolve to play Victor Hugo's then new drama, "Hernani," at the annual school festival. The late Auguste Vacquerie and himself went as delegates to the poet to beg for permission to play his drama. The interview made such an impression on Meurice that ever afterwards he remained the fidus Achates of the great man, and more or less sacrificed his future to serve him. In 1842 his first play, "Falstaff," in collaboration with Gautier and Vacquerie, was represented at the Théâtre Français, and in 1843, a one-act piece, equally from Shakespeare, entitled "Le Cap Paroles," and an imitation of the "Oedipus at Colonus" of Sophocles. His best collaboration, however, is that with Vacquerie of a translation of "Hamlet," which is still the best acting version of the play in French. In 1848 he became editor of the Événement, Hugo's democratic journal, and in 1851 he was imprisoned six months for a famous article by Victor Hugo on the death penalty, which appeared in that journal. In 1852 he founded, with others, the Rapport, a journal of the Hugo family, and he contributed chiefly the literary and dramatic criticisms. To him, as Victor Hugo intrusted the publication of the definitive edition of his works, which appeared from 1880 to 1885, in 46 volumes. In addition to the plays named above, he has written, "Fanfan la Tulipe," "Les Beaux Messieurs de Bois-Doré," "La Brésilienne," "Quatre Vingt-huit," 1881; "Le Songe d'une Nuit d'été," after Shakespeare, which was represented at the Odéon in 1886. In October 1886 M. Meurice achieved a great success by producing at the Théâtre Français a play called "Struensée," which was an unaided composition of his play for the theatre, although he was nearly seventy at the time. His Paris address is 10, rue Fortuny.

MILAN (OBRENOVITCH) I., ex- King of Servia, grandson of Ephraim Obrenovitch, brother of Milos, and conse- quently second cousin of Prince Michael, who is noticed in previous editions of this work, was born Aug. 10, 1854, at Jassy, of a Moldavian mother, who had married the only son of Prince Ephraim. He was adopted by Prince Michael, who had no children by his marriage with Julia Hunyadi, and was sent by him, in 1864, to Paris to be educated at the Lycée Louis- le-Grand. The youth's studies were in- terrupted by the events of 1868, and the assassination of Michael Obrenovitch. Hastening to Servia, he was proclaimed Prince in July of that year, the govern- ment of the country being entrusted, during his minority, to a Council of Regency, consisting of Messrs. Blaznavatz, Ristics, and Garrilovics, three able and patriotic men, who continued the liberal and reforming policy begun by Michael III. Their regency terminated with the coronation of Prince Milan IV.; but M. Ristics continued to possess the confidence of the Prince, who was only eighteen years of age when he was crowned in Belgrade cathedral, Aug. 22, 1872. On Jan. 12, 1876, Prince Milan issued a proclamation standing that the intervention in the Turkish provinces has found its way to the frontier of Serbia and along the whole Balkan peninsula as a band of wild and unbridled anarchy place the people under arms. Shortly afterwards there came the news which may be called a threatening letter to the Great Powers, and then he formally proclaimed June 30 that he intended to join his arms to those of Bosnia and Herzegovina in order to secure the liberation of the Slavonic Christians from the yoke of the Porte. On July 2 a violent declaration of war was sent by the Prince of Serbia and the Hospodar of Montenegro to the Turkish Government, their troops crossing the frontier at the same time. The Prince departed from Belgrade July 14 to assume the command of the Serbian troops in the field, but he soon returned to his capital August 12, and appointed the Russian general, Tchernayeff, to the command of the Serbian forces. On September 1, an important battle under the walls of Alexinatz resulted in the complete defeat of the Serbian army. The Great Powers then intervened, but the negotiations for the suspension of hostilities were delayed by an ill-adviced step which Prince Milan, at the instigation of General Tchernayeff, was induced to take. On September 16 he was proclaimed King of Serbia at Deligrad, although upon the general expression of disapproval which followed, his Highness appeared disposed to disclaim any active share in the performance. War broke out again, and the Serbian army, though largely reinforced by Russian volunteers—men as well as officers—was ignominiously beaten. On Oct. 31, the Turks captured the town of Alexinatz, and on the following day Deligrad was captured, thus leaving the road to Belgrade completely open. A peace was then concluded between Turkey and Serbia on favourable terms to the latter. When, however, Russia made war upon Turkey, Prince Milan saw an opportunity of gaining complete independence, and a proclamation of the Servian Government, dated Dec. 14, 1877, made known that the Servian army was immediately to cross the Turkish frontier, which they did on the following day, under the command of Generals Lesjanin and Benitzki. After the close of the war the independence of Serbia was recognised, and its boundaries defined by the Treaty of Berlin (July 13, 1878). Prince Milan married, Oct. 17, 1875, Natalie, daughter of the late Russian Colonel Keschko, by his wife Pulcheria, Princess of Stourdza. Serbia was proclaimed a kingdom under King Milan I., on March 6, 1882. On October 23, in that year, as the King and Queen were entering the cathedral of Belgrade, Milan, the widow of Lieut.-Colonel Vuk who had been shot for a long solitary five years preceding the Majesty, missing him and found the thing a woman who was the the attempted assassination was just after the King's return from a whither he had gone to visit the ruler of Bulgaria. Uninterrupted friendly intercourse did not last long; King Milan declaring war Prince Alexander on the ground of the unlawful union of Bulgaria and Rumania. His army had some success, but within a fortnight was back, defeated and crossed the Servian frontier. Prince Alexander behaved like a hero; but it is not that King Milan ever exposed himself under fire. King Milan has a Crown Prince Alexander, born Oct. 1874 in whose favour he abjured March 6, 1889, in consequence of troubles arising out of his quarrel with Queen Natalie. In January 1894 that he had become reconciled to Natalie caused much rejoicing. The young King of Serbia recalled Milan to Belgrade in January 1894 to him govern his subjects, who, for whole of that year, were torn by dissensions. Milan, despite his age, to the contrary, arrived at Belgrade January 21. In March the divorce between the ex-King and his wife was annulled, and in April Alexander restored his father and mother, in case, to their constitutional members of the royal house. A law of Cassation, on May 17, declared the divorce null and void, but on May 17 the Court itself was done away with the Constitution of 1888 suspended of that of 1869.

MILES. Major-General Appleton. American soldier, born Westminister, Mass., Aug. 8, 1838. Received an academic education, engaged in business when the war broke out. Entering the army as lieutenant of volunteers, he rose to full rank of Major-General of volunteers during its progress, and at its close made a Colonel in the regular army. In 1867 he was breveted Major-General and Major-General for shown on battle-fields during the war. Since the close of the war he has been engaged in a number of expeditions with the Indians. He received the rank of Brigadier-General in 1881 on the death of General Crook, and was made a Major-General in the the highest grade in the American Army. He is at present (1898) Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States and accompanied the forces which landed on the island of Porto Rico in the summer of 1898.

MILLER, "Joaquin," a Scottish poet, whose real name is Cincinnatus Heine Miller, was born in Nov. 10, 1842. When he was a child his father emigrated to America and hence the boy went three years to try his fortune in California. After a wandering life of seven years, he returned home and entered a lawyer's office in Eugene, Oregon, having been severely wounded in the Indian wars. The next year he was an expressman in the gold-mining districts of California, which he left to take charge of the Oregon Register, a weekly newspaper. In 1863 he opened a law office in Astoria, City, Oregon. Hostile Indians attacked the new city, and he led an expedition against them into their own territory, but after a long and bloody fight he was finally beaten back, and died dead on the field. From 1866 he served as county judge of Clatsop County, and during this time began to write his poems. He published first a series of paper covers called "Specimens," and next a volume with the title "Poems, et al." In 1870 he went to Europe where he published in the following years "Songs of the Sierras," and "Poems." In 1873 appeared "The Sun Lands," and a prose work titled "Life among the Modocs: A History." His later works are "A Pioneer in the Desert," 1875; "First Songs of the Sierras," 1875 (republished under the title of "The Danites in the Sierras"); "The One Fair Woman," 1876; "The Baroness of N.Y.," 1877; "Songs of the Sunway Lands," 1878; "Songs of the Sierras," 1878; "Shadows of Shasta," 1879; "Memories and Rime," 1884; and "The Danites." He is the author of several highly dramatic dramatizations of his own life, among which "The Danites," "The Pioneer Man," "Mexico," "'49," and "The Pioneer" are more or less popular. He went to Klondyke in 1897, and has founded a Utopian social community there.

LEVOYE, Lucien, French writer and politician, was born at Paris in 1850. His grandfather was a member of the "Chute des Feuilles," and his father was a legal luminary of France. He was educated for the Law, and held the magistrature from 1877 to 1890, then took to journalism, making foreign politics his speciality; but it was not till the rise of Boulangism that he became at all well known. He became one of General Boulanger's most devoted adherents, speaking and writing with equal vigour on his side. In the 1889 election at Amiens he defeated the ex-Premier, M. Goblet, and remained a Boulangist after the death of his chief. He is well known in the Chamber as one of the most vigorous movers of "interpellations" against whatever Government happens to be in power. During the Panama scandals he was specially violent against the directors. He is particularly hostile to Great Britain in all his political articles, which are of an extreme Chauvinistic tone, and were noticeable during the Fashoda imbroglio of 1898. His Paris address is 10 Avenue Bugeaud.

MILLS, Professor Edmund James, D.Sc., F.R.S., F.I.C., F.C.S., son of Charles Frederick and Mary Anne Mills, and a lineal descendant of the Osmonds of Lowmandale (Upplowman, Devonshire), was born in London, on Dec. 8, 1840. When he was a year old his parents removed to Cheltenham, and it was at the ancient Grammar School of that town that he received his early education, which was partly classical and partly scientific in character. It was doubtless at this school that he imbibed his strong predilection for chemistry. In 1858 he was elected to a provincial scholarship at the Royal School of Mines, London, where he studied his favourite science under the late Prof. A. W. von Hofmann. In due course (1861) he took the Technical Diploma of the School. In the same year he became assistant to the late Dr. John Stenhouse, F.R.S., for whom he conducted various investigations in connection with organic chemistry. He was appointed in the following year to the newly-established chemical tutorship at Glasgow University, and remained there about three years, teaching and investigating. On his return to London he held an assistantship in the Laboratory of University College, 1866. He next accepted, 1867, the superintendence of the private laboratory of the late Sir Charles Taylor, Bart., where he remained seven years, busy with preparations and original investigations. In 1875 he was appointed to the Chair of Technical Chemistry founded in connection with the then Anderson's University, Glasgow, by the late Mr. James Young, F.R.S., of Kelly; this position he still retains. He took the degree of B.Sc. (first division) Lond. in 1863, and D.Sc. in 1865. At one time he held the post of Assistant Chemical Examiner in the London University. He was elected F.C.S. in 1862; F.R.S. in 1874; was one of the founders of the Institute of Chemistry and of the Physical Society of London; and is a Member of the Athenæum Club. Dr. Mills is the author of a long series of original memoirs, the first of which was published in 1860. Their general drift has been towards the dynamical, rather than the material, aspect of chemistry; and in putting to one side the atomic theory, he has deliberately adopted a position among the minority of living scientists. Of his leading memoirs may be mentioned a group upon Nitro-compounds, and another relating to Statical and Dynamical Ideas in Chemistry; an investigation of Electrostriction and Chemical Repulsion, of the fundamental phenomena of which he has been the discoverer; a theory of boiling-point and melting-point which has led to very simple and accurate mathematical expressions connecting these phenomena with chemical composition; and a theory, equally simple in character, of the formation and numerics of the elementary bodies. As a chemical technologist he has also published a variety of researches clearing up doubtful issues, adducing new points of view, and, in general, demonstrating that chemical technology is a science of measurement. "Destructive Distillation," a little book first published in 1877, is now, in its fourth edition; "Fuel and its Applications" (of which Mr. F. J. Rowan is joint-author), a very exhaustive and copious work, appeared in 1889. In 1867 Dr. Mills married Amelia, daughter of the late Mr. William Burnett, of London, by whom he had sole issue in 1869, Edith Mary, who died in 1884. A volume of poems in his child's memory appeared in 1895. Permanent address: 60 John Street, Glasgow; and Athenæum.

MILNE, John, F.R.S., F.G.S., Hon. Fellow of King's College, London, Order of the Rising Sun, Japan, &c., was born in Liverpool on Dec. 30, 1850, his father being John Milne, of Milnrow, and his mother Emma Twycross, daughter of James Twycross, of Wokingham. He was educated in Rochdale; at the Collegiate College, Liverpool; King's College, London; and at the School of Mines. He is a Fellow of the Geological, Geographical, Physical, and other learned societies in England, and an Honorary or Corresponding Member of several Societies in Europe, and in 1877 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society. For services rendered to the Japanese Government in 1895 he received the Third Class Order of the Rising Sun. After working with mining engineers in Cornwall and Lancashire, Mr. Milne spent a short time at the Mining School in Freiberg, from which he visited mining districts in Central Europe on behalf of Cyrus Field, Sir James Arden, and others, two summers were occupied in collecting information respecting mineral resources in Newfoundland and Labrador was visited, and at Funk Island Milne was successful in finding and bringing to this country one of the largest collections of skeletons of the Great Auk which have hitherto been made. In 1874 he accompanied Dr. Beke's expedition to North Arabia, the objects of which were the verification of certain points in Biblical geography, and to determine the position of Mount Sinai. In 1875 he was engaged as mining engineer and geologist to the Japanese Government. After travelling slowly across Russian Siberia, Mongolia, and some 1000 miles of China, to the mines and other objects of interest on his journey, he reached Japan in 1876. He has given much attention to the study of earthquakes and volcanoes, the results from which have been numerous. In Japan a Seismological Society was established which issued 20 volumes in 1888. A chair of Seismology was founded at the Imperial University of that country, and a bureau to control some 968 earthquake observing stations, and a Geological Committee for the investigation of earthquake and volcanic phenomena. A practical result of this work has been to establish rules and formulæ in connection with construction, the objects of which are to mitigate the effects of earthquakes, and it is satisfactory to note that these have been adopted in Japan and other countries. It having been established that the vibrations resulting from an earthquake originating in any one part of our globe can be recorded at any portion of the same, Mr. Milne, Secretary of a British Association for the Advancement of Science, is now engaged in establishing a system of globe the necessary instrument for making observations. In the Isle of Wight records about seventy earthquakes, some of which have occurred recently. This novel departure in scientific investigation is already throwing light on the physical character of the earth of our globe. By it the foci of such disturbances which sometimes involve telegraph cables, are being located. Generally it promises to add greatly to our knowledge of the globe we live on. He has published: "Earthquake and Seismology," 1888; "The Mineralogy of Japan," 1894; "Crystallography," 1894; about 150 papers on Seismology, Mineralogy, Mining (Transactions of the Seismological Society, British Association Reports, Transactions of the Royal Society). In addition to the countries mentioned, Mr. Milne has visited Iceland,

Kuriel Islands, North Corea,orneo, the Australian Colonies, New Zealand, and various parts of the United States and Canada. Address: de Hill House, Newport, Isle of

MILNER, Sir Alfred, G.C.M.G., Governor of Cape Colony and High Commissioner for South Africa, is the only son of Charles Milner, M.D., of Giessen, and Mary, daughter of Major-General Eady, Governor of the Isle of Wight. He was born in 1854, and was educated in Germany, at King's College, London, and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he matriculated in February 1873. He had a distinguished scholastic career, being a Gold Medalist and Jenkyns Exhibitioner in 1875, and successively Hertford, Craven, and Derby scholar. He obtained a First Class Lit. Hnm. when he took his degree in 1877. He was also elected a Fellow of New College. After his admission to the Bar at the Inner Temple he was for some years engaged in legal work, chiefly as a member of the Pall Mall Gazette. In 1885 he unsuccessfully contested the division in the Liberal interest, and was appointed Private Secretary to the Earl of Salisbury, Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1887, but relinquished that office in 1889 to become Under-Secretary of Finance in Egypt in succession to Elwin Palmer who had been Financial Adviser to the Khedive. Under Lord Cromer he had opportunity for the four years that he held office in Egypt to study the effects of which English influence has produced in that portion of Africa. He resigned his post in the Egyptian service, and upon his return to England was appointed Chairman of the Inland Revenue. In the year 1897 he published his great work, "Egypt," which much increased his reputation and is admittedly the best con-volume upon the subject. In 1897 Sir Alfred Milner was appointed to succeed Lord Rosmead as Governor of the Cape, and at the same time created a G.C.M.G. The appointment was received with universal satisfaction, as it was felt that the judgment and experience which Sir Alfred had shown in the various positions he had occupied made him as a man likely to deal with the questions of South Africa with ability and success. He arrived in Cape Town in May and was very cordially received, and in the following month made a Colonial tour. At the end of June 1899 he met President

Kruger in conference at Bloemfontein, the chief subjects of discussion being the position of the Transvaal Uitlanders.

MILTON, Viscount, William Charles de Mure Wentworth Fitzwilliam, J.P., M.P., was born in Canada in 1872, and is the eldest son of the late Viscount Milton, M.P., and Laura, daughter of the late Lord Charles Beaclerk. He was educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge. Subsequently he became a Lieutenant, and is now Captain in the 4th Battalion of the Oxfordshire Militia Light Infantry. He was Aide-de-Camp to the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viceroy of India, from 1892 to 1893, and has travelled extensively in India. He was returned as Liberal Unionist member for Wakefield in 1895, and is the youngest member of the House of Commons then elected. He hunts his own pack of hounds, is a trustee of the Ascot Grand Stand Fund, and takes considerable interest in mining engineering. He is J.P. for West Yorkshire and co. Wicklow. Lord Milton is next heir to Earl Fitzwilliam. He married, in 1896, Maud Dundas, daughter of the Marquis of Zetland. Addresses: 46 Eaton Square, S.W.; Carnew Castle, Wicklow.

MILVAIN, Thomas, Q.C., LL.M., Chancellor of the County Palatine of Durham and Sudbury, son of the late Henry Milvain, North Elswick Hall, Northumberland, was born on May 4, 1844, and educated at Durham School and at Trinity Hall, Cambridge. He took his degree of LL.B. in 1866, and of LL.M. in 1873, and was called to the Bar in June 1869. He joined the Northern Circuit in 1870, and when that was divided in 1876, elected to go the North-Eastern Circuit, of which he is now one of the leaders. He was made a Queen's Counsel in 1888. At the General Election of 1885 he succeeded in gaining the representation of the City of Durham in the Conservative interest, and was till the next General Election the only Conservative representative of the county in Parliament. He again sat for the same constituency from 1886 till 1892, when he was defeated. In 1892 he was appointed Recorder of Bradford, and also Chancellor of the County Palatine of Durham and Sudbury. While in Parliament in 1889 he introduced the Corporal Punishment Bill, which passed its second reading by a majority of 194 against 126, but owing to the pressure of other business could not be further proceeded with. He was afterwards more successful with a Bill for remedying the grave injustice of the law of slander in reference to imputations on the chastity of women, when he succeeded in obtaining the passing of the Slander of Women Act, 1881. He seconded the Address to the Throne in 1892. He unsuccessfully contested Cockermouth in 1895. He married Mary, third daughter of John Henderson, Durham. Addresses: 3 Plowden Buildings, Temple, E.C.; 17 Rutland Gate, S.W.; and East Bolton, Alnwick.

MINTO, Earl of, Gilbert John Murray Kynynmond Elliot, G.C.M.G., D.L., J.P., was born on July 9, 1845, and is the son of the 3rd Earl, whom he succeeded in 1891, and Emma, daughter of General Sir Thomas Hislop, Bart., G.C.B. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A.), and entered the Scots Guards in 1867, retiring in 1870 with the rank of Lieutenant. He was for ten years Brigadier-General in command of the South of Scotland Infantry (1888-98), and has had a varied and distinguished military career, having served with the Turkish army in 1877, and in the Afghan war in 1879. In 1881 he was Private Secretary to General Lord Roberts at the Cape, and from 1883 to 1885 Military Secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, the Marquis of Lansdowne. In the North-West Canadian Rebellion of 1885 he was Chief of Staff. In August 1898 he was appointed to succeed the Earl of Aberdeen as Governor-General of Canada, and started to take up his new duties in November 1898, when also he was created K.C.M.G., and later G.M.C.G. In April 1899 he received the honour of the Hon. LL.D. of Queen's University, Kingston. He married, in 1883, Mary, daughter of General the Hon. Charles Grey. Home addresses: 6 Audley Square, S.W., and Minto Castle, Hawick.

MIRANDA, Countess de, née Christina Nilsson, is the daughter of a labouring man, and was born at Wederslöff, near Wexiö, in Sweden, Aug. 3, 1843. At an early age she evinced great taste for music. She became quite proficient on the violin, learned the flute, and attended fairs and other places of public resort, at which she sang, accompanying herself on the violin. While performing in this manner at a fair at Ljungby, in June 1857, her extraordinary powers attracted the attention of Mr. F. G. Tornérhjelm, a gentleman of influence, who rescued her from her vagrant life, and placed her at school first at Halmstad, and afterwards at Stockholm, where she was instructed by M. Franz Berwald. She made her first appearance at Stockholm in 1860, went to Paris, continued her musical education under Masset and Wurtel, and came out at the Théâtre Lyrique, October 27, as Violetta "Traviata," with such success that she was engaged for three years. She made her first appearance in London at Majesty's Theatre in 1867, proving a great operatic attraction at that establishment during the season, and since performed here with constant increasing success. She paid a visit to the United States (1870), where, in less than a year, she is said to have cleared £30,000. After a Transatlantic trip of two years she reappeared at the Lane Theatre, May 28, 1872, in "Traviata." After this date she occasionally made her appearance for periods at Brussels and St. Petersburg. She was married at Westminster Aug. 27, 1872, to M. Auguste Rostand, the son of an eminent French musician. He died at Paris, Feb. 22, 1882. In 1887 she married, in Paris, Count Miranda.

MIRBEAU, Octave, French dramatist, was born at Trévirères, February 1, 1826, and early in life took to journalism, coming in 1874 the dramatic critic of L'Ordre. After a short experience in administrative life he returned to journalism in 1877, writing for the Revue and the Figaro. A letter that he wrote in the latter in 1882, violently opposing the decoration of actors, gave rise to a heated discussion. Soon after he published two short-lived newspapers, Paris and Les Grimaces, in which he opposed the Republic with much violence, and the methods of Rochefort during the Commune. This led to his fighting duels. He has been a contributor to nearly all the higher-class newspapers of Paris, to which he has contributed short stories and artistic criticisms. His letters on the decoration of actors and M. Coquelin's reply, have been published under the title of "Le Comédien." Other works of his are: "Lettre à Chaumiére," 1886; "Le Calvaire," 1887, and "Sébastien Roch," 1890.

MITCHELL, Sir Charles Hugh, G.C.M.G., Governor of the Straits Settlements, High Commissioner of the Malay Peninsula, was born in 1836, and is the eldest son of Hugh Mitchell. He was educated at the Royal Naval School, and entered the Marines in 1852. During the Crimean war he was attached to the Baltic fleet and was mentioned in despatches. He commanded the rocket detachment at the bombardment of Sveaborg. He was Colonial Secretary of British Hong Kong in 1868; Colonial Secretary of Natal in 1870, acting as Colonial Commandant a ring the Zulu War; Governor of Fiji; Governor of Natal in 1889; and pointed to his present post in 1893. s: Government House, Singapore.

MITCHELL, Donald Grant, LL.D., born at Norwich, Connecticut, in 1822. He graduated at Yale College, travelled in Europe, and in 1847 edited "Fresh Gleanings, or a New Harvest from the Old Fields of Continental Literature," under the pseudonym of "Iklim." In 1848 he was again in Europe, and wrote, under his former pseudonym, "Battle Summer," 1849. Returning to New York, he published, anonymously, "Lorgnette," a series of satirical sketches of society, 1850. In the same year appeared "The Reveries of a Bachelor," followed in 1851 by "Dream Life." In 1853 he was appointed United States Consul at Venice. Returning to America, he purchased a farm, known as Wood, near Newhaven, Connecticut. He now resides. In 1873 he was United States Commissioner at the Paris Exposition. He has published: "My Farm Wood," 1863; "Wet Days at Edgefield," 1864; "Seven Stories with Basement and Attic," 1864; "Dr. Johns," 1864; "Rural Studies," 1867 (subsequently under the title of "Out of Town"); "About old Story-Tellers," 1867; "Bound Together," 1885; and in 1886 two volumes of "English Lands, and Kings." In 1895 a third volume was published, and in 1897 a fourth volume on the same lines and under the same title. He has also edited (1883) an ethnological "Woodbridge Record." He has been one of the Council of the School of Fine Arts since 1865, and has lectured there and elsewhere on art and art topics. With strong rural sympathies (illustrated by many of his books), he has been associated in an advisory way in the laying out of many public parks and grounds in Newhaven and other places.

MITCHELL, The Hon. Peter, Canadian statesman, was born Jan. 4, 1824, at Newcastle, New Brunswick, and was educated at the same place. He was admitted to the Bar in 1848, and in 1856 was elected a representative for his native province to serve in the Provincial Parliament. After serving for five years he was elected Life Member of the Legislative Council, and was a member of the Executive Government of New Brunswick from 1861 to 1865, when his Government was dissolved on the question of the confederation of the British American provinces. He was three times appointed delegate to the London Conference, and to the Paris Conference, and England, with the view of promoting the construction of the intercolonial railway from Halifax to Quebec, and the confederation of the provinces. In 1865 he formed, in connection with the Hon. R. D. Wilmot, an administration to test the province on confederation, and was appointed President of the Executive Committee. Having dissolved, they were sustained by a majority of thirty-three to eight, and confederation was carried. Mr. Mitchell, who was an ardent advocate of union, did much by his writings and speeches in and out of Parliament to promote British connection. On the organization of the Dominion Government in July 1867, Mr. Mitchell was called to the Cabinet as Minister of Marine and Fisheries, which post he held until the resignation of the Macdonald administration in 1873. He took an active part in the settlement of the Fisheries dispute between the Dominion of Canada and the Government of the United States in 1878, and, later, gave important aid in operations connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway. From 1882 to 1891 he was a representative in the Dominion Parliament for Northumberland County, New Brunswick. In 1897 he was appointed Inspector of Fisheries for the Atlantic Provinces. He bought the Montreal Herald in 1885, and is now President of the Herald Publishing Company. In 1870 he published "A Review of President Grant's Message to the United States Congress relative to the Canadian Fisheries."

MITCHINSON, The Right Rev. John, D.C.L., Master of Pembroke College, Oxford, son of the late John Mitchinson, a master-mariner trading with the East Indies, and Louisa, his wife (who died in 1896, in her 97th year), was born Sept. 23, 1833, and was educated at Durham School, whence, in December 1850, he was elected to a scholarship at Pembroke College, Oxford. There he obtained a first class in Classical Moderations in 1853, a first in Lit. Hum. in 1854, and a first in Natural Science in 1855, when he graduated B.A., proceeding in due course to M.A., which he commuted for B.C.L., and proceeded D.C.L. in 1864. On graduating B.A. he was elected Fellow of his College, and held the fellowship till he was presented in 1881 to the Rectory of Sibstone, in Leicestershire; he was made an Honorary Fellow in 1883. After residing as Fellow for a short time he became an assistant-master in Merchant Taylors' School, and was in 1858 ordained deacon by Bishop Tait in St. Paul's Cathedral, and licensed to the curacy of St. Philip's, Clerkenwell. In 1859 he was appointed head-master of the King's School, Canterbury, and was ordained priest by the Archbishop (Sumner) of Canterbury in the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the Shah of Persia, has had serious and valuable diplomatic experience. He was for about seven years

Persian Consul-General in India, and then afterwards in the same capacity for some time at Baghdad, whence he became Governor of Resht; for the eight years previous to 1890 he was Persian Consul-General at Tiflis (Caucasus), the Shah having, on this promotion, raised him to the highest rank in the empire — namely, "Alia-us-Saltaneh." Address: 30 Ennismore Gardens, S.W.

MOLESWORTH, Sir Guildford Lindsey, K.C.I.E., Consulting Engineer to the Government of India for State Railways. Fellow of the University of Calcutta, Member of the Institution of Civil Engineers. Member of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, is the son of the Rev. John Edward Nassau Molesworth, D.D., vicar of Rochdale, and was born at Millbrook, Hants. on May 3, 1828. He was educated at King's School, Canterbury, and at the College of Civil Engineers, Putney; afterwards he served an apprenticeship to civil engineering under Mr. Dockray on the London and North-Western Railway, and also in mechanical engineering under Sir William Fairbairn at Manchester. Subsequently he was employed in various railway and other engineering works in connection with ironworks in South Wales. In 1852 he was chief assistant-engineer on the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, which he left in order to superintend the construction of buildings and machinery in the Royal Arsenal at Woolwich during the Crimean war. Afterwards he practised as a Consulting Engineer in London for some years. In 1858 the Institution of Civil Engineers awarded to him the Watt Medal and the Manby premium, for a paper read before the Institution on the subject of "Conversion of Wood by Machinery." In 1859 he went out to the Ceylon Railway as Mechanical and Locomotive Engineer, and he was appointed Chief Engineer of the Ceylon Government Railway in 1862; Director-General of the railway in 1865; Director of Public Works in 1867; and Consulting Engineer to the Government of India in 1871. His "Pocket-Book of Engineering Formulæ" passed through six editions in the first year, and is now a standard work in the profession. He originated and was mainly instrumental in introducing the system of Decimal Coinage adopted in Ceylon. His services in the enemy's country with the army in the field in time of war gained for him the Afghan War Medal, as well as the Burma War Medal and clasp, and in 1881 he received the thanks of her Majesty for excellent services rendered during the Afghan War. He retired from the service of the Indian Government in 1889, and represented the Government of India as their delegate in the International Monetary Conference at Brussels. He is the author of various publications, which may be named: "Proposed Establishment of a Decimal Coinage in Ceylon," 1868; and in India, "Reports on Public Works in Ceylon," "Light Railways in Ceylon," "Pettiniog Railway," 1871; "State of India," 1872; "Gauge of Railways in India," 1873; "Graphic Diagrams," "Metrical Tables," 1879; "Dams," 1883; "Madras Harbour," "Iron Manufacture in India," "Establishment of an Engineer's Corps in India," and "Imperial India," 1885; "Text-book of Bimetallism," "Land as Property," "Bimetallism," "The Silver Question," "Abt's System," and "Instincts in Ants," 1886; "Silver and Gold," 1891; and "Indian Coinage," 1894. He was made Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire in 1889, and Knight Commander of the Order in 1894. Sir G. L. Molesworth married Maria Elizabeth, daughter of J. L. Esq., of St. Nicholas Court, The granddaughter of Sir Robert A. Address: The Manor House, Be-

MOLESWORTH, Mrs. Louisa, née Stewart, is of English parentage, and was born in London on May 29, 1839, and partly educated at home. Her father, of whom she was the only child, was Major-General Sir John Molesworth Strath, Scotland, and her mother was Agnes Janet, daughter of John Molesworth of Transy, Fife. She has lived for many years in France and Germany, and began to write very young. Her first novels, of any importance were four novels published under the name of Ennis Graham: "Lover and Husband," "Young and He was Old," "Cousin," and "Not without Thorns." In 1857 she published her first book for children, "Give me a Story." This was succeeded by "Carrots," which attained great popularity, and by other similar volumes. Mrs. Molesworth has also published "Mer Stories for Boys and Girls," "Ghost Stories," and "French Letters." Mrs. Molesworth has contributed to many of the best magazines, and some of her serial stories have appeared as volumes, e.g. "Hoodie," "The Boys and the Girl," "Palace in the Garden," "The Silverthorns," and "The Thistle and the Rose." The following novels by Mrs. Molesworth: "Marrying in Marriage," "That Girl in the Street," "Hathercourt Rectory." Mrs. Molesworth has contributed every month since 1860 to the Child's Palace.

children, and some of these were published as books: "Five Fables," and "Twelve Tiny Tales," "Lettice," "The Abbey by the Little Old Portrait," a Great French Revolution, "Fulfilled," &c. The chief of his latest publications are: "Mother Bunch," "The Spring Morning," "Family Stories of the Saints for the Young," "An Enchanted Garden," 1892; "Blanche: a Story," 1894; "Havercourt Rectory," 1895; "Neighbours," "Stories in Illustration of the Lord's Prayer," 1897; "The Laurel Walk," 1898, besides many others for the young. Address: 15, Paignton, S. Devon; and 15, Onslow Square, S.W.

MOLONEY, Sir Cornelius Alfred, Governor of the Windward Coast, born 1848, and is the son of John P. Moloney, of Limerick. Educated at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, and entered the army. He has held several colonial appointments, which may be mentioned up to the Governor of the Ashanti (1871-73). In the latter year, through the Ashanti Campaign, he became Private Secretary to the Governor of the Gold Coast, and held other appointments in that position until 1879. He then acted as Governor of Lagos, and from 1884 to 1886 as Governor of the Gambia Settlements, returning to Lagos till 1891, when he became Governor of the Cameroons, exchanging for his present post in 1897. He has written a book on the Forestry of West Africa.

MONCKTON, Professor Theodor, German jurist and historian, born 1818, Garding, in Schleswig, Nov. 18, 1818. He is the son of a pastor. He studied at the University of Kiel, and from 1844 till 1847, examining lectures in France and Italy at the Academy. On his return he published numerous articles for the Stein Journal, which he conducted. He was made Professor of Law at Kiel in 1852, at Breslau in 1854, and at Leipzig in 1858. In 1875 he was made Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Leipzig. On June 15, 1878, he was tried at Berlin for having in a speech slandered Prince Bismarck, but was acquitted. The decision was appealed against, and on April 7, 1883, the Imperial High Court of Appeal at Leipzig finally acquitted Professor Mommsen of the charge. He has written numerous learned works, has edited a magnificent work on Latin inscriptions, published by the Prussian Academy of Sciences, and a work on Roman Coins, and is best known in England by his "Earliest Inhabitants of Italy," of which a translation by Robertson appeared in London in 1858, and "History of Rome," translated by W. P. Dickson, and published in London in 1862-63. In 1878 the King of Italy conferred on him the Grand Cross of the Order of SS. Maurice and Lazarus. In 1880 Professor Mommsen's library was destroyed by fire; and a number of his English admirers had the happy idea of presenting him with a selection of classical and historical books, printed in England, to compensate him for some portion of his loss. On the occasion of his seventieth birthday, in November 1887, a congratulatory address, signed by sixty-two Dons, was sent to him by members of the University of Oxford. Other works of his are: "The Oscan and other Italic Dialects," 1845; "Roman Coins," 1850; "Roman Constitutional Law," 1871; and an edition of Justinian's "Pandects," 1866-70. In 1895 he resigned his position as Perpetual Secretary of the Berlin Academy. Address: Charlottenburg.

MONACO, Albert Prince of, was born in Paris, Nov. 13, 1848, and succeeded his father in 1889. He married (1) Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton in 1869 (this marriage was annulled in 1880), and (2) Alice, Dowager-Duchesse de Richelieu, in 1889. His heir is Prince Louis, who was born in 1870, and who is serving in the French army. The Principality consists mainly of the towns of Monaco, Monte Carlo, and Condamine; is Italian in language, but is under the control of France. The sum of £60,000 is paid annually to Prince Albert for the concession to "play" in the Casino; and in March 1896 the Prince granted a fresh concession for fifty years on condition that his annuity should be raised to £80,000. Prince Albert is interested in scientific questions, and has done some useful work in the way of deep-sea dredging, to effect which he has taken several long cruises in his steam yacht.

MONCKTON, Sir John Braddick, F.S.A., Town-Clerk of the City of London, is the son of the late Mr. John Monckton, of Maidstone, and was born in 1832. He received his education at Rugby, and was afterwards admitted a solicitor. He practised the law for a number of years, and in 1873 was elected Town-Clerk of the City. He has been annually reappointed ever since. He has been one of her Majesty's Lieutenants for the City of London, a Grand Warden of Freemasons of England, and Commissioner of Lieutenancy for London. He has been the recipient of various foreign decorations, such as the Belgian Order of Leopold, the Saviour of Greece, the Lion and Sun of Persia, and the Golden Lion of Nassau. He married, in 1858, Maria, daughter of P. B. Long (see MONCKTON, LADY). Address: The Guildhall, E.C.

MONCKTON, Lady, wife of Sir John Braddick Monckton, née Maria Louisa Long, is the second daughter of Peter Bartholomew Long, of Ipswich, and Hannah Justina, daughter of Admiral Richard Falkland. She was educated at home and in Brussels under Mme. Becker, wife of the Protestant German Chaplain of Leopold I. She early showed promise as an amateur actress, and in 1866 appeared on the stage at the Haymarket in "Jim the Penman." She created the part of Jim the Penman's wife, and became famous in the rôle. Subsequently Lady Monckton played in "The Red Lamp," "Captain Swift," "The Crusaders," "The Idler," and other dramas. She was married to Sir John Monckton in 1858. Address: 28 Montpelier Square, Knightsbridge, S.W.

MONCRIEFF, Colonel Sir Alexander, K.C.B., F.R.S., J.P., born in Scotland on April 17, 1829, is the eldest son of the late Captain Matthew Moncrieff of Culfargie, Perthshire, of the Madras Cavalry. He was educated at the High School and at the Universities of Edinburgh and Aberdeen; he entered the office of Messrs. Miller & Grainger, Civil Engineers, in Edinburgh, where he served his time as a Civil Engineer. Colonel Moncrieff did not follow the profession, but obtained a commission in the Forfarshire Artillery Militia, and afterwards in the Edinburgh or 3rd Brigade Scotch Division Royal Artillery, of which he rose to be Colonel Commandant. He travelled extensively in Europe, Asia, Africa, and North America, and received the thanks of her Majesty's Government for topographical information given to the Colonial Office in London at the particular request of the Governor-General of Canada. During the Crimean War Sir Alexander Moncrieff, then a lieutenant in the Forfarshire Militia, went to the seat of war, and received the permission of the Commander-in-Chief to visit the siege works, and to be present at the operations as a Militia officer during the first and second bombardments of Sebastopol. It was then that the idea of the invention with which his name is associated occurred in his mind; but it was some years before it matured into a practical form. The first submitted by Captain Moncrieff was General Sir Richard Dacres, Commandant of the Royal Artillery in Ireland, and in 1857, and it was some years more before the authorities were induced to give it a trial, after which Captain Moncrieff was engaged for eight years in the Arsenal attached to the Department of the Director of Artillery. The Moncrieff System of Mounting Artillery, or protected barbette system, is sometimes called the Disappearing System, because firing the gun recoils into shelter from sight of the enemy, and the energy of recoil is stored up so as to raise the gun into the firing position when loaded. In the first instance this was effected by means of a counterweight; and the position of a moving fulcrum (the first time employed in practical mechanism) enabled the sudden impetus of charge to be utilised without damage to the carriage. Another method by which the same end is accomplished, and which is applicable to sea service and to land service, in which the direct force of gravity is unwieldy or unsuitable for application, is Moncrieff's Hydro-pneumatic system. In this case the recoil of the gun drives down a piston, which forces water into a vessel of compressed air, and the compression of the air stores up the energy of the recoil to raise the gun into the firing position when required. This system is now largely and increasingly used in the British Service, both on land and sea; and it is used also by other Governments. Sir A. Moncrieff is the author of a series of papers, extending over twenty years, illustrating and advocating the importance of increasing the dispersion of heavy guns, and the use of parapets with their superior slopes, en glacis, which are the chief characteristics of his system, and which are said to be the converse of the old system, in which the embrasures were visible, and the works in which they stood were conspicuous. Sir A. Moncrieff is a J.P. for Perthshire, a Member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and was created a C.B. in 1880, and a Knight of the Order of the Rose of Brazil, which was given to him by the Emperor of Brazil in one of his journeys in search of information, he was made acquainted with Sir A. Moncrieff's invention, and recognised its originality and importance. He married Harriet, only daughter of William Rimington Wilson, of Broomfield, Yorkshire. Addresses: 15 Vicars'

The best years of his life he ted to improving and perfecting ss he had taken in hand, and the of thought and energy he has this task are evidenced by the patents he has taken out in connection with the ammonia soda manufacture, and its by-products, among which his process for the production of chlorine from ammonium chloride requires special notice, as it converts the ammonia soda process into a complete cycle, leaving no waste product of any kind. But the fertility of his inventive faculty has been by no means exhausted by his work in this direction. He has made and patented many inventions of great scientific and commercial importance in allied and other branches of applied Chemistry. From an early date in his technical career, Mr.

Mond's attention has been called to the great problems of the economical consumption of coal, and also of the recovery of ammonia from nitrogenous substances.
Since 1883 he has taken out a number of patents for methods and appliances, which combine these two problems by utilising the coal in the form of gas, and recovering at the same time the nitrogen contained in it in the form of ammonia. The results of his work in this direction formed the subject in the year 1889 of his presidential address to the Society of Chemical Industry, which aroused considerable public interest at the time. Since then Mr. Mond has effected further important improvements in the solution of these problems, and has given particular attention to the use of the gas produced by his methods for the direct production of power by means of gas-engines, and to the utilisation of the large amount of heat up to now lost in hot exhaust gases from such engines, with the result, that he has succeeded in obtaining fully double the amount of power from a given quantity of coal (and that of the very commonest and cheapest) than it can yield by the use of the very best steam-engines.
With the view of utilising the gas obtained by him from coal for the direct production of electricity, Mr. Mond worked out in conjunction with his assistant, Dr. Carl Langer, a new form of gas battery, which he communicated to the Royal Society in 1889, and which is still the most perfect appliance for solving this highly important problem. In the course of their investigations of this subject Mr. Mond and his assistants, Dr. Langer and Dr. Quincke, discovered a new series of chemical compounds of very peculiar properties composed of metals and carbon monoxide, now known as metallic carbonyls, the chemical and physical properties of which they submitted to very full investigations, and their results, which excited great interest in scientific circles, were communicated in several papers to the Royal Society, and the Chemical Society, and formed the subject of a lecture given by Mr. Mond at the Royal Institution in June 1892.
The further study of one of these compounds, the nickel-carbonyl, has led Mr. Mond to devise and work out an entirely new process for obtaining nickel from its ores, which promises to revolutionise the metallurgy of that metal. Mr. Mond is a member of many learned and scientific societies, he is a Fellow of the Royal Society, a Vice-President of the Royal Institution and of the Chemical Society, Past President of the Society of Chemical Industry, Fellow of the Institute of Chemistry, Member of the Physical Society, the German Chemical Society, &c. He is also on the Council of the British Association, and the British Institute of Preventive Medicine. The Universities of Heidelberg and Padua have conferred upon him the degree of Ph.D. honoris causa. Mr. Mond, who is a naturalised British subject, has always taken the warmest interest in all efforts for the advancement of science in this country. To promote this object he has founded, endowed, and given to the Royal Institution, the Davy Faraday Research Laboratory in Albemarle Street, opened by the Prince of Wales on Dec. 22, 1896, which is devoted to scientific research in pure and physical chemistry, and provides all the facilities required for investigations in these branches of science by a number of independent investigators. Mr. Ludwig Mond was elected to the Athenæum under Rule 2 in 1898. Addresses: The Poplars, 20 Avenue Road, Regent's Park, N.W.; Winnington Hall, near Northwich; Palazzo Zuccari, Rome; and Athenæum.

MONK, Charles James, J.P., D.L., M.P., was born on Nov. 30, 1824, and is the son of the late Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. He was educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, of which University he is M.A., having graduated B.A. with honours in 1847. In 1845 he gained Sir William Browne's medal, and was Members' Prizeman for Undergraduates in 1846, and for B.A.s the year following. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1850, and was Chancellor of Bristol, 1855-85, and of Gloucester, 1859-85. From 1881 to 1884 he was President of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, was appointed a director of the Suez Canal Company in 1884, and is J.P. and D.L. for Gloucestershire. He stood for Cricklade in 1857, was returned as Liberal member for Gloucester in April 1859, and sat until August, when he was unseated on petition. He was re-elected for Gloucester in 1865, and at successive Parliamentary elections until 1880, and retired in 1885. He again contested Gloucester in 1892, and was elected for that borough as a Liberal Unionist in 1895. It is to him that we owe the Revenue Officers' Disfranchisement Act of 1868, which gave civil servants in the Post Office and Excise. Addresses: Bedford House, Hatfield, Herts; and 5 Buckingham Palace, S.W.

MONKSWELL, Lord. Collier, eldest son of Robert Perceval Collier, 1st Baron, who was Solicitor-General, 1863-66, Attorney-General, 1866-71, from 1871 to his death in 1895. He was a member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, by Isabella, daughter of William Rose of Woilston near Rugby, was born in 1845. He was educated at Eton, where he obtained a junior mathematical prize, and was selected for the school prize, proceeding to Trinity College, Cambridge, graduated in 1866 in the first class of the Law Tripos, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1869. In 1871 he was appointed Conveyancing Counsel to the Treasury; and in 1885 he was appointed one of the official examiners of the Court of Justice, an office he vacated on his accession to the peerage in the following year. Lord Monkswell is a Liberal, and he unsuccessfully contested Launceston against the Earl of Halsbury in 1877 and 1880, and in 1885, against Sir John Gorst. In Gladstone's administration he was in-Waiting to the Queen from 1891 to 1894, and was Under-Secretary for War in that of Lord Rosebery from January to June 1895. He has been a member of the London County Council from its formation in 1889 as a Progressive for the Finsbury Division of Shoreditch. He was a member of Lord Dunraven's Committee on the Sweating System, on Lord St. Aldrich's Committee on Metropolitan Housing, on Lord Hobhouse's Committee on the Law of Copyhold. He has passed through the House of Lords a Bill to amend the law of libel and the Public Library Bill, while in 1891 he carried through the second reading a Bill to consolidate and amend the Law of Copyright, and he passed through the Lords a Copyright Bill, and took the chair of the Committee to which it was referred. Some years he was chairman of the Committee of Management of the Industrial School. He is married to the third daughter of J. A. Harcourt. Address: Monkswell House, Chiswick, bankment, S.W.; and Athenæum.

MONRO, David Binning, Hon. LL.D. of Glasgow, Hon. LL.D. of Dublin, Provost of Oriel College, was born in Edinburgh, Nov. 1811, and is the eldest son of A. Binnir

Auchenbowie, Stirlingshire. He was educated at Glasgow University, and, at age of seventeen, matriculated at senose College, Oxford, where he had aed a scholarship. Shortly afterwards became a Scholar of Balliol (1854-59). was in the first class in Classical and Mathematical Moderations in 1856, ned the Ireland Scholarship in 1858, l obtained a first class in Lit. Hum. and econd class in the Final School of hematics in 1858. In 1859 he won the a Essay (B.A. 1858, M.A. 1862). He Fellow of Oriel from 1859 to 1882, or from 1863 to 1873, Vice-Provost n 1874 to 1882, Classical Moderator in and 1876, and Classical Examiner in and 1871. In 1882 he became Pro- of Oriel, and is besides Delegate of Press and of the University Museum Perpetual Delegate of Privileges. He red at Lincoln's Inn in 1859, and is . LL.D. of Glasgow (1883), and Hon. tt. of Dublin (1892). Addresses : ad College, Oxford ; and Athenæum.

MONRO, James, C.B., son of the late orge Monro, Esq., S.S.C., Edinburgh, s born in Edinburgh, Nov. 25, 1838, and educated at the Royal High School, unburgh University, and Berlin Univer- y. He entered her Majesty's Bengal ivil Service in 1857, being third on the st of competitors ; and held in Bengal e appointments of Magistrate, District ad Sessions Judge, Secretary to Board of evenue, Commissioner of the Presidency ivision, and Inspector-General of Police. n several occasions Mr. Monro received e thanks of the Bengal Government for services. He retired from the Bengal vil Service in 1884, and in that year was ppointed Assistant-Commissioner of the etropolitan Police in charge of the riminal Investigation Department. In 888 he was appointed Commissioner of etropolitan Police, and retired from the fice which he had filled with so much ficiency in 1890. He was created C.B. 1888.

MONROE, The Right Hon. John, L.D., Judge of the High Court of Justice (Chancery Division), Ireland, was born in 839. He is the eldest son of the late ohn Monroe, Esq., of Hunter's Hall, oira, by Jane, daughter of the late Rev. mes Harvey, of Armagh. He was edu- ted by the Rev. James Mulligan of oira, and entered Queen's College, Gal- ay, in 1854. He took the degrees of A., M.A., and LL.B. in the Queen's niversity in Ireland, obtaining gold edals with each. The honorary degree LL.D. was conferred upon him in 1880. e was called to the Irish Bar in 1863, and went the North-East Circuit. He took silk in 1877. He was Law Adviser to the Irish Government in 1878-80 ; became a Bencher of the King's Inns, 1884 ; Solicitor-General, 1884-85 ; Judge of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, 1885 ; and was created a Privy Councillor in 1886. He married, in 1867, Lizzie, daughter of J. W. Moule, Esq., of Elmley-Lovel, Worcestershire. Address : Bartra, Dalkey, co. Dublin.

MONSON, The Right Hon. Sir Edmund John, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., D.C.L., M.A., British Ambassador in Paris, is the third son of the 6th Baron Monson, by Eliza, daughter of Edmund Larken. He was born at Chart Lodge, Kent, on Oct. 6, 1834, and was educated at Eton and at Balliol College, Oxford, and obtained a first class in Law and Modern History in 1855 (M.A.). In 1858 he was elected Fellow of All Souls, and in 1868 became Examiner in modern languages for the Taylorian Scholarships. On Mar. 26, 1856, he was nominated Attaché, passed an examination in June, and was appointed to Paris. After two years in the French capital he was transferred to Florence, and in December 1858 went to Washington. From that date he was private secretary to the late Lord Lyons until August 1863, when he became Attaché at Hanover. He passed the second examination for the diplomatic service in 1863, was promoted to be third secretary, was transferred to Brussels, but resigned in 1865. In July of 1865 he unsuccessfully contested Reigate. In May 1869 he was appointed Consul in the Azores, to reside at St. Michael's ; and in December of 1872 was promoted to the post of Consul-General for the Kingdom of Hungary, to reside at Pest. He was employed on special service in Dalmatia and Montenegro from February 1876 to May 1877. He received the C.B. in January 1878. On June 21, 1879, he was appointed Minister Resident and Consul-General to Uruguay, and in January 1884 became Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Pleni- potentiary to the Argentine, and Minister Plenipotentiary to Paraguay. At the close of 1884 he was chosen for the post of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Pleni- potentiary to the King of Denmark, and in February 1888 to the King of the Hellenes. In 1886 the honour of K.C.M.G. was conferred upon him. Under the Con- vention of Dec. 6, 1888, he acted as Arbitrator between Denmark and the United States in the matter of the "Butterfield Claim," and gave his award on Jan. 22, 1890. In January 1892 he was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the King of the Belgians, and in July 1893 became Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of Austria. On August 18, 1896, he was appointed H.M. Ambassador at Paris on the retirement of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, K.P. His speech at the dinner of the English Chamber of Commerce in Paris in December 1898 contained a statement of the recent disagreements between England and France over Fashoda, &c., and caused great offence in many quarters in Paris. Some journals went so far as to urge his recall. Sir Edward Monson's diplomacy has, however, been conciliatory on the whole, and that during a most trying period in the relations of the two countries. He was made a G.C.M.G. in August 1892, and was sworn of the Privy Council in July 1893. He married, in 1881, Eleanor Catherine Mary, daughter of the late Major Munro, H.M. Consul-General at Monte Video. Address: British Embassy, Paris.

MONTAGU, The Right Hon. Lord Robert, second son of the 6th Duke of Manchester, born Jan. 24, 1825, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A. in 1848, was returned in April 1859 one of the members, in the Conservative interest, for Huntingdonshire, which county he represented till February 1874, when he was returned for the county of Westmeath, as a "Conservative, but in favour of Home Rule." The Home Rule he professed was, however, essentially different from that of the Irish Party. He withdrew from the Home Rule organisation in June 1877; and ceased to be a member of Parliament in March 1880. He was appointed Vice-President of the Committee of Council on Education, sworn a Privy Councillor and nominated First Charity Commissioner in March 1867, and held these offices till December 1868. He joined the Roman Catholic Church in 1870, and renounced it on June 11, 1882. MONTAGU, Sir Samuel
SAMUEL-MONTAGU, SIR MONTAGU.

MONTALBA, Clara, the painter of Venice, is the eldest of four sisters, whom the three younger have attained high distinction in art. Her sister was for a time student in the Kensington Slade Schools, but Miss Clara Montalba received no special training, and, in her own words, "drifted into" the career. While still a girl her parents were that time resident in London; and during several summers to Dieppe, from time to time she was privileged to submit her studies and sketches to Isabey, the famous Impressionist marine painter. Her father's promise of teaching her the rules of his art, and her colour was her earliest medium of expression. In 1876 she was elected a member of the Royal Water-Colour Society, being one of the first admitted thereto. A few years afterwards she was elected a member of the Water-Colour Society of the Hague, of the Royal Water-Colour Society of Brussels, and subsequently of Rome. She enjoys the reputation of having been asked to send a portrait, painted by herself, to the German Emperor, and her most famous pictures are "Festival of St. John" and her portrait of the German Emperor, both painted in Holland and on the Thames. She has also painted in Venice. In 1880 she has exhibited at the Academy "Salt-boats, Venice." Miss Hilda Montalba is best known for her figure paintings, the subjects of which are Venetian. She sees Venice in a more tranquil light than her eldest sister, and her grey light which lovers of Venice fail to recognise. Miss Helen

MORAY AND ROSS, Bishop of. See KELLY, THE RIGHT REV. JAMES BUTLER KNILL.

MOREAS, Jean, French poet, was born at Athens, April 15, 1856, and early in life settled at Marseille, where he spent several years, and after travelling in Italy, Germany, and Greece he finally settled in nd of Macmillan's Magazine from 1883 to 1885. He unsuccessfully contested the borough of Blackburn in 1869, in the Liberal interest, and the city of Westminster in 1880; but in February 1883, at a by-election, he was returned as an advanced Liberal by the borough of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, defeating his Conservative opponent, Mr. Gainsford Bruce, by a majority of 2256 (9443 votes against 7187). Mr. Morley presided over the great Conference of Liberals held at Leeds in October 1883. On the formation of Mr. Gladstone's "Home Rule" Cabinet, February 1886, Mr. Morley was appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland; and throughout the debate on the Bill (for which he was in a great measure responsible), he was the Prime Minister's right-hand man. As almost the only cabinet minister who had been a consistent Home Ruler for many years, Mr. Morley was regarded with respect even by his most thoroughgoing opponents. He is one of the five Liberals who met in January 1887 for the purpose of discovering a modus vivendi for the re-union of the Liberal party. He was returned at the head of the poll for Newcastle, July 1886, and by a narrow majority, July 1892, and was appointed Irish Secretary in August, when he again fought the seat, the contest arousing great interest. His antagonist was Mr. Ralli, who was supported by a section of the Labour Party, headed by Messrs. Champion and Keir Hardie, M.P. Mr. Ralli gave a qualified adherence to an Eight Hours Bill, and thus won the suffrages of the working-men, while Mr. Morley entirely refused to support it. Polling took place on August 25, 1892, and Mr. Morley was returned by a majority of 1739. At the general election of 1895 he was defeated, although his Irish administration had been most successful. He had held the Newcastle seat for twelve years. In the same year he became a candidate for the Montrose Burghs, and was returned in 1896. His works are: "Edmund Burke, an Historical Study," 1867; "Critical Miscellanies," 1871, 2nd series, 1877; "Voltaire," 1872; "On Compromise," 1874; "Rousseau," 1876; "Diderot and the Encyclopædists," 2 vols., 1878; "Life of Richard Cobden," 1881; "Walpole," 1889, in the Twelve English Statesmen Series; "Studies in Literature," 1891; "The Study of Literature," 1894, and several recent speeches which have been reprinted. He is the editor of the English Men of Letters series. Mr. Morley is an Honorary D.C.L. of Oxford, LL.D. of Cambridge and Glasgow, and a Trustee of the British Museum. He was elected a member of the Athenæum Club in 1874. Addresses: 57 Elm Park Gardens, S.W.; and Athenæum.

MORRIS, Henry, F.R.C.S., M.A., &c., received his medical education at Guy's, and afterwards graduated M.A. in 1870 at the University of London, obtaining high distinction in philosophy. He had previously taken the M.B. degree in 1867. He became F.R.C.S. in 1873, and is a Member of Council and Member of the Court of Examiners of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. He is Surgeon and Lecturer on Surgery and Anatomy at the Middlesex Hospital, Examiner in Anatomy at the University of London, and is or has been an Examiner in Anatomy at the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons and at Durham University. He delivered the "Cavendish Lecture" in 1893, and has contributed important articles to Holmes's "System of Surgery," Ashurst's "Encyclopædia of Surgery," and to the leading medical journals. He is editor of "Morris's System of Anatomy," a work to which a number of experts contributed, and author of "The Anatomy of the Joints of Man," "Surgical Diseases of the Kidneys," &c. Address: 8 Cavendish Square, W.

MORRIS, Sir Lewis, J.P., was born in Carmarthen in January 1833, being the eldest son of the late L. E. Williams Morris, of Carmarthen, formerly of Blannant, Breconshire, by Sophia, daughter of the late John Hughes, of Carmarthen. He was educated at Cowbridge, and Sherborne Schools and Jesus College, Oxford, where he graduated in 1855 as first class in Classics and Chancellor's Prizeman; M.A. 1858; was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in November 1861, when he obtained a Certificate of Honour of the first class; practised chiefly as a conveyancing counsel until 1880; was elected an Honorary Fellow of Jesus College in 1877. In 1879 he was appointed a Knight of the Order of the Saviour (of Greece). In the same year he accepted the office of Honorary Secretary of the University College of Wales, of which he was afterwards treasurer. In 1880 he was appointed on the Departmental Committee charged by the Government to inquire into Intermediate and Higher Education in Wales, and in the same year was made a Justice of the Peace for Carmarthenshire. He was appointed Vice-Chairman of the Political Committee of the Reform Club, in the place of the late Mr. W. P. Adam, M.P.; and was a candidate, in December 1881, for the Carmarthen burghs, but retired; in 1886 he was Gladstonian candidate for Pembroke and Haverfordwest, but was defeated. In 1891, on the retirement of Sir C. P. Stepney, he was again a candidate for his native borough, but retired at the request of Mr. Gladstone, in order not to endanger the seat. It is

Mr. Morris was born at Penbryn House, Carmarthen, Wales, on the 10th of January, 1867. He is a member of the University of London, and has been awarded several degrees. His first book, "The Epic of Hades," appeared in 1890, and was followed by "A Vision of Saints" in 1891, "Songs without Notes" in 1894, "Idylls and Lyrics" in 1896, "The Odes on the Death of the Duke of Clarence, on the opening of the Imperial Institute, and on the Marriage of the Duke and Duchess of York" in 1897, and "The Odes on the foundation of the Imperial Institute" in 1898. The above works are now collected and were published under the author's name in a popular edition of one volume in the spring of 1899, which volume has passed into a 4th edition. In October 1899 Mr. Morris published his poem, "A Vision of Saints," which proceeds after the manner of Dante, attempts for the Christian ideal what "The Epic of Hades" did for that of the Pagan world. This poem is now in the 4th edition. Mr. Morris wrote in 1892 another tragedy from Byzantine history. In 1894 appeared "Songs without Notes," and in 1896, "Idylls and Lyrics." The Odes on the Death of the Duke of Clarence, on the opening of the Imperial Institute, and on the Marriage of the Duke and Duchess of York, are from his pen, and the last two were written by desire. Mr. Morris is the great-grandson of the well-known Welsh antiquary and poet, Lewis Morris, of Penbryn. Addresses: Penbryn House, Carmarthen; 42 Portsdown Road, W.; and Athenaeum.

MORRIS, Malcolm A., F.R.C.S. Edin., received his medical education at St. Mary's Hospital, London, and in Berlin and Vienna. He is at the head of the Surgical Skin Department and Lecturer on Dermatology at St. Mary's Hospital, and has been Clinical Assistant at the Hospital for Diseases of the Skin. MORRISON, Arthur, novelist, was born in Kent on Nov. 1, 1863. He was educated at various private schools, and was a clerk in a public office in 1883. A few years later he resigned, and took a secretaryship. At this time he was a zealous cyclist, and was well known among the comparative few who then practised the sport. For his amusement he contrib- uted many facetious verses and articles to the cycling press of that time, and afterward began in the same way to make contributions to newspapers and magazines of the ordinary and more important sort. This led to the resigna- tion of his secretaryship in 1890, in order to join the staff of a daily paper, and soon he became a contributor to many periodicals. In particular he became con- nected with the National Observer, at that time under the editorship of Mr. W. E. Henley. Before he became a journalist the business of his secretaryship and other matters had called him much into the East End of London, and he made himself inti- mate with the various aspects of life in that part. He had published several studies and sketches of that life before his con- nection with the National Observer, notably the sketch "A Street" which forms the introduction to "Tales of Mean Streets." The suggestions of Mr. W. E. Henley, how- ever, confirmed him in an intention, already formed, to write a complete series of stories of East End life, and in consequence the greater part of the numbers afterwards printed in his first book appeared in the National Observer during the years 1892, 1893, and 1894. Gathered in a volume, and published in November 1894, with the title "Tales of Mean Streets," they attracted instant attention, and made a notable success. In the meantime Mr. Morrison had entered into a contract to produce four volumes of detective stories, one a year, for serial as well as for ordinary publication, and the first of these volumes appeared at about the same time as the "Tales," the remainder following at the agreed intervals. In the autumn of 1896 his first novel, "A Child of the Jago," appeared, with even more success than had attended "Tales of Mean Streets." An essay on these two books is included in the second volume of "Écrivains Étrangers," by M. Teodor de Wyzewa, the eminent French critic. Mr. Morrison is also known for his large collection of prints and drawings by the old Japanese masters. His published works in their order are: "Tales of Mean Streets," 1894; "Martin Hewitt, Investigator," 1894; "Chronicles of Martin Hewitt," 1895; "Adventures of Martin Hewitt," 1896; "A Child of the Jago," 1896; "The Dorrington Deed-Box," 1897; and "To London Town," 1898. Address: Savage Club, Adelphi Terrace, London.

MORRISON, George Ernest, M.D., F.R.G.S., Times Correspondent at Peking, was born at Geelong, Victoria, on Feb. 4, 1862. He was educated at Geelong College and Edinburgh University, and graduated M.D. of the latter in 1895 (M.S. in 1887). His travels have been numerous and daring. He walked across Australia from the Gulf of Carpentaria to Melbourne in 1882-83. In October 1883 he was speared by the natives in New Guinea, and for nearly a year carried the spear-head in his body until it was extracted in Edinburgh. In 1894 he crossed overland from Shanghai to Rangoon. As Special Correspondent for the Times he has undertaken some important travels in China and Siberia (1896-97), and during the recent period of diplomatic tension in China (1898) has frequently sent home messages to his paper from which even the Government have been glad to draw their information. His overland journey of 1894 has been described by him in his volume "An Australian in China." Address: Peking.

MORTEN, Miss Honnor, Member for City Division of the London School Board since 1897, born at Cheam in 1863, is a daughter of a solicitor, and niece of William Black. She was educated at Bedford College for Women, and was for many years engaged in nursing and journalism, and helped to found the Nurses' Co-operation and the Association of Asylum Workers. She lectured on health and nursing subjects under the Home Office, the Technical Education Board, and other bodies, and is at present Lecturer on Sick-Nursing at the Borough Polytechnic. She is Warden of the Hoxton Settlement, and represents Hackney on the London School Board. She published "Sketches of Hospital Life," "The Nurse's Dictionary," "How to become a Nurse," "How to Treat Accidents and Illnesses," and has edited "The Complete System of Nursing," 1898. MORTON, The Hon. Levi Parsons, LL.D., American banker and statesman, was born at Shoreham, Vermont, May 16, 1824. He entered mercantile life at an early age, and soon showed a remarkable aptitude for business. In 1850 he became a partner in a Boston firm of merchants and in 1854 removed to New York where he established the firm of Morton & Hannell. He founded, in 1863, the mercantile houses of Morton, Bliss, & Co. in New York, and Morton, Rose, & Co. in London, the latter serving as fiscal agents of the U.S. Government from 1873 to 1880. Both these houses were active in the syndicates that negotiated U.S. bonds and in the payments of the General Loan of $15,500,000 and the Halifax Loan of $5,500,000. Mr. Morton was an Honorary Commissioner to the Centennial Exposition of 1876, and in the same year was elected a Republican Member of the House of Representatives, and re-elected in 1880. He declined a nomination for the Vice-Presidency in 1880, but accepted the mission to France which was tendered him by President Grant. During his occupancy of that post, he secured the removal of the restrictions upon the importation of American goods, and obtained a legal status for American corporations in France. In 1888 he accepted the nomination for the Vice-Presidency again offered him by the Republican party, and was duly elected in November of that year for the term expiring Nov. 4, 1893. In 1894, he was elected Governor of the State of New York. The degree LL.D. was conferred upon him by Yale University in 1881.

He was at the time Lecturer in Physiology at St. George's Hospital Medical School, and was engaged in investigating the pathology of Insanity. He is author of several contributions in medical literature. His recent text-books of medical physiology and original papers relating to the Proceedings and Publications of the Royal Society, &c. He married Georgiana, daughter of the late G. T. Soley. Address: 10 Nottingham Place, W.; and 10 Bucks.

Herr Felix, was born at 1856, and studied at Lemberg Conservatorium. He first became conductor of the concert of the Richard Wagner Verein, and was stage conductor under the direction of the Bayreuth performance of Wagner's tetralogy. Subsequently he became conductor of the Grand Opera House at Karlsruhe, and in 1880 conducted "Tristan und Isolde."

He first appeared in London as a lover of good music now look upon his concerts as one of the pleasures of the musical season. "Agnes Bernauer," was produced in 1880.

MOKHTAR-PACHA, Ghazi, is of direct descent from a family of Broussa in Asia Minor. His grandfather, Hadji Halil Agha, died young, and Moukhtar, who was born Oct. 1851, was brought up by his grandfather, who sent him, in 1851, to the preparatory school of his native city. He showed a remarkable aptitude for studies, and at the expiration of his studies passed from the school first of entering the Military Academy at Constantinople, he remained four years there, in consequence of his progress, while still pursuing his studies, he was promoted to the grade of lieutenant, and as a further reward was made captain on the staff, in this capacity he in 1860 joined the army of the Serder Ekrem Omar in Montenegro, where, with a mere company of troops, he dashed at an almost insuperable pass, and rendered such service that he was decorated on the spot with the Medjidieh of the fifth class. After this Moukhtar returned to the Military Academy, where he was appointed to the post of Professor of Astronomy, Military Tactics, and Fortifications. In this somewhat mixed capacity he remained until 1863, when he was sent as binbashi, or major and chief of the staff of the division of Islaheye—a division of organization—at Alexandretta, under the command of Dervish Pacha, now mushir at Batoum. At the end of 1864 the young soldier was appointed caimakan, or lieutenant-colonel, and tutor to Prince Yousouf Issedin, the eldest son of Sultan Abdul Aziz. In this capacity he travelled over the greater part of Europe, and received the Legion of Honour, the Red Eagle, and the Crown of Iron among other decorations, and in 1867 returned to Constantinople. At that time Prince Yousouf became Colonel of the Imperial Guard, and Ahmed Moukhtar was appointed one of the commissioners for regulating the frontier of Montenegro, in which capacity he served until 1869, by his policy saving to Turkey the strategical point of Veli Malou Berdu, between Spitz and Podgoritza, while as the ex-Professor of Fortifications he made the tête du pont of Vezir Keupri. For these services he was promoted to the third class of the Medjidieh, and returning to Stamboul was made a member of the Council of War. Three months later he was nominated General of Brigade, under Redif Pacha, then commanding the Yemen expedition against the Arabs, 20,000 of whom were in insurrection. Soon after Moukhtar's arrival Redif fell ill, and the command fell into the hands of the young liwa, or Major-General. He took the city of Yedy, and was promoted for that achievement to the grade of ferik, or General of division, and chief of all the corps in Yemen, Redif becoming Governor, until he was superseded, on the ground of illness, by Essad Pacha. When Ali Pacha, the Minister of War, died, Essad Pacha became seraskier, and Moukhtar was promoted to mushir, or full General, and the Governorship of Yemen, in 1871, at the age of thirty-three. He also received the Osmanli of the first class in brilliants. After the taking of Sana he was further decorated with the first class of the Medjidieh. In 1873 he returned to Stamboul, where he was appointed Minister of Public Works, but he did not take up the post, as a few days afterwards he was named Governor of Crete. He was not destined, however, to occupy the post, for the command of the Shumla army corps fell vacant, and it was conferred on the young mushir. He remained at Shumla for 13½ months, during which time he constructed the existing fortifications. Next, appointed Governor and Military Commandant at Erzeroum, he served in the Armenian capital for

M.P. for F.E.S. and the Hon. Member for Essex. Mr. Moulton was educated at St. Albans and New College, Oxford, and subsequently proceeded to St. John's College, Cambridge, where he was a pupil of the celebrated Dr. Whewell. Throughout his school and college career Mr. Moulton displayed an extraordinary facility for mastering any subject he undertook, and soon so as to be first in securing the first place in the examination for which he studied. His favorite subject was mathematics, his undergraduate course at Cambridge was a competitor for mathematical honors at the London University, succeeded in carrying off in such mathematical scholarship at the final examination, and again mathematical scholarship at the final examination. In the next year he was University Scholar; and, in the next year, graduated M.A. and obtained the Gold Medal for mathematics. Meanwhile he was equally carrying everything before him at Cambridge, where he won mathematical scholarship at St. John's College; and, subsequently, in the year in which he took the Gold Medal at the London University, became Senior Wrangler and first Smith's Prize. On this occasion his score of marks was extraordinary that his excess of marks would have sufficed to secure the Senior Wranglership would have entitled him to a high place among the wranglers. As was natural in such instances, Mr. Moulton, when the law profession presented itself to him, at first inclined to adopt an academic career, and he became a Fellow, and a Lecturer of Christ's College, and subsequently a Lecturer at Jesus College. The attractions of a larger sphere prevailed, and in 1873 he resigned his Fellowship and came to London. In the next year a call to the Middle Temple. He took silk and is still in leading practice at the law. In politics Mr. Moulton has always been an advanced thinker. He was a member of the Union Debating Society at Cambridge, over which he for a long time presided, and sat for a short while in the Parliament of 1885-86 as the tive of Clapham. He became Liberal candidate for the election of Nottingham, but was defeated by a majority of 83 in the election. In March 1894, however, he was elected to Parliament, after a close contest for South Hackney, from the nomination of which Lord (then Viscount) Russell had just retired. In 1898 he was elected as a Liberal member for the Northern Division of Cornwall. He was elected an Alderman by the London City Council in 1893. In the discussion of the conditions under which the Union of London should be reorganised with a footing, a discussion which is still active at the present time, he has taken a leading part in favour of the cause of non-resident members.

Notwithstanding professional and other preoccupations, Mr. Moulton has from time to time made contributions to scientific discussion, and in 1879 he wrote, in conjunction with the late Dr. William Siemens, at that time President of the Society, two elaborate papers on the discharge of Electricity through tubes, or, to speak more popularly, on the merits of these tubes. The merit of these papers was at once recognised in scientific circles, and Mr. Moulton was, in 1880, elected to the Fellowship of the Royal Society. Again, in 1881, he took part in the Congress of Electricians, during that year in Paris, and for his participation was decorated with the Legion of Honour. He married, in 1875, Clara, the widow of the late Sir James Simpson of Edinburgh; she died in 1897. Addresses: 57 Onslow Square, W. 11 King's Bench Walk.

ET, Jean Sully, known to the world of France as Mounet-Sully, tragedian, was born at Bergerac, on Feb. 27, 1841. He showed from his boyhood a love of the drama, and the desire to act, and met with opposition from his family. At the age of twenty-seven, he undertook his own education, entered the Conservatoire de Musique, was praised by Bressant. In 1864 he won a first prize for tragic acting, and made a modest début at the Odéon in 1865. In the winter of 1870 he was in the company of mobiles; and for a while, thought of giving up the stage, but in 1872 he was at length given the opportunity at the Théâtre Français. In 1873 he won his laurels, and in eighteen years of service as a tragedian won recognition as sociétaire to the first rank in the world. He has remained in the same position since, and has become famous for the power and nervous intensity of his acting and the beauty of his voice. His most celebrated parts are Achilles in "Iphigénie," Xiphaxes in "Mithridate," Hyppolytus in "Phèdre," and Orosmanes in "Zaïre." In 1888 he surpassed himself as Œdipus Rex in the Sophoclean tragedy of that name, which was acted amid the ruins of the Roman theatre at Orange. He is also famous for his impersonation of Hamlet, and of various modern rôles such as the King in "Le Roi s'Amuse," Fabrice in "L'Aventurière," and Saint Megrin in "Henri III. et sa Cour." He was elected a Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1889. He has himself written a drama in five acts, "La Buveuse de Larmes." When the Comédie Française visited London in 1894 Mounet-Sully was one of the chief attractions. His Hamlet especially was contrasted with that of Sir H. Irving and that of Mr. Tree. He may be described as a fine French classical actor of the old school. His brother, Jean Paul Mounet, is also an actor of some eminence. He was born in 1847, and in 1889 entered the Théâtre Français.

MOUNT-EDGCUMBE, Earl of, The Right Hon. William Henry Edgcumbe, D.C.L., D.L., was born on Nov. 5, 1832, and is the son of the 3rd Earl, whom he succeeded in 1861, and Caroline, daughter of Rear-Admiral Charles Fielding. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took honours in the final Mathematical School in 1853 (M.A.). In 1858 he was appointed Equerry to the Prince of Wales, and, as Viscount Valletort, represented Plymouth in Parliament from 1859 till 1861. From 1862 to 1866 he was Lord of the Bedchamber to the Prince of Wales, from 1879 to 1880 Lord Chamberlain of the Queen's Household, and from 1885 to 1886 and 1886 to 1892 Lord Steward. He was A.D.C. to the Queen from 1881 to 1897, has been Lord-Lieutenant of Cornwall from 1877 onwards, and in 1889 was appointed Hon. Colonel of the 2nd Volunteer Battalion of the Devonshire Regiment. He married, in 1858, Katherine, daughter of the 1st Duke of Abercorn, K.G. She died in 1874. Addresses: 5 Victoria Square, S.W.; and Mount-Edgcumbe House, Plymouth, &c.

MOUNTFORD, Edward William, is the son of Edward Mountford, and was born at Shipston-on-Stour, Worcestershire, on Sept. 22, 1855. Educated privately, he was articled in 1872 to Messrs. Habershon & Pite, architects, and began to practise as an architect in 1881. Amongst the various buildings, which have been erected from his designs, there may be mentioned: The Sheffield Town Hall, 1890; Battersea Town Hall, Battersea Polytechnic, St. Olave's Grammar School, Southwark; Northampton Institute, Clerkenwell; Museum and Technical School at Liverpool. Mr. Mountford is a Member of Council of the Royal Institute of British Architects, and he was President of the Architectural Association from 1893 to 1895. Address: 17 Buckingham Street, Strand, W.C.

MOUNT-STEPHEN, Lord, George Stephen, Bart., was born at Dufftown, Scotland, on June 5, 1829. He emigrated to Canada in 1850 and became a merchant in Montreal. In 1872 he was elected a Director of the Bank of Montreal, of which he was made President in 1878. In 1879 he became President of the St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba Railway Company, and in 1881 President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. In 1887 as a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee, he and Sir Donald Smith (now Lord Strathcarron) gave £200,000 to found the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal, and in 1896 they gave £200,000 more to provide a permanent endowment fund. In 1886 he was created a Baronet for his public services in connection with the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and in 1891 was raised to the Peerage under the title of Lord Mount-Stephen. He married (1) Charlotte, daughter of Benjamin Kane (died 1896), and (2), in 1897, Gian, daughter of the late Commander Robert George Tufnell. Addresses: Bocket Hall, Hatfield; 16 James Street, Buckingham Street, S.W.; and Grand Metis, Quebec.

MOWAT, The Hon. Sir Oliver, G.C.M.G., Q.C., LL.D., Canadian statesman, was born at Kingston, July 22, 1820, and is the eldest son of the late John Mowat, of Canisby, Caithness. He was called to the Bar of Upper Canada in November 1841, and was appointed a Queen's Counsel in 1856, and a Bencher of the Law Society for the Province in the same year. From 1856 to 1857 he was a Commissioner for consolidating the Public General Statutes of Canada and Upper Canada. He entered political life in 1857, as representative of South Ontario, and was Provincial Secretary in the following year in the Brown-Dorion Government, which, however, lasted but a few days. He was Postmaster-General in 1863-64; and from November 1864 until October 1872 was one of the Vice-Chancellors of Ontario. He left the Bench at the latter period to form a new administration in Ontario, and became Premier and Attorney-General for the Province, and representative of North Oxford in the Legislature, positions which he held till his resignation, in July. He entered Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet as Minister of Justice. He was appointed Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, Nov. 1896. He is the author of many important legislative measures in the Provincial Parliament, and is a Liberal in politics. A degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Queen's College, Kingston, in 1885, and by the University of Toronto in 1892. In 1892 he was made K.C.M.G., and in 1893 he was promoted to be a Knight of the Cross of the same order. He married Jane, second daughter of the late James Ewart, of Toronto, in 1846. See 1893. Address: Toronto.

MUDFORD, William H., editor of the Standard, was born in Kent, and is the son of the proprietor of the Kentish Observer and the Canterbury Mercury. He became manager of the Standard in 1873, and editor in 1876. It is mainly due to the ability and energy of its present editor, who communicates with his staff by telephone from his house at Sandgate, Kent. Address: 63 Cornhill, E.C.

MUN, Adrien Albert Marie, Comte de. French politician and philosopher. was born at Lunigny, Feb. 23, 1841, and is the great-grandson of the celebrated materialist philosopher, Helvetius. Before taking to politics, he was in the army, and rose to be a Captain of Cuirassiers. However, he left the service in 1875, owing to his devotion to the cause of Roman Catholicism, which he furthered by founding workmen's clubs throughout France. In 1876 he was elected Deputy for Pontivy, once a centre of the Breton Chouans, and sat among the Extreme Right in the Chamber, where he rendered himself famous by his clerical and anti-Republican motions. During the Boulanger agitation he kept outside all strife, and in 1892, when Leo XIII. invited the French monarchists to give in their adhesion to the Republic, the Comte de Mun formally renounced politics, and devoted himself to the task of reconciling Church and State. In 1897 he was elected a member of the French Academy to the seat lately occupied by Jules Simon, and formerly by Massillon. His speech at his election in praise of his predecessor was greatly admired, for he is in the front rank of French orators. His Paris address is 5 Avenue de l'Alma.

MUNKACSY, Michael von, or Michael Lieb, Hungarian painter, was born near Munkacs, Oct. 10, 1846. His parents were poor, and he was apprenticed to a carpenter, but his genius for painting soon manifested itself, and he left the bench for the easel, gaining a prize of eighty florins from the Pesth Art Union, which enabled him to study in the Vienna Art Galleries and afterwards at Munich and Dusseldorf. His picture, "The Last Day of a Condemned Prisoner," was exhibited in the Paris Salon in 1870, and at once established his reputation. This was followed by "An Episode of the Hungarian War of 1849," "The Night Prowlers," "The Studio," "The Two Families," "Milton Dictating 'Paradise Lost' to his Daughters," 1878; "Christ before Pilate," 1882; "Christ on Calvary," 1884; "The Last Moments of Mozart," 1886; "Allegory of the Italian Renaissance," a fresco, 1890; "The Favourite Air," 1891; and three portraits of ladies, 1890-92. He was promoted to be a Commander of the Legion of Honour in 1890, and has obtained medals at successive Exhibitions in Paris, and a grand prize in 1889. He is famous for his fine colouring, surprising effects of light and air, and daring originality, but his canvases are occasionally too crowded with figures. In 1896 he returned to Hungary permanently from Paris, where he had lived since the early seventies, but in 1897 he developed symptoms of insanity, and he has lived in seclusion ever since.

MUNRO, Robert, M.A., M.D. Secretary to Lord Rosebery and Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, was born in Rosneath, 21, 1835, and married Oct. 1861. Dr. Munro received his early education at the parish of Kiltearn, Rosneath, where he was sent for a couple of years to the Royal Academy preparatory to the University of Edinburgh, completing his studies at that University, graduating both in Arts and Medicine, and settling as a medical practitioner in the town of Kilmarnock. Ayrshire. Afterwards he had an opportunity of satisfying an early acquired taste for travel by making a tour through Egypt and Palestine. During his residence at Kilmarnock some remarkable excavations of Lake Dwellings were made in the Firth of Scotland in which he became much interested, and these ultimately supplied him with materials for his work on "Ancient Scottish Lake Dwellings." In 1865 he was President of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Branch of the Medical Association, when he delivered an address on "The Scientific Basis of Medicine." Retiring from the medical profession in 1866, he has since devoted himself to anthropological and archaeological pursuits. In 1868 he was appointed to the Council of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland Rhind-Lecturer in Archaeology for that year, the subject assigned being "The Lake Dwellings of Scotland." These lectures formed the nucleus of an exhaustive work on that subject, which appeared in 1890. In 1893 he was President of the Anthropological Section of the British Association Meeting held at Nottingham. He was invited by the Government of Bosnia-Herzegovina to deliver a special Congress held at Sarajevo (1894) for the purpose of discussing the very remarkable discoveries recently made in that country. The outcome of this journey was the publication in 1897 of "Rambles and Studies in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Dalmatia," the only work in the English language which gives a full account of the great neolithic station at Glasinac and Tezerine. In June 1897 Dr. Munro delivered a course of lectures on "Lake Dwellings" at the Royal Institution of Great Britain. His latest work, "Prehistoric Problems," 1897, among other subjects his much-estimated essay on the influence of the environment on the intellectual development of the human brain. Dr. Munro has also contributed largely to the journals of Scientific and Archæological Societies. He is ad honoris) Member of the Royal Irish Academy, Fellow of the R. Soc. of Antiq. Ireland, Member of the R. Society of Northern Antiquaries, Corr. Member of Anthropological Societies of Berlin Vienna, &c. During his travels he visited North America, China and Japan, India, Egypt, and all the principal zoological centres in Europe. His residence is 48 Manor Place, Edinburgh.

MUNRO-FERGUSON, Ronald M.P., J.P., D.L., is the eldest son of the late Colonel R. Munro-Ferguson, Raith, M.P. He was born in 1860, and educated at Sandhurst. He was for a Lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards. Was Liberal representative in the House of Commons of Ross and Cromarty from 1885 to 1885, and since 1886 has represented the Leith Burghs. In 1894 he was appointed a Lord of the Treasury, going out of office in June 1895. He was Private Secretary in 1886 and again in 1892-94. He is J.P. and D.L. for Fifeshire, D.L. for Ross-shire, and in 1885 became Captain of the 1st Fife Light Horse Rifle Volunteers. In 1889 he married Helen, daughter of the Marquis of Dufferin. Addresses: Raith House, Kirkcaldy, &c.; and 46 Cadogan Square, S.W.

MÜNSTER-LEDENBURG, Georg Herbert, Count, German Diplomatist and Ambassador in Paris, was born in London, Dec. 23, 1820, and is the son of the famous Hanoverian statesman. He was educated at the Universities of Bonn, Heidelberg, and Göttingen, and sat by hereditary right in the Hanoverian Upper House. From 1856 to 1864 he was on an Extraordinary Mission to St. Petersburg; on the annexation of Hanover he became a Member of the Upper House of Prussia, and afterwards of the North German Confederation, and finally of the Imperial Reichstag. He was appointed Ambassador to England in 1873, and to Paris in 1885. His services were rewarded by the Order of the Black Eagle in 1889, and in 1898 he celebrated his twenty-fifth year of ambassadorial rank. The German Embassy is situate at 78 Rue de Lille, Paris.

MURAVIEFF, Count, Russian Foreign Minister, was born in 1845 of a distinguished Russian family. He was educated at Poltava and Heidelberg, and entered the Russian Diplomatic Service. In 1864 he was attached to the Russian Embassy at Berlin, and was afterwards at Stockholm and Stuttgart. In 1874 he became Secretary at the Hague, and from 1880 to 1884 he was at Paris. In 1893 he was promoted to be Minister to Denmark, where he created a favourable impression on the Dowager-Empress, who is a daughter of the King. Probably this led to his being chosen to succeed Prince Lobanoff as the Czar's Minister for Foreign Affairs in January 1897. This post he has held with conspicuous success ever since, and in August 1898 he was the channel through which the Czar's wishes for a Peace Congress were made known to the Great Powers.

MURRAY, Alexander Stuart, LL.D., F.S.A., Keeper of Greek and Roman Antiquities in the British Museum, was born near Arbroath, Jan. 8, 1841, and is the eldest son of George Murray. He was educated at the Royal High School, Edinburgh, the University of Edinburgh, and the University of Berlin. He was appointed Assistant in the British Museum in 1867, and Keeper in 1886, in succession to Sir C. T. Newton, K.C.B., retired. He is best known by a work on the History of Greek Sculpture, 2 vols., 1880 and 1883; and a Handbook of Greek Archæology, 1892. He has also contributed numerous articles to the Nineteenth Century, Contemporary Review, Revue Archéologique, and Journal of Hellenic Studies, &c. He is an active and prominent member of the Hellenic Society. Addresses: British Museum, and Athenæum.

MURRAY, Alma, actress, was born in London, and is a daughter of Leigh Murray, the actor. She was educated privately, and first appeared on the stage at the Olympic whilst still a little girl. Since 1879 she has played at the Lyceum, and all the principal London theatres. In 1897 she played Rosalind, her first appearance in the part, at the Metropole Theatre, Camberwell. The Shelley and the Browning Societies have chosen her as the interpreter of the chief female characters in their arduous revivals. Thus in the daring revival by the Shelley Society of "The Cenci," she took the part of Beatrice. She is well-known for her recitations. Her husband is Mr. Alfred Forman, the Wagnerian. Address: 49 Comeragh Road, West Kensington, W.

MURRAY, The Right Hon. Andrew Graham, Q.C., M.P., Lord Advocate of Scotland, was born in Edinburgh on Nov. 21, 1849, and is the only child of the late T. Graham Murray, W.S., of Stenton. He was educated at Harrow and Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he was a scholar (M.A. 1875). He was called to the Scottish Bar in 1874; was Advocate Depute from 1888 to 1890; Sheriff of Perthshire from 1890 to 1891; Solicitor-General for Scotland for two periods, viz., from 1891 to 1892, and 1895-

96, and in 1896 was appointed Lord Advocate. Since 1891 he has been Conservative member for Bute. He became Q.C. in 1891, and was sworn of the Privy Council in 1896. London address: Kensington Palace Mansions, S.W.

MURRAY, David, A.R.A., A.R.S.A., A.R.W.S., R.S.W., was born in Glasgow on Jan. 29, 1849, and is the eldest son of James Murray of that city. He was educated at Glasgow, entered upon a commercial career, and after more than ten years chose the profession of art. He lived for a time in a hut in Skye, studying landscape. His landscapes include Highland views, a series of pictures of Picardy and of Hampstead Heath, and views on the Kennet and Avon, &c. Since 1875 he has been a constant exhibitor in the Royal Academy. Address: 1 Langham Chambers, Portland Place, W.

MURRAY, David Christie, was born at West Bromwich, Staffordshire, April 13, 1847, and educated at a private school there. He began press life as a reporter on the Birmingham Morning News, under the editorship of his friend George Dawson; came to London in 1873, served on the Daily News, and was on the staff of the World. He acted as special correspondent of the Scotsman and the Times in the Russo-Turkish War. On his return he abandoned journalism for fiction. In 1879 he published his first long work of fiction in Chambers's Journal—"A Life's Atonement." "Joseph's Coat" appeared in 1880; "Val Strange" and "Coals of Fire," "A Collection of Short Stories," in 1881; "Hearts" and "By the Gate of the Sea," in 1882, the latter being the latest serial published in the original series of the Cornhill Magazine. In 1883 Mr. Murray published "The Way of the World," and in 1886 "Aunt Rachel," which appeared first in the English Illustrated Magazine; "Old Blazer's Hero," 1887; "A Dangerous Catpaw" (written in connection with Mr. Henry Murray); and "Wild Darrie," 1889; "Bob Martin's Little Girl," 1892; "A Wasted Crime," 1893; "In Direst Peril," "The Great War of 189—" (in conjunction with P. Colomb), "The Making of a Novelist," "Mount Despair," and "A Gospel o' Nails," 1894; "The Bishop's Amazement," and "A Rogue's Conscience," 1896; "This Little World," and "My Contemporaries in Fiction," 1897; "Tales in Prose and Verse," "The Cockney Columbus," and "A Race for Millions," 1898; and in collaboration with the late Henry Herman, "Our Travellers Returned," "The Bishop's Bible," and "Paul Jones's Alias." During the earlier part of the year 1898 Mr. Christie Murray was in Paris, where he had constant intercourse with M. Zola, and warmly espoused his cause. He delivered lectures on the celebrated Dreyfus imbroglio, employing the aid of the magic lantern to demonstrate the merits of the famous "torie." Address: Clan y don, Penarth, Abergele.

MURRAY, Professor George Albert Aimé, was born in Sydney, N.S.W., 1866, and is the third son of the late T. A. Murray, who was the first Speaker in the Legislative Council of New South Wales, and for ten years its President. G. G. A. Murray was educated at the Merchant Taylors' School, and at St. John's College, Oxford, where, in his first year, he carried off the Hertford and the Clarendon Scholarships, and subsequently every scholarship and prize of the University, and was elected to a Fellowship at St. John's College. In 1889, at the age of twenty-three, he became Professor of Greek at the University of Glasgow. He published in 1890, "Gobi or Saka: The Story of Three Songs"; "History of Ancient Greek Literature," 1891. He has written much on Hellenic subjects in the Speaker, the Journal of Education, and the Göttigen Philologus. In November 1889 he married the Hon. Lady Howard, eldest daughter of the Earl of Carlisle. Address: 5 The College, Glasgow.

MURRAY, The Hon. Henry, Q.C., Premier and Minister of the Secretary of Nova Scotia, was born at Grand Narrows, N.S., June 7, 1841. He was educated at Boston University, and was called to the Bar in 1863. He practised at North Sydney. He was elected to the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia in 1889, and in 1896 unsuccessfully opposed Sir Charles Tupper (q.v.) for the representation of Cape Breton. In January of the same year he succeeded Mr. F. B. Ingham as Premier of Nova Scotia, and was returned to the Dominion of Nova Scotia for Victoria. He was made a Q.C. by Lord Aberdeen. Address: 110 St. John's Street, N.S.

MURRAY, Sir George, K.C.B., the eldest son of the late Sir Murray, late Rector of South Devon, was born in 1849. He began his career as a clerk in the Foreign Office, and acted as Secretary to the Commission negotiating a new commercial treaty with France. In 1880 he was appointed Secretary to Sir Charles Dilke, and in the same year was transferred to a post in the Treasury, where he remained until the beginning of 1897, being Society of Antiquaries, and of the Royal Geographical Society. He has edited Gibbon's "Autobiography," and other works. Mr. Murray is married to the daughter of William Leslie of Wasthill, Aberdeenshire. Address: 50 Albemarle Street, W.; and Athenæum.

MURRAY, Sir John, K.C.B., F.R.SS. London and Edinburgh, D.Sc. Camb., LL.D. Edin., Ph.D. Jena, Knight of the Royal Prussian Order pour le Mérite, Scientific Member of the Fishery Board for Scotland, one of the Secretaries of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, Editor and Director of the "Challenger Expedition" publications, was born at Coburg, Ontario, Canada, on March 3, 1841, and is the second son of the late Robert Murray, accountant. He received his early education at the Public School and Professor McAuley's Educational Establishment, London, Ontario, and at Victoria College, Coburg, Ontario. He removed to Bridge of Allan, Scotland, in 1858, where his education was continued under private tuition, and at the High School, Stirling, and at the University of Edinburgh. He studied also in France, Germany, and Belgium. For several years he assisted his relative, the late John Macfarlane, Esq., of Coney Hill, in the formation of a large Natural History Museum at Bridge of Allan. In 1868 he visited Spitzbergen and the Arctic regions as naturalist on board a whaler. In 1872 he was appointed one of the naturalists of H.M.S. Challenger, during her circumnavigating voyage for the exploration of the physical and biological conditions of the great ocean basins, 1872-76. In 1876 he became first assistant on the staff appointed by the Government to undertake the publication of the scientific results of the Challenger Expedition, and on the death of Sir Wyville Thomson, in 1882, became editor and director of the Challenger publications. In 1880 and in 1882 he took part in the Knight Errant and Triton expedition for the exploration of the Faroe Channel. In 1883 he was mainly instrumental in procuring funds for the establishment of a permanent meteorological observatory on the top of Ben Nevis, and has ever since been one of the directors of that institution. Between 1882 and 1894 he conducted many observations in his steam yacht Medusa on the physical and biological conditions of the lochs and seas of Scotland, and founded and maintained marine stations for scientific research at Granton, near Edinburgh, and at Millport, on the west coast of Scotland. He has travelled in nearly all parts of the world. The Reports on the Scientific Results of the Challenger Expedition, published by

Her Majesty's Stationery Office in royal quarto volumes, were complete in 1896, and form the most extensive of the kind ever issued from the press. These reports consist of 3 volumes of Narrative of the Cruise, 2 of Physical Chemistry, 1 of Deep-Sea Deposits, 1 of Botany, 40 of Zoology, and 2 of a Summary of Results. Besides editing these, he wrote the "Summary of Results," and was joint-author of the "Narrative of the Cruise" and of the "Report on Deep-Sea Deposits." He has thus been engaged in the work of the Challenger Expedition over a quarter of a century, and he bore a considerable part of the labour connected with the completion of the Government publications. He has published papers on the "Structure and Origin of Coral Reefs and Islands"; "Marine Deposits from many parts of the World"; on the "Height of the Sea and Depth of the Ocean"; on the "Annual Rainfall on the Land of the Globe"; on the "Exploration of Antarctic Regions"; on the "Fauna of the Kerguelen Region of the Southern Ocean"; on the "Manganese Oxides and Manganese Nodules in the Deep-Sea Deposits"; on the "Geology of the Pacific"; on the "Discovery of America"; "Effects of Winds on the Distribution of Temperature in the Sea and Fresh Water"; "Lochs of the West of Scotland"; "Bipolarity in the Distribution of Organisms"; and on many other subjects connected with geography, oceanography, and marine biology. In recognition of his scientific work he has been elected a corresponding Member and Honorary Member of a large number of British and Foreign Academies and Scientific Societies, has been awarded the Cuvier Prize and the Institut de France; the Gold Medal of the Gesellschaft für Naturkunde zu Berlin; the Royal Medal of the Royal Society; the Founders' Medal of the Geographical Society; the Neill Dougall-Brisbane Medals of the Society of Edinburgh. He was created K.C.B. in 1898. He married, in 1874, Isabel, daughter of the late John Henderson, Esq., shipowner, Glasgow. Addresses: Challenger Lodge, Edinburgh; and Athenæum.

MURPHY, The Right Hon. Jeremiah, B.A., LL.D. Dublin, is the fourth son of late Jeremiah Murphy, of Limerick, born in 1826. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was called to the Bar in 1849. He became a Q.C. in 1854, and was in 1883 appointed an Exchequer Commissioner in the High Court of Justice in Ireland. NANSEN, Fridtjof, Sc.D., Ph.D., LL.D., D.C.L., was born near Christiania on Oct. 10, 1861. He went to the University of Christiania in 1880, and decided upon studying zoology; therefore, to study animal life in high latitudes he, in March 1882, went out in a Norwegian sealing ship to the Jan Mayen and Spitzbergen seas, and afterwards to the sea between Iceland and Greenland. He returned from this expedition in July 1882, and later in the same year was appointed curator in the Natural History Museum at Bergen (Norway). In 1888 he took his degree as Doctor of Philosophy, and in May of that year started on his

The scientific results of Dr. Nansen's expedition are of considerable value. Briefly put, his achievements are as follows: (1) he has succeeded in getting within 250 statute miles of the North Pole, some 200 miles nearer than the highest previous attainment; (2) he has established the essential truth of the theory to polar currents; and (3) he has accumulated a mass of evidence bearing on polar navigation of the highest scientific importance. On Feb. 8, 1897, Dr. Nansen delivered a lecture on "Some Results of the Norwegian Arctic Expedition" before a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society at the Albert Hall, Kensington. The President of the Society (Sir Clements Markham) occupied the chair, and was supported by the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, the audience including many persons of distinction. At the conclusion of the lecture the Prince of Wales, on behalf of the Society, presented Dr. Nansen with a medal specially struck in his honour. During the same month (February 1897) Dr. Nansen's great work, "Farthest North," was published. The full title of this book, which, in importance, takes high rank in the scientific literature of the century, is: "Fridtjof Nansen's 'Farthest North,' being the Narrative of the Voyage and Exploration of the Fram, 1893-96, and the Fifteen Months' Sledge Expedition. By Dr. Nansen and Lieutenant Johansen, with an Appendix by Otto Sverdrup." After a short rest of a few months in his native land, Dr. Nansen started on a lecturing tour through Europe. He married, in September 1889, Mdlle. Eva Sars, an eminent singer, the youngest daughter of the late M. Sars, Professor of Zoology in Christiania University. Address: Lysaker, near Christiania.

NAOROJI, Dadabhai, late M.P. for Central Finsbury, is the first native of India who has represented a British constituency in Parliament. He is the son of a Parsee priest, and was born in Bombay on Sept. 4, 1825. When only four years old he lost his father, his early education thus devolving on his mother, who brought him up with great diligence and care. In India the opportunities of receiving an English education could hardly be said to have existed in the thirties, and young Naoroji was put into the only Government school that Bombay could boast at the time, being a seminary which ultimately developed into the Elphinstone Institution. Here his career was one of uniform success. From the first he showed an unusual predilection for mathematics, and carried away almost all the prizes and exhibitions for proficiency in his favourite study, as well as for political economy and natural philosophy. His highest academic reward came when he was elected to the Chair of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in his own college, the first Professorship ever held by an Indian in any prominent college in his country. Mr. Naoroji became famous as a reformer. Whatever could conduce to the regeneration of his countrymen, politically, socially, and morally, whether it was the abolition of child marriage and re-marriage of widows, whether the educating and cultivating of public opinion in the community, the institution of schools, libraries, and gymnasiums, Mr. Naoroji was in the centre of each movement. Such institutions as the Students' Literary and Scientific Society, the Dryan Prasarak Society, the Rahnumaya Mazdyasna Sabha, the Iranee Fund, the Bombay Gymnasium, the Framjee Cowasjee Institute, the Native General Library, the Victoria Museum, the Rast Goftai newspaper, an independent organ of native opinion, all owe their existence to his initiative or co-operation. He first left Bombay for England in 1855 as a partner in the firm of Messrs. Cama and Co., the first Indian house established in London and Liverpool, and has resided here, off and on, since then. After his arrival he lost no time in rousing a deep sympathy for his country and a high regard for his integrity and ability in such noted friends of India as the late John Bright and Henry Fawcett, and succeeded in furnishing most of them with effective briefs for fighting the battles of India in England. The question of holding examinations simultaneously in India and England for admission to the Indian Civil Service was then present in his mind, and he succeeded, through the kindness of the late Sir Erskine Perry, an early friend and patron, in unearthing a minute of a Committee of the Council of the Secretary of State for India which, so long ago as 1860, had recommended a step which only the other day found a confirmation in a resolution of the present House of Commons, viz. to hold examina-

and decided to present Mr. Naoroji with his portrait and a purse. Mr. Naoroji contributed largely to the appointment of the Select Committee to inquire into the finances of India (1873). His appointment, in 1874, as Prime Minister of the Prince of Baroda called forth his highest faculties as a statesman; and Sir Lewis Pelly, the British Resident at the Court, stated in recognition of his services, "that until purged by Mr. Dadabhai, the criminal and civil administration of justice was notoriously venal and corrupt." He was a member of the Corporation and Municipal Council of Bombay; as such he discovered the inaccuracy that had crept into the mode of calculating the instalment of principal and interest payable on account of the Vehar Waterworks, which had caused a loss to the Municipal Treasury to the extent of over £600,000 sterling. About this time came out his treatise, called the "Poverty of India," containing conclusions in which Major Baring (now Lord Cromer) subsequently concurred. Other works of Mr. Naoroji are: "England's Duties to India," and "Mysore," 1867; "The Expenses of the Abyssinian War" "Reply to Lord

NAPOLEON, Victor Jerome Fred-rick, son of Prince Napoleon and the incess Clotilde, was born July 18, 1822. On the death of the Prince Imperial in 1879, when his father held the position of head of the House of Bonaparte, the claim was disputed by M. Paul Cassagnac and several other Imperialists, who put forward the young Prince Victor as his father's rival. But this move was not encouraged by the son, though the latter, it is understood, was nominated in the Prince Imperial's will as his successor. During the last years of his father's lifetime he was put forward by ardent followers as head of the "Victorians," who at one time were fiercely opposed to the "Jerômistes," but Prince Victor is said to have denied that he was in any way opposed to his father's policy, and even accompanied him on a visit to the Empress in England in 1883. In 1884, however, he put himself at the head of a new Bonapartist faction, and left his father's house, having been urged to this step by the Bonaparte paper Le Pays. At the same time a revenue of 40,000 francs a year was left him, which further accentuated his independence. When the Expulsion Bill of 1886 became law the Prince and his father were exiled from France, but while the latter took up his abode in Switzerland, the son went to Brussels. Nor did he again see his father till the latter lay dying in Rome, in March 1891. In 1889 he issued a manifesto previous to the general election of that year. He is now head of the French Bonapartist party, and has made several ineffectual attempts to stir up French opinion in his favour. In 1898 there was a rumour that the small remnant of French Bonapartists were dissatisfied at his lack of initiative, and that, in consequence, he had resigned his titular leadership to his younger brother, Prince Louis Napoleon, who is a Colonel in the Russian cavalry, and reported to be made of far sterner stuff than his elder brother.

NARES, Vice-Admiral Sir George Strong, K.C.B., F.R.S., is a son of the late Captain William Henry Nares, R.N., of Danestown, Aberdeen, by his marriage with a daughter of Mr. E. G. Dodd, and a great-grandson of Sir George Nares, formerly one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas. He was born in 1831, and was educated at the Royal Naval College, New Cross, where he gained the naval cadetship which is given annually to the most promising pupil by the Lords of the Admiralty. He saw some service in H.M.S. Canopus forming part of the Channel Squadron, and afterwards in H.M.S. Havannah on the Australian station. He was a mate on board the Resolute in the Arctic Expedition of 1852-54, when he took an active share in the winter amusements, and did his part manfully as a sledge-traveller. He acted in the theatricals, and gave a series of lectures to the men on winds and on the laws of mechanics. In the spring of 1853 he was auxiliary to Lieut. Mecham, and travelled over 665 miles in sixty-nine days. In 1854 he started in the intense cold of March, and went over 586 miles in fifty-six days. On the return of this Arctic Expedition he served in H.M.S. Glatton during the last year of the Crimean war; afterwards in H.M.S. Conqueror on the Mediterranean station. On the inauguration of the present system of training for naval cadets, he served as Lieutenant in charge of cadets under the late Captain Robert Harris, in H.M. ships Illustrious and Britannia. In 1854 he was promoted to the rank of Commander, being attached also to the training-ship Boscawen. In 1866-67 we find him employed at the Antipodes in command of the Salamander, engaged in supporting the original settlement of Royal Marines at Somerset, Torres Strait, North Australia, and in surveying the eastern and north-eastern coasts of Australia. In 1869 he was sent in H.M.S. Shearwater to survey and report upon the Gulf of Suez. From 1872 down to the end of 1874 Captain Nares was in command of H.M.S. Challenger, employed in deep-sea exploration round the world. He was then ordered home, and appointed to the command of the Arctic Expedition. The two ships composing the expedition, H.M.S. Alert and H.M.S. Discovery, commanded respectively by Captains Nares and Stephenson, left England in May 1875, with the hope of reaching the North Pole via Smith's Sound. The expedition reached the mouth of Lady Franklin Bay on August 27. Here Captain Nares left the Discovery to take up her quarters for the winter, while the Alert continued her course along the western shore of Robeson Channel. This course she held until, on September 1, the Alert herself attained the then highest latitude, and was made fast to some grounded bergs of ice, within 100 yards of a tolerably level beach in lat. 82° 27' and long. 61° 22'. Lieut. Rawson, of the Discovery, with his sledge-crew of eight men, had accompanied the advance ship with the object of returning to the Discovery during the autumn with news of the Alert's progress. This journey, however, he was never able to accomplish, the snow being too deep, and the ice too treacherous and too frequently in motion, to render sledge-travelling possible for a distance of seventy to eighty miles at so late a period of the year. The Discovery therefore knew nothing of her consort's position until the ensuing spring.

On Oct. 12 the sun finally disappeared, leaving the Alert in total or partial darkness for 142 days, and the Discovery for almost the same period. After the return of daylight, sledge expeditions were arranged. A party, numbering in the aggregate fifty-three persons, led by Commander Markham and Lieut. Parr, made a very gallant attempt to reach the Pole. They were absent seventy-two days from the ship, and on May 12 succeeded in planting the British flag in lat. 83° 10' 26" N. From this position there was no appearance of land to the northward, but curiously enough, the depth of water was found to be only 72 fathoms. The men suffered intensely from the extreme cold, many were attacked by scurvy, and it was with great difficulty that the sledging party made their way back to the ship. Captain Nares now resolved to return home, as with the whole resources of the expedition he could not hope to advance more than about 50 miles beyond the positions already attained. The expedition arrived at Valentia, Oct. 27, 1876. In reward for his services Captain Nares was appointed a K.C.B., December 1. He was afterwards again placed in command of the Alert, which sailed from Portsmouth, Sept. 24, 1878, to survey Magellan Strait, South America. From 1879 to 1897 he was engaged at the Board of Trade as Professional Officer of the Harbour Department, and is now Acting Conservator of the river Mersey. He retired from the navy in 1886, and was made a Vice-Admiral in March 1892. He is the author of "The Naval Cadet's Guide, or Seaman's Companion; containing complete Illustrations of all the Standing Riggings, the Knots in Use, &c.," 1860, afterwards published under the title of "Seamanship," 2nd edit., 1862; 3rd edit., 1865; 4th edit., 1868; "Reports on Ocean Soundings and Temperature" (in the Challenger), printed by direction of the Lords of the Admiralty, 6 parts, 1874-75; "The Official Report of the Arctic Expedition," 1876; and "Narrative of a Voyage to the Polar Sea during 1875-76 in H.M. ships Alert and Discovery," 2 vols., 1878. He married, in 1858, Mary, daughter of the late Mr. W. G. Grant, of Portsmouth. Address: Claremont Road, Surbiton.

NAST, Thomas, American illustrator, was born at Landau in Bavaria, on Sept. 27, 1840. He went to America with his parents in 1846, his father, a musician in the Bavarian army, being advised to leave Germany, as his opinions were too Radical for the times. Young Thomas soon exhibited a preference for an artistic career, and at an early age, with very little instruction, began to furnish sketches for

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper and other periodicals. He was sent in 1860, to make illustrations of the fight between Heenan and Sayers in New York Illustrated News. Then he joined General Medici in the campaign in which Garibaldi freed Sicily and created the united kingdom of Italy. While in Italy he furnished sketches to various English, French, and American papers. Returning to America in February 1861, just before the breaking-out of the Civil War, he found the material which made his reputation as the patriotic artist of the war, and he produced from week to week those powerful pictures which won the citizen and cheered the soldier. During the period of corruption which followed the war, he made his best-remembered hits against the Tammany Ring in New York City. He is regarded as the father of American caricature, and it is generally conceded that to him is largely due the development of this branch of art in this country. He has also found time to illustrate a number of books and make designs for panoramas, as well as to paint one completely. In 1873 he made his first appearance as a lecturer, illustrating in the presence of the audience. He began with crayon sketches and advanced by degrees to oil paintings, possessing wonderful celerity of execution. He has since lectured in 1885 and 1888. He has also executed a number of oil paintings, the largest of which is now in the possession of the 7th Regiment of New York, and hangs in the Colonel's room, in their armory. It represents the departure of the regiment for the war, April 19, 1861. He is a veteran member of the New York Regiment, and served with his company during the riot of July 12, 1871. His home is at Morristown, N.J.

NATALIE, Queen of Serbia, is the daughter of Pierre Ivanovitch Kechka and was born May 2, 1859, and married at Belgrade to Milan I., ex-King of Serbia, Oct. 17, 1875; and was divorced from him in October 1888. Her son, Alexander I., who was born at Belgrade, Aug. 14, 1876, is now king. The validity of the divorce of the Queen, as conducted by the aged Metropolitan Theodosius alone, at the request of the king, was disputed by her Majesty; and in reply to a letter addressed by her to the Metropolitan Michael, she received a letter signed, not only by him, but also by two members of the Synod, stating that the decree of the Metropolitan Theodosius is null and void, having been granted without consultation with the Synod, and without the Queen having been heard in her own defence. Therefore there can be no doubt that the divorce was illegal. It was granted to the prelate who was almost in his dotage as it has since transpired, and who retired into a monastery. It was contrary to the ecclesiastical law of the Pope, which alone has jurisdiction in such cases, and it was declared invalid by the Holy Synod. In 1891 King Milan engaged to marry the daughter of the Queen of Serbia on condition that the Queen should be allowed to reside in the country. Accordingly, on May 18, 1891, Queen Alexandra was expelled from the private residence at Belgrade where she had resided since her divorce, but in January 1893 she was reconciled to the ex-king.

NEILSON, Madame Antonio, née Antoinette Anderson, an American actress, was born at Sacramento, California, July 28, 1859. Her parents moved to Kentucky when she was only six months old, and her home was at Louisville in that State until she went on stage in her seventeenth year. Her first presentation was as Juliet, Nov. 1876, which met with a marked success. After travelling for a few years in the north and west, she made her appearance before eastern audiences in the large cities in 1880, where she was as well received as she had previously been in smaller places. Her career from that time was one of unchecked prosperity, and actresses have met with more success and favour than has Miss Anderson. Her first visit to England (1879) was for only a few months, but on her return (1884-85) she appeared at the Lyceum Theatre, during Mr. Irving's absence in America. It was on his second visit that the Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon was opened, and Miss Anderson as Rosalind in "As You Like It" and her portrait in that character was one of the panels in the theatre. Her principal parts have been Juliet, "Fazio," Julia in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," Meg Merrilies, Pauline in "The Lady of Lyons," Galatea, Clarice in "The Boy and the Tragedy," Parthenia, and so on. From 1885 to 1889 she had engagements both in Great Britain and America, but a prolonged illness in 1889 compelled a temporary retirement from the stage, and early in 1890 she announced her withdrawal from the profession; shortly afterwards she married in London to M. Antonio de Viana, a citizen of New York.

Address: The Court Farm, Broadway, Worcestershire.

NEILSON, Julia (Mrs. Fred Terry), was born in London in 1868, and spent the first twelve years of her life there, when with her family she went to live in Wiesbaden. Here she developed a musical talent, and in 1883, on the return of her family to London, was entered as a student at the Royal Academy of Music, and from the age of sixteen onwards studied her art, chiefly under Mr. Randegger, winning such academic distinctions as the Llewellyn-Thomas Gold Medal for declamatory singing (1885), the Sainton-Dolby Prize, and the Westmoreland Scholarship. During her three years at the college she also took lessons in elocution from Mr. Walter Lacy, and sang several times in public at the Royal Albert Hall and at other concerts, winning the suffrages of critics and public alike. In the autumn of 1887 she acted in some amateur dramatic performances, ending by an appearance in W. S. Gilbert's "Pygmalion and Galatea" at St. George's Hall, Langham Place, which made so marked an impression on her audience that Mr. Randegger and Sir Joseph Barnby, who were present, urged her to take up the dramatic, as opposed to the purely musical, career. Mr. Barnby introduced her to Mr. Gilbert, who soon perceived her true dramatic gift. At a Lyceum matinée, in March 1888, Miss Julia Neilson made her début professionally as Cynisca in "Pygmalion and Galatea." Miss Mary Anderson acted Galatea, and the audience was considerable and cultivated. Soon after this, her first success, she appeared at a Savoy matinée as Galatea. Her next part was Lady Hilda in Gilbert's "Broken Heart," and in "The Wicked World," revived for her benefit, she played Selene with increasing acceptance. Mr. Rutland Barington was thus led to offer her the post of leading lady at the St. James's, where she appeared with him in "Brantingham Hall," which was especially written for her by W. S. Gilbert. Afterwards she was engaged by Mr. Tree to play Stella Darbyshire, Mrs. Tree's part, in "Captain Swift." She toured for some months in this part, steadily improving her talent, and returning to the Haymarket, played "Julie de Noirville" in "A Man's Shadow," and the title-roles in "The Dancing Girl" and "Hypatia," two parts for which her statuesque presence eminently fitted her. Her last notable appearance was as Rosalind, at the St. James's, when "As You Like It" had the longest recorded run in London. In 1898 Miss Julia Neilson played the Gipsy heroine in the "Gipsy Earl" at the Adelphi. She of Ulundi (Medal with clasp, and C.B.). He was placed on the Retired List in June 1892, was made a K.C.B. in May 1894, and appointed to the Colonelcy of the Devonshire Regiment, May 24, 1897. He married, in 1858, Anne Emily, second daughter of the Very Rev Thomas Garnier, Dean of Lincoln, and Lady Caroline, daughter of 4th Earl of Albemarle, and succeeded to the Arbury and Astley estates in Warwickshire, and Harefield in Middlesex, on the death of his cousin, the Right Hon. Charles Newdigate-Newdegate in April 1847. In accordance with the will of the above he took the additional surname of Newdegate by royal license in 1888. Lieut.-General Newdigate-Newdegate is a J.P. for Warwickshire. Address: Stoke, Coventry.

NEWNES, Sir George, Bart., J.P., was born on March 13, 1851, is the son of the Rev. T. M. Newnes, late of Matlock, and was educated at Silwates, Yorkshire, and at the City of London School. From what are understood to have been small beginnings financially, an old Fleet Street rumour being to the effect that the now famous Tit-Bits was started on a tiny capital, he has risen to be one of the largest and most successful newspaper proprietors in the world. Sir George Newnes makes his especial appeal to that huge and increasing class which, educated since 1870 in primary schools, is gradually awakening to an intelligent interest in popular literature. He is founder of George Newnes & Co., Limited, a company owning Tit-Bits, the Strand Magazine, the Wide World, an illustrated monthly under the editorship of Mr. Fitzgerald, and other papers. He and his company are also proprietors of the Westminster Gazette. From 1885 to 1895 he represented the Newmarket Division of Cambridgeshire in Parliament. In politics he is a Liberal. He was created a Baronet in 1895. As a public man he is interested in many objects, and has been a benefactor of Lynton and Lynmouth, North Devon. He married, in 1875, Priscilla, daughter of the Rev. J. Hillyard, of Leicester. Address: Wildcroft, Putney Heath, S.W., &c.

NEWTON, Professor Alfred, M.A., F.R.S., born at Geneva, June 11, 1829, is the fifth son of William Newton, of Elveden (formerly M.P. for Ipswich, and Lieut.-Colonel of West Suffolk Militia), by Elizabeth, a daughter of Richard Slater Milnes, of Fryston (formerly M.P. for York). He entered Magdalene College, Cambridge, and graduated B.A. in being afterwards chosen Traveling Fellow of that College, in which capacity visited Lapland, Iceland, the West Indies, North America, and other countries. In 1864 he accompanied Sir Edward Birkbeck to Spitzbergen, and was elected by the University of Cambridge to the Professorship of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy on its establishment in 1866. In 1868 he was re-elected Fellow of Magdalene College. Prof. Newton has published "Zoology of Ancient Europe," "Ootheca Wolleyana," 1864; and "The Ibis," second series; "Zoology Record," 1871-73; and the 4th ed. Yarrell's "British Birds." He is author of "Zoology," published by S.P.C.K., of "A Dictionary of Birds" (1896), of numerous papers in proceedings of the Zoological, Linnean, Royal, and other learned societies, as also of various contributions to scientific journals, and the "Encyclopædia Britannica," 9th ed. He was President in 1888, and has been many times Vice-President of Sections of the British Association, of the Biological Societies, and of the Entomological Association, and is Honorary Corresponding Member of various foreign and colonial societies. He has taken an active part in all questions relating to the legislative protection of birds. Address: Magdalene College, Cambridge.

NEWTON, Ernest, born in London on Sept. 12, 1856, was educated at Putney Heath, and at Uppingham School, and was articled to Mr. R. Norman Shaw, the well-known architect, in 1873. Elected Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects in 1890, he resigned this position in 1892. He published a "Book of Country Houses" in 1882; and another "Book of Houses" in 1890, and he contributed in 1892 one of a number of essays in the volume entitled "Architecture, Profession or an Art," edited by R. Norman Shaw, R.A., and J. G. Jackson, R.A. He is a member of the Art Workers' Guild; President of the Raymond Art Society, and has exhibited at the Royal Academy since 1881. Amongst his chief architectural works there may be mentioned: The Sisterhood and Chapel built at Lloyd Square, Clerkenwell; Redwood Bullerswood; Glebelands, Haslemere; Broome Hall, Wokingham; St. Swithun's Church, Lewisham; about 100 houses in different parts of England have moreover been designed by him. He is now bringing out a series of illustrated articles on "Modern English Domestic Architecture" in Kunst und Kunsthandwerk, an Austrian art magazine published in Vienna. Mr. Newton, in 1881, married Antoinette Hoyack, of Rotterdam, grand-son of Sir James Turing, Bart., Consul. Address: 4 Raymond's, Gray's Inn, W.C.; and 13 Earl's Kensington, W.

TON, Robert Milnes, M.A., Metropolitan Police Magistrate, born in London, July 2, 1821, being second son of William Newton, Esq., of Den, Suffolk, by Elizabeth, the daughter of Richard Slater Milnes, Esq., of York, Yorkshire. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and graduated M.A. in 1867. After practising law, he was called to the Bar at Gray's Inn, in May 1847. He was a Fellow of Cambridge from 1858 to 1866, and was appointed a Commissioner to inquire into the Lancaster Election of 1866. In November of that year he became a Metropolitan Police Magistrate at Great Marlborough Street, and he resigned in December 1896. Address: 18 Seymour Street, W.

NICHOLAS I., the Hospodar of Moldavia, was born Oct. 7, 1811; was educated at Trieste and in Paris; and died his uncle, who had been deposed, Aug. 25, 1860. He is Colonel of the 1st Moldavian infantry regiment. In 1890 the 25th anniversary of his accession to the throne was celebrated, and during the bi-centenary of his dynasty. In 1857 the Queen of England decorated him with the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order. In 1859 he married Princess Milona, daughter of Voyvode of Wallachia, and has nine children. His eldest son, Prince Danilo-Alexander, was born at Cettingé on June 29, 1871. His second daughter, Princess Helen, is married to Prince of Naples, the Italian heir-apparent, and Princess Anne, another daughter, is the wife of Prince Francis of Battenberg.

NICHOLAS II., Czar of all the Russias, was born at St. Petersburg on May 18, 1868, his father being the late Czar Alexander III., and his mother, the Princess Alexandra, a daughter of the King of Denmark and sister of the Princess of Wales. His education was conducted on modern lines, in accordance with the express wish of the late Czar, and he is instructed in modern languages, history, in constitutional history, economics, and the law and administration. He is a fluent linguist, and can speak French, German, Italian, and English. He is familiar with our literature and authors. He has travelled in the East, and visited India. While in Japan a stab wound was made on his life by a fanatical policeman, and on that occasion he displayed personal courage of a high order. During the Russian famine of 1891 he asked to be made President of the Committee of Succour, and as such displayed great energy. He succeeded his father Alexander III. on Nov. 1, 1894, and on the 26th of the same month was married, in accordance with the late Czar's dying wish, to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt, daughter of the late Princess Alice. Previously to the Czar's death this Princess had been summoned to the sick man's bedside at Livadia, and for some time it was supposed that the marriage would be solemnised during his lifetime. In a manifesto issued on the occasion of his marriage, Nicholas II. said, "Solicitous for the destinies of our new reign, we have deemed it well not to delay the fulfilment of our heart's wish, the legacy, so sacred to us, of our father, now resting in God; nor to defer the realisation of the joyful expectation of our whole people that our marriage, hallowed by the benediction of our parents, should be blessed by the Sacrament of our Holy Church." The Imperial Manifesto proper announced the granting of certain pecuniary alleviations to the classes connected with agriculture, and contained the following notable passage: "We, in this sad but solemn hour, when ascending the ancestral throne of the Russian Empire and of the Czardom of Poland and the Grand-Duchy of Finland, indissolubly connected with it, remember the legacy left to us by our departed father, and inspired by it, we, in the presence of the Most High, record the solemn vow always to make our sole aim the peaceful development of the power and glory of our beloved Russia and the happiness of all our faithful subjects." The new Emperor has also proved himself favourable to the principle of religious toleration, and of the freedom, to a limited extent, of the press, so far as it concerns the censorship of foreign newspapers imported into Russia. But though he was known to be an amiable and not unenlightened Prince, Europe was not prepared to find in him an idealism worthy of Tolstoi himself. In the summer of 1898 (August 24), when the German Emperor was on the eve of his pilgrimage to the Holy Land, the Czar startled Europe by issuing, through Count Moravieff, the now famous rescript or circular which proposed a conference of the Powers for the preservation of the general peace by disarmament. The rescript called forth universal expressions of admiration, and many sympathetic replies from official quarters have been sent to Russia. Before he came to the throne, Nicholas II. held several mands, and was Colonel of the Préobrajensky Regiment. In 1893 the Order of the Garter was conferred upon him. In November 1895 the Czarina gave birth to a daughter, the Princess Olga, and in June 1897 a second daughter was born to the Imperial couple. His coronation was celebrated with all the grandeur and pomp of the Orthodox Church, at Moscow, in May 1896. In the following August he set out on a series of important visits to the Emperors of Germany and Austria, the King of Denmark, and Queen Victoria. He was entertained by the latter at Balmoral, and on the conclusion of his visit he crossed the Channel to Cherbourg, where he was received with great honours by the President of the French Republic. His stay in Paris was marked by many brilliant displays and ceremonies, and was regarded by the French people as accentuating the entente cordiale, or alliance, as we may now call it, between France and Russia. In the summer of 1897 President Faure paid a visit to St. Petersburg, and it was on this occasion that the alliance was definitely announced.

NICHOLLS, Harry, comedian, was born in London in 1852, and educated at the City of London School. Primarily intended, like Horace of old, for the vocation of an auctioneer, he chose the dramatic calling, and made his first appearance at the Theatre Royal, Windsor, played largely in every kind of part in the provinces, and in 1874 was engaged by Mr. William Holland at the Surrey, and then played at the Grecian. For fourteen years, from July 1880, he was the popular and vivacious low comedian, both in drama and pantomime, at Drury Lane Theatre, and during the last five years has acted comic parts at the Adelphi. He has written a number of pantomimes, some of which have been acted at Drury Lane, and is part author of "Jane," "A Runaway Girl," &c. Address: Rupert Cottage, Bedford Park, W.

NICHOLLS, Henry Alfred Alford, C.M.G., M.D., F.L.S., was born in London on Sept. 27, 1851, and studied medicine at St. Bartholomew's Hospital and at the University of Aberdeen, where he graduated with honours as Master in Surgery, and Bachelor of Medicine in 1873. In the same year he gained the membership of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, since which time he has resided in Dominica, W.I., as Government Medical Officer. Here Dr. Nicholls has for a number of years carried on investigations into the nature of the disease known as Yaws. His articles on this malady in the Medical Times and Gazette, and his Official Reports as the Medical Superintendent of the Dominica Yaws Hospitals, have him the chief authority on the subject. He has established a reputation as a naturalist, and has published some treatises on tropical agriculture. In 1888 he gained the premium of £100 offered by the Government of Jamaica for the best book on tropical agriculture, for the use of the schools and colleges of that colony. In 1891 he was appointed Special Commissioner, by the Home Government, to inquire into the various matters relating to the spread of Yaws in the colonies of Tobago, Grenada, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, and the Leeward Islands. His report on the mission, addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, has been published as a blue-book under the title of "Report on Yaws in Tobago, Grenada, &c." &c. He has contributed numerous papers on Yaws and other tropical diseases to the leading medical journals, and papers on natural history to the Kew Bulletin, Nature, &c. He edited vols. i. and ii. of the Leeward Islands Medical Journal. He is a Fellow of the Linnean Society, a Corresponding Member of the Zoological Society of London, of the New York Academy of Sciences, of the Jamaica Institute, and of the Chamber of Agriculture of the French colony of Guadeloupe, and he is also an Honorary Member of the Royal Agricultural Society of British Guiana. He has been decorated for his services in Dominica, W.I. Address: Roseau, Dominica, West Indies.

NICHOLSON, Sir Charles, Bart J.P., D.C.L., LL.D., born Nov. 23, 1806, was educated in Edinburgh, where he graduated M.D. 1833. He became a resident in New South Wales in 1834, and was one of the original representative members for Port Phillip (now the Colony of Victoria) in the first Legislative Council established in New South Wales in 1843, of which body he became Chairman of Committees and subsequently Speaker from 1846 to 1856. He filled the post of Vice-Provost and subsequently that of Chancellor of the University of Sydney, and received the honour of Knighthood in 1852, and that of Baronet in 1859. He received also the honorary degree of D.C.L. from the University of Oxford, and that of LL.D. from the University of Cambridge. He is the author of various official papers and reports connected with Colonial, Economic, and Educational affairs, and has also written articles in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature (of which he is Vice-President), containing an account of exploration in Upper Egypt, and at Memphis with descriptions of remains of "Disk Worshippers," now deposited in the Museum of the University of Sydney. He ied, in 1865, Sarah, daughter of ibald Keightley. Addresses: The Totteridge, Herts; and Athenæum.

NICHOLSON, Edward Williams son, Bodley's Librarian, Oxford, was born March 16, 1849, at St. Helier, Jersey.
is the only son of the late Edward Nicholson, R.N., and Emily Hamilton
L. He was educated at Llanrwst nar School, Liverpool College, Ton-School, and Trinity College, Oxford ar, first class Classical Moderations, ord Greek Verse Prize, Hall-Hough-Junior New Testament Prize; M.A.). is career in librarianship began when he was still an undergraduate. He was ian (Hon.) of Oxford Union Society 1872, and held office for a year. On leaving Oxford he was for nearly ten years Principal Librarian of the London Institu-(1873-82). In 1882 he was appointed Librarian of the Bodleian Library, Oxford. He was Joint-Secretary of the International Conference of Librarians, 1877, and of the Library Association, 1877-78;

Oxford against Cambridge in 1871-73. Addresses: Bodleian Library, Oxford; and 2 Canterbury Road, Oxford.

NICOL, Erskine, A.R.A., R.S.A., eldest son of James Main Nicol, was born at Leith, Scotland, on July 3, 1825, and received his art education in the Trustees' Academy, Edinburgh, under Sir William Allan and Mr. Thomas Duncan. In 1846 he went to reside in Ireland, where he remained three or four years. It was this residence in the sister isle which decided the painter's choice of his peculiar field of representation, for most of his subsequent pictures have been Irish in subject. From Ireland he returned to Edinburgh, and after exhibiting for some time, he was ultimately elected a Member of the Royal Scottish Academy. In 1862 he settled in London, and after that date contributed regularly to the exhibitions of the Royal Academy, of which body he was elected an Associate in June 1866. His principal pictures are: "Notice to Quit," 1862;

"Renewal of the Lease Refused," 1863;
"Among the Old Masters," and "Waiting for the Train," 1864; "A Deputation," 1865; "Both Puzzled," "Paying the Rent," and "Missed It," 1866; "A Country Booking-Office," and "Kiss an' make it up," 1867; "A China Merchant," and "Waiting at the Cross-roads," 1868;
"A Disputed Boundary," 1869; "How it was she was delayed," "On the Look-Out," "The Fisher's Knot," and "The Children's Fairing," 1871; "His Bá-bees,"
"The Play Hour," and "Bothered," 1872;
"Pro Bono Publico," "Steady, Johnnie," and "Past Work," 1873; "A Dander after the Rain," and "When there's nothing else to do," 1874; "The New Vintage," "Always Tell the Truth," and "The Sabbath Day," 1875; "A Storm at Sea," and 1876; "His Legal Adviser," and "Unwillingly to School," 1877; "A Colorado Beetle," "The Lonely Tenant of the Glen,"

"Under a Cloud," and "The Missing Boat," 1878; and "Interviewing their Member," 1879. Mr. Nicol entered on the Retired List of the Royal Academy in 1885, on account of ill-health. Address:
The Well, Feltham, Middlesex.

NICOLL, William Robertson, LL.D., was born at the Free Church Manse, Auchindoir, Aberdeenshire, on Oct. 10, 1851. He was educated at the University of Aberdeen, where he graduated as M.A.
in 1870, and at the Free Church College, Aberdeen, where he stayed till 1874. In the latter year he was ordained minister of the Free Church at Dufftown, and in 1877 was transferred to the Free Church at Kelso. In 1884 he succeeded Dr.
Samuel Cox as editor of the Expositor, and in 1886 he came to London and started the British Weekly. In October 1891 he started the Bookman, a monthly literary journal, and in 1893 the Woman at Home was largely founded by him. Dr. Nicoll is the author of many theological works, as well as of a "Life of James Macdonald of the Times," 1889, and a "Memoir of Professor Elmslie." In 1897 he published several theological works. He is joint-editor of "Literary Anecdotes of the Nineteenth Century," of which two volumes were published in 1895-96. He has been for long engaged on "The Victorian Era of English Literature: a Biographical and Critical History," and has originated and edited the "Expositor's Bible," "The Clerical Library," "The Theological Educator," and "The Household Library of Exposition." In 1890 Aberdeen University conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. In 1897 he married (2) Miss

Lantern Place, Andros, Ha. Tre Lodge, Hampstead, N.W. &c.

NICOLSON Sir Arthur, K.C.I.E.
A. G. Lever Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in Morocco was born Sept.
11 1841 and is the only surviving son of Admiral Sir Frederick W. L. Nicolson and Baroness. He was educated at Rugby and Brasenose College, Oxford, and was appointed to a clerkship in the Foreign Office Aug. 20 1870. He was Assistant Private Secretary to the late Earl Granville from 1872 to 1875 and having held posts at Berlin, Paris and Constantinople he was appointed Superintendent of Stra-nent Interoceanic in Turkey in 1874. In 1881 he accompanied the Marquis of Dufferin to Egypt and then became Charge d'Affaires at Athens in 1884. In 1885 he was Consul-General for Hungary and in 1892 British Agent in Bulgaria where he exchanged for his present post in the next year. He married in 1882
Mary daughter of A. Howard Hamilton,
Esq. of Killinure Castle Co. Down.
Address: British Legation, Tangiers.

NIETZSCHE Friedrich Wilhelm, philosopher, is by descent a Pole, and was born Dec. 10 1844 at Rostock, near Lanzich in Saxony. As a child he was obstinate and passionate, but at an early age he acquired strong self-control, and even, it is said, on one occasion deliberately burnt his hand to show that Much-Schon's act was but a trifling matter.
At school he had little to do with his fellows, although he is represented to have been a well-developed, vigorous boy who loved games of various kinds, especially those of his own invention. He was afterwards sent to a school where the discipline was of military strictness, and while there, first became acquainted with the music of Wagner which not only stimulated his artistic instincts but influenced his moral and intellectual life. He left school and entered Universities a man of extraordinary vigour of mind and will, and at the age of twenty-two was appointed a Professor of Philosophy at Basel. While at Basel he became intimately acquainted with Wagner, of whose music Nietzsche founded the school of philosophy. The Wagnerian influence was but a passing phase. In 1874 while attending the Bayreuth Festival he entire change came over his views with regard to Wagner, and it has been thought that at this point Nietzsche's tragic mental malady first revealed itself. His favourite sister, however, thought that the disease began in the latter part of 1870. "He had six wounded young soldiers to look after, and the strain produced in him some depressing physical symptoms—stomach somnia, and then came the debilitating remedy of drugs. He had done his physical medicine that the professors had done.

For him trouble was stricter philosopher wandered in Europe, visiting various lands and fighting desperately against of mental disease. Meanwhile his poetry output was abundant, and he increased it each succeeding year.
The publication of "Thus spoke Zarathustra" he exclaimed: "I have met the deepest truth they possess." 1889 the end came, and he fell into "outer darkness" of hopeless despair.
This day he has given us such reason. His works expound a new art philosophy, denouncing all and treating all moral law as a of Christian superstition. He was developed by giving mankind to the struggle for existence pleasure only, and despising translation of his works into English began in 1890, but met with lowers. Nordal, etc. has a special task for him, and the literary of the two philosophers have since Europe.

NIGHTINGALE Florence whose name has been rendered famous by her philanthropic efforts to relieve sufferings of our wounded soldiers Crimean War, is younger daughter William E. Nightingale, of Exeter, Hampshire, and Lea Hunt, of Exeter.
She was born at Florence in 1820.
She enjoyed all the advantages of the lot of the children of the and refined, and her command of languages and other branches of "liberal education" stood out stead in her after career. It was before her philanthropic work began among the poorer hospitals.
English home led her to the study of the ameliorative physical and moral distress. Not with studying the workings of schools, hospitals, and reform institutions, she examined similar institutions in the same spirit, and spent some months in 1848 at Protestant Sisters of Mercy at Elm on the Rhine. Before long she presented itself for applying the lessons she there learned to her that the Government Sanitary Survey languished for the want vision and support, she generously lent her personal energies and means to its restoration and organisation. This work had started ed when, before Miss Nightingale, time to recover her overtaxed new demands were made upon of self-sacrifice. The inefficiency management of our military hospitals in the Crimea led to an outburst of indignation. Various plans of help were suggested, the most popular of which was to send forth a select band of ladies. The suggestion of the late Lord Herbert, Secretary of War (whose letter crossed Miss Nightingale offering to go), took the organisation and conduct of the work into her hands. No eulogy can do justice to her energy, and devotion she displayed in her self-imposed task. In the midst of confusion and disorder, where confusion had reigned, and by affording care and comfort, she alleviated the sufferings of the lives of many, and earned the gratitude of the sick and wounded, as well as the gratitude of her country. A fund amounting to £50,000, raised by the public in recognition of her services, was at her special request voted to the formation of an institution for the training of nurses, now known as St. Thomas's Hospital, in London, "Nightingale Home." Her writings have led to disseminate practical knowledge on the subject in which she is interested. "Notes on Hospitals," a work which had a very large circulation, appeared in 1859; "Notes on the Management of Hospitals," of which nearly a hundred copies have been sold, was published in 1860; and "Observations on the State of the Army in India," in 1861. It is understood that, at the request of the War Office, she drew up a very confidential report on the state of the Army Medical Department in the Crimea, and she has a further claim on the gratitude of her countrymen for the interest she has displayed in the movement. Although confined to her room by constant ill-health, she has ceaselessly at work for the welfare of her fellow-subjects in India in all affecting the improvement of their education, and social benefit. The want of hospitals and supply of medical aid in different parts of the world, measures, and nursing arrangements for the army at home and abroad, have occupied her thoughts and time. During her visit to America she was frequently consulted on questions affecting the health and assistance for the wounded. During the Franco-German war she was similarly appealed to by the authorities. Her name is as well known in America as in England, in fact, it is a household word all the world over. Address: 10 South Street, Park

NIGRA, Count Constantino, an Italian diplomatist, born at Castellemonate, June 12, 1827, studied law at the University of Turin, and took part as a volunteer in the war against Austria in 1848. Being severely wounded at the battle of Rivoli he abandoned the military career, entered the Diplomatic Service, and acted as Secretary to Count Cavour at the Congress of Paris in 1856. He took part in the negotiations between Piedmont and France which preceded the war of 1859, at which he was present with the general staff of Napoleon III. He was Secretary to the Italian Plenipotentiaries at the Zurich Congress, after which he was nominated, on Cavour's recommendation, Minister Plenipotentiary, first of Sardinia, and afterwards of the kingdom of Italy in Paris. On the war of 1870 breaking out he was among those who made real efforts to prevent it, and then showed himself to the end, at least personally, devoted to the Emperor and Empress. He was one of the few persons who, on Sept. 4, were by the side of the menaced and fugitive sovereigns. After having represented Italy in Paris for fifteen years as Minister Plenipotentiary, he was in May 1876 appointed to fill the same post at St. Petersburg. He was nominated Italian Ambassador in London in November 1882, on which occasion King Humbert conferred upon him the title of Count, in attestation of his Majesty's recognition of the eminent services he had rendered to his country. Count Nigra has published several works on the dialects and popular poetry of Italy. In 1885 he resigned the embassy in London, and was succeeded by Count Corti. He was afterwards sent as Italian Ambassador to Vienna. He is a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour.

NILSSON, Christina. See MIRANDA, COUNTESS OF.

NOBLE, Captain Sir Andrew, K.C.B., F.R.S., D.L., was born in Scotland on Sept. 13, 1832, and is the son of G. Noble, of the Royal Navy. He was educated at Edinburgh Academy and at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, after which he entered the Royal Artillery and rose to be Captain. He was appointed Secretary to the Committee on Rifled Cannon in 1858, and to that on Plates and Guns in 1859. He was Assistant-Inspector of Artillery in the same year, in 1860 was a Member of the Ordnance Select Committee, and was a Member of the Committee of Explosives throughout its sittings. He is now Vice-Chairman of Sir W. G. Armstrong & Co., Ltd., which he joined as long ago as 1860. He was elected F.R.S. in 1870, and was

NENSKIÖLD, Baron Adolf wedish naturalist and explorer, in Helsingfors, the capital of lov, 18, 1832. Descended from family long eminent in scientific pursuits, he had his inherent tastes developed alike by his surroundings at his home at Frugard, which contained an extensive mineral and natural history collection, and by his journeys with his father, Nils Gustaf, who was chief of the Finland Mining Department. Thus the lad cared more for practical than for theoretical learning when he first went to the Gymnasium at Borgo, and on entering the University of Helsingfors in 1849 devoted himself almost entirely to scientific studies, spending his vacations in excursions to the rich mineral localities of Finland. He soon became eminent in this particular branch of science, and was nominated to several appointments, but he unluckily incurred the suspicion of the Russian authorities by participation in various students' meetings, and time after time lost his appointments, and was obliged to leave the country. Indeed, at last, for some years he was unable to obtain a passport to return to Finland. He therefore settled in Sweden, and in 1858 first entered on his Arctic travels by accompanying Torell to Spitzbergen. On his return to Stockholm, Nordenskiöld was nominated Director of the Mineralogical Department of the various geographical and scientific researches, and for making a preliminary reconnoitring for the measurement of an arc of the meridian. The work was not then finished, and accordingly, three years later, Nordenskiöld headed an expedition which successfully completed the reconnoitring, and marked the southern part of Spitzbergen. The explorers, however, met with some shipwrecked walrus-hunters, and were obliged to return, their provisions being inadequate to maintain so large an addition to the party. Thus disappointed, Nordenskiöld now endeavoured to organise a fresh expedition, and he eventually started in 1868 in the Government steamer Sofla, which managed to attain the high latitude of 81° 42'—a latitude exceeded only by Hall's American and Parry's and Nares's British Arctic Expeditions, and never exceeded by a sailing vessel in the old hemisphere. This success convinced Nordenskiöld that he could reach a much higher latitude by wintering in Spitzbergen and utilising sledges. Accordingly, after an interval—during which he sat in the Swedish Diet, and travelled in Greenland to ascertain the respective value of dogs and reindeer as beasts of burden for sledge journeys—Nordenskiöld sailed in 1872 to Spitzbergen in the Polhem, accompanied by two tenders. He made during this voyage the first serious attempt to penetrate on the inland ice in the interior, and discovered at Ovisak the largest known blocks of native iron, and brought home collections of fossil plants of great importance to the history of climatology during former geological epochs. The winter was unusually early, and the ice shut in the tenders, which were to have returned home, thereby straitening the provisions through extra mouths; the reindeer were lost, and the men suffered greatly from scurvy. Nevertheless Nordenskiöld and Lieutenant Palander successfully surveyed part of North-East Land, and in the following July the vessels were extricated from their winter quarters, Mussel Bay, on the north coast of Spitzbergen, and returned home richly laden with important scientific collections. Nordenskiöld now turned his attention to Siberian exploration, and in 1875 sailed through the Kara Sea to the Yenissei, and ascended the river in a small boat, returning home overland. It was the first time that any ship had succeeded in penetrating from the Atlantic to the great Siberian rivers. He introduced in the following year, after a flying visit to the Philadelphia Exhibition, the first merchandises by sea to Siberia, returning in the autumn with his steamer viâ Kara Sea and Matotschkim Sound. These experiences gave Nordenskiöld a reasonable hope of accomplishing the North-East Passage. The King of Sweden, Mr. Oscar Dickson, and Mr. Sibiriakoff at once lent their aid to the project, and in July 1878 Professor Nordenskiöld started in the Vega. She was the first vessel to double the most northern point of the Old World, Cape Tchelyuskin; she wintered near Behring's Strait; and once more free in July 1879, reached Japan on Sept. 2. On his arrival in Europe Nordenskiöld was enthusiastically welcomed and laden with honours. He was created a Baron (April 1880), and appointed a Commander of the "Nordstjerne Order" (Order of North Star). In 1883 Nordenskiöld made his second voyage to the interior of Greenland, and succeeded in penetrating with a ship through the dangerous ice-barrier along the east coast of that country south of the polar circle, a feat in vain attempted during 300 years by different Arctic expeditions. He has also busied himself with a project for an expedition to the South Pole. He has written minerological memoirs: "The Voyage of the Vega round Asia," 1881; "The Second Swedish Expedition to Greenland," 1885; "Facsimile Atlas to the Early History of Cartography," 1889; and "Periplus," 1897. His letters, written during some of his earlier explorations, have been translated into French (1880).

NORFOLK, Duke of, His the Most Noble Henry I Howard, P.C., K.G., J.P., Earl of Surrey, and Norfolk, and Baron Fitz Clun, Oswaldestre, and Maitavens. Duke and Earl, Knight of the Hereditary Earl-Marshal, and Chief of England, is the eldest son of the Duke, by his wife Augusta Mary Catharine, second daughter of the 1st Lord Lyons. He was born in Terrace, London, Dec. 27, 1847, and succeeded to the peerage on the death of his father, Nov. 25, 1860. His Grace is a Roman Catholic, takes great interest in all matters relating to his Church. President of the Catholic Union of Britain. It was to the Duke of Norfolk that Dr. Newman addressed in 1845 his reply to Mr. Gladstone's "Political postulation." The Duke of Norfolk took a prominent part, about the time of the general election of 1886, in the opposition to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule measure, thus bringing himself into collision with the Irish hierarchy. In 1887 the Duke was Her Majesty's Special Commissioner with presents and congratulations to the Pope on his jubilee, and in 1893 a special band of English pilgrims were present at the state celebration of St. Peter's. From 1892 to 1895 he was Lord Mayor of the City of London on the London Council. In 1895 he was appointed Master-General, and has organised the Imperial Penny Postage in the face of great difficulties. From 1895 to 1897 he was Mayor of Sheffield, and from 1897 onwards has been first Lord of Sheffield. He takes great interest in the Volunteer movement, and in 1864 has been Hon. Colonel of the West Riding (Yorks.) Volunteers. In 1891 Major, with the rank of Colonel, in the 2nd Volunteer Infantry of the Royal Sussex Regiment. He is the Oratory, Brompton, on Nov. 1, 1887. Lady Flora Hastings, eldest daughter of Charles Frederick Abney Hastings, Lord Donnington, of Donnington, Leicestershire, and the late Countess of London. Her Grace died on Nov. 1, 1887. Their son, Philip, the Duke of Arundel and Surrey, was born on Nov. 1, 1887. Addresses: Norfolk House, Strand, S.W.; and Arundel Castle, Sussex, &c.

NORMAN, Canon Alfred M.A. Oxon., D.C.L. Hon., D.D. LL.D. St. Andrews, F.R.S., F.R.S.E. youngest son of John Norman, of the county of Somerset, of Iwoodbury, and Claverham House, that county. He was born on Nov. 1, 1887, where his father was at that time

In 1848 he matriculated at Oxford, taking the B.A. in 1852, and that of M.A. in 1859. At the University he studied and collected the inland mollusca of Oxford and also collected the fossils of the Oxford strata. In 1854-55 he was in the family of the Dowager Countess of Glasgow, at Cumbrae, on the Clyde. Here, with every facility for land and boats, he commenced his collection of the marine fauna of the Clyde, and to this branch of his work he gave from that period chiefly his spare time. In 1855-56 he was at Theological College reading for Orders. In the latter year he was ordained Deacon by the Bishop of Exeter, and Priest in 1857, being at that time curate of Kibworth, Leicester. In 1858 he accepted the curacy of the church of the county of Durham, and in 1859 of Houghton-le-Spring. In 1860 he was presented by the Crown to the newly formed parish of Wear near Fence Houses, co. Durham. In 1865, on the presentation of the Bishop of Durham, became Rector of Houghton-le-Spring, which living he resigned in 1868. From 1867 to 1879 he was chaplain to the late Earl of Durham. In 1879 he was made Honorary Canon of Durham Cathedral. For twenty years he was Honorary Secretary of the Durham Diocesan Society for Schoolmasters, and for many years Honorary Secretary of the Durham Diocesan Conference. He was elected F.L.S. in 1880, and F.R.S. in 1881. In 1882 he has received the medal of the Legion of Honour of France, conferred upon him in recognition of the part he took in the expedition by special invitation of the Government, he was associated with the Commission of French Savants in the expedition of the great depths of the sea, in the surveying steamer Albatross. In 1883 he was Chairman of the Committee on Natural History at the Fisheries Exhibition, London. He was Vice-President of the Marine Biological Association of Great Britain, of the British Ornithologists' Field Club (President 1884-85), and of the British Entomological Society (President 1886-87).

NORMAN, Henry, author, journalist, and traveller, was born at Leicester on Sept. 19, 1858, and is the son of Henry and Sarah Norman. He received his education privately in France, and afterwards at Harvard University, of which he is B.A., and at Leipzig University. After graduating, he inaugurated the public agitation for the national preservation of the Niagara Falls, which resulted in their subsequent purchase by the State of New York. He contributed to the Fortnightly Review and the Spectator, and in 1886 joined the editorial staff of the Pall Mall Gazette, for which journal he made a tour of the world, 1889-92. He has visited the whole of the United States and Canada, and travelled and explored in Japan, Siberia, Korea, China, Siam, the Malay Peninsula (in which he went through a tract of country hitherto unexplored), and Egypt. In 1892 he joined the Daily Chronicle, and became literary editor, the famous "literary page" of that journal being under his management. For the Chronicle, of which he was appointed assistant-editor in 1895, Mr. Norman travelled in the Balkans in 1895, interviewing the Prince of Montenegro, Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and other high personages. At the beginning of 1896 he was sent to Washington during the Anglo-American dispute concerning the Venezuela Boundary. His labours in the cause of arbitration were recognised by President Cleveland's personal thanks. His despatches from Athens in 1897, where he represented his journal during the negotiations preceding the Turco-Greek War, again attracted much attention in England, and the King of Greece conferred on him the Order of the Saviour. In Feb. 1899 it was announced that Mr. Henry Norman had severed his connection with the Daily Chronicle in order to devote himself to literary work. He contributes frequently to the Contemporary and regularly to Cosmopolis, is a member of the Council and Management Committee of the Society of Authors, and President of the Omar Khayyam Club, 1898. His publications are: "The Preservation of Niagara Falls," 1881; "Bodyke: a Chapter in the History of Irish Landlordism," 1887; "The Real Japan," 1892; "Peoples and Politics of the Far East," 1895; and "The Near East," 1898. He married M<sup>rs</sup>. Muriel Dowie (see NORMAN, Mrs. HENRY), author of "A Girl in the Karpathians," &c., in 1891. Address: The Savile Club, London.

NORMAN, Mrs. Henry, née M<sup>rs</sup>. Muriel Dowie, was born in Liverpool on July 15, 1867, and is the second daughter of Muir Dowie, and of a daughter of the well-known Robert Chambers of Edinburgh. She was educated in Liverpool, and in Stuttgart and France, and acquired her love of open-air life in the Highlands of Scotland, where her father hired shootings at different times. She first made her mark as a reciter, and in 1890 travelled and sojourned in the Karpathian Mountains, where she lived, a solitary English girl, protected in her walks only by a peasant attendant. Her twenty-third birthday, she tells us, found her engaged in revolver practice, for she was in a land where wild cats, bears, and wolves might be encountered at any moment. She conformed to the simple habits of the people, eating no meat and drinking neither wine nor beer. Her costume consisted of knickerbockers and leggings worn beneath a lady's ordinary skirt. The latter was so contrived as to be easily detached to permit of Miss Dowie riding en cavalier when it was necessary to go long distances. A full account of the journey, with all its picturesque and entertaining adventures, appeared afterwards in the Fortnightly Review under the title "In Ruthenia," and was subsequently embodied in her now famous book "A Girl in the Karpathians," 1891, which created a considerable stir at the time of its publication. Other works from Mrs. Norman are a novel, "Gallia," 1890; "Whims of Fate," 1896; and "The Old Bough," 1898, besides which she has written much in her husband's newspaper and elsewhere on social and domestic matters, particularly as they affect

NOVIKOFF, Madame Olga ("O. K."), journalist and foreign correspondent, was born in Russia in 1841, and was the god-daughter of the late Emperor Alexander II.

The only daughter of a Russian noble of high rank, her girlhood was spent in the circle of the Moscow society. She was devoted to her two brothers, Alexander and Nicholas Kiréeff, and on their return upon active service in the Russo-Turkish war, Olga first gave her attention to the course of public events. In the early days of the war, the marvellous energy of a young unknown volunteer, Hadgi Girey, created widespread interest, and Olga Kiréeff pressed her for news of this mysterious chief. A few days later, the 18th July, the death of Hadgi Girey was announced, and the young admirer learned that the brave volunteer was none other than his beloved brother Nicholas. This event to a brilliant career supplied to her as she afterwards came to be her life-motive, and, convinced that Russia and England been on terms no volunteers such as her brothers would have been needed in the East, she determined to devote herself to the bringing about of an entente between this country and her motherland. She had previously married a distinguished Russian soldier and scholar, General Novikoff, whose brother was then Russian Ambassador at London. She first appealed to her country through the columns of the Moscow Gazette, and the Slavophile organ, Pravda. Having already made the acquaintance of Mr. Gladstone on a previous visit to England, she wrote to him and William Harcourt, and other men of the day, telling them of her brother's sacrifice and reiterating that the sacrifice of his life would never have been made had Mr. Gladstone held the reins of power. The days which followed immediately upon the despatch of her letter to Hawarden—Mr. Gladstone had temporarily retired from public life—brought many hours of poignant sorrow, relieved by expectancy, and, on receiving no reply from the statesman, letter after letter, "entreaties, adjurations, and remonstrances," as they have been termed, "rained on Hawarden." The last of these, the bitter cry of a sister for a martyred brother's cause, brought a few words of sympathy from Mrs. Gladstone, ending mysteriously, "Mr. Gladstone will send an answer next week." A few days after she received in Italy, whither she had gone with her mother, a missive from England—her answer. It was Gladstone's famous pamphlet, "The Bulgarian Horrors." The encouragement of Gladstone's personal appeal to Europe made Madame Novikoff redouble her efforts. She commenced to contribute to the Northern Star, then edited by Mr. W. T. Stead, a series of articles on the Bulgarian Question. These communications were signed "O. K.," the initials of her maiden name, so as not to throw suspicion on her husband's brother, who, it has been said, was Russian Ambassador at Vienna. Carlyle thought much of these early labours, and suggested their republication in volume form. Indeed, he offered to write the preface himself, "and then, with a kind of despair, holding out his trembling hands, he said, 'No, I cannot do so, my writing days are over; but here,' he added, pointing to Froude, 'here is a young man who will be glad to do it for you.'" In this scene was born that famous volume, "Is Russia Wrong?" which was followed by "Russia and England," reviewed by Mr. Gladstone himself in the Nineteenth Century. "O. K.," notwithstanding her isolation in London, made many friends, and those, too, of distinction, numbering Carlyle, Froude, Gladstone, Kinglake, Lord Houghton, and others. She introduced, in the seventies, Ivan Aksakoff, the Russian orator and reformer, to the English people, and played a great part in the subsequent agitations which clamoured for the liberation of Bulgaria. She followed up her lead in England by writings in the Russian press, and became of considerable influence in political and diplomatic circles. "Friends or Foes?" and "Skobéleff and the Slavonic Cause," were published in quick succession, and a career of literary activity commenced which has kept its course since for twenty years. She has made frequent contributions of political articles to the Times, Nouvelle Revue, Nineteenth Century, Contemporary Review, Pall

Mrs. Anna Emily Anna Warrington and other points. She has now long been regarded by some people as the Russian Government's agent in London. This last suspicion has caused her considerable amusement, which would appear to be justified somewhat by the presence in London of a Russian Embassy. Unfortunately, Madame Nunez de Arce is one of the few remarkable women of our time, although her energies have been expended mainly in the previous generation. Her home in Cambridge was occupied almost thirty years ago, and proofs of splendour and nobility have been visible there. She gave the room to it in 1894, and now resides, when in London, at No. 4 Portman Mansions. W. Since the death of her husband, General Nunez de Arce, she has spent most of her time in Russia, on her son's estate near Moscow.

NUNEZ DE ARCE, Don Gaspar, was born in Valencia August 4, 1864. He studied in Toledo, where he took the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. He has written among other works, "Como se empiezo la Mancha," a comedy in one act, and in verse, "Ni teatro ni teatro," a comedy in three acts, 1901. "Discurso leído ante la Real Academia Española," 1898; "El Lar de Lola," a drama in five acts, 1895; "Las Mujeres del Evangelio," 1904. His lyric poems have gained him the name of "The Tennyson of Spain." He has been a member of the Cortes since 1893, and was Colonial Minister in the Sagasta Cabinet, 1893-94, and in 1901 became President of the Section of Commerce, Agriculture, and the Interior in the Council of State.

NUTTALL, The Most Reverend Enos, D.D., Archbishop of the West Indies, was born about 1841, became Bishop of Jamaica in 1891, and attained his present post in 1897. He has written "The Churchman's Manual." Address: Kingston, Jamaica.

OAKELEY, Emeritus Professor Sir Herbert Stanley, M.Sc.D., D.C.L., LL.D., second son of the late Sir Herbert Oakeley, Bart., was born at Ealing, Middlesex, on July 22, 1830. His mother, Atholi Murray, the third Lady Oakeley, was daughter of the Right Hon. Lord Charles Murray, youngest son of John, third Duke of Atholl. He was educated at Rugby School, and at Christ Church, Oxford (B.A. 1853, M.A. 1855), and, after having graduated, went abroad to pursue studies in music for which he had an earliest childhood. In his early predilection, and as regards his training, he was more at home with the keyboard. At Leipzig he studied pianoforte-playing under the Moscheles and Paganini, and organ-playing under Dr. Franz Professor of Music in that University, later under the great organist Dr. Schneider of Dresden. In 1857, he was elected as musical critic to the London periodical, and still on occasional notices of musical matters home and abroad. In 1861 he was elected, in London, as member of the "Quintet." In 1862, he was elected Professor of Music in the University of Edinburgh, and in 1871 he received the Prime his earliest degree in Music. In recognition of his services for Scotland, the honours of knighthood were conferred on him by the Queen in August 1871. He received his own University, Oxford, gave him the degree of Mrs. Dore, honours and in 1891 that of LL.D. was presented by the University of Aberdeen. The same year he was appointed Chaplain to Her Majesty in Scotland. He received from Trinity College, the degree of D.C.L.; and in the same year Mrs. Dore from the University of St. Andrews. On his return to the Edinburgh Chair of Music, the degree of LL.D. was conferred on that University, as "Emeritus," and in 1896 that of Mrs. Dore University. He has composed anthems, a full "service," and for organ, or pianoforte, a "Lyric" (1897), and an Album dedicated to H.M. the Queen, with "A Golden Reign," "Down and ride 1837-1897," and various other and instrumental works. To Sir Oakeley's influence may be in great measure attributed the increase in use of the organ and of the orchestra has taken place in Scotland, his appointment at Edinburgh; and foundation of a Students' Choral Union at each of the four Scottish universities. He is or was Hon. Pres. the University Musical Society, St. Andrews, and Vice-President of Edinburgh and Aberdeen, and of Choral Union; Hon. Visitor of Diocesan Choral Association, Hon. President of Cheltenham Festival; Member of London Philharmonic V.P. and Hon. Licentiate and Exam. Music at Trinity College, London:

the Accademia Filarmonica, Bologna, Socio distinto" of the St<sup>a</sup>. Cecilia Accademia, Rome, and (1894) Hon. Member of the Reale Filarmonica Società Romana, and of two societies at Naples. Address: Dover.

OAKLEY, Sir Henry, V.D., A.M. 1st. C.E., General Manager of the Central London Railway since 1898, and 2nd General Manager of the Great Northern Railway, was born in 1823. He was Colonel of Railway Volunteers. In 1891 he received the honour of knighthood. He married, in 1850, Fanny, née Thompson. Address: 37 Chester Terrace, Regent's Park, N.W.

O'BRIEN, Sir George Thomas Michael, K.C.M.G., was born in 1844, and is the son of the late Bishop O'Brien. He was educated at Westminster and Trinity College, Cambridge, and became a writer in the Ceylon Civil Service. In 1867 he was appointed Additional Police Magistrate at Kurunegalla and afterwards at Harnappattu and Colombo. After holding several other appointments, he became Treasurer in 1886 and Auditor-General in 1890. He was transferred as Colonial Secretary to Cyprus in 1891, and from 1892 to 1895 held the same post at Hong Kong. In 1897 he was Governor of the Fiji Islands, which post he still holds.

O'BRIEN, Sir John Terence Nicolls, K.C.M.G., is the eldest son of the late Major-General Terence O'Brien, Commander of the Forces, and for some time Acting Governor of Ceylon. He was born April 23, 1830, at Manchester; educated at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, from which he obtained his commission without purchase in the 67th Regiment in September 1847; was transferred to the 70th Regiment, 1848; Lieutenant 70th Regiment, 1850; Captain 5th Fusiliers, 1858; transferred to 20th Regiment, 1858; Brevet-Major, 1859; Major, unattached, 1868; and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel, 1870. He served uninterruptedly in India and Ceylon from 1849 to 1867; passed in the native languages, and as Surveyor and Civil Engineer; was Staff Officer of the Darjeeling Depot, Regimental Interpreter, Assistant in the Revenue Survey, Assistant and subsequently Executive Engineer in the Public Works Department; Deputy-Assistant Quarter-Master-General to a column in the field during the whole of the Mutiny; Military Secretary in Ceylon, and Brigade-Major, Gwalior District, Bengal Army; served on the North-west Frontier (medal and clasp), and throughout the Mutiny (mentioned in despatches, Brevet-Major, and medal); was in 1867 appointed Inspector-General of Police, Mauritius; Poor-Law Commissioner and Governor of Orphan Asylum, 1870; and was Equerry to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh during his visit to the Colony in 1870. He was nominated Governor of Heligoland, 1881; and of Newfoundland, 1888. He was created K.C.M.G. in 1887. He married, in 1853, the youngest daughter of the late Captain Eastgate, H.E.I.C.S.; she died in 1867; and he married, secondly, in 1880, the widow of Colonel J. W. Fane, late M.P., Oxon. He is a Past Officer of the Grand Lodge and of the Supreme Grand Chapter of England. Address: 88 Eccleston Square, S.W.

O'BRIEN, Lucius Richard, first President of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts, was born at the family residence on Lake Simcoe, Ontario, Canada, in 1832, and educated at Upper Canada College, Toronto. At an early age he developed a taste for art. In 1872 he took an active part in founding the Art School of the Ontario Society of Artists, and for six years he held the Vice-Presidency of that Institution. In 1880 the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts was founded, and Mr. O'Brien was elected its President, a position which he held for ten years, retiring in 1890; he has been a constant contributor to its exhibitions. He superintended the illustration of "Picturesque Canada," 2 vols., Toronto, 1884, for which he supplied a large number of the drawings. He is represented in the Royal Collections at Windsor and Osborne, and has frequently contributed to the English Water-Colour Exhibitions. Seven of his pictures were exhibited in the Art Gallery of the World's Fair in Chicago, 1893. In 1895 he was elected President of the newly formed Provincial Guild of Sculpture at Toronto. In 1897 he disposed by auction of his whole collection of water-colour drawings and pictures. His diploma picture, "Sunrise on the Saguenay," is in the art gallery at Ottawa. He painted two pictures of Quebec by command of her Majesty the Queen, and he has likewise executed several commissions for the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise.

O'BRIEN, The Right Hon. Sir Peter, Bart., Lord Chief-Justice of Ireland, LL.D. Hon. Dublin, son of the late John O'Brien, Esq., of Elm Vale and Ballinalackin, co. Clare, was born June 29, 1841. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was called to the Bar at the King's Inn, Dublin, in 1865, took silk in 1880, and became a Bencher in 1884. He was appointed Senior Crown Prosecutor for Dublin in 1883, and third Sergeant-at-Law in 1884. He was Solicitor-General for Ireland from 1887 to 1888, and Attorney-General from 1888 to 1889, when he was appointed Lord Chief-Justice of Ireland. He was created a Baronet in 1891. In 1867 he married Annie, daughter of Robert Clarke, Esq., J.P., of Bansha, co. Tipperary. Addresses: 41 Merrion Square East, Dublin: and Athenæum.

O'BRIEN, Richard Barry, barrister-at-law, youngest son of the late Patrick Barry O'Brien, was born in Kilrush, in the co. Clare, Ireland, in 1847. He was educated by private tutors, and at the Catholic University, Dublin. In Michaelmas Term 1874 he was called to the Irish Bar, and in January 1875 to the English Bar. After practising for some years at the English Bar, he gradually glided into literature and politics, devoting himself mainly to Irish historical and political subjects. Among the books he has published are the following: "The Parliamentary History of the Irish Land Question," 1880; "The Irish Land Question and English Public Opinion," 1881; "Fifty Years of Concessions to Ireland, 1831-1881," 2 vols. 1883-1885; "Irish Wrongs and English Remedies," 1887; "Thomas Drummond, Life and Letters," 1889; and "The Home Ruler's Manual," 1890. He has also edited a new edition of the "Autobiography of Theobald Wolfe Tone," 1893; and has written a short "History of Ireland," 1897. He is Assistant-Editor of the New Irish Library, of which Sir C. Gavan Duffy is editor. Address: 100 Sinclair Road, West Kensington Park, W.

O'BRIEN, William, ex-M.P., son of the late Mr. James O'Brien, of Mallow, and of Kate, daughter of James Nagh, was born Oct. 2, 1852, and was educated at the Cloyne Diocesan College and the Queen's College, Cork. He represented Mallow from January 1883 until its extinction as a borough under the Redistribution Act, 1885, and in the Parliament of 1885 was Member for South Tyrone, defeating Captain the Hon. Somerset Maxwell, Conservative, by a majority of 55. At the general election of 1886 he was defeated by Mr. T. W. Russell, Unionist Liberal, who gained the seat by a majority of 99, but he was returned for North-East Cork unopposed. In 1892 he was returned for Cork City, and was also elected for North-East Cork. Mr. O'Brien is one of the foremost members of the Nationalist party, and was the founder and editor of United Ireland until the Parnellite disruption of 1890. He was a "suspect" under Mr. Forster's Coercion Act, and has been a leader in the councils of the National League. He was a delegate of this body to the Chicago Convention, in 1886. In Parliament he was a bitter incisive speaker, and has once been "suspended" for a breach of the rules of the House. He has been four times imprisoned under the Coercion Act, for which he regards as protests against the curtailment of public liberty, and claims to have effected the abandonment of the political rules in so far as they sought to control political offenders with criminal penalties. He is the author of "When we were in prison," written in prison, and of the historical romance, "A Queen of Men," 1898. O'Brien, in company with Mr. Dillon, having been liberated on bail, pending a political trial, in November 1890, forfeited the bail, and escaped to the United States to raise funds for the Irish evicted tenants. On his return, he was arrested in Ireland and again sent to prison. He and Mr. Dillon met Mr. Parnell, M.P., in Paris in January 1891, for a friendly consultation about his retirement from the leadership of the Irish Parliamentary Party. O'Brien subsequently stood for Parliament on the platform of the majority of the Irish Party, and was elected for Cork City and for the North-East Division of Cork. In 1895 he retired from Parliament in consequence of internal dissensions in the Irish Party, and has since lived at Mallow Cottage, Westport, co. Mayo, but still takes an active part in the Nationalist movement. He married, in 1890, Sophia, daughter of Hermann Raffalovich, of Paris. Address: Mallow Cottage, Westport, co. Mayo.

O'BRIEN, The Right Hon. William, is the son of John O'Brien, of Bloomfield, co. Cork, and was born in 1832. He was educated at Midleton School, and was called to the Irish Bar in 1855. He was appointed a Q.C. in 1872, and in 1883 he became a Judge of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in Ireland. Address: 79 Merrion Square, Dublin.

O'CONNOR, Arthur, M.P., was born on Oct. 1, 1844, and is the eldest son of William O'Connor, M.D., of Kerry and London. He was educated at Ushaw. Elected Nationalist member for Queen's County in 1880, he represented that constituency until 1885. He was returned for East Donegal in 1885, and continues to represent it. He was at one time a clerk in the War Office, was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1883, and went on the South-Eastern Circuit. Unlike most Irish Nationalist members, he has frequently held responsible positions in the House of Commons. He is a Public Works Loan Commissioner (since 1890), of the Deputy Chairmen of Committees of the House, and one of the panel chairmen of Standing Committees. In 1896, 1897, and 1898 he was Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. He has also served on the Royal Commissions on Trade Depression, that on Civil Service Establishments, and that on the Incidence of Local Taxation, and others. Addresses: 10, Grosvenor Road, Hammersmith; and 5 Essex Court, Temple, E.C.

O'CONNOR, Thomas Power, M.P., born at Athlone, co. Roscommon, on Oct. 18, 1848, is the eldest son of Thomas O'Connor and Theresa Power. He was educated first at the College of the Immaculate Conception, Athlone, and afterwards at the Queen's College, where he graduated in the degrees of B.A. and M.A. He adopted journalism as a profession, and after three years' connection with the Dublin press, came to London in 1870. He first obtained an engagement on the Daily Telegraph, and was afterwards employed on several other London journals. He published in 1876 the first volume of a biography of the late Lord Beaconsfield, under the title of "Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield," but afterwards, changing the method, brought out a complete Life of the then Premier, in a single volume, entitled "Lord Beaconsfield, a Biography." The work received general praise for its literary merits and research, but, as it took a very unfavourable view of the Conservative leader, its conclusions met with a widely different reception from Liberal and Conservative critics. Mr. O'Connor was elected member for the town of Galway at the general election of 1880, and soon became one of the most active and prominent members of the party led by Mr. Parnell. He was one of the Executive of the Land League, both in England and Ireland. In October 1881 he set out for the United States, and lectured on the Irish cause to large gatherings in nearly all the great cities, during a tour which extended over seven months, and raised a large sum of money. In 1883 he was elected President of the "Irish National League of Great Britain," and has been re-elected to the position every year for several years in succession. In 1885 he stood for the Scotland division of Liverpool and defeated Mr. Woodward, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 1350. He was returned at the same time for Galway, but elected to take the seat at Liverpool. In 1886 he defeated Mr. Earle, a Unionist Liberal, by 1480, and has since represented the division in Parliament. He has edited a "Cabinet of Irish Literature," and has written a large number of tales, essays, and magazine articles. In 1885 he published what is, till now, his principal work, "The Parnell Movement." Other works from his pen are: "Gladstone's House of Commons," "Some Old Love Stories," and "Napoleon." In 1887 he started the Star newspaper, but resigned his interest in it in July 1890. He has since founded the Sun and the Weekly Sun, of both of which journals he is editor. His full-page article on a "Book of the Week" in the Weekly Sun is one of the features of modern English journalism. His latest journalistic venture, a gossiping biographical record of the sayings and doings of contemporaries, is called M.A.P. ("Mainly about People," the title of the personal column originally edited by him in the Star). Address: Oakley Lodge, Chelsea, S.W.

O'CONOR, The Right Hon. Sir Nicholas Roderick, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., Ambassador to Constantinople, was born in Ireland, July 3, 1843, and is the son of P. H. O'Connor, of Dundermott, and Jane, daughter of C. French, of Frenchlawn. He was educated at Stonyhurst, and entered the Diplomatic Service in 1866. After serving in the junior branches at Berlin, Washington, Madrid, and Paris, he was appointed Secretary of Legation at Peking in 1883. On the death of Sir Harry Parkes, he was for nearly eighteen months Chargé-d'Affaires, during which period he settled the frontier questions of Upper Burma and Thibet. In 1886 he became Diplomatic Agent at Sofia, until 1892, when he returned to Peking as Minister. For three years he exercised great control at the Chinese Court, but could not induce it to institute those reforms which would have rendered the Japanese war less humiliating. As a reward for his unremitting perseverance in furthering the legitimate development of British trade and enterprise, he was transferred to St. Petersburg in 1895, and created K.C.B. He was present at the marriage of the Czar in 1896, in which year he became a G.C.M.G. In 1898 he was transferred to his present post.

O'CONOR DON, The Right Hon. Charles Owen O'Connor, LL.D., known as "The O'Connor Don," in virtue of his being an "Ancient Knight," was born on May 7, 1838, and is the eldest son of Denis O'Connor Don and Mary, daughter of Major Blake, of Towerhill. He was educated at St. Gregory's College, Downside, and has a London University degree. In 1860 he was elected to represent co. Roscommon in the House of Commons in the Liberal interest, and represented that constituency for twenty years, during which he was mainly instrumental in passing the Irish Industrial Schools Act in 1868, and the Irish Sunday Closing Act in 1879. He has been a member of many important commissions, including the Factories and Workshops Commission in 1875, and the Land Law (Bessborough) Commission in 1880. In 1896 he was appointed Chairman of the Financial Relations Commission. He is Lord-Lieutenant of co. Roscommon, of which he was High Sheriff in 1884. He was sworn of the Irish Privy Council in 1881. He has published works on the O'Conors of Connaught, and on Irish questions. In 1879 he married (2) Ellen, daughter of John More O'Ferrall, of Lisard. Addresses: Clonalis, Castlereagh, co. Roscommon, &c.; and Athenæum.

ODGERS, William Blake, M.A., LL.D., Q.C., was born at Plymouth on May 15, 1849, and is the third son of the late Rev. William James Odgers. He received his education at King Edward's School, Bath, at University College, London, and at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, of which latter College he was successively Exhibitioner, Scholar, and Law Student. He graduated at Cambridge in 1871, having obtained a place among the Wranglers, and also in Classical Honours. In the same year he won the Member's Prize. He became a B.A. of London in 1871. In 1873 he was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple, and joined the Western Circuit. He became LL.D. of Cambridge in 1879, and between the years 1881 and 1883 was Examiner for the Law Tripos of that University. From 1892 to 1897 he was Examiner in Common Law at the University of London. He now examines for the Inns of Court in the Bar examination. He was made a Queen's Counsel, July 14, 1893. He was appointed Recorder of Winchester, July 6, 1897. He is author of two standard works, "A Digest of the Law of Libel and Slander," and "The Principles of Pleading," both of which are in their third editions. In 1885 Dr. Blake Odgers unsuccessfully contested Brixton at the general election. He married, in 1877, Frances, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Charles Hudson, formerly Coroner of Stockport, and has five children. Addresses: 4 Elm Court, Temple, E.C.; and the Garth, Woodside Park, North Finchley, N.W.

ODLING, Professor William, M.B., F.R.S., born Sept. 5, 1829, in Southwark, was educated at private schools, and for the medical profession at Guy's Hospital. He graduated M.B. of the University of London in 1851; was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, in 1859; and President of the Chemical Society in 1885. He was appointed Demonstrator of Chemistry at Guy's Hospital in 1850; Lecturer on Chemistry at St. Bartholomew's Hospital in 1863; Fullerian Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Institution in 1864; Waynflete Professor of Chemistry in the University of Oxford, June 17, 1872; and elected a Fellow of Worcester College the following day. Dr. Odling, who is highly distinguished as a scientific chemist, is the author of a "Manual of Chemistry," 1861; "Lectures on Animal Chemistry," 1866; "Course of Practical Chemistry," 1876; "Chemistry," a Science Lecture, 1882; "Laurent's Chemical Method," of various scientific memoirs, especially on chemical theory. The University of Leyden conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Mathematics and Physics in February 1875. He was British Judge of Awards for Chemical Manufactures of the Philadelphia International Exhibition of 1876, and is one of the analysts employed to test the water supplied to London. Addresses: The Natural History Museum; and 15 Norham Gardens, Oxford.

O'DONOVAN, Denis, CMG, F.R.S.L., &c., was born at Kinsale, Ireland, Aug. 23, 1846, and was educated in Ireland and France. He arrived in Queensland in 1874, and was appointed Elementary Librarian. Mr. O'Donovan has previously filled the positions of Professor of Modern Languages in the Collège de Hautes Études, afterwards the Collège de la Sorbonne, University of Paris, and of Lecturer in the Collège de France. At this time he acquired considerable distinction as a Hellenist. He was one of the editors of the Ami de la Religion, and is the author of "Memories of Rome," and some minor works. He is well known in Melbourne as a writer on literary and artistic subjects. Some of his lectures on art and architecture, delivered at the Public Library in that city, were published by the Technological Commission of Victoria. He was a warm advocate of the establishment of schools of design in that colony, giving them considerable support in the press and on the platform. His latest work is his Analytical Catalogue of the Queensland Parliamentary Library. It is the fruit of many years' labour in the colony, and of a deep study of bibliography, to which he devoted himself during his long residence in the principal countries of Europe, where he became intimately acquainted with the management of all the great libraries of the Old World. He has received from the Parliament of Queensland special and substantial grants in recognition of the thought

1 labour bestowed on the compilation of the Catalogue of the Parliamentary Library. Mr. O'Donovan was elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, the Royal Society of Literature, of the Incorporated Society of Authors, a member of the Society of Arts, and of the Library Association of the United Kingdom, Corresponding Member honoris causa of the Société de Géographie Commerciale of Paris and Havre, and honorary member of the Société d'Anthropologie of Paris. He was one of the Vice-Presidents of the International Library Conference held in London in 1897. He has also been created Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George (1893), an Officier de l'Instruction Publique (1896), and a Knight of the Legion of Honour (1897).

OGILVY, Gavin. See BARRIE, J. M.

OGLE, William, M.A. and M.D. Oxon., F.R.C.P. London, was born in 1827 at Oxford, his father being the Regius Professor of Medicine in that University. He was educated at Rugby and at Corpus Christi College, of which latter he afterwards became a Fellow. He graduated in the usual honours, and took the degree of B.A. and M.D. at Oxford. His medical education was received at St. George's Hospital, where he became Lecturer on Physiology and Assistant-Physician. After practising for a few years in London, he accepted the office of Medical Officer of Health for East Hertfordshire; and held this post until, on the retirement of Dr. Farr, he was appointed Superintendent of Statistics in the General Register Office, from which post he has now retired. Among other offices which he has held are those of Examiner in Physical Science and in Public Health in the University of Oxford. He was one of the Royal Commissioners who inquired in 1892 into the London water supply. He is the author of numerous papers on physiological and medical subjects in the Transactions of the Royal Medico-Chirurgical Society, and on statistical subjects in the Journal of the Statistical Society, and in the official reports issued by the General Register Office. He is also the author of a translation, with notes and essays, of the treatises of Aristotle on the Parts of Animals, on Life and Death, and on Respiration, and of Kerner's "Flowers and their Unbidden Guests," and has published various articles on the "Fertilisation of Flowers." Addresses: 10 Gordon Street, Gordon Square, W.C.; and Athenæum.

OHNET, Georges, French novelist and dramatist, was born in Paris on April

3, 1848. His father, an architect, intended him to become a barrister, but after the war of 1870, Georges Ohnet took to political journalism, and was successively on the staff of the Pays and the Constitutionnel, where the vivacity of his style gained him a measure of celebrity. In 1875 his first play, written in conjunction with M. Denayrouze, was produced at the Théâtre Historique under the title of "Regina Sarpi." It had a brilliant success, and was followed in 1877 by "Martha" at the Gymnase. At about this time M. Ohnet began publishing, under the general title of "Battles of Life," that highly idealistic series of romances with which his name is connected. In 1881 appeared "Serge Panine," a work crowned by the French Academy; in 1882 the famous "Le Maître de Forges," dramatised by the author, and acted at the Gymnase in December 1883, which was one of the most successful novels of the time, being translated into almost every European language; in 1883, "La Comtesse Sarah"; in 1884, "Lise Fleuron"; in 1885, "La Grande Manière," which suggests strongly the manner of Georges Sand, M. Ohnet's model; in 1886, "Les Dames de Croix-Mort"; in 1888, "Volonté," an attack on pessimism; in 1889, "Le Docteur Rameau" and "Dernier Amour"; in 1891, "Dettes de Haine"; in 1893, "Nimrod et Cie."; and in 1895, "La Femme en Gris." M. Ohnet has dramatised with great success some half-dozen of his principal novels. He was decorated with the Legion of Honour in July 1885. The enormous circulation of his works rivals those of Miss Corelli and Mr. Caine. His Paris address is: 14 Avenue Trudaine.

OHRWALDER, Father, late priest of the Austrian Mission Station at Delen, in Kordofan, was born about 1855, and in early life became a missionary. He left Cairo, Dec. 28, 1880, as he says, "as full of bright hopes for a happy future as any young man could wish to be." The missionary party whom he accompanied reached Khartoum early in February 1881, and ultimately founded a mission station at Delen in Kordofan, in the Nubar country. The course of the settlement was a smooth one until April of the following year (1882), when the first signs of a great uprising of the Soudanese became apparent. On Sept. 15, 1882, Mek Omar, a lieutenant of the Mahdi's, sacked their little church, and captured the members of the Mission. After a time, they received a command by special messenger to move on to the Mahdi's camp, "as it was his gracious intention to permit us to look upon his face." On the way, the party were attacked by robbers, and stripped of their clothes, and Ohrwalder was compelled to appear before the Mahdi in a shirt and drawers. Ohrwalder has given us a dramatic account of his famous meeting with the Mahdi, who sought to persuade them to embrace the Moslem faith, but all to no avail. Accordingly, on Sept. 28, 1882, the prisoners were led out to execution, but owing to the appearance of a comet on the preceding night, the Dervish leaders, a superstitious race, postponed the event. All efforts to compel the acceptance of the new faith proving useless, the Mahdi, averse, as he said, to killing priests, promised to release them conditionally upon the surrender of El Obeid. This took place on Jan. 19, 1883, and most horrible tortures ensued. Then followed the reign of bloodshed and cruelty, which is without parallel in history. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, of fatty degeneration of the heart. The effect of his death stunned the Dervishes for a time, but they soon gathered under the flag of Abdullah, who, not long after, was beheaded suddenly by the enraged Dervishes in the presence of Ohrwalder. The Father was again captured and forced to march with the victorious Dervishes, who came to Omdurman on April 26, 1886. Ohrwalder passed through a terrible time on the accession of the Khalifa Abdullah, and daily witnessed scenes of the utmost cruelty, himself suffering all manner of indignities and privations. During these unhappy days, naturally that which lay nearest the heart of Ohrwalder was the hope of escape. One brother of the Mission succeeded in gaining freedom, and the news coming to the ears of the Khalifa, he ordered the rest to be brought before him, and after haranguing them for upwards of half-an-hour, he threatened either to throw them into the river or to cut off their hands. Abdullah accordingly exerted a still keener surveillance over the little band of Europeans, and Ohrwalder, giving up for the time being all idea of escape, settled down to earning a precarious living by soap-making. His partner in this plan dying a few months after, he decided to learn how to make ribbon, a form of finery much in vogue amongst the women, and acquired a small and simple loom. With wonderful industry, the good Father, on the ribbon-makers, fearful of competition, declining to teach him the trade except on impossible terms, unravelled a piece of ribbon and thus studied the mode of manufacture with the closest attention. The work at first was very trying and almost unremunerative, but at the end of a month he succeeded in turning out sixteen yards a day. On the night of Oct. 28, 1891, Ahmed Hassan, the last messenger of Archbishop Sogaro, who had for years been endeavouring to bring about the deliverance of his prisoned mission, suddenly appeared, and Omdurman was quitted on Nov. 29, 1891, in the dead of night. A terrible journey was undergone across the great desert, and in seven days' time, from the most advanced Egyptian outpost, sighted, this being at a distance of 100 miles from Omdurman. After resting at the station for two days the journey resumed, and Cairo regained on Dec. 1, 1891. The thrilling story of the rescue of Father Ohrwalder and two nuns has been told by the Father himself in a book, "Ten Years' Captivity in the Mahdi Camp." Ohrwalder's manuscript, written in German, was roughly translated into English by Yusef Effendi Cudri, a Syrian. It was afterwards entirely re-written in narrative form by Sir Fred. Wingate, then Director of Military Intelligence of the Egyptian Army, and Author of "Mahdi and the Egyptian Soudan." During a popular edition (price 6d.) was published of Father Ohrwalder's account of his terrible imprisonment.

O'KELLY, James, M.P., son of the late John O'Kelly, of Roscommon, was born in Dublin in 1845. He was educated at Dublin University and at the Sorbonne, Paris, and served for some time as an officer in the French army during the Franco-German war. He left France at the fall of Paris and went to New York where he worked for some time as a journalist for the New York Herald. He was a correspondent for the same paper when he went to Cuba at the time of the insurrection, but joining the rebels, was taken prisoner, and confined for some time in a dungeon, whence at last he contrived to escape. After various adventures in America, Algiers, and elsewhere, he went to the Soudan for the purpose of joining the Mahdi's troops; he was lost for some months in the desert, and at last appeared on the Nile, not far from Khartoum. After writing a series of lively letters to the Daily News he returned to England, and once more represented the constituency of Roscommon in the House of Commons. At the general election of 1885 he and Mr. Mullany were returned by an immense Parnellite majority for the new division of North Roscommon, and in 1886 he was returned unopposed. In 1892 he stood as a Parnellite for the old constituency, but was beaten by a small majority by Mr. Bodkin, an Anti-Parnellite. Mr. O'Kelly was a "suspect" and was imprisoned at Kilmainham in 1881-82. In the House of Commons he was at one time frequently "suspended." In 95 he was returned as Nationalist M.P. for Roscommon. He is London correspondent of the Irish Daily Independent.

OKUMA, Count, son of the commander of the garrison at Nagasaki, a poor Samurai, or knight, was about fifteen years old when Commodore Perry insisted on opening Japan to foreign trade. He studied foreign books, and was therefore chosen for office after the Imperial restoration of 1868. He opposed the feudal system, and supported the Anglicising of education and the introduction of railways and telegraphs. In 1873 he was appointed Minister of Finance, a post which he held with conspicuous ability until 1881, when he resigned owing to a disagreement with the Premier, Marquis Ito. The chief power in the state was at time wielded by men of the Satsuma or Choshin class, who had brought about the revolution. Okuma saw the need of a Diet to check the power of these classes, but meeting with opposition, resigned. Until the Diet was formed in 1890, he organised a party to oppose the privileged classes. This Progressive party is known as the Kaishinto. In 1888 Count Okuma became Minister for Foreign Affairs, but his tenure of office was shortlived. He was compelled to resign owing to the unpopularity entailed upon him by his efforts to promote the revision of treaties with foreign powers. A bomb was thrown at Count Okuma in 1890 by a fanatical adherent of the old régime. The steadily increasing power of the Kaishinto carried the Count into power in 1896, when he was appointed Foreign Minister, but he was compelled to resign in 1897. In 1898 Party Government was established in Japan. The two parties, the Liberals and Progressives, united to form what they call the Constitutional Party, and Marquis Ito, seeing that the time had come to try the experiment, resigned, and Count Okuma became Prime Minister. The general election gave him a large majority, but dissensions in the Cabinet caused his resignation later in the year.

OLCOTT, Colonel Henry Steel, theosophist, and President of the Theosophical Society, had made his mark as an American reformer and man of affairs before the outbreak of the War of North and South. By 1856 he had founded the first scientific agricultural school on the Swiss model in the United States, and had written three works on agriculture, one of which went into seven editions. He had by invitation addressed three State Legislatures on the subject of a new sugar-plum, which is now generally cultivated, and had been offered by his own Government a botanical mission to Caffraria, and later the Chief Commissionership of Agriculture, and, by the Greek Government, the Professorship of Agriculture at the University of Athens. He was at one time agricultural editor of Horace Greeley's paper the New York Tribune, and also American correspondent for the Mark Lane Express, and his services to the cause of American agricultural reform were such that the National Agricultural Society voted him two medals of honour, while the American Institute presented him with a silver goblet. When the Civil War broke out he threw up the profession of the law, in which he had been chiefly engaged hitherto, and joined the Northerners. He saw service in four battles, and was present at the capture of Fort Macon, but was subsequently invalided on account of dysentery contracted in the field. On his recovery the authorities determined to keep so useful a man from returning to the front, and therefore appointed him to the highly responsible position of Special Commissioner of the War Department. As such his chief duty was to punish dishonest Government contractors. For two years he is said to have been in constant danger of assassination owing to his unsparring severity towards the rings of wealthy swindlers who made their fortunes at the expense of the Executive. A sum amounting to $200,000 is reported to have been collected by the fraudulent contractors, who hoped thereby to bribe him into silence, but none of them ventured to approach him with the money. At the end of two years, at the request of the Secretary of the Navy, he was also ordered on special naval duty, instituted drastic reforms in the dockyards, and introduced a new system of accounts at Boston and Philadelphia. The war being over, Colonel Olcott retired into private life, and during the last fifteen years has been prominent as a student and teacher of Theosophy and neo-Buddhism.

OLDCASTLE, John. See MEYNELL, WILFRID.

OLDENBURG, Grand-Duke of, Nicholas Frederick Peter, son of the Grand-Duke Paul Frederick Augustus and the Princess Ida of Anhalt-Bernburg, born July 8, 1827, succeeded his father, Feb. 27, 1853. The population of the Duchy over which he reigns is about 300,000. He promulgated a liberal constitution in February 1849, modified it in 1852, and during the war between Russia, Turkey, and the Allied Powers, he adhered to the policy of Prussia. After the conquest of Schleswig-Holstein by Prussia and Austria, the Grand-Duke claimed a portion of these duchies, which claim he endeavoured to support by some "Memoirs" addressed to the diplomatists of Europe. He married, Feb. 10, 1852, Elizabeth, daughter of Prince Joseph of Saxe-Altenburg, by whom he has two sons.

OLLIVIER, Olivier Émile, a French statesman, born at Marseilles, July 2, 1825; became a member of the Paris Bar in 1847; and in 1848 was Commissary-General of the Republic at Marseilles; was Préfet at Chaumont, and returned to the Bar in 1849. Elected as Opposition candidate for the third circonscription of the Seine in 1857, he took part in several important discussions; amongst which may be mentioned those relating to the laws respecting public safety, the expedition to Italy, and the regulation of the Press. During the session of 1860 he was one of the most distinguished members of a small group of Opposition Deputies, known by the name of "The Five." In the meantime he undertook the defence of M. Vacherot, indicted for his work entitled "La Démocratie," and in consequence of the style he adopted in pleading, was suspended for three months, an appeal against this judgment failing. In 1863 he was re-elected for Paris. During the session of 1865 he was elected a member of the Council-General of the Var. In July of the same year he received the appointment of Judicial Counsel and Commissary-General of the Viceroy of Egypt in Paris, and retired from the Paris Bar. M. Émile Ollivier was chosen by the Emperor as arbitrator of the difficulties which arose relative to the Isthmus of Suez, and it was upon his report that the final decision was founded. The session of 1866-67 witnessed the complete separation of M. Ollivier from his former political associates of the Left. At the General Elections of 1869 he was returned by an enormous majority for the first circonscription of the Var. On December 27 M. Ollivier, who had been for some time the centre of the movements for uniting the fractions of the late majority with the new Liberal Tiers Parti, received from the Emperor a letter inviting him to form a Ministry which should enjoy the confidence of the Legislative body, and which could carry out the Senatus-Consultum in letter and spirit. This onerous task he undertook, and the names of the new ministers were published in the Journal Officiel on Jan. 3, 1870. M. Ollivier himself took the portfolio of Justice. Among the first-fruits of the new administration was the granting of an amnesty in favour of M. Ledru-Rollin, the convocation of the High Court of Justice at Tours to Prince Pierre Bonaparte, the maintenance of order without shedding of blood, the popular excitement caused by the assassination of Victor Noir, the mortification of Henry Rochefort, and the reforms of M. Haussmann. Several administrative reforms also were introduced, and it was thought by many that an era of constitutional liberty had begun for France. hopes were soon rudely dispelled. declaration of war against Germany and its disastrous results, led to the overthrow of the Ollivier Government on May 16, 1870. M. Ollivier, who, it should be mentioned, had been elected a member of the French Academy in April 1870, retired to Biella, in Piedmont, where he resided for a considerable time with his wife and child, devoting his time to literary pursuits. He returned to France in 1872, and his reception at the French Academy took place Feb. 25, 1874. In 1876 he twice stood for the Chamber of Deputies, but was unsuccessful. In 1877 M. Ollivier again became a figure in politics on the occasion of Prince Napoleon's touching the decrees about religious congregations. In the columns of the Figaro he called upon enlightened priests to conform to the decrees, but his appeal led to a violent and prolonged press quarrel with M. Paul de Cassagnac. Since then he has scarcely mixed in contemporary politics except as a correspondent to papers. He accepts the Republic. In 1885, when again standing unsuccessfully for the Chamber, declared that it must be resolutely anti-Radical. M. Émile Ollivier has published numerous juristic works, which have appeared in the Annuaire de Droit Pratique, which he founded in 1856, in conjunction with MM. Moura, Demangeat, and Ballot. He is the author, with M. Murlon, of "Commentaire des Saisies Immobilières et Ordres," 1853, and of "Commissaire de la Loi de Mars 1864, sur les Coalitions," "Une Visite à la Chapelle des Médicis," "Dialogue entre Michel Ange et Raphaël," 1872; "Principes et Conduite," 1877; "L'Église et l'État au Concile du Vatican," 2 vols., 1879; "M. Thiers à l'Académie dans l'Histoire," 1880; "Le Concordat est-il respecté?" 1883; "Droit Ecclésiastique Français," 1885; and "L'Église en France," 1889, 1890. In 1894 he published in defence of his policy in seven volumes entitled "L'Empire Libéral." M. Ollivier's first wife, who died at Saint Tronex in 1862, was a daughter of Liszt, the pianist and composer; he married secondly, in September 1869, a

OLMSTED, Frederick Law, landscape gardener, was born at Hartford, necticut, April 25, 1822. He studied Yale College, devoting special attention to engineering and the sciences connected with agriculture. In 1848 he purchased a farm on Staten Island, and while managing it, studied landscape gardening. In 1850 he made a pedestrian tour through England and portions of the Continent, an account of which was given in his Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, 1852. In 1852-53, as correspondent of the New York Times, he travelled through the South for the purpose of studying the economical effects of slavery. The results of this and of a subsequent journey were afterwards published in separate works: "A Journey in the ard Slave States," 1856; "A Journey through Texas," 1857; "A Journey in the Black Country," 1860; and "The Iron Kingdom," 1861. In the meantime, in 1855, he made a tour through France, Italy, and Germany, for the purpose of observing parks and rural grounds. In 1857, in connection with Calvert Vaux, he secured the prize for the best plan of laying out the New York Central Park, and was appointed architect-in-chief of the work. He continued in charge of the park until the outbreak of the Civil War (1861), when he was appointed Secretary and Executive Officer of the Sanitary Commission. From 1863 to 1865 he spent time in California, when he was made one of the Commissioners of the Yosemite Reservation. He returned to New York in 1866 and had charge of the laying-out of the Brooklyn Prospect Park. He has since designed parks and other public works at Washington, Chicago, Rochester, Louisville, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Montreal, and other cities. He resides at Brookline, Massachusetts.

OLNEY, Hon. Richard, Attorney-General of the United States, was born at Oxford, Mass., Sept. 15, 1835, and was graduated from Brown University, Providence, R.I., in 1856. He attended the Harvard Law School from 1856 to 1859, when he was admitted to the Bar and began the practice of his profession at Boston, where he has since resided. He served as a Member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1874, but held no other public office until his appointment by President Cleveland in March 1893, as Attorney-General of the United States. In May 1895 he was appointed Secretary of State of the United States by President Cleveland, and served until the close of that Administration in 1897.

O'MALLEY, Sir Edward Loughlin, J.P., son of the late Peter Frederick O'Malley, Q.C., was born in 1842, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge; B.A. 1864, M.A. 1868. He was called to the Bar, Middle Temple, in 1866, and went on the Norfolk and South-Eastern Circuits. He was made Attorney-General for Jamaica in 1876; Attorney-General for Hong Kong in 1879; and Chief-Justice of the Straits Settlements in 1889. In 1892 he was appointed Attorney-General of Jamaica and Hong Kong, in 1895 Chief-Justice of British Guiana, and in 1898 Judge of H.B.M.'s Supreme Consular Court, Constantinople. He received the honour of knighthood in 1891. He married, in 1869, Winifred, daughter of J. A. Hardcastle, M.P. Addresses: Denton House, Cuddesdon, Oxford; and Athenæum.

OMMANNEY, Admiral Sir Erasmus, C.B., LL.D., F.R.S., F.R.A.S., Knight Grand Commander of the Royal Order of the Saviour (Greece), is the seventh son of the late Sir Francis Molyneux Ommanney, the well-known navy agent, and sometime M.P. for Barnstaple, and nephew of the late Admiral Sir John A. Ommanney, K.C.B. He was born in London in 1814, and entered the navy in 1826. As midshipman, he assisted at the landing of the British army at Lisbon in 1827, and was at the battle of Navarino on board the Albion, which was in the thick of the fight, and for three hours was hotly engaged, firing on both sides at once. He acted as A.D.C. to the captain throughout the action. He served in H.M. ships Revenge and Undaunted, and saw much service in the Mediterranean, at the Cape of Good Hope, on the West Coast of Africa, and the East Indian stations. He served as mate in the royal yacht Royal George, in the summer of 1834, and was employed in conveying her Majesty Queen Adelaide from Woolwich to Holland and back again, and was afterwards usefully employed in the Packet Service on board a ten-gun brig, the Pantaloön, carrying the mails between Falmouth and Lisbon. He was promoted to Lieutenant in 1835, and immediately volunteered to serve with Capt. James Ross in an expedition to relieve the whaling vessels beset in the ice of Baffin's Bay; this expedition was carried out in mid-winter under extreme hardships and difficulties, and for his services Lieut. Ommanney received the commendation of the Admiralty. After this he served in H.M.S. Pique, and was then appointed Flag-Lieutenant to Sir John Ommanney in the Tagus, which caused his promotion to the rank of Commander in October 1840. At Glasgow he studied the principles and construction of marine engines, in order to fit himself to command steam-vessels, which were then being introduced into the navy. With the Vesuvius he was actively employed in all parts of the Mediterranean for three years, being present at the bombardment of Tangier by the French. He then returned to England, and, unable to get active employment, studied at the Portsmouth Naval College. After being promoted Captain in 1846, he was employed by the Government to help in carrying out the relief measures during the Irish Famine, and in February 1850 was selected to be second in command of the Arctic Expedition, under Captain Austin, to search after the Franklin Expedition, and was the first to discover traces of the missing ships. After travelling over 500 miles on the ice in sledges, Capt. Ommanney returned to the ship, and though no further traces of Franklin were found, a great deal of new land was discovered. On his return to England he was appointed Deputy Controller-General of the Coast-guard, which he left on the outbreak of the war against Russia in 1854, when he was appointed to command the White Sea Expedition, with his pennant in H.M.S. Eurydice. Every part of the White Sea was searched, government stores were destroyed, and various towns bombarded. Upon his return to England, Captain Ommanney was appointed to H.M.S. Hawke for service in the Baltic Fleet, where he was selected to be the Senior Officer in the Gulf of Riga, with four ships under his orders. In November 1857 he proceeded to the West Indies and took command of H.M.S. Brunswick, and was kept as Senior Officer on the Coast of Central America, where he co-operated with the United States Commodore in preventing a filibustering invasion of Nicaragua. He was afterwards recalled to England, and served in the Channel Fleet, and after wintering at Berehaven the Brunswick was despatched to the Mediterranean. Captain Ommanney was lastly employed as Senior Officer in charge of the Naval establishments at the Rock of Gibraltar for nearly three years, a post he was obliged to leave on being promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral in November 1864. He was afterwards knighted in recognition of his Arctic services, and was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society for his scientific observations and for his geographical discoveries made in the Arctic regions. Since being retired by compulsion, he has served on the Thames Conservancy, nominated by the Admiralty, and devoted himself to the interests of learned societies. He has been a frequent attendant at the meetings of the Royal Association, and served on the Council. He accompanied the Society to the Continent in Canada in 1884 in the capacity of its treasurer, on which occasion the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred by the University of Montreal. He read a paper at the Aberdeen meeting in 1881 on the desirability of renewing the exploration and research into the unknown arctic regions. In company with the well-known Berlin Professor and a French Astronomer, he proceeded to Luxor in Upper Egypt, and assisted in observing the transit of Venus. He also accompanied the Expedition which was sent to Oran, in Algeria, for observing the eclipse of the sun, but the observations were unfortunately, were unsuccessful on account of the obscurity of the weather. He is one of the oldest Fellows of the Royal Geographical Society, and has taken a deep interest in their proceedings, having been on the Council and been their delegate at the congresses on the Continent at Amsterdam, Berne, and Nantes. He is a Vice-President of the Royal United Service Institution, and attended the Council for twenty years. During a residence of ten years on the Isle of Wight he discharged the duties of a Justice of the Peace, and undertook the work of an independent visitor under the Home Office of the convict Prison, for which the thanks of the Home Secretary were accorded him. He is a survivor of the eventful and sanguinary battle at Navarino, and for other services in Greek waters, King George of Greece has been pleased to confer upon him the Cross of a Grand Commander of the Order of the Saviour. Admiral Sir Montagu Ommanney married, in 1862, the daughter of Thomas A. Stone, Esq., of Curzon Street, London. Address: Connaught Square, W.

OMMANNEY, Sir Montagu rick, K.C.M.G., Crown Agent for the Colonies, was born in 1846, and was educated at Cheltenham, where he passed into Woolwich. In 1864 he entered the Royal Engineers, and was promoted to the rank of Captain in 1870. From 1874 to 1877 he was Private Secretary to the Secretary for the Colonies. He was created a K.C.M.G. in 1877. Address: Manaton, East Sheen.

ONSLOW, Earl of, William lier, Bart., G.C.M.G., was born on July 7, 1853, and is the only son of the late George Augustus Cranley and Mary, daughter of Lieut.-Colonel William Fraser Bentinck Loftus.

was educated at Eton, and Exeter College, Oxford; and succeeded his grandfather as 4th Earl in 1870. He was Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, 1887-88; and Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade from February to November 1888, when he became Governor of New Zealand in succession to Sir W. D. Revois. He was appointed Under-Secretary for India in 1895. The Earl was Lord-in-Waiting to her Majesty in 1880 and in 1886-87, is High Steward of Guildford, and from 1895 to 1898 was Alderman of the London County Council. During these years (1895-98), he was also leader of the Moderate Party in the London County Council. At the election in March 1898 he retired from the leadership owing to the multiplicity of his engagements, and a hearty vote of thanks was passed to him at a meeting of the Moderate Party for his great services to the party during his three years' tenure of the position. In 1875 he married Florence, daughter of 3rd Lord Gardner. Addresses: 7 Abchurch Lane, E.C. 4; and Clandon, Surrey.

OPPERT, Julius, a French Orientalist, was born in Hamburg, of Jewish parents, July 9, 1825. He studied law at Heidelberg, and Sanskrit and Arabic at Bonn. He next studied the Zend and the ancient Persian, and published a treatise on the vocal system of the latter language. As his religion prevented him holding a professorship in a German university, he went to France in 1847, obtained the professorship of German at the Lycées of Laval and Rheims, and was appointed on the scientific expedition sent by the Government to Mesopotamia. After his return in 1854, he submitted to the Institute a new system of interpreting inscriptions. For nearly thirty years he devoted himself chiefly to the deciphering of cuneiform inscriptions. In 1877 he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit in the School of Languages attached to the Imperial Library. Among his works are "Les Inscriptions des Archéologues," 1852; "Etudes Assyriennes; l'expédition scientifique de France en Mésopotamie," 1854-64; "Grammaire Assyrienne," 1859; "Grande Inscription du Palais de Khorsabad," 1864; "Histoire des Empires de Chaldée et d'Assyrie, après les monuments," 1866; "L'Immortalité de l'âme chez les Chaldéens, suivie d'une traduction de la descente aux enfers de la déesse Istar Astarté," 1875; "L'Ambre chez les Assyriens," 1880; "Fragments Mythologiques relatifs à la Mythologie Assyrienne," 1882; "Deux Textes anciens de la Chaldée," 1883; "Chronologie de la Génèse," 1877; "Documents juridiques de la Chaldée et de l'Assyrie," 1878; "Le Peuple et la Langue des Mèdes," 1879. He has written many papers on the Laws of Assyria and Babylon, such as "État des Esclaves à Babylone," &c. His Paris address is: 2 Rue de Sfax.

ORCHARDSON, William Quiller, R.A., D.C.L. Oxford, born in Edinburgh in 1835, entered at the age of fifteen the Trustees' Academy of his native city. The first pictures he submitted to public inspection were shown in the exhibitions of the Royal Scottish Academy. Encouraged by their reception, Mr. Orchardson came to London in 1863, and the same year exhibited at the Royal Academy for the first time. His contributions were entitled "An Old English Song," and "Portraits," the latter a life-size full-length portrait composition of three young ladies. In the following year he exhibited at the British Institution a figure of "Peggy" from Allan Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd," and at the Royal Academy another Scottish subject entitled "Flowers of the Forest." The following year there appeared at the Royal Academy "Hamlet and Ophelia," and in the winter exhibition at the French Gallery, Pall Mall, "The Challenge," which won a prize of £100 given by Mr. Wallace. In 1866 came "The Story of a Life" at the Academy—an aged nun relating her life experience to a group of novices; and "Christopher Sly," in Mr. Wallis's winter exhibition at the Suffolk Street Galleries. In 1867 the Academy pictures were "Talbot and the Countess of Auvergne," and "Miss Pettie"; and another was shown at the French Gallery winter exhibition, entitled "Choosing a Weapon." In January 1868 he was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy, only four years after he had come to London. He exhibited that year at the Academy, besides a portrait of Mrs. Birken Foster, a subject from Shakespeare—"Prince Henry, Poins, and Falstaff." In 1870 three pictures by him were exhibited at the Royal Academy, viz., "Day Dreams," "The Market-Girl from the Lido," and "Toilers of the Sea." Mr. Orchardson achieved a great success at the Paris Universal Exhibition, where his "Challenge" and "Christopher Sly" were greatly admired by French critics, and won for the painter one of the very few medals awarded to English artists. His more recent pictures are: "A Hundred Years Ago," "On the Grand Canal, Venice," and "In St. Mark's, Venice," exhibited at the Academy, 1871; "Casus Belli," and "The Forest Pet," 1872; "The Protector," "Oscar and Brin," and "Cinderella," 1873; "Hamlet and the King," "Ophelia," "A Venetian Fruitseller," and "Escaped," 1874; "Too Good to be True," and "Moonlight on the Lagoons," 1875; "Flotsam and Jetsam," "The Bill of Sale," and "The Old Soldier," 1876; "The Queen of the Swords," and "Jessica" (Merchant of Venice), 1877; "Conditional Neutrality," "A Social Eddy left by the Tide," and "Autumn," 1878; "Hard Hit," a scene at the gaming table, 1879; "Napoleon I. on board H.M.S. Bellerophon," 1880, purchased by the Council of the Royal Academy under the terms of the Chantrey bequest; "Housekeeping in the Honeymoon," 1882. These were followed by "Voltaire," 1883; "Un Marriage de Convenance," 1884; "The Salon of Mme. Recamier," 1885; "Un Mariage de Convenance—After," 1886; "The Rift within the Lute," 1887; and "The Young Duke," 1889. Besides portraits of Lord Rookwood, Prof. Dewar, David Stewart, Lord Provost of Aberdeen, the Bishop of St. Asaph's, the Provost of Oriel, Viscount Peel, and several ladies, he has of late years exhibited at the Royal Academy "A Flower," 1895; "Reflections," 1896; "Rivalry," 1897; "Trouble," 1898; and portraits of Lord Kelvin, of Peter Russell, Esq., of the Earl of Crawford (presentation portrait), and of Edmund Davis, Esq., 1899. Mr. Orchardson was elected a Royal Academician, Dec. 13, 1877; and a D.C.L. of Oxford in 1890. Address: 13 Portland Place, W.

ORD, William Miller, M.D., F.R.C.P., received his medical education at St. Thomas's Hospital, where he was successively House Surgeon, Surgical Registrar, Demonstrator of Anatomy, Lecturer on Physiology and on Comparative Anatomy, and where he is now Physician and Lecturer on Medicine. He obtained his M.D. of London in 1877, having become a Fellow of the R.C.P., London, two years previously. He is Treasurer of the Clinical Society, Fellow of the Royal Medico-Chirurgical Society, and Fellow or Member of other leading Medical Societies. In 1879 he published "Influence of Colloids upon Crystalline Forms," and has contributed many papers on Uric Acid, &c., to the St. Thomas's Hospital Reports, the Med. Chir. Trans., &c. In 1881 he edited the works of Francis Gibson, and in 1885 delivered the Presidential Address at the Medical Society of London on Hyperpyrexia. Address: 37 Upper Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

O'RELL, Max. See BLOUËT, PAUL.

ORLÉANS, Prince Henri d', was born at Ham, near Richmond, Oct. 16, 1867, and is the eldest son of the Duc de Chartres. When he was about to enter St. Cyr in 1887, the law was passed bidding princes of Royal blood from entering their country in any capacity. He therefore started on a voyage round the world, which lasted twelve months, of which he spent in India shooting with his cousin, the Duc d'Orléans. On his return he published "Six Mois aux chasses au tigre," 1889. In the same year he started with the explorer, Bonvalot, on an exploration of the North Pole. Starting from Russia, they crossed the Arctic Ocean and traversed Tibet, coming out in the Indian Ocean. On his return after a terribly arduous journey he was awarded, with his companions Bonvalot and Dedekind, a gold medal of the Geographical Society of France, and was elected a member of the Academies of London, Rome, Vienna, and Berne. In collaboration with M. Bonvalot he published "De Paris au Tonkin à travers le Tibet inconnu," 1891. He then started for Central Africa; disembarking in the Gulf of Aden he went inland as far as Hamar and Mill-Mill, and laid down the first map of the country, 1892. In 1894 he spent some months in Madagascar before the French occupation, and then returned to Tonkin and discovered the sources of the Irrawaddy on his way from China to India. Since then he has headed a mission to the Negus of Abyssinia.

ORLÉANS, Duc d', Prince Philippe Robert, eldest son of the Comte de Paris, was born Feb. 6, 1838. On attaining his majority, Feb. 6, 1858, he entered Paris, and proceeding to the Mairie, expressed his desire as a Frenchman to perform his military service whereupon he was arrested in conformity with the Expulsion Bill of 1856, which forbids the soil of France to the heirs of the families which have renounced their French citizenship there. He was liberated by President Carnot after a few months' nominal imprisonment, and conducted to the Swiss frontier. This escapade won him the title of the "Premier Conscrit." During the last illness of his father in August, September 1894, he was constantly at the bedside of the illustrious patient, with whom he is reported to have had private conversations on his duties as future representative of the family tradition. After the Comte de Paris's funeral he received his adherents, and is now residing in Brussels, which will in future be his headquarters, Stowe House being, in his opinion, too distant from Orleanist circles in France, especially from those older members of the party who cannot undertake a sea voyage. In 1896 he married Marie Dorothea, a duchess of Austria. His periodical proclamations have little effect in France now.

as recently (1898) fitted up York Twickenham, as a residence.

ORMEROD, Miss Eleanor A., Jct. S., F.E.S., &c., was born at Ry Park, near Chepstow, and is the youngest daughter of Geo. Ormerod, Jct. S., F.R.S., of Sedbury Park, Gloucestershire, and of Tyldesley, Lancashire, as well known as the "Historian of the River Sever." From her earliest childhood Ormerod was excessively fond of botany, and of insect and animal life. To a very early training under her mother Ormerod attributes the success which attended her studies as a specialist. A very early successive illness occasioned a long period of enforced leisure, which Miss Ormerod occupied in natural history, and in the study of the history of the world, together with the related subjects of Botany, Horticulture, and Agricultural Chemistry. She acquired a knowledge of Latin, French, German, and several other of the less commonly studied Continental languages, which greatly helped her in later work, and she began early to sketch from nature in pencil and water colours. About the year 1853 she took up the scientific study of entomology. The real work of her life began in 1868, when the formation of the Department of Economic Entomology was laid on the foot by the Royal Horticultural Society and the South Kensington Department. At this time, Mr. Andrew Murray, Director of the Museum, was in communication with Miss Ormerod, regarding special investigations and research, and, in response, she contributed numerous reports, drawings, and models illustrating insect depredations, in recognition of which many services the "Silver Medal" of the Royal Horticultural Society was awarded to her. In the year 1871 Miss Ormerod was chosen to represent British natural history modelling from the International Polytechnic Exhibition held in Moscow, and sent over a collection of plaster-of-Paris models, made by her in exact facsimile by a process of her own invention and coloured with water-colours. These specimens represented a large number of garden plants and hot-house fruits. She also sent groups of insects, types from nature, representing various orders and reptiles. For these she received the Silver Medal, the Great Silver Medal, and the Gold Medal of Honour from the University of Moscow. In 1878 Miss Ormerod was elected a Fellow of the Entomological Society, being the first lady admitted to Fellowship. She arranged for the Society a large mass of specimens relating to coincident conditions of weather and plant life. This was published in a royal 8vo vol. under the name of the "Cobham Journals." In 1881 she published her "Manual of Injurious Insects, with Methods of Prevention and Remedy for their Attacks on Food-Crops, &c.," and in 1884 her "Guide to Insect Life," being a series of ten lectures on the same class of subjects delivered by her in the Lecture Theatre at South Kensington Museum. Both works have been republished in much enlarged form, and were followed, in 1889, by a small vol. on some of the injurious insects of South Africa. But Miss Ormerod's chief publication has been her "Annual Reports of Observations on Injurious Farm Insects," which were begun in 1877, and continued yearly up to the present date, thus forming a continuous record of the presence and habits of insects injurious to field and orchard crops, and the means found really serviceable for checking their ravages, over a period of twenty-one years. In 1881 she accepted the post of Special Lecturer on Economic Entomology at the Royal Agricultural College, but after a few years she resigned this office. She was unanimously elected Consulting Entomologist to the Royal Agricultural Society of England by the Council, on May 2, 1882. To the duties of this post she devoted her best attention for about ten years. But in the course of 1892, she retired from the office. Miss Ormerod is a member of many scientific societies. She is Hon. Member of the Farmers' Club, a Fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society, and of the Entomological Society of London, and of Stockholm, also a Member of the Entomological Society of Washington, and a Corresponding Member of the International Association of Official Entomologists of Washington. Miss Ormerod is also an additional examiner in Agricultural Entomology in the University of Edinburgh. Her membership with societies in Canada, Australia, and South Africa affords the opportunities of giving and receiving communications aiding in her special work, which continues to increase in scope and importance. Besides the heavy home correspondence which she conducts, especially in reply to inquiries from British agriculturists, Miss Ormerod receives numerous applications from foreign countries and the colonies, and is likewise a frequent contributor to the agricultural journals, regarding prevention of farm and fruit insect attacks. Address: Torrington House, St. Albans.

ORMONDE, Marquis of, James Edward William Theobald Butler, K.P., Hereditary Chief Butler of Ireland and Vice-Admiral of Leinster, was born at Kilkenny Castle on Oct. 5, 1844, and succeeded his father, the 2nd Marquis, in 1854. He was educated at Harrow, and entered the 1st Life Guards, retiring with the rank of Captain in 1873. He is Hon. Colonel of 5th Batt. of the Royal Irish Regiment, and for some ten years commanded the Royal East Kent Yeomanry. In 1888 he was made a Knight of St. Patrick. He has been Lord Lieutenant of Kilkenny since 1878. He married, in 1876, Lady Elizabeth Harriet Grosvenor, daughter of the 1st Duke of Westminster. Addresses: 32 Upper Brook Street, W.; Kilkenny Castle, &c.

OSCAR II., King of Sweden and Norway, is the great-grandson of Napoleon's famous general Bernadotte, and was born Jan. 21, 1829. Before he ascended the throne he held the rank of Lieutenant-General in the army. On the death of the King's brother, Charles XV., Sept. 18, 1872, he succeeded to the throne. In 1878 the Frankfort Academy of Sciences elected the King of Sweden a corresponding member in recognition of his poetical translation of Goethe's "Faust" into Swedish. His Majesty is also the author of "A Memoir of Charles XII." (translated into English in 1879); and of "Poems and Leaflets from my Journal," 1880, under the nom de plume of "Oscar Frederik." He married, in June 1857, the Princess Sophia of Nassau, daughter of the late Duke Wilhelm of Nassau, who was born in July 1836. From this union there are four sons — namely, Gustaf, Duke of Wermland, born in June 1858, now heir-apparent to the throne; Oscar, Duke of Götland, born in November 1859, and who married Miss Ebba Munck, daughter of Col. Munck; Carl, Duke of Westergötland, born in February 1861; and Eugene, Duke of Nerike, born in August 1865. The coronation of King Oscar and Queen Sophia took place July 18, 1873, at the Cathedral of Drontheim in Norway. In 1892 and 1893 King Oscar opposed himself resolutely to the desire of the Norwegian Parliament for a foreign and consular service which should be independent of Sweden. On Sept. 18, 1897, he celebrated the 25th anniversary of his accession amidst the great rejoicings of his people. In the same year his son, Prince Carl, was married to the Princess Ingeborg of Denmark.

OSLER, William, M.D., F.R.C.P., F.R.S. Lond., Professor of Medicine at the Johns Hopkins University, was born at Bend Head, Canada, on July 12, 1849, and is the sixth son of the late Rev. F. L. Osler. He was educated at Toronto University, M'Gill University, University College London, Berlin and Vienna, &c. He was Professor of the Institutes of Medicine at M'Gill University from 1874 to 1884, Professor of Clinical Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania from 1884 to 1887, when he was appointed to his present post, and Gulstonian Lecturer at the Royal College of Physicians, London, in 1887. In 1898 he was elected F.R.S. His most important standard work is "The Principles and Practice of Medicine," 3rd ed. 1898. Address: Baltimore.

OSMAN ALI (called Osman Digna or "the bearded one," from digna = beard) was born at Suakim about 1840. He is not of pure Arab descent; his grandfather was a Turkish slave-dealer who married a woman of the Hadendowa tribe, and Osman, like his father and grandfather before him, was a dealer in slaves and had connections in Khartoum and Berber; and during later years, before he appeared as the ambassador of the Mahdi, he stayed more frequently at Berber than at Suakim. There he entered into communication with the Mahdi, Motam Ahmed, and matured his plans for inducing the tribes round Suakim to rise against the oppression of their Egyptian rulers. Osman Digna was not, however, the first and original leader of the rebellion. Sheik Tahher, of Suakim, who enjoyed the repute of especial holiness amongst the superstitious nomads of the parts, was the real messenger of the Mahdi, and the channel of communication in the negotiations with the rebel tribes, while Osman Digna was more a military commander, and had to base his operations upon the spiritual authority of Sheik Tahher, a relation which existed till within recent years. It is well known with what skill Osman Digna filled this position, extended his influence over rebellious tribes, and rose in the estimation of the authorities at Khartoum. The rebellion of the False Prophet on the White Nile broke out in December 1881, and in August 3, 1883, Osman Digna appeared before Suakim, on which the first encounter took place at Suakim with Tewfik Bey, Osman being beaten and wounded, and losing three members of his family. In September 1885 an Abyssinian expedition under Ras Alula, which had been sent to the relief of Kassala by Emperor Menelik, encountered Osman Digna at Kafeil, and utterly defeated him. He again threatened Suakim in 1888, when he was repulsed by General Grenfell on December 21 of that year. He has been reported as slain more frequently than any other warrior. However, his natural astuteness did not desert him after title of Omdurman, for he was one of the few Emirs who escaped the terrible r. Late in 1898 he was reported fugitive in the less accessible portions of the Soudan.

AY, The Right Hon. Sir John, Bart., D.L., J.P., was born in Edinburgh on Aug. 8, 1822, and succeeded his brother, the 2nd Baronet. He was educated at Sandhurst in Germany, and entered the 51st in 1839, retiring in 1846. He entered the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1846 and subsequently entered upon a parliamentary career, being returned as member for Stafford in 1852, representing that constituency until 1857, after which he sat for Chatham and Rochester. While representing Chatham he was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs from 1868-71. He was Secretary of Ways and Means, and Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons from 1871 to 1885. He was sworn of the Privy Council in 1885. He married, in 1851, a daughter of Sir James Langhorne, 1st Baronet. Addresses: 34 Eaton Square, S.W.; and Athenæum.

ESS, Walter William, R.A., was born at St. Heliers, Jersey, Sept. 21, 1848, educated at Victoria College in that town. He came to London in 1864, and was admitted a student of the Royal Academy in the following year. While at the Academy he took a silver medal in the Antique and was an unsuccessful competitor for the Historical Gold Medal. Mr. Ess has been a constant exhibitor at the Royal Academy since 1869, and his first subjects were pictures, the principal of which were "Home Again," and "An Incident in the French Revolution." In 1872, acting on the advice of Mr. Millais, he took up oil-painting, and has since devoted himself almost exclusively to that branch of the profession. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy, Jan. 24, 1881, and a Royal Academician, May 5, 1881. He obtained the medal of the second class at the Paris International Exhibition of 1878. Among the portraits painted and exhibited by Mr. Ouless may be mentioned those of Lord Selborne; Mr. Charles Darwin, F.R.S.; the late Bishop of London; Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, G.C.B.; Miss Ruth Bouverie, 1877; the late Mr. Russell Gurney, M.P., Recorder of London, 1877; Lieut-Colonel Loyd Lindsay, 1878; Mr. John Bright, M.P.; Sir Thomas Gladstone; the Rev. Dr. Ridding, head-master of Winchester College; and Mr. Edmund Yates, 1879; His Eminence Cardinal Newman; Mr. Justice Manisty, 1880; Mrs. Butterworth, 1881; General Sir F. Roberts, 1882; the late Bishop of Llandaff, and the Bishop of Norwich, 1883; Mr. G. Scharf, 1886; His Eminence Cardinal Manning, 1888; Sir William Bowman, F.R.S.; Lady Manisty; T. Sidney Cooper, R.A., 1889; the Bishop of St. Albans and the Bishop of Chichester, 1890; Sir Charles Tennant, Bart., 1893; Major-General Sir F. Grenfell; Sir William Savory, Bart.; Sir John Gladstone, Bart., 1894; His Honour Judge Sir Horatio Lloyd; H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, 1895; Frederic J. Harrison; Dr. Dobie, of Chester; the Dean of Llandaff, 1896; the Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.; Lord Lister (presentation portrait); Sir Charles Seely, Bart. (presentation portrait); Justice Lindley; Sir Spencer Ponsonby Fane, K.C.B., 1897; John Maundsell Richardson, D.L. (presentation portrait), and Edward Wood (presentation portrait), 1898; the Hon. Lucius O'Brien, Lord Leigh, and the Bishops of Truro and Lincoln, 1899. Mr. Ouless was one of the two English recipients of the grand Gold Medal for Art at the Berlin International Exhibition, 1886; and was made a Chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur after the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1889. Mr. Ouless is Hon. Secretary of the Artists' General Benevolent Institution. He married Lucy, daughter of the late E. K. Chambers, M.D., in 1868. Addresses: 12 Bryanston Square, W.; and Athenæum.

OWEN, Edmund, M.B., F.R.C.S., received his medical education at St. Mary's Hospital, London, and in Paris. He was at one time Lecturer on Anatomy, and is now Lecturer on Clinical Surgery at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School. He is Senior Surgeon at St. Mary's, and at the Hospital for Children in Great Ormond Street, besides being Consulting Surgeon to a number of other hospitals. He is a member of Council and of the Court of Examiners at the Royal College of Surgeons, is ex-President of the Harveian Society, Orator and Trustee of the Medical Society of London, Fellow of the Royal Medical Chirurgical Society, Hon. Associate of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, &c. He has been Examiner in Surgery at the University of Durham. His works include "Surgical Diseases of Children," 3rd edit., 1897; Harveian and Lettsomian Lectures, both on the Surgery of Childhood, articles in Heath's "Dictionary of Surgery," and contributions to the medical journals and to various learned Transactions. OWEN, Sir Hugh, G.C.B., late Permanent Under-Secretary of the Local Government Board, was born in 1835, and is the eldest son of Sir Hugh Owen, Kt., the Welsh educationist. He was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple, was Assistant Secretary of the Local Government Board from 1876 to 1882, and became Permanent Under-Secretary in 1882. He received the honour of the Knighthood of the Bath in 1887, and was created G.C.B. at New Year 1899. In December 1898 his retirement was announced. The Times stated at that date that "during his tenure of this office many important measures affecting local government have been passed, and successive Presidents of the Board have acknowledged the valuable assistance they have received from Sir Hugh in the preparation and carrying of their several measures. In 1897 a departmental committee on Local Government Board organisation stated in their report that they could not 'pass by without comment the able and devoted manner in which Sir Hugh Owen has administered the trying and ever-increasing work of his department for a period of fifteen years,' and declared that 'few men could have borne the incessant strain as he has done.' By his retirement the State loses a valuable public servant. His ability and unfailing courtesy will cause the announcement that he has ceased to hold office to be received with much regret by all who are interested in local government." He has published various legal works on municipal and local authorities and matters, including "The Education Acts Manual," and "The Municipal Corporation Act," 1882. He married, in 1865, Charlotte Elizabeth, née Burt. Address: Belmont, Crouch End Hill, N.

PACHMANN, Vladimir de, pianist, was born at Odessa about 1845. He was educated at Vienna under Liszt, and gained the gold medal. In 1870 he returned to Russia, and not being favourably received at first, he studied in Germany more years. He then met with success in Germany, at Vienna, and in London. His first appearance in London was in 1882 at one of Wilhelm Ganz's concerts, and since then rarely has a musical performance passed without his giving a series of recitals, generally at St. James's Hall, where he is called "the Poet of the Piano." He is famous for his interpretation of Chopin. He married, in 1884, Miss Krumpholtz, the pianist.

PADEREWSKI, Ignace Jan, born in 1860, in Podolia, Poland, in spite of unsympathetic surroundings, his natural genius for music showed itself when he was still quite young. When he was twenty he had decided to devote himself to composition, and on that age he proceeded to Berlin to study harmony, &c. A few years later he resolved to become a pianist, and accordingly studied during three years under the tuition of Leschetitsky, the son of the well-known performer, J. B. Essipoff. He advanced rapidly in his art, and his debut was a complete success. He is now one of the first of pianists, as well as a brilliant composer.

owed much of his success to intense incessant practice, which has given his marvellous ease of execution. In 1893 M. Paderewski made an tour and gained thereby some. A new fantasia by him was auced at the Norwich Festival in 1893. January 1895 an unusual incident rred at Torquay, Paderewski, it was, refusing to play before people who u only five shillings to hear him. His iager afterwards corrected this state- t. affirming that the reason of Pader- 's conduct was that he resented the of prices—from ten shillings on previous visit to five shillings—without consent. However, in the following th, the artist displayed again his well- own kindness of heart in giving a al at Hanley in behalf of the Audley ress Fund. As a result of this per- ormance, the substantial sum of £160 was handed over to the Mayor of Hanley as a contribution to the Fund. In April 1897, a "Paderewski Orchestral Concert" was given at the Queen's Hall, London, when M. Paderewski, accompanied by Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra, gave a special performance of two concertos, Schumann's in A minor and Liszt's in E flat. It was widely remarked at the time that the pianist, spite of his unrivalled eminence, owed a considerable increase in dignity, repose, and true virtuosity, and the whole exquisite rendering added largely to M. Paderewski's reputation. In the following June (1897) the artist repeated his orchestral combination, and was declared to have never been heard to greater advantage. Since that time, M. Paderewski has been touring abroad, making one or two fugitive appearances in England, notably at the Crystal Palace at the Saturday Afternoon Concerts.

PAGE, Herbert William, M.A., M.B., F.R.C.S., was educated at the Universities of Edinburgh and Cambridge, at the London Hospital, and in Vienna. He is Surgeon and Lecturer on Surgery at St. Mary's Hospital, has been Examiner in Surgery at the University of Cambridge, and is Member of the Court of Examiners of the Royal College of Surgeons, Eng. In 1870–71 he was Assistant-Surgeon to the Hessian Division of the German Army, and at present holds various appointments as Surgeon to the Railway Passengers Assurance Co., &c. He has published "Injuries to the Back in their Surgical and Medico-Legal Aspects," being the Boylston Prize Essay, Harvard, 1881; "Injuries of the Spine and Spinal Cord, and Nervous Shock," 2nd edit., 1885; "Railway Injuries," 1891, translated into German; "Clinical Papers on Surgical Subjects," 1897, besides articles on the Spine, &c., in Heath's "Dictionary of Surgery," and Treves's "Manual and System of Surgery," and the Royal Med. Chir. and Clin. Society Transactions, &c. Address: 146 Harley Street, W.

PAGE, Thomas Nelson, D.L., American writer, was born at Oakland, Hanover Co., Virginia, April 23, 1853. He was educated at Washington and Lee University, and received the degree of LL.B. from the University of Virginia in 1874. He has since practised his profession at Richmond. The degree of D.L. was conferred upon him by Washington and Lee University in 1887. Mr. Page's first publication was a rhyme entitled "Uncle Gabe's White Folks," which appeared in Scribner's Monthly (now the Century) in 1877. In 1884 was issued, in the Century, "Marse Chan," a negro dialect story of the Civil War, and this made the writer's reputation. Others in the same vein followed, and in 1887 they were collected and published together in a book under the title of "In Ole Virginia." This was followed by "Befo' de War: Echoes in Negro Dialect," 1888; "Two Little Confederates," 1888; "Elsket and Other Stories," 1890; "On Newfound River," 1891; "Among the Camps," 1891; "The Old South Essays," 1892; "The Burial of the Guns," 1894; "Pastime Stories," 1894; "Polly," 1894; "The Old Gentleman of the Black Stock," 1897; and "Social Life in Old Virginia before the War," 1897. PAKENHAM, The Hon. Sir Francis John, K.C.M.G., Minister and plenipotentiary to Sweden and Norway, was born in 1832, and is the seventh son of the 2nd Earl of Longford. He entered the Diplomatic Service in 1852, and much of his life has been spent in the South American Republics. In 1871 he was at Washington; in 1874 at Copenhagen; and in 1878 he was promoted to be Minister to Chili, serving as Commissioner under the Convention for settling the claims arising out of the Chili-Peruvian War. In 1885 he became Minister to the Argentine Republic in Paraguay, which he left for his present post in 1896. In 1879 he married Caroline, daughter of Rev. the Hon. H. Ward. Address: British Legation, Stockholm.

PALGRAVE, Sir Reginald F. D., K.C.B., fourth son of the late Sir Francis Palgrave, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Dawson Turner, of Great Yarmouth, banker, was born in London, June 28, 1829. He was placed, through the intervention of Sir R. H. Inglis, by Sir D. Le Marchant, Clerk of the House of Commons, in the Committee Office, 1853; upon the recommendation of Sir T. Erskine May, he was appointed by the Speaker, Mr. Evelyn Denison, Examiner of Petitions for Private Bills to both Houses of Parliament, 1866, and Second Clerk Assistant and Clerk Assistant to the House of Commons, 1868 and 1886. In 1886, on the death of Sir Thomas Erskine May, he was appointed Clerk to the House of Commons. He published (1869) "The House of Commons; Illustrations of its History and Practice," 1877; "The Chairman's Handbook," 1890; "Oliver Cromwell, the Protector, an Appreciation"; editing also Books I. and II. of Sir T. E. May's "Treatise on the Law, &c., of Parliament," 1893. He has contributed to the Quarterly Review articles on "Pym and Shaftesbury, Two Popish Plots" (vol. 147), "The Fall of the Monarchy of Charles I." (vol. 154), and "Cromwell," April 1886. He married, in 1857, Grace, daughter of Richard Battley, of Reigate, Esq., and was created C.B. 1887; K.C.B. 1892. Address: Speaker's Court, Westminster, S.W.

PALGRAVE, Robert Harry Inglis, F.R.S., F.S.S., third son of the late Sir Francis Palgrave, Knight of Hanover, Deputy Keeper of the Rolls, was born in Westminster on June 11, 1827; was educated at the Charterhouse, and entered early the banking-house of Gurneys & Co., of Yarmouth (now Barclay & Co., Ltd.), of which his grandfather, Mr. Dawson Turner, F.R.S., and Mr. John Brightwen, were partners. He married, in 1859, S. Maria Brightwen, the niece of the last-named; she died April 11, 1898. Mr. Palgrave has occupied himself largely and with much success in the study of economic, statistical, and banking questions. In 1870 he wrote a Prize Essay, printed in the Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, upon the "Local Taxation of Great Britain and Ireland." Since that date he has contributed many papers on banking and currency questions to the Transactions of the above society, to those of the Bankers' Institute, and also to the reports of the British Association, to the Bankers' Magazine, the Bankers' Almanac, &c., and for six years, dating from 1877, he edited, in part at first, afterwards solely, the Economist newspaper. He is the editor of the "Dictionary of Political Economy," the first vol. of which was published in 1893, the second in 1896. In 1882 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society; in 1885 he was appointed one of the Royal Commissioners on the depression of Trade and Industry. Mr. Palgrave has also taken a leading part, as president, or otherwise, in the meetings of the section of Economic Science and Statistics of the British Association and in the very important inquiries into the gold and paper currency questions, which have been undertaken, based partly on his investigations, and with the advantage of his combined practical and scientific knowledge, by the Bankers' Institute, and the Committee of the Association of English Country Bankers. In common with his brothers, Mr. R. H. Inglis Palgrave owes much to the training he received from his parents, his mother, Elizabeth, the daughter of Mr. Dawson Turner, mentioned above, being a lady of great accomplishments and much ability. His only daughter, Elizabeth, is married to the Rev. Rowland V. Barker. Addresses: Belton, near Great Yarmouth; and Athenaeum.

PALISA. Dr. J. was born on Dec. 6, 1848, at Troppau in Silesia and was educated first in his native town, and afterwards at Vienna University, where he devoted his attention to Mathematics and Physics and was, in 1871, appointed Assistant Observer at the Vienna Observatory. Thence in 1872 he went to the Observatory at Geneva, and in 1875 he was appointed Director of the Observatory at Pola, where he had a six-inch meridian circle by Fraunhofer & Steinheil, and a six-inch refractor with which he discovered no fewer than twenty-eight minor planets. In 1880 he left the Pola Observatory and was appointed the First Assistant at the Imperial Observatory at Vienna, where he has discovered thirty or more minor planets, making the very large total of thirty-two. PALMER, The Rev. Charles (Raymund), second son of Edward Palmer, M.D. (well known as a writer), was born at Tamworth, Leicestershire, in 1819, and educated at the Grammar School of that town, and at St. John's College of Medicine, Birmingham. He practised as a surgeon in his native town for some years, and in 1853, he joined the Dominican order, took orders in the Roman Catholic Church, and had entered in 1842. Father Charles Palmer is employed in anti-researches, chiefly relating to the history of his order in England, now being published in antiquarian journals. He has "The History of the Town and Parish of Tamworth, in the Counties of Leicestershire and Warwick," in 1845; "Life of Niccolò da Fiesole, of the Order of Dominicans," a translation from the French of E. Cartier, with notes, in 1865; "The Dominican Tertiary's Guide," to which R. Rodolph Suffield also attached his name, in 1866 (2nd edit. 1868); "The Philip Thomas Howard, O.P., Cardinal of Norfolk, Grand Almoner to King Charles II., &c., with a Sketch of his Mission, and Influence of the Dominican Order, and of its Early History in England," in 1867; "The History and Antiquities of the Collegiate Church of St. Mary, in the County of Stafford," in 1867; "The History of the Baronial Family of Marmion," in 1875; "Obituary of the Dominicans from 1650," 1884; "The Catholic Registers of Woburn Lodge, Bedfordshire, and of Upton Court," printed in 1888 and 1889; and contributed to various periodicals, chiefly on antiquarian and historical subjects, which have been separately reprinted. His manuscript collection of documents concerning Tamworth, in 4 vols., now in the British Museum; and the reports of the results of his researches in 1881–82 in the history of the Master-General of the Dominican Order as far as England is concerned.

PALMER, Sir Charles Mark, Bart., Esq., J.P., coal-owner and ship-owner at South Shields, on Nov. 3, 1886, the son of Mr. George Palmer, merchant and merchant of Newcastle, and was educated in the school of Dr. Bruce, the historian of the "Roman Wall." After preparing for a commercial career in France, he became a partner, first with his father, and shortly afterwards, in 1845, with Mr. John Bowes, M.P., Mr. (afterwards Sir William) Hutt, M.P., and Mr. Nicholas Wood (all since deceased), in coal-mining and coke-making, and extended their colliery operations from a small beginning up to a production of 2½ million tons per annum. In the year 1851 Mr. Palmer conceived the idea of cheapening the transit of coal to London and other ports by the employment of steam collier vessels, which have since completely superseded the old sailing brigs of the north of England. He established the shipbuilding yard at Jarrow on the Tyne, where the first screw collier, the John Bowes, was launched in 1852. He has since developed the Jarrow works into the gigantic concern, now Palmer's Shipbuilding and Iron Company, Ltd., which constructs an ocean steamer from the iron ore of its own Yorkshire mines, through all its processes into a complete ship. From these works the populous modern town of Jarrow originated. It obtained a charter of incorporation in 1875, Mr. Palmer being its first mayor. The Jarrow works have produced armour-plated and other vessels for H.M. navy, and Mr. Palmer was the first to introduce rolled armour-plates for men-of-war. Sir C. Palmer is a Magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant of the North Riding of Yorkshire, and of the county of Durham, is an Alderman and Magistrate of the borough of Jarrow, Hon. Colonel of the 1st Newcastle and Durham Engineer Volunteers, and was until lately President of the Newcastle Chamber of Commerce. At the general election of 1874 he was returned M.P. in the Liberal interest for the Northern division of the county of Durham, which he continued to represent till the Reform Act of 1885, when on the redistribution of seats he was elected for the Jarrow division of the same county. After the dissolution of 1886 he was re-elected without opposition, and was again returned in 1892 and 1895. He was created a baronet in 1886. He married (3), in 1877, Gertrude, daughter of James Montgomery, D.L., J.P., of Cranford. Address: 37 Curzon Street, W., &c.

PALMER, Sir Elwin Mitford, K.C.M.G., K.C.B., born March 3, 1852, is the second son of Edward Palmer, and was educated at Lancing College, Sussex, and appointed to the Indian Financial Department in 1871. He proceeded to Egypt from India to take up the appointment of Director-General of Ac-

UNIVERSITY IN 1907. HE WAS APPOINTED FINANCIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT IN 1908. SINCE 1909 HE HAS BEEN GOVERNOR OF THE NATIONAL BANK OF LONDON. HE WAS AWARDED M.A. IN 1907 AND M.B. IN 1909. D.D. IN 1917. HE HAS ALSO THE GRAND OFFICER OF THE LÉGION D'HONNEUR. ADDRESS: LONDON.

PARIS, GASTON French philologist. The son of Paul Paris, was born at Arcueil, France, Aug. 1, 1869. He was educated at Collège de France and the Universities of Bonn and Göttingen, and holding the language advantages with Professeur Drey. On his return to France he entered the École des Chartes pursuing at the same time the study of law, and took the degree of Doctor in Letters in 1895. On May 12, 1894, he was named a member of the Académie des Inscriptions et des Beaux-Lettres. Among other interesting and various works he has published: "Étude sur la vie de Tacite" and "La Vie de Tacite" (1892); "Le monde antique" (1893); "Histoire de la civilisation" (1894); "Le Paris ancien et la Grande Grèce" (1895); "La Rome d'après les sources antiques" (1896); and "La Littérature française de 1800 à 1850" (1897). He has given editions of several old French works: "La Vie de Saint Alexis" (1897) and 1899; "Les Miracles de sainte Anne par personnages" (1897); "Deux relations de l'Église des sept Sages de Rome" (1897); "La Vie de Saint Gilles" (1897); "Marian" (1897); "Trois relations de l'Église de Nîmes" (1897). He has translated, together with Paul Meyer, the Œuvres of 1897, the Œuvres of 1897, and the Œuvres of 1897. He was elected a member of the Académie of Munich, Bonn, Vienna, Bonn, Berlin, etc. He was promoted officer of the Légion d'Honneur in 1900. His chief work has been the study of the romances connected with the name of Charlemagne, in which he has combined accurate learning with the power of making dry bones live again. In 1894 he was elected to the French Academy, and was offered a medal as a memorial of his election, by professors and students of all French all over the world—a school that he has practically founded single-handed. He is the Administrator of the Collège de France and the Director of the École des Hautes Études. His Paris address is Collège de France.

PARK, Edwards Amasa, D.D., LL.D. was born at Providence, Rhode Island, Dec. 20, 1806. He graduated at Brown University in 1826, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1831, and was pastor of a Congregational Church, Stratford, Massachusetts, 1834. He became Professor of Moral and Philosophy and of Hebrew Literature, Amherst College, in 1838, and Professor of Sacred Literature and of Theological Seminary, 1842. He exchanged this chair for that of New Theology, and in 1845 he was American Professor. The year 1847 was transferred from him by 1847, 1844, and to Brown University. Dr. Park has for many years been regarded as a representative of what is called "English Theology." He has been in the editors of Evangelical Society and Evangelical Society in 1844. Besides many articles, pamphlets, sermons, contributions to Scripture and other religious and theological journals, he has published: "Sermons from Genesis" (1839); "Writings of Rev. John Fisher" (1842); "The Theology of the Bible and of the Fathers" (1842); "The Rise of the Evangelical Revival in the American" (1844); "Life of the Works" (1844); and "Discourses on Theological Doctrines as related to Religious Character" (1845); and "Theology with others" (1845); "The Sabbath Book" (1845); "Hymns and Church." His most valuable contribution to progress has been his explanation of the Anglo-American Creed. The D. of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Yale University in 1866.

PARKER, Gilbert, novelist and writer, was born in Canada in Nov. 1849, and is the second son of Joseph Parker, B.A. He was educated at Trinity College, Toronto, of which is M.A. For some time he was a teacher in the Deaf and Dumb School, Belleville, Canada. He was ordained in the Church of England, became a lecturer in English Literature, Trinity College, Toronto. In 1866 he went to Australia in search of health, withdrew from the ministry, and became one of the editors of the Sydney Morning Herald; Her Majesty's Theatre, Sydney, he acted as adapter of Goethe's Faust in April 1868. Afterwards he wrote "The Vendetta" and "No Defense," plays proving successful. He has travelled extensively in Canada and in the Sea Islands, and now resides in London where he is one of the literary correspondents of the Sydney Morning Herald. In 1892 he published "Round the pass in Australia," and in the same year came into fame with his vivid French-Canadian stories, "Pierre et Pierre." His other works include: "Falcon" and "The Trespasser." translation of a Savage," 1894; "Valmond came to Pontiac," 1895; "Seats of the Mighty," 1896; "The Seats of the Lavilletes," 1897; "The Seats of the Strong," 1898. He has produced "The Seats of the Mighty," was produced in America, and by Mr. Tree as the opening play at Majesty's Theatre. Address: 7 Place, St. James's, S.W.

PARKER, Joseph, D.D., a popular national preacher and minister of the City Temple, born April 9, 1830, at Don-Tyne, was educated at private schools and University College, London. He was pastor at Banbury, 1853-58; at St. Peter's, 1858-69; and settled in London at the City Temple at £70,000. He has been Chairman of the Lancashire Congregational Union; member of the Manchester Congregational Board; twice Chairman of the Congregational Board; and Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Dr. Parker is the author of "The People's Bible" (25 vols.); "Paraclete"; "Ecce Deus"; "Advent"; "Weaver Stephen"; "Spring-bey"; "Studies in Texts"; and other works. In November 1894 he wrote the Times to point out that the art of reporting and publishing sermons is a form of literary piracy against which preachers should protect themselves. He received a honorary Degree of D.D. was conferred on him by the University of Chicago. He celebrated his jubilee as a minister in 1894. Mrs. Parker, a lady of many accomplishments, and for many years his helper, died on Jan. 26, 1898. Address: 14 Lyndhurst Gardens, South Hampstead, N.W.

PARKER, Louis N., Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, was born in Paris, France, on Oct. 21, 1852, and only son of Charles Albert Parker. He was educated at Freiburg in Germany. He became a pupil of Sir Sterndale Bennett, at the Royal Academy of Music, and in that institution he was elected Assistant in 1874, and Fellow in 1898. He was Director of the Music in Sherborne from 1872 to 1892, during which time he published the following musical compositions: "Silvia," "The 23rd Psalm," "The Wreck of the Hesperus," "Tamlane," "Ball Margaret," all for solo, chorus, and orchestra, songs, part-songs, and instrumental. In 1892 his increasing interest in drama brought him to London, where he produced the following plays, either in collaboration: "A Buried Treasure," "Taunton Vale," "Chris," "The Sequel," "The Love-knot," "The Ordeal," "Love in a Mist," "The Bohemians," "David," "Gudgeons," "The Blue Boar," "Rosemary," "Change Alley," "There's no Jest with Some" (the last six in collaboration with Mr. Murray Carson), "Once Upon a Time" (Fulda), "Rosmersholm" (Ibsen), "Love in Idleness" (Goodwin), "Magda" (Sudermann), "The May Flower," "The Man in the Street," "The Vagabond King," "The Happy Life," "Ragged Robin" (Richpin), "The Treasure-Hunters," "The Swashbuckler," and "Lancelot of the Lake." In 1878 he married Georgiana, eldest daughter of Charles Calder, of Sherborne. Permanent address: 75 Gunterstone Road, West Kensington, W.

PARKINSON, Joseph Charles, born in London in 1833, obtained an appointment in Somerset House (Inland Revenue Department) in 1855, after the Civil Service Commission had been established by Order in Council. He published in 1859 "Under Government," the first complete guide to the various departments of the Civil Service. This work, which ran through many editions, was followed in 1860 by a handbook of "Government Examinations." In 1864 Mr. Parkinson's abilities as a journalist were recognised by the Daily News, and for the next ten years he was one of the steadiest and most esteemed contributors to that journal, mainly on the abolition of public executions, poor-law reform, and the preservation of commons. In conjunction with the Duke of Westminster, the late Archbishop of York, the late Dr. Anstie, and others, Mr. Parkinson worked by pen and speech to promote that reform in work-house infirmaries which culminated in Mr. Gathorne Hardy's measure. In 1869 he visited Egypt as the guest of the Viceroy, and described for the Daily News the opening of the Suez Canal. He next visited India on a special mission for the telegraphic authorities, and published an account of his visit, "The Ocean Telegraph to India." Mr. Parkinson has of late years retired from journalism, and occupies himself in the direction of several well-known industrial and scientific enterprises.

PARR, Mrs. Louisa, only child of Matthew Taylor, R.M., was born in London, but spent the years of her early life in Devonshire. Her first venture into print was made in 1868, when a short story appeared under her name in Good Words, entitled, "How it all Happened." It was a slight story, but most gracefully told, and it at once attracted so much attention, that versions of it were published in several foreign languages, and it was reproduced in the Journal des Débats, notwithstanding the editor's general rule against the acceptance of translations. Upon her marriage with a gentleman in the medical profession, which took place in 1869, Mrs. Parr came to live in London, and the scene of her principal literary labours has been the house in Kensington, where she has ever since resided. "Dorothy Fox," Mrs. Parr's first three-volume novel, was published in 1870. This book dealt with Quaker life, and at once delighted the public. In the United States it was as well received as in England, in proof of which it may be mentioned that an American publisher paid £300 for the advance sheets of her next story, "The Prescotts." A first collection of short stories was published in 1871, bearing the title of her first sketch, "How it all Happened"; this was followed in 1874 by another series in two volumes called "The Gosau Smithy." "Adam and Eve," which came out at first as a serial, and was published in book form in 1880, marked an important advance on all previous efforts. A comparison between this work and "Dorothy Fox," its predecessor by ten years, shows at once how greatly Mrs. Parr's skill had ripened and matured in the interval. In "Adam and Eve" all trace of amateurishness had disappeared, and Mrs. Parr had become thoroughly mistress of her art. "Robin" appeared in 1882, and "Loyalty George," her masterpiece, in 1888. In 1892 she published "The Squire," and in 1893, "Can this be Love?" "The Follies of Fashion," which since 1893 have been such an attractive feature of the Pall Mall Magazine, are by Mrs. Parr. The illustrations are taken from Dr. Parr's valuable collection of old prints. Address: 18 Upper Phillimore Place, Kensington, W.

PARRY, Sir Charles Hubert Hastings, Hon. D.C.L. Durham, M.A., Mus. Doc. Oxford, Honorary Mus. Doc. Cambridge and Dublin, Director of the Royal College of Music (1895), Choragus of Oxford University (1884), Hon. Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, is the son of T. Gambier Parry, of Highnam Court, in Gloucestershire, and was born at Bournemouth, Feb. 27, 1848. He went to Eton in 1861, working at harmony, &c., with Sir George Elvey, organist at Windsor, and made sufficient progress to pass the examination for the musical bachelor's degree at Oxford before leaving the school. He proceeded to Oxford in 1866, and in 1870 took a second class in Law and History. At intervals he worked at music, with Sir William Sterndale Bennett first, then with Sir G. A. Macfarren, and Mr. E. Dannreuther, and began to contribute to

Sir George Grove's "Dictionary of Music." In 1873 he gave up business in the City and devoted himself entirely to music. Amongst Mr. Parry's compositions are: "Duo," in E minor, for two pianofortes; Fantasia-Sonata for pianoforte and violin; Sonata in A for pianoforte and violoncello; Trios for pianoforte and strings; Quatuor for same; String Quartet in G, and String Quintet in E flat; Pianoforte Concerto; Variations on an original theme for pianoforte; Overtures, "Guillem de Cabestani" and "An Unwritten Tragedy"; Four Symphonies, and a Symphonic Suite: "Scenes from Shelley's Prometheus Bound," Gloucester Festival, 1880; "Music to the 'Birds' of Aristophanes," Cambridge, 1884; "Music to the 'Frogs' of Aristophanes," Oxford, 1893; Music to Hypatia; Ode for chorus and orchestra "The Glories of our Blood and State"; an opera, "Lancelot and Guinevere"; Overture for eight-part chorus and orchestra, "The Pair of Sirens"; Oratorio, "Judith," Birmingham Festival, 1888; "Ode for St. Cecilia's Day," Leeds Festival, 1889; "L'Allegro ed Il Penseroso," a cantata, Norwich Festival, 1890; a fine setting of "De Profundis," Hereford Festival, 1891. Since then he has produced his greatest oratorio, "Job." At the Birmingham Festival in 1894 he produced "King Saul," another oratorio. To these may be added "The Invocation to Music," Leeds, 1895; "Magnificat," Hereford, 1897; "Symphonic Variations," Philharmonic, 1897; also "Studies of Great Composers"; a "Summary of the History of Music" (Novello); "The Evolution of the Art of Music" (Kegan Paul). The honour of knighthood was conferred upon him in June 1898. In 1872 he married Lady Maude Herbert, with whose family he had been intimate since boyhood. Address: Highnam Court, Gloucester; 17 Kensington Square, W., &c.

PARSONS, Alfred William, A.R.A. R.I., landscape painter, son of Joshua Parsons, M.R.C.S., was born at Beckington, in Somersetshire, Dec. 2, 1847, and educated at private schools. In 1865 he became a clerk in the Savings Bank Department of the General Post Office, drawing in the evening at Heatherley's and the South Kensington Art Schools. In 1867 he left the Civil Service, and returned to Somersetshire and studied painting, working from nature, without masters. He was elected a member of the committee of the General Exhibition of Water-Colour Drawings in 1879. On the dissolution of that Society, he, with the other members of the committee, joined the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colour. His first picture exhibited in yal Academy was in 1871; his principal exhibited works since then have been "Fallen," Royal Academy, 1878; "Ending of Summer," Royal Academy, 1879; "The Gathering Swallows," Grosvenor Gallery, 1880; "The Road to the River," Royal Academy, 1881; "The First of May," Royal Academy, 1883, which afterwards obtained a mention honorable at the Paris Salon; "The Gladness of the River," Grosvenor Gallery, 1883; "After the Rain," Royal Academy, 1884; "Meadows by the Avon," Grosvenor Gallery, 1884; "In a Cider Country," Grosvenor Gallery, 1884 (engraved in mezzotint by F. Short), and a series of water-colour drawings illustrating the scenery of the Warwickshire Avon, which were exhibited by the Art Society in the spring of 1885; "Nature painted all Things Gay," exhibited in the Royal Academy, 1887, and purchased by the Council under the terms of the Chantrey bequest. In recent Royal Academy exhibitions he has exhibited "The Thorn," "A Mid May Morning," and "The Day is over and gone," 1896; "The Star bids the Shepherd fold," a "Japanese Garden," and "Daffodils," 1897; "Near the Millers," "The Mooters, Bishopswood, Wiltshire," and "Megève, Savoy," 1898; "The Village by the Links," and two water-colours, 1899. Mr. Parsons received a Gold Medal for Water-colour, and Silver Medal for Oil Painting, awarded to pictures exhibited at the Universal Exhibition, Paris, 1889, two medals for Oil and Water-colour Painting at the International Exhibition Chicago, 1893, and a Gold Medal (second class) at the International Exhibition of 1894 at Munich in the same year. In 1895 he went to Japan, and the results of his stay of nine months in that country were exhibited at the galleries of the American Art Association in New York, at the St. Botolph Club in Boston, U.S.A., and at the Fine Art Society in London. Mr. Parsons has also worked in black and white. His principal illustrations have been done for "Old Songs" and "The Quiet Life" (in conjunction with Mr. E. A. Abbey), and for "The Warwickshire Avon," "Wordsworth's Sonnets," and "The Danube, from the Black Forest to the Black Sea," a journey made with Mr. F. D. Millet in 1891. Address: 54 Bedford Gardens, Kensington, W.

PARTRIDGE, Bernard, R.I., born in London, October 11, 1861, is the youngest son of the late Richard Partridge, President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, F.R.S., M.R.C.S., &c., Professor of Anatomy to the Royal Academy. Educated at Stonyhurst College, Lancashire, he then worked at stained-glass designing with Messrs. Lewes, Barrand, and Westlake, and afterwards at stained-glass and church decoration with the late Mr. Philip Westlake, from 1879 to 1883. He next took up drawing for the press, worked chiefly on Judy, Lady's Pictorial, and Illustrated London News, and joined the staff of Punch in 1891. He has illustrated several books, including "Stage-land," by J. K. Jerome, and "The Travelling Companions," "Voces Populi," "Pocket Ibsen," "Man from Blankley's," and "Under the Rose," by F. Anstey. His water-colours and black-and-white drawings have been exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1896, 1897, 1898; also at the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colours, and the New English Art Club, of the two latter of which he is a member. Mr. Partridge has adopted the stage name of Bernard Gould, and has played in various London productions since 1886, including "The Hobbyhorse," "The Pointsman," "Sweet Lavender," "Woodbarrow Farm," "New Lamps for Old," "Arms and the Man," "Under the Red Robe," "Hamlet," &c. He married Lydia F. Harvey in 1897. Address: Garrick Club, W.C.

PATERSON, William Romaine, "Benjamin Swift," was born in Glasgow, July 29, 1871, in the house which is now occupied by the Art Club. His father, the late Robert Paterson, M.D., who was a successful and widely known physician and a man of acute intellect, died while the author was only two years old. His upbringing, which was extremely religious, was thus left in the hands of his mother, who comes of a race of Scotch bankers. At the age of seven the author was put to school in Glasgow at the Albany Academy. At the age of sixteen he was sent to a boarding school in Lausanne (La Villa, Onchy) for the purpose of learning French. He remained a year, and on his return entered Glasgow University. Owing to ill health his course was irregular and retarded, but in the department of Philosophy and Literature he was awarded a high place. He won the prize of the Lord Rector (Mr. A. J. Balfour) for an Essay on Progress which was open to the University. In 1894-95 he graduated M.A. with first-class Honours in Philosophy, and was awarded a Fellowship. Thereafter he travelled extensively in Europe, especially in Austria, France, and Italy, for the purpose of studying German, French, and Italian. He learned Italian in the monastery of Monte Oliveto near Siena. On his return from Italy in the summer of 1896 he published his first work "Nancy Noon" (London: T. Fisher Unwin). A second edition was called for shortly after. In October 1897 appeared "The Tormentor" (London: T. Fisher Unwin); in April 1898 "The Destroyer" (London: T. Fisher Unwin), 2nd edit., May 1898. Cosmopolitan for December 1897 contains an article on the "Functions of Art," by "Benjamin Swift." In the Glasgow Herald, January 1898, he wrote an article on "Legal Infanticide in Italy." Address: 5 Cornwall Mansions, Cornwall Gardens, S.W.

PATON. Sir Joseph Noël, R.S.A., LL.D., D.L., the Queen's Limner for Scotland, born at Dunfermline, Fifeshire, in 1821, was admitted a student of the Royal Academy of London in 1843 and first became known to the public by his outline etchings illustrative of Shakespeare and Shelley. His cartoon of the "Spirits of Religion" gained one of the three premiums awarded at the Westminster Hall competition of 1845, and his oil pictures of "Christ Bearing the Cross" and "Reconciliation of Oberon and Titania"—the former of colossal size, the latter small—jointly gained a prize in the second class of 1846, in 1847. The latter picture, prior to its exhibition in London, was bought by the Royal Scottish Academy for the Scottish National Gallery, and "The Quarrel of Oberon and Titania" painted in 1846, and purchased for £700, also for the Scottish National Gallery, by the Association for the Promotion of the Fine Arts in Scotland, was exhibited in the Paris Exhibition of 1855, where it received honorable mention. Among his numerous pictures and sketches from the works of the poets may be mentioned "Dante Meditating the Epistle of Francesca" 1851; and "The Dead March" 1854 engraved. Other pictures are: "Large Ministry," since engraved; "The Festival of Pleasure," 1855; "Home," which has been engraved, and of which a replica was executed by command of Her Majesty, which was at the Royal Academy Exhibition in 1860; "Hesperus," 1857 engraved; "In Memoriam," which has been engraved, and of which a photograph was executed for the Queen, 1858; and "David Butler in Exile," mentioned by many his latest work, 1861. "Faith and Reason," 1864 engraved; "Night the Solitary," 1865. Mr. Noël Paton executed in the spring of 1860 a series of six pictures illustrative of the life of John Bunyan. "The Dove Descending," painted for the Association for the Promotion of the Fine Arts in Scotland. It was engraved by that body for their subscribers. In 1860 he executed illustrations of "The Ancient Mariner" for the 1st volume of London, and in 1868 painted "Mrs. James Fane" engraved. He was appointed the Queen's Limner for Scotland in 1865, and received the same knighthood, April 12, 1867. In the year appeared "A Fairy Ball," 1866 "Caliban Listening to the V." Of his subsequent pictures the important are, "Faith and Reason" (engraved); "Christ and Mary's Sepulchre," and "Oakleaf and the Maids," 1873; "Satan Washing the of Christ," 1874 (engraved); "The Sorrows," 1875 (engraved); "The of Twilight" and "Christ the Good-herd," 1875 (engraved); and "The with the Muck Rake," 1877. Subsequently to 1877 he painted "Will be Done," 1878 (engraved); "Dream of Lancelot," "Sir Galahad the Vision of the Sangreal," and "In Tenebris," 1879 (engraved); "Maio" (engraved), and designs for stained-glass windows in St. Mary's Abbey Church, 1882; "Vigilance" painted for the Queen, 1883; and "The Choice," 1884 (engraved); "Margaret Reading the Gospels in V Caenmore," 1887; "Vale Santa" engraved; "Beast Master" since engraved; "Exeter's Vision of Bones," 1891; "De Profundis" engraved; "The Prayer of Hamlet." His sculptures include: "Grief" and "Typhoon" designed for the 1st Monument in the Abbey Church, 1888; and "The Parting of the Ancestress in Exile" for the 1st Library, Paisley, 1891. He is the author of two volumes of poems, and received from the University of Edinburgh the honorary degree of D.L. in 1896 he married Margaret, daughter of Alexander Ferrier of Edinburgh. Present address is: 43 George Street, Edinburgh.

PATTERSON. The Right James Lord, D.D., Bishop of Aberdeen, born in London, Nov. 18, 1821, studied in Germany and at Trinity College, MA, 1845. From 1847 he was Curate of St. Thomas's, York, 1850 he entered the Canonate, and for eleven years was attached to Mary's, Marlborough. In 1861 he was named Episcopal Chaplain to the Prince and Princess of Wales. In 1864 he was consecrated Bishop of Aberdeen and was given the title of St. Mary's Cathedral in 1867. Mr. Lord is the author of a "Prayer Book" published in 1862, &c. A Bish. Mary's, Charing Cross, S.W.

PATTI Abigail, nee A. Maria Christina Patti, nee Caciopoli, prima donna, singing soprano, born in Palermo and

She was born in Madrid, Feb. 19, 1843. After a course of professional training under her brother-in-law, Maurice Strakosky, she appeared at New York, Nov. 24, 1859, and reports of her fame reached these shores, where a much more brilliant success awaited her. She made her first appearance in London at the Italian Opera House, Covent Garden, in the part of Amina, in "La Somnambula," May 14, 1861, and so favourable was the impression created that she became at once the prime favourite of the day. To Amina succeeded her equally successful performance of Lucia, in Donizetti's opera, but she gave still greater reason for approbation by her representation of Violetta in "La Traviata," to which she imparted a purity with which no part had never before been invested. Her Zerlina was also much admired, while Martha she displayed so original a vein of arch comedy as to give an unwonted interest to the performance. Mlle. Patti, with laudable ambition, attempted, in the summer of 1863, the difficult part of Ninetta, in "La Gazza Ladra," and her spirited rendering of the character fully sustained her high reputation, both as Norina, in "Don Pasquale," and as Adina, in "L'Elisire d'Amore." Undaunted by the success of rival celebrities who had preceded her, she in 1864 took the part of Margherita, in Gounod's "Faust," and her performance was pronounced by some critics to be superior to that of every other representative of the character. She achieved a fresh success in the part of Juliet, in Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," which proved the great attraction of the operatic season of 1867. Mlle. Patti has been equally successful on the Continent of Europe. In the early part of 1870 she visited Russia, where she met with an enthusiastic welcome, receiving from the Emperor Alexander the Order of Merit, and the appointment of First Singer at the Imperial Court. Early in 1888 Madame Patti accepted an engagement to sing in the Argentine Republic. Her tour through that State was the most successful she had ever made. She was paid £1200 a night, and gave thirty-three performances. She returned there the following year, when she had even a greater success. In May 1868 she was married, at the Roman Catholic Church, Clapham, to M. Louis Sébastien Henri de Roger de Cahuzac, Marquis de Caux, from whom she was afterwards divorced. In 1886 she was married, in Wales, to Signor Nicolini, the tenor singer, who died in January 1898, and her marriage to Baron Cederström took place in January 1899. The wedding was an exceptional social event, and on the wedding day the popular complimentary demonstrations along the line of route from the great diva's Welsh home to London marked the extreme hold she has taken on the hearts of her innumerable admirers. Baron Olof Rudolph Cederström became a naturalised British subject in February 1899. She now resides chiefly at Craig-y-nos, her Welsh country seat, where in 1891 she opened a private theatre. In October 1893 she started for her farewell tour in the United States. Madame Patti still sings at Albert Hall concerts in London, which are known as "Patti Concerts." Address: Craig-y-nos Castle, Wales.

PATTON, Francis Landey, D.D., LL.D., was born at Warwick, Bermuda, Jan. 22, 1843. His family removed to Canada while he was a boy, and he was educated at University College, Toronto; studying theology later at Knox College, Toronto, and at the Princeton (New York) Theological Seminary, from the latter of which he graduated in 1865. From 1865 to 1867 he was pastor of the Eighty-fourth Street Church in New York; 1867-71, of the Presbyterian Church in Nyack, New York; 1871-72, of the South Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, New York; and 1874-81, of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church in Chicago. He edited the Interior, a denominational Chicago paper, from 1873 to 1876, and was Professor of Didactic and Polemic Theology in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the North-west, Chicago, 1871-1881. While at Chicago his successful prosecution of Professor David Swing for heterodoxy brought him into general prominence as a theological writer and speaker, and procured him the appointment in 1881 to the Stuart Professorship of the Relation of Philosophy and Science to the Christian Religion, a chair especially founded for him at the Princeton Seminary. In addition to filling the duties of that department, he also lectured on ethics before the College of New Jersey (to which the Seminary is attached), and in 1885 was made a Professor of the College on that subject. On the resignation of the Presidency of the College by Dr. McCosh, Dr. Patton was chosen to succeed him, and he assumed the office in June 1888. The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Hanover College, Indiana, in 1872, and that of LL.D. by Wooster University, Ohio, in 1878, and by Harvard University in 1889. Besides his work on the Interior, he was for a number of years associate editor of both the Presbyterian Review and the New Princeton Review, and he has been a voluminous contributor to magazines and papers. His published works include "The Inspiration of the Scriptures," 1865; "A Summary of Christian Doctrine,"

1874; and "The Doctrine of a Future Retribution."

PAUNCEFOTE, The Right Hon. Sir Julian, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., third son of the late Robert Pauncefote, Esq., of Preston Court, Gloucestershire, was born at Munich, Sept. 13, 1828, and educated in Paris, Geneva, and at Marlborough College. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1852, and joined the Oxford Circuit. He was appointed Attorney-General of Hong-Kong in May 1865, and acted as Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court in 1869, and again in 1872. He received the thanks of the Executive and Legislative Councils of Hong-Kong for his services to the colony, and in 1874 was knighted by patent. He was appointed Chief-Justice of the Leeward Islands in 1873, and in 1874 Legal Assistant Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies. In 1876 he was appointed Assistant (Legal) Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. He was created a C.B. and a K.C.M.G. in 1880, and in 1882 he succeeded the late Lord Tenterden as Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. In 1885 he received the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In 1888 Sir Julian succeeded Lord Sackville as British Minister at Washington. In 1892 he received the Grand Cross of the Bath for his diplomatic services, and in 1893 he was raised to the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States. On Nov. 21, 1894, during a visit home, Sir Julian Pauncefote was sworn of the Privy Council. His action at Washington has done much to bring together the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon race, and he possesses the confidence of the leading men of both nations, especially of his old chief, the Marquis of Salisbury. He was one of the delegates from Great Britain at the Peace Conference held at the Hague in 1899.

PAVY, Frederick William, LL.D. Glasgow, M.D., F.R.C.P., F.R.S., was formerly Lecturer on the Principles and Practice of Medicine, on Physiology, and on Comparative Anatomy at Guy's Hospital. He is now Consulting Physician to Guy's. He became Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in 1860, and was twice Censor, viz. in 1883-84 and 1891-92. He delivered the Harveian Oration in 1886, and has been Lettsomian, Gulstonian, and Croonian Lecturer. He is President of the Pathological Society, and Fellow or member of many learned societies. In 1863 he became F.R.S. Dr. Pavy has written several volumes on food, dietetics, &c., and has communicated many papers on the physiology of sugar, &c. to the Transactions and Proceedings of the Linnean Society. His Lettsomian lectures were upon the subject of Diabetes. Address: 35 Grosvenor Street, W.

PAYNE, Edward John, born Jan. 22, 1844, is the son of Edward William Payne, of High Wycombe, Bucks. He was educated at High Wycombe Grammar School, and at University College, Oxford, where he graduated M.A., and was elected Fellow of his College in 1872. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1881 and was appointed Recorder of Chipping Wycombe in 1883. He is the author of "Select Works of Edmund Burke," with notes, 3 vols., 1874, &c.; "History of European Colonies," 1877; "Voyage of the Elizabethan Seamen to America," 1880; "History of the New World of America," 1892, in which work Mr. Payne has critically investigated the origins of history in the New World, its rudimentary civilisation, sociology, languages, and arts, and the causes and circumstances of its discovery by Europeans. He is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and a Member of Council of the Hakluyt Society. Address: 2 Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn, London.

PAYNE, George, F.L.S., F.S.A., was born at Sittingbourne, in Kent, in 1844, and was educated at Elm House Academy near that town. He formed between 1860 and 1883 an extensive local collection of geological and British, Roman, and Anglo-Saxon remains. These he offered to his native town as a gift in 1883, on condition that a suitable building be provided for their reception. The offer was declined, and the British Museum subsequently acquired the greater portion of the collection, while the remainder went to the Maidstone Museum. Since 1870 he has been accustomed to give lectures annually in various parts of Kent on archaeological matters, with a view to encourage the study and preservation of antiquities. He is author of a "Catalogue of his Museum of Local Antiquities," 1883, printed for private circulation; a "Catalogue of the Museum of Local Antiquities collected by Mr. Henry Durden at Blandford, Dorset," 1892, printed for private circulation; a "Catalogue of the Kent Archaeological Society's Collections," 1892, printed by the Society; "An Archaeological Survey of the County of Kent," 1889, printed by the Society of Antiquaries, and adopted by that body as a model for the archaeological survey of Great Britain; "Collectanea Cantiana," 1893, being an account of the author's archaeological researches in the neighbourhood of Sittingbourne and other of Kent; and numerous papers in æologia Cantiana," Proceedings of Society of Antiquaries, Journal of the Archaeological Association, the Anti- and various periodicals, &c. He appointed Local Secretary for Kent Society of Antiquaries, London, elected a Fellow of that Society, and subsequently elected twice on council; elected a Fellow of the Lincolnsociety, 1878; became a member of the Kent Archaeological Society in 1870, for several years a member of the Council, and was elected Hon. Secretary and Chief Curator of the Society in 1889; elected one of the delegates on behalf of the Society of Antiquaries on the Ethnographical Survey of the United Kingdom, is member of the Standing Committee of the Ethnographical Survey, the Ethnological Survey of Great Britain, the Congress of Archaeological Societies. He is honorary correspondent of the Archaeological Association, and the Secretary for the Protection of Ancient Monuments. During the last ten years he resided at Rochester, where he has been instrumental in bringing about the restoration of the famous castle there, and assisted the Corporation by superintending the work. He has also taken active interest towards founding the museum at the city, in which undertaking he has been fully supported by the Corporation and citizens. The most important discoveries he has made outside his residence at Sittingbourne are the identification of the Roman walls of Rochester; the bare the extensive remains of a Roman establishment at Darenth, near Sittingbourne; and discovering a large portion of a Norman Church at Boxley Abbey, near Sittingbourne. Throughout his life he has taken an active interest in the literary and scientific societies in the county of Kent, having rendered them assistance both in the field and at the winter meetings. Address: The Castle, Rochester.

PAYNE, Joseph Frank, F.R.C.P., born Jan. 10, 1840, at Camberwell, London, and is the son of Joseph Payne, late Professor of Education at the University of Preceptors. He was educated at University College, London, and proceeded as Demy to Magdalen College, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. First Natural Science, 1862; M.B. 1867; 1880. He obtained a Fellowship at St. John's, the Burdett-Coutts Scholarship in Zoology, and the Radcliffe Travelling Scholarship in Medicine. He studied medicine at St. George's Hospital, London, and as Radcliffe Fellow, at Paris, and Vienna. He became member of the Royal College of Physicians in 1868, Fellow in 1873, was Censor from 1896 to 1898, and delivered the Harveian Oration in 1896. He is now Senior Physician to St. Thomas's Hospital, and President of the Pathological Society of London and of the Dermatological Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and was formerly President of the Epidemiological Society of London. He has been Examiner in the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, London, Edinburgh, and in the Victoria University. In 1879 he was appointed, with the late Surgeon-Major Colville, British Medical Commissioner, to investigate the outbreak of Plague in the Russian province of Astrakhan. In 1890 he was a member of the Royal Commission on Tuberculosis, presided over successively by Lord Basing and Sir George Buchanan. He is the author of a "Manual of General Pathology," 1888; "Observations on Rare Diseases of the Skin," 1889; Introduction to a reproduction (Cambridge, 1881) of Linacre's Translation of Galen's "De Temperamentis," first printed at Cambridge, 1521; the Harveian Oration for 1896 on "Harvey and Galen." He has written articles on "History of Medicine" and "Plague" in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and biographies of physicians in the "Dictionary of National Biography," with numerous papers and lectures in "St. Thomas's Hospital Reports," Transactions of Medical Societies, &c. He is the editor of "The Works of Joseph Payne," 2 vols., 1880-1892; and of the "Nomenclature of Diseases," published by the College of Physicians in 1896. Besides the subjects of general medicine and pathology, he has paid special attention to the history of medicine and of epidemic diseases, and has published several ancient documents bearing on these subjects, the value of which has been widely recognised in Continental as well as in English publications. PEACOCKE, The Most Rev. Joseph Ferguson, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland, was born in Queen's County on Nov. 5, 1835, and is the youngest son of the late George Peacocke, M.D., of Longford. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where his career was distinguished. He was first Senior Moderator in History and English Literature, and first Divinity Prizeman in 1858, &c. In 1858 he was ordained, and was successively Rector of St. George's, Dublin, and of Monkstone. In 1893 he was appointed Professor of Pastoral Theology in Dublin University. Appointed Bishop of Meath in 1894, he was consecrated Archbishop in 1897. Address: The Palace, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin.

PEARL, Frances Mary, daughter of Commander George Shuldharn Pearl, R.N., born at Exminster, Devon, writer of novels and stories, of which the following is a brief list: "One Year," 1868; "Unawares," 1870; "The Rose Garden"; "Cartouche"; "Mother Molly"; "Contradictions"; "Near Neighbours"; "The Crooked Desk," illustrated, 1890; "Madoiselle," 1890 (new edit., 1892); "Abbots' Bridge," 1891; "The Baroness: a Dutch Story," 1892; "Paul's Sister"; "The Swing of the Pendulum," 1893; "The Country Cousin"; "Madame's Granddaughter"; "Catherine," and "The Interloper," 1894; "Jacob and the Raven: stories," 1896; and "The Career of Claudia," 1897.

PEARS, Edwin, was born in 1835, at York. He graduated in the University of London, being first in honours Roman Law, and Jurisprudence, and was called to the bar at the Middle Temple in 1870. He was General Secretary of the Social Science Association from 1868 to 1873, and Secretary to the International Prison Congress of 1872. In the Transactions of the former Society he published "Prisons and Reformatories at Home and Abroad." Mr. Pears is now the most promising practitioner at the English Bar in Constantinople, whence, as correspondent of the Daily News, he sent the letters which first called the attention of Europe to Moslem atrocities committed in Bulgaria May 1876. The first two of these letters having attracted attention in Parliament and their statements being disputed by Mr. Disraeli, were published in the important Blue-book on the Eastern Question. Mr. Pears is the first newspaper correspondent who took up the ground that the interest of England in the Ottoman Empire will be best forwarded by helping the Christian races as representing the progressive element of the empire, rather than the Turks, whom he regards as doomed, from natural causes, to disappear as a ruling race, and as being able to contribute nothing of value towards European civilisation.

PEARSE, The Rev. Mark G. Wesleyan minister and author, was born at Camborne in 1842, and is the only son of Mark Guy Pearse, of Sandown, Isle of Wight. His early life was spent in Cornwall. In 1861 he became a student at Bartholomew's Hospital, but subsequently entered the Wesleyan ministry, and was stationed at Leeds, Brixton, Ipswich, Bedford, Highbury, Westminster, and is now jointly with the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes conducting the London Wesleyan Mission at St. James's Hall. As a preacher and lecturer he has few equals; and for his humour, deep insight into character, and certain homely sympathy with the religious poor, his little book, "Dan'l Quorn and his Religious Notions," has never been surpassed. It was published in 1861 and has passed through many editions. Among his many other religious publications should be mentioned "The Genuineness of Jesus," 1898. Address: 11 Bedford Place, Russell Square, W.C.

PEARY, Lieutenant Robert Ed- Arctic explorer, man of science, oil engineer of the United States was born at Cresson, Pa., May 6, and was educated at Bowdoin , Maine, graduating in 1877. He the U.S. Navy as civil engineer e rank of Lieutenant in 1881, and was appointed Assistant-Engineer Survey for the Nicaragua Ship Lieutenant Peary began his im- work on the ice-cap of Northern nd in 1886. The only assistance e investigations which he received he American Government was a leave of absence from his duties as engineer in the Navy. He had to entirely on the help of his friends, ceeds of his own lectures, and his ublications, which have been o l value. All his expeditions have all, but nevertheless his work has ivaluable to the cause of Arctic tion. His first expedition, that of en his ship was the Eagle, brought arly 100 miles over the inland ice ch further north than the route of (q.v.). Peary, as a result, laid a heme for crossing the ice from one o the other, and completing, if , the exploration of the North

Greenland coast, and then making for the pole itself. In 1891 he resumed his work, and accompanied by his young wife and a carefully selected crew, ultimately landed on the shores of M'Cormick Inlet, to the north of Inglefield Gulf (77° 40' N.). Peary unfortunately broke both his ankles just after the start, but preparations were at once made for sledge-parties over the ice. Scientific observation and research occupied the staff through the winter, and in the following spring (1892) began the famous "White march" over the inland ice to the northern shores of Greenland. The whole party moved forward on the first stage of the journey, but the greater part of the course mapped out (500 miles) was accomplished by Peary and a companion, Eivind Astrup, since dead. After a series of exciting adventures, the two explorers made their way out to the Northern Arctic Coast in 81° 40' N. and 34° 5' W., reaching a point east further than any predecessor. The information concerning Greenland and the ice-locked north, which Peary was able to bring back, is scientifically of the utmost importance, and generally most fascinating. The return journey was even more trying than the outward, and was rendered considerably more difficult, owing to the necessity of making large detours in consequence of the inaccuracies of the existing maps. In the spring and summer of 1895 Peary again traversed his old routes and corrected his observations on the regions crossed. He subsequently paid two more visits to North-East Greenland with a view to removing the great meteorite of ninety tons, which has been known since Ross's time. Peary succeeded in bringing this vast mass to America, thus making another valuable contribution to scientific knowledge. He published, in 1898, the records of all his expeditions in a volume entitled "Northward over the 'Great Ice': A Narrative of Life and Work along the Shores and upon the Interior Ice-Cap of Northern Greenland in the years 1886 and 1897." His wife, as before mentioned, wrote some years ago a small volume containing a brief account of one of his earlier expeditions. The work so far accomplished by Lieutenant Peary and dealt with in these volumes comprises:—(1) A summer voyage and reconnaissance of the Greenland ice, 1886; (2) a thirteen months' sojourn in Northern Greenland, including a 1200 mile sledge journey across the ice-cap, and the determination of the insularity of Greenland, 1891-92; (3) a twenty-five months' stay in North Greenland, including a second 1200 mile sledge journey across the ice-cap, the completion of the study of the Whale Sound natives, a detailed survey of that region, and the discovery of the Great Cape York meteorites, 1893-95: a summer voyage in 1896 and 1897, including the securing of the last and the largest of the great Cape York meteorites, a 10-ton mass. Although the foregoing is a considerable record of achievement, Peary is said to regard his accomplished work as only part of a great scheme which still remains uncompleted. He is hoping to receive large assistance from his country, and having in view the distinction which Peary has brought to her flags, the expectation deserves a worthy fulfilment. Lieutenant Peary is a man of inspiring energy, and shows in his work, and no less in his two volumes of travels, an intensity which he has often visibly to restrain. In January 1897 Lieutenant Peary received the William Gold Medal from the American Geographical Society. After a preliminary voyage in the summer of 1897 he started in 1898 on another expedition to the Arctic, with the hope of being able to reach the Pole.

PEASE, Sir Joseph Whitwell, Bart., M.P., J.P., D.L. son of the late Joseph Pease, a well-known coal and ironstone mine-owner of Darlington, by Emma, daughter of the late Joseph Garney of Norwich, was born in 1828, and privately educated. In 1865 he was elected in the Liberal interest for South Durham, which constituency he represented until 1885, when he was elected for the Barnard Castle Division of the county. In 1886 he was re-elected without a contest, and in 1892 and in 1895 he was again returned at the head of the poll. He is a D.L. and J.P. for the County of Durham, and D.L. and J.P. for the North Riding of Yorkshire, chairman of the North-Eastern Railway, and the owner of coal and ironstone mines in Durham and Yorkshire. He was created a baronet in 1892. Sir Joseph is a member of the Society of Friends, and President of the Peace and Antislavery Societies. In Parliament he has rendered valuable services in all questions connected with trade and commerce, and especially with the coal and iron industries of the North of England. Though a follower of Mr. Gladstone, he spoke against the Berber-Sudan Railway scheme; and in a very short time there gave a melancholy justification of his common-sense prophecies. In 1874 he married Mary, daughter of the late Alfred F. A. Esq. of Falmouth, who died in 1892. His eldest son, Mr. Alfred E. Pease, was Liberal member for the city of York from 1887 to 1892, and was elected for the Cleveland Division of Yorkshire in 1897. Sir Robert Peel and daughter of Lieut.-General Sir John Peel, and was born on Aug. 3, 1829. He was educated at Eton and Balliol College, Oxford, and in 1845 first entered Parliament for Warwick, which he has since represented till 1885, when he visited Warwick and Leamington. He was Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury from December 1848 to January 1849; Secretary to the Board of Trade from 1851 to 1853; Patronage Secretary to the Treasury from 1853 to 1854; and Under-Secretary of the Home Department for nine years from 1854 to 1863. On the retirement of Sir Robert Peel in 1864 Mr. Peel was elected Speaker, and continued to hold that office until his death in 1885, amid general expressions of respect from all parties. After the death of Sir Robert Peel in 1866 he was proposed as Speaker by Mr. R. Churchill and seconded by Mr. J. Lubbock, and in 1866 was again elected to that post. He was made Viscount Peel in June 22, 1887. The moment of his retirement from the Speakership in 1885 was one of the memorable events of Parliamentary history. In connection with an address from the House of Commons were presented to him for his eminent services as representative. He was raised to the Peerage as Viscount Peel, and was granted a pension of £400 per annum, and the Freedom of the City was granted him. In 1886 he was appointed Chairman of the Liquor Licensing Laws Commission. He was appointed Trustee of the Museum in the room of the late Sir Spencer Walpole in 1888. He married Adelaide, daughter of Sir Stratford Dugdale of Merevale, Leicestershire. Address: Lodge, Sandy, Beds.; and Asher

SE, Emily, born in London, 1858, is the eldest daughter of John Penrose, Esq., F.R.S., F.R.I.B.A., and late Surveyor of St. Paul's Cathedral.

She was educated at Wimsley, Wimsley, Dresden, and Somerville, Oxford. After taking a first class in Hum. at Oxford in 1892, she received a Travelling Fellowship, and pursued studies, mainly in archæology, at Berlin, Dresden, and also in Italy.

She was appointed Principal Lecturer in History at the British Museum, and about that time

South Kensington Museum. Miss Penrose became Principal Lecturer at Holloway College at Egham, and later at Royal Holloway College, Egham.

OSE, Francis Cranmer, D.D. Cantab., D.C.L. Oxon., F.R.I.B.A., F.R.A.S., was born at Egham, a Vicarage, near Lincoln, in 1817. His father was the Rev. John Penrose, formerly of Corpus Christi

College, Oxford, and his mother was a daughter of the Rev. Edmund Cartwright, D.D., F.R.S. After four years at Bedford Grammar School, he entered the foundation at Winchester College. On leaving Winchester, he became a pupil of Edward Blore, architect; and afterwards entered Magdalene College, Cambridge. During his residence there he rowed three times in the University crew against Oxford. He graduated in 1842. For three years he held the appointment of Travelling Bachelor to the University of Cambridge. In 1851 he brought out, for the Society of Dilettanti, a work entitled "The Principles of Athenian Architecture," of which a second edition has been published. In the following year he was appointed Surveyor of the Fabric to St. Paul's Cathedral, a post which he held till midsummer, 1897. Mr. Penrose published in 1869 a work named "A Method of Predicting Occultations of Stars and Solar Eclipses by Graphical Construction." The Royal Gold Medal of the Institute of British Architects was presented to him in 1883. In 1885 he was elected an Honorary Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge, and in 1886 was appointed Director of the British Archæological School at Athens. During 1893 he contributed to the Transactions of the Royal Society a paper on certain astronomical facts connected with the orientation of Greek temples, which was followed by a supplement on the same subject in 1897. He was elected Honorary Antiquary to the Royal Academy, as successor to Sir A. W. Franks, in the year 1898. In 1856 he married Harriette, daughter of the late Francis Gibbes, surgeon, of Harewood, in Yorkshire. Addresses: Coleby Field, Wimbledon; and Athenæum.

PENZANCE, Lord, The Right Hon. James Plaisted Wilde, Dean of Arches and Chancellor of York, born in London, July 12, 1816, is the fourth son of the late Edward Archer Wilde, Esq., and nephew of the late Lord Truro. He received his education at Winchester College, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1838, and M.A. in 1842. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1839, and devoted his attention to mercantile and marine law, and went the Northern Circuit. He was appointed Junior Counsel to the Excise and Customs in 1840, Queen's Counsel in 1855, Counsel to the Duchy of Lancaster in 1859, and a Baron of the Exchequer in April 1860, when he received the honour of knighthood. In 1863 he succeeded Sir Cresswell Cresswell as Judge of the Court of Probate, and Judge Ordinary of the Divorce Court, appointments which he retained until 1872, when he resigned owing to ill-health. He was sworn a Privy Councillor in July 1864, and created a peer of the United Kingdom, April 6, 1869, since which time he has sat as a member of the Final Court of Appeal in the House of Lords. In June 1875 he was appointed Judge under the Public Worship Regulation Act (Dean of Arches), and Judge of the Provincial Courts of Canterbury and York. He unsuccessfully contested Leicester in the Liberal interest in 1852, and Peterborough in 1857. He was a member of the Commission appointed to consider the feasibility of forming a digest of the Common Law, which he had shortly before advocated in an address delivered at the meeting of the Social Science Congress at York. He was a member of the Commission of the Marriage Laws; a Member of the Judicature Commission; and took a leading part in opposing the changes which aimed at a fusion of law and equity, and which were afterwards carried out in the destruction of the old Common Law Courts. He was also a Member of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commission. Upon the abolition of Purchase in the Army, he was a Member of the Commission appointed to consider the claims of certain of the Purchase Officers, and shortly afterwards he was appointed Chairman of the Commission on Retirement and Promotion in the Army, and prepared the report which was afterwards in part carried out by Royal Warrant. He was Chairman of the Commission appointed to report on the condition of Wellington College. He was also Chairman and drew up the Report of the Commission which sat to inquire into the practices of the Stock Exchange. When Mr. Peel was elected Speaker of the House of Commons he took his place as Chairman of a Departmental Committee appointed by the War Office to consider the position of Engineer Officers in India. He took a leading part, in conjunction with the late Lord Redesdale, in opposing the abolition of the judicial functions of the House of Lords, an opposition which resulted in Lord Cairns withdrawing the Bill brought into the House of Lords for that purpose. He married Mary, daughter of the Earl of Radnor, in 1860. Address: Eashing Park, Godalming.

PEPPERCORN, A. D., landscapist, was born in London, and received his artistic training in Gérôme's Studio and at the Beaux Arts, Paris. His art is singularly suggestive of that of the Barbizon school, and he has been likened to Corot. He lives on the edge of those exquisite beech woods which extend from Horsley to Shere in Surrey, and are perhaps the only extensive and romantic woodlands east of the New Forest. He held two oil and one water-colour exhibition at Goupils' Gallery, is present at all the principal annual exhibitions in London, having latterly exhibited small and choice exhibitions at the Gallery, and was an honoured member of the late Grosvenor Gallery Pastel Society. In the esteem of those who really understand art he holds a very high place. Addresses: 32 Shaftesbury Avenue, W. West Horsley, Leatherhead.

PERCIVAL, The Right Rev D.D., Hon. LL.D., Bishop of Hereford. Sept. 27, 1834, was educated at Clifton where he was Scholar of Queen's College from 1854 to 1858, and Fellow of the College from 1858 to 1862. From 1862 he was a Master at Rugby School and was then appointed first Headmaster of Clifton College, a post which he successfully filled until 1878, when he was elected President of Trinity College, Oxford. A few years later he was Canon of Bristol. He has published "Some Helps for School Life," and preached in Clifton College Chapel, "The Connection of the Universities with the Great Towns." He was one of the originators of the University College, Bristol; and is known throughout the country, and especially in the west, for his exertions for the spread of university education among the middle classes. In 1887 Dr. Percival was appointed Headmaster of Rugby School, in succession to Dr. Jex-Blake, and resigned the Presidency of Trinity College, Oxford, to become also the Canonry at Bristol. He was nominated Bishop of Hereford in February 1895. Dr. Percival married, in 1861, Louisa, daughter of James Holland, who died in June 1896. In January 1862 he married (2) Miss Mary Georgina Symonds, second daughter of the late Frederick Symonds, of Oxford. Addresses: Bishop's Palace, Hereford; and Athenæum.

PERKIN, William Henry, I. Ph.D., F.R.S., was born in London, March 12, 1838. As a chemist and inventor he has long been noted in scientific circles; but to the world at large his to enduring fame is based on his greatest and earliest achievement, the discovery of the first aniline colour. He was educated at the City of London School, the first school in England at that date in which scientific subjects were taught. He studied chemistry systematically under Dr. A. W. Hofmann, at the Royal College of Chemistry. This was in 1853, when he was only fifteen years of age. Two years afterwards he acted as Assistant to Dr. Hofmann in his research laboratory.

following March he read an account of the first research before the Chemical Society. During the Easter vacation of the year, 1856, whilst conducting an experiment at home, which had for its object the artificial formation of quinine, he obtained results which led him to the discovery of the "aniline purple," or mauve, a discovery which laid the foundation of the industry of the coal-tar dyes, which has now assumed such enormous dimensions. After experimenting with this colouring matter in Messrs. Pullar's dyeworks at Perth, and encouraged by them to follow up the manufacture, Perkin left the College of Chemistry in order to devote himself to the development of his new discovery, which was patented in 1856, he being then not more than eighteen years of age. The manufacture of mauve being an entirely new industry, naturally presented many difficulties, as most of the substances required for its production were at that time known in only a few scientific laboratories, and none of the plant in ordinary chemical works was suitable for the production. But owing to Perkin's scientific knowledge and practical turn of mind these difficulties were overcome. In the undertaking he was associated with his father and brother, and the firm was known as Perkin & Sons. The works were erected on the Grand Junction Canal at Greenford Green, Middlesex. The new dye was successfully made in the course of the year 1857, and supplied first to the silk weavers in London, and then at Macclesfield, and some time afterwards to calico printers in Scotland and elsewhere. In 1859 the Société Industrielle of Mulhouse awarded Perkin a silver medal, and some time afterwards a gold medal for his discovery of the mauve. Besides the mauve, he discovered also several other coal-tar colouring matters; and after Graebe and Liebermann had made their celebrated discovery of the formation of alizarine from anthracene in 1868, he found two new processes by which this was rendered of practical value; and alizarine was first manufactured commercially at Greenford Green in 1869. Perkin also discovered that with artificial alizarine another colouring matter was associated, viz., anthrapurpurine, which has proved to be of great value, as it produces colours of a more scarlet shade than pure alizarine, and when mixed with the latter renders its shades more brilliant. At the end of the year 1873, Perkin retired from technical work. During the entire period in which he was occupied in carrying on the manufacture of coal-tar colours he was actively engaged in scientific research, not only in reference to this industry, but also in pure chemistry.

Out of his very numerous papers the following, relating to pure chemistry, may be referred to, viz., those on the halogen derivatives of acetic and succinic acids, which resulted, among other things, in the artificial formation of glycocine, a derivative of gelatine (1859), and tartaric acid (1861). These were carried out in conjunction with the late Mr. B. F. Duppa, and were of special interest at that date, when but few bodies of animal or vegetable origin had been produced artificially. In 1867 he published his first papers on salicylic aldehyde, showing that this substance is not only an aldehyde but also a phenol. This was the commencement of a series of researches, which resulted in the artificial formation of coumarin (the odorous principle of the Tonka bean, sweet-scented vernal grass, &c.), and the discovery of several new bodies of this class, showing the existence of a whole series of these odoriferous substances. The further prosecution of this line of research led to the discovery of a new reaction, by which cinnamic acid could be easily obtained from benzaldehyde, by heating it with acetic anhydride and a salt of a fatty acid, and moreover, by substituting other aromatic aldehydes, and also varying the anhydride, a large number of new acids of this class were obtained. By modifying this reaction, which is now known as "Perkin's Reaction," Dr. Caro succeeded in producing cinnamic acid technically (at the Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik), for the artificial production of indigo by the method discovered by Bayer. Perkin's later work has been on the remarkable property of substances to rotate the plane of polarisation when placed in the field of a magnet (discovered by Faraday), and he has shown that this rotation varies with bodies of the homologous series in a definite manner for each addition of  $\text{CH}_2$ , and moreover it exhibits distinct differences between normal and isomeric compounds, and is therefore likely to be of value in determining the constitution of bodies. By this property it appears also to be possible to distinguish between bodies which, when hydrated, form definite chemical products and those which only form molecular compounds. Dr. Perkin was elected a Fellow of the Chemical Society in 1856, and a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1866, at the age of twenty-eight. In 1869 he became one of the honorary secretaries of the Chemical Society, a post which he held until elected President of that Society in 1883; he was also President of the Society of Chemical Industry in 1884-85. In 1882 he received the honorary degree of Ph.D. of the University of Würzburg, and in 1884 he was made an Honorary Member of the German

Y, Professor John, M.E., S., Assoc. M.I.C.E., Vice-Presi-e Physical Society and Vice-President of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, was born at Garvagh, in Ulster, on Feb. 14, 1850. His father was Samuel Perry, of that town. Dr. Perry attended the Model School, Belfast, and won a silver medal in Natural Science. He graduated in 1870 as Bachelor of Engineering, in the Queen's University of Ireland, with first honours, Gold Medal and Peel Prize; and gained a Whitworth Scholarship in that year. The honorary degree of Master in Engineering was conferred on him by the University Senate in 1882. He was Lecturer in Physics at Clifton College, 1870-74; and there started the earliest School Physical Laboratory and Workshop, still thriving institutions. He published "A Treatise on Steam" (Macmillan), in 1873; was a secretary of the A Section, British Association, 1874; and in that year became Thomson Scholar, and hon. assistant to Sir William Thomson in Glasgow. He wrote the mathematical and physical articles in Blackie's "Cyclopedia." His first scientific paper was read before the Royal Society of London, early in 1875, on "The Electric Conductivity of Glass as Dependent on Temperature." In partnership with Sir William Thomson, he read a paper on "Capillary Surfaces of Revolution," before the Royal Society of Edinburgh. Of the papers published by him with Prof. Ayr-ton, since 1876, the following are some of the most important: "The Specific Inductive Capacity of Gases," "On Electrolytic Polarisation," "Resistance of Galvanometer Coils," "Ice as an Electrolyte," "Heat Conduction in Stone," "Contact Theory of Voltaic Action," "Ratio of Electric Units," "On Electromotors, and their Government," "On Electrical Measuring Instruments," "On the Gas Engine," and "Magnifying Spring." In 1875 he went to Japan as Joint-Professor (with the Principal) of Engineering in the Imperial College of Engineering, and returned to England in 1879. He gained the Silver Medal of the Society of Arts in 1881 for his lecture on "The Future Development of Electrical Appliances," since translated into German by Prof.

Weinhold. He delivered a course of Cantor lectures on hydraulic machinery in 1882; and became Professor of Mechanical Engineering and applied Mathematics at the Finsbury Technical College. He is secretary of the Physical Society. Professors Ayrton and Perry were appointed joint-engineers to the Faure Accumulator Company, and remained in that capacity until the English patents were disposed of.
Their more important inventions are: A dynamo machine, in the description of which in 1882 the well-known system of multipolar winding is first described; permanent magnet and spring ammeters and voltmeters, with and without commutators; solenoid and shielded ammeters and voltmeters; spring balances; resistances for use with strong currents varied by foot and hand; ergmeters; power-meter; ohmmeter; non-sparking key; electro-motors; switches for use with accumulators, and arrangements for lighting railway trains; photometers; secohmeters; dynamometer couplings and transmission and absorption dynamometers; an electric arc lamp; the governing of motors and dynamos; an electric tricycle; an electric railway system with friction gearing, contact boxes and locomotives, forming part of the general system belonging to the Telpherage Company (Limited). Of their inventions which are not commercially valuable may be mentioned their arrangement for "Seeing by Electricity"; their multireflex arrangement exhibited in Paris; their ballistic galvanometer, and their many forms of apparatus employed in the teaching of electricity, &c. On the death of Prof. Fleeming Jenkin, Prof. Perry became engineer to the Telpherage Company, and from July to October 1885, superintended the erection and settling to work of the Telpher line at Glynde in Sussex. In June 1885 Prof. Perry was elected to a Fellowship of the Royal Society. The Royal University of Ireland has bestowed on him its highest scientific degree, that of Doctor of Science. He delivered the "operatives" lecture of the British Association meeting of 1890 on "Spinning Tops." He is now utilising part of the immense water-power of Galway (in partnership with his brother, who is County Surveyor there) in Electric Lighting and Transmission of Power. The Ayrton and Perry partnership was dissolved in 1889. Since that time Prof. Perry has published many scientific papers and developed several instruments, of which his Electric Supply Meter for the use of consumers of electric energy is the one most valuable commercially. In 1896 he was appointed to the Chair of Mathematics and Mechanics at the Royal College of Science, London. He is a member of the Kew Committee of the Royal Society. He advocates many reforms in the teaching of Mathematics and Mechanics, which are explained in his recent publications, "The Calculus for Engineers" and "Applied Mechanics." He is married to Miss Alice Jowitt, of Sheffield. Address: Royal College of Science, S. Kensington.

PERSIA, Shah of. See MUZAFFER-ED-DIN, SHAH OF PERSIA.

PERUGINI, Charles Edward, was born in Naples of Italian parentage, on Sept. 1, 1839. He was educated in England, and first began his art studies in Paris, at the Pension Colart. After the advice of Horace Vernet, he became much interested in the arts, and his parents sent him to Naples, where he studied painting under Signor Mancini. He then went to Rome, and worked in the studio of Signor Mancini, finishing his art education in Paris under the personal supervision of Ary Scheffer. C. E. Perugini first exhibited at the French Gallery, and at the Royal Academy of Artists in Pall Mall; and since 1872 has been represented each successively at the Royal Academy. He is a constant exhibitor at the New Gallery. Among his principal works are: "Cup of Tea," 1874; "A Labour of Love," by which he was represented at the Universal Exhibition of 1876; "Rivals," 1876; "Finishing Touches," 1879; "A Summer Shower," 1880; "Dolce Far Niente," 1882; "Moments," 1884; "Cup and Ball," 1885; "A Summer Shower," 1888; "The High-Born Lady," 1893; "Weary Waiting," 1898; "An Italian," 1899; and many others, of which have been reproduced, in line engraving, wood, mezzotint, or photogravure. He has also painted many portraits, but has exhibited few of them; two of the best being "Countess Granville and her daughters," and the portrait of his wife, exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1899. Mr. C. E. Perugini was naturalized in 1859, and joined the Artists' Company in the 38th Middlesex Royal Volunteer Battalion (the 20th), and was elected to a position, which he held until 1872. Mr. Perugini was awarded the Gold Medal at the Melbourne International Exhibition of 1880, and received other medals and diplomas from Philadelphia, Sydney, and Adelaide. In 1874 he married the daughter of Charles Dickens. Address: 38A Victoria Road, Kensington.

PERUGINI, Kate, wife of Charles Edward Perugini, is the eldest daughter of Charles Dickens, the novelist. She was born in London, and first began drawing at Bedford College, Bedford Square. She afterwards studied art in London and among her teachers being the late Charles Collins and the late Frederick Walker. Mrs. Kate Perugini is a painter of children's portraits, and of children's subjects. The best known of these are "Impartial Audience," "A Little Wren," "Tomboy," "A Little Coquette," "A Sister," "Happy and Careless Rabbit Hutch," "A Doll's Dress," "Little Nell," "A Story Book," "A Pathy," "A Flower Merchant," that Bloom in the Spring," and lies," a photogravure of which was by the Berlin Photographic Company. These pictures, and a great number of portraits of children, have been shown at the Royal Academy and the Gallery. Her Academy picture is "The Sister of the Bride." Mrs. Mugini is a member of the Society of Artists.

PETHERICK, Edward Augustus, son of Peter John Petherick, and brother of Edward Jarman Petherick, of Bridgwater, was born March 6, 1822, at Burnham, Somerset, where his father was bookseller and librarian. His father emigrating to Australia in 1852, he received early official training in the Customs offices, Collingwood, Victoria. From 1852 to 1888 he was connected with a bookselling and publishing house in London from 1870 to 1888. In connection with a Colonial Booksellers' Association (1887 to 1892) he edited the Toronto Book Circular, a guide to new English and American, including publications relating to or issued in the Colonies. Among much other literary and physical work which Mr. Petherick may be mentioned a "Bibliography of Australasia and Polynesia," now in process of publication, and a "Catalogue of the Portico Library" (S. W. Silver), issued and re-issued in 1886 as a supplement to the Literature of Geography in all Ages and Countries. He contributed to the Melbourne Review (1885) a series of papers treating of the Southern Hemisphere, preparing a work in elucidation of the Portuguese voyages in the Southern Hemisphere. He has also written upon politics and finances, his latest work being "Australia in 1897." Petherick has travelled round the world three times, and has visited the States and most of the British Colonies.

He is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, of the Royal Colonial Society, and of the Linnean Society; member of the Royal Geographical Society of Australasia (Victorian Branch), of the Library Association of the United Kingdom, and of kindred societies. He married, in 1892, Mary, daughter of Rev. Samuel Annear, missionary, and widow of Charles Annear, of Melbourne and Bourne. Address: 85 Hopton Road, Streatham, S.W.

PETIT, Hon. Sir Dinshaw Manockjee, Bart., a philanthropic Parsee, was born June 30, 1823, and is the chief representative of one of the oldest Parsee families, which obtained its surname from the French sobriquet of Petit, owing to their short stature. Sir Dinshaw acquired his English education at a school kept by a pensioned sergeant named Sykes. At seventeen he entered an English firm as clerk, at the same time trading on his own account with the rest of India and with China. Some time after he had inherited about twelve lakhs on the death of his father in 1859, he took full advantage of the American Civil War to invest all his capital in the extension of the cotton industry, and such were his energy and prudence that he not only increased his fortune, but succeeded in preserving it intact during the worst crisis of the share mania. He deserves all the credit for having acted as the pioneer of that milling industry which has turned Bombay into an Asiatic Lancashire. He is now the chief owner of seven of the largest mills in his Presidency, and is considered to be one of the wealthiest men in India. In 1887 he received the honour of knighthood on the occasion of the Queen's Jubilee, and in the following year he was appointed member of the Viceroy's Judicial Council—a post which he afterwards resigned owing to the pressure of his other engagements. During the last thirty years Sir Dinshaw has dispensed large sums in public and private charity, principally the latter, and the amount of these benefactions is stated on trustworthy authority to exceed £200,000. One of the most notable of his latest gifts was to present the freehold of the land on which the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute has been erected. He has given a lakh (100,000) of rupees towards the founding of a leper hospital in Bombay. These and other benefactions have made the Parsee community of Western India famous throughout the world. He was Sheriff of Bombay in 1887, and is a member of the Chief Parsee Council. In 1890 he was created a baronet, and his heir is his grandson, who was born in 1873. Address: Petit Hill, Bombay.

PETIT BOB. See MARTEL DE JANVILLE, COMTESSE DE.

PETRE, Sir George Glynn, C.B., K.C.M.G., was born on Sept. 4, 1822, and is the second son of Henry Petre, of Dunkenhagh, Clayton-le-Moors, Lancs.; he entered the diplomatic service in 1846, and was attached to the Legation at Frankfort. He was transferred to the Embassy in Paris, March 1853, and in 1856 he went to Naples, and acted as Chargé d'Affaires from July to October, when, in conjunction with the French Minister, he broke off diplomatic relations with the King of the Two Sicilies, and was subsequently re-appointed to the Embassy of Paris. He was appointed Secretary of Legation at Hanover, June 6, 1859; Chargé d'Affaires at Copenhagen, December 1864; and assisted at the investiture of his Majesty Christian IX. with the Order of the Garter, as a bearer of a portion of the insignia. He was transferred to Brussels in 1866, and promoted to be Secretary of Embassy in Berlin, June 26, 1868. Mr. Petre was accredited Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic, April 1, 1881; Minister Plenipotentiary to the Republic of Paraguay, March 2, 1882; and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the King of Portugal, Jan. 16, 1884. In 1886 he was made a Companion of the Bath, and in 1890 a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In January 1893 he retired on a pension. He married, in 1858, Emma Katherine, daughter of the late Major Sneyd. Address: Hatchwoods, Winchfield, Hants.

PETRIE, Professor William Matthew Flinders, D.C.L., LL.D., Ph.D., Egyptologist, was born at Charlton, on June 3, 1853, and is the grandson through his mother of Captain Flinders, discoverer and explorer in Australia. He was privately educated. From 1875 to 1880 he was occupied in surveying British earthworks, &c.; his plans are in the British Museum. In 1877 he wrote "Inductive Metrology, or the Recovery of Ancient Measures from the Monuments"; 1880, "Stonehenge: Plans, Description, and Theories." In 1881-82 he surveyed at the pyramids, and the results appeared in "Pyramids and Temples of Gizeh," assisted by a grant from the Royal Society. In 1884-86 he excavated for the Egypt Exploration Fund at Tanis (Zoan), Naukratis, Am, and Daphnæ, the last three being new discoveries. The results appeared in "Tanis I.," "Naukratis," "Tanis II.," and "Two Hieroglyphic Papyri." He also wrote the articles "Pyramid" and "Weights and Measures," in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," 9th edit. In 1887 his work was on rock inscriptions and casts of sculpture, appearing in "A Season in Egypt" and "Racial Portraits." In 1888 and onwards he has excavated with the assistance of private friends, working from 1888 to 1890 in the Fayum, and discovering the colossi of Biahmu, Roman portraits at Hawara, early towns at Kahun and Gurob, and the interior of the pyramids of Hawara, Illahun. The results appeared in "Hawara, Illahun, and Kahun Papyri," "Kahun," and "Illahun." An on "Historical Scarabs" was published in 1888. In 1890 he discovered and excavated on the site of Lachish for the Palestine Exploration Fund, the results appearing as "Tell el Hesi." In 1891 he excavated at Medum, finding the unknown temple, and published "Medum." A popular summary of Egyptian work was then issued, in "Years' Diggings in Egypt." In 1892 he excavated the palace of Akhetaten, published in "Tell el Amarna." He received the honorary degree of D.C.L. at Oxford in 1893, and was appointed to the newly founded Edwards Professorship of Egyptology at University College, London. In 1894 he discovered prehistoric sculptures in the Temple of Koptos, published "Koptos." In 1895 he discovered "New Race" at Nagada, since proved to be prehistoric Egyptians, published "Nagada and Ballas." In the same year he received the honorary degree of D.Sc. at Edinburgh. In 1896 he explored the Temples of Thebes, finding the Israelite inscription, published in "Six Temples of Thebes." In 1897 he excavated an ancient cemetery, published in "Deshasheh." In 1898 he explored the early cemetery at Denderah. In May 1899 Prof. Flinders Petrie lectured at University College, London, on the discoveries of the winter of 1898-99. The entirely new discovery of the winter of 1898-99 was the traces of a foreign people who entered Egypt about the twelfth Dynasty. This people was probably Libyan. The most valuable discovery was the magnificent bronze dagger of King Sesostris of the fourteenth Dynasty. He has published a "History of Egypt," "Chaldean Tales," "Egyptian Decorative Art," "Religion and Conscience," "Syria and Egypt," &c. The purpose of the searches has been the scientific study of Egyptian civilisation, recorded by the publication of drawings and descriptions. Permanent address: University College, London.

PETTIGREW, James Bell, LL.D., F.R.S., F.R.C.P., Laureate of the Institute of France, Professor of Medicine and Anatomy, and Dean of the Medical Faculty in the University of St. Andrews, was born in 1834, and is a native of Glasgow, Lanarkshire, Scotland. He is related on his father's side to the late well-known Dr. Thomas J. Pettigrew, F.R.C.S., and is the author of "Bibliotheca Sussexiana," "Encyclopædia Egyptiaca," "Medical Portrait Gallery," &c.; and on his mother's side (Mary Bell) to the famous Henry Be r and builder of the original Comet ship, and the founder of steam navigation in Europe. He was educated at the Free West Academy of Airdrie, the Universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow. He studied Arts at Glasgow University from 1850 to 1855, and Medicine at Edinburgh University from 1856 to 1861. He graduated in Medicine at Glasgow University with first-class honours in 1861. In 1858-59 he was elected Professor John Goodsir's Senior Gold Medal for the best treatise on the Arrangement of the Muscular Fibres in the Ventricles of the Vertebrate Brain. Phil. Trans. 1864. This treatise secured for him the appointment of Lecturer to the Royal Society of Medicine for 1860. He carried off in this year (1860) the annual Gold Medal of the Royal Society of Medicine for his essay "On the Presumption of Survival." Brit. and For. Med. Chirurg. January 1865. In 1860 also he was elected President of the Royal Medical Society, an honour greatly prized by all his alumni. On graduating in Medicine in 1861, he selected as the subject of his inaugural dissertation, "The Functions and Nerves of the Heart, and their Relation with the Cerebro-spinal and Sympathetic Systems in Mammalia," a novel and intricate investigation. For this he received a graduation Gold Medal, the highest honour the University of Edinburgh confers, Proc. Roy. Soc. Edin. In 1861 he became house surgeon to the famous Professor Syme at the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh. In 1862 he obtained the post of Assistant in the Hunterian Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. Here he remained for five years (1862-67). During the period of his residence he added about 600 finished dissections, injections, and casts to this splendid collection. In addition to his practical work he wrote several important memoirs, each memoir being profusely illustrated by dissections and drawings. The following may be mentioned: "The Arrangement of the Vascular Systems in Vertebrates," Trans. Roy. Soc. Edin. 1864; "The Arrangements of the Bladder and Uterus," Phil. Trans. 1867; "The Mechanical Appliances by which Flight is Produced in the Animal Kingdom," Trans. Roy. Soc. Edin. 1867. In 1867 he retired from the Hunterian Museum, and spent two years in the south of Ireland, where he devoted himself to extending his knowledge of the flight of insects, birds, and fishes. He also experimented largely at this period on the subject of artificial respiration. In 1869 he was made a Fellow of the Royal Society of London, and in the same year of that year he returned to Edinburgh, having been appointed Curator of the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, and Pathologist to the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh. There he continued his anatomical, physical, and physiological researches, particularly those of flight, and in 1870 he produced a memoir, "On the Physiology of Wings, being an analysis of the movements by which Flight is produced in the Insect, Bird, and Bat," Trans. Roy. Soc. Edin., vol. xxvi. pp. 321-446. At that period he added numerous specimens to the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh; these, with the other specimens deposited in the Hunterian Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and the Anatomical Museum of the University of Edinburgh, amounted to considerably over 1000. He also gave daily demonstrations in morbid anatomy at the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh to large classes of students. In 1872 he delivered a course of lectures to the President and Fellows of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, "On the Physiology of the Circulation in Plants, in the Lower Animals, and in Man." These appeared in the Edinburgh Medical Journal, Lancet, &c., as delivered, and were republished by Macmillan in 1874. In 1872 he was made a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and a member of the Harveian, Botanical, Medico-Chirurgical, and other learned societies. In 1873 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh, and appointed Examiner in Physiology to the College. He also (1873) became Lecturer in Physiology to the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh. On assuming the duties of teacher of Physiology, he chose as the subject of his opening address, "The Relation of Plants and Animals to Inorganic Matter, and the Interaction of the Vital and Physical Forces," Lancet, November 1873; reprinted shortly afterwards by Maclachlan and Stewart, of Edinburgh. In that year (1873) he published his work on "Animal Locomotion; or Walking, Swimming, and Flying," the most popular and best known of all his writings, Anglo-American Science Series, vol. vii. This volume was translated, shortly after its appearance, into French, German, and other languages, and has passed through several large editions. In 1874 he was awarded the Godard prize of the French Academy of Sciences for his Anatomico-physiological Researches, and made a Laureate of the Institute of France. In 1875 he was appointed Chandos Professor of Medicine and Anatomy and Dean of the Medical Faculty in the University of St. Andrews, positions which he still holds. On being inducted to his Chair, he gave as his introductory lecture "Man in which he was raised to the Bench in November 1897. He is a learned lawyer, and a well-known authority on Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Law. He has published the "Book of Church Law"; "Phillimore's Ecclesiastical Law," 2nd edit.; "Phillimore's International Law," vol. iv., 3rd edit. As a Liberal he unsuccessfully contested St. George's, Hanover Square, in 1885, and as a Home Ruler failed to secure a seat in South Oxfordshire in 1886 and 1892. He has strong ecclesiastical sympathies, and is Vice-President of the English Church Union. In June 1898 he was presented with a silver model of a three-masted antique galleon by past and present members of the Admiralty Bar in recognition of his long service in the Admiralty Court. He married, in 1870, Agnes, eldest daughter of the late Mr. C. M. Lushington, M.P. Addresses: 86 Eaton Place, S.W.; The Coppice, Henley-on-Thames, &c.; and Athenæum.

PHILLIPS, Lawrence Barnett, F.S.A., F.R.A.S., A.R.E., eldest son of the late Barnett Phillips, Esq., of Bloomsbury Square, was born Jan. 29, 1842, and educated at Dr. Pinches' school, which he left at the age of fourteen, to study mechanics and watchmaking, his general education being continued by private tutors at his father's residence. In 1861 he commenced business as a wholesale chronometer and watch manufacturer, having already invented the rocking-bar mechanism for winding watches, which did much towards their general introduction, and which form of keyless work has now been universally adopted by the English manufacturers. He has designed and constructed some of the most complicated and highly-finished specimens of horological art, and by the invention of various forms of mechanism succeeded in the simplification of chronographs and the improvement of calculating machines. In 1866 he published the "Autographic Album," which was followed in 1871 by "Horological Rating Tables," and in 1873 by "The Dictionary of Biographical Reference," an original work, giving the names of 100,000 celebrities of all countries, and references in each instance to sources of further information. In November 1865 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, and in March 1885 a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. Since 1882, when he retired from business, he has occupied himself as a painter and etcher, and has been a constant exhibitor at the Royal Academy and most of the leading London and provincial exhibitions, and is an Associate of the Royal Society of Painter-Etchers. In 1890 he constructed and patented an improved sketching-box and palette, which

PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE, The Rev. Octavius, M.A., F.R.S., was born at Bloxworth Rectory, Dorsetshire, on Nov. 3, 1828, and is the fifth son of the late Rev. George Pickard, Rector of Warmwell, and of Bloxworth (who, with his children, assumed, in 1847, the additional surname of Cambridge under the will of his first- cousin, Charles Owen Cambridge, Esq., of Whitminster, co. Gloucester), and Frances Amelia, his wife, daughter of the late Martin Whish, Esq., Commissioner of Excise. He was educated as private pupil of the late Rev. William Barnes, B.D. (the Dorset Poet), Dorchester, 1844-45; was Student in the Middle Temple, London, 1849-52; was at University College, Durham, 1855-58; Licentiate in Theology, 1857; B.A. 1858, M.A. 1859; ordained Deacon, 1858, and Priest, 1859. He was Curate of Scarisbrick, Lancashire, 1858-60; Curate of Bloxworth and Winterbourne Tomson, Dorsetshire, 1860-68; Rector of Bloxworth and Winterbourne Tomson, 1868; Diocesan Inspector of Schools, in Religious Knowledge, for the second portion of the Rural Deanery of Whitchurch, 1879-82; elected Clerical Member of the Diocesan Synod of Salisbury, 1870-89; Chaplain to the High Sheriff of Dorset, 1889; elected Fellow of the Royal Society, 1887; is Corresponding Member of the Zoological Society of London; formerly Member of the Entomological Society of London; is Honorary Member of the New Zealand Institute; Honorary Member of the Trinity Historical Society, Dallas, Texas; Vice-President and Treasurer of the Dorset Natural History and Antiquarian Field Club; Honorary Member of the Hampshire Field Club; and Honorary Member of the Arts Society. He is the author of numerous papers on Natural History in the proceedings of various learned societies, and of the following works: "Spiders of Dorset," 2 vols., 1879-81; "Araneidea," in "Scientific Results of the Second Yarkand Mission," published by order of the Government of India, 1885; "Arachnida of Kerguelen Island," published in Report of the Transit of Venus Expedition—Zoology, 1877; article "Arachnida" in "Encyclopædia Britannica," ninth ed., 1875, p. 271; and "Arachnida, Araneidea" in "Biologia Centrali-Americana," edited by F. D. Godman and Osbert Salvin (still in course of publication). He married, in 1866, Rose, daughter of the Rev. James Lloyd Wallace, of Sevenoaks, Kent. Address: Bloxworth, Wareham, Dorset.

PICKERING, Professor Edward Charles, American astronomer, was born at Boston, Massachusetts, July 19, 1846. He graduated in Civil Engineering at the Lawrence Scientific School, Harvard, in 1865, and in 1866 was appointed Assistant-Instructor of Physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, of which he held the full Professorship from 1868 to 1877. During that period he made many researches in physics, particularly investigating the polarisation of light and the laws of its reflection and dispersion. He also described a new form of spectrum telescope, and invented (1870) a telephone receiver. In 1870 he had charge of the polariscope in the United States Coast Survey Expedition sent to Spain to observe the total eclipse of the sun, he having previously been a member of the party sent to Iowa by the Nautical Almanac Office to visit the Observatory at Harv which, under his management, one of the foremost in America. He has been engaged there in determining the brightness of stars by means of the Photometer, and he has published catalogues giving the relative brightness of 4000, 20,000, 8000, and 6000 stars respectively. He has also made measurements of Jupiter's Satellites when they were undergoing eclipse, and of the Satellites of Mars, and of other objects. Later his work has been largely to the photography of the stars and of their spectra, the northern stars being photographed at Cambridge and the southern stars at an auxiliary station in Peru. Professor Pickering is a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society of London, and was awarded its Gold Medal in 1886 for photometric researches. In 1873 he became a Member of the Academy of Sciences, and in 1881 he received its Henry Draper Medal for his work in Astronomical Physics. He was, in 1876, a Vice-President of the Association for the Advancement of Science, and in addition belongs to a number of other scientific societies in Europe and the United States. More than twenty volumes of the Annals of the Observatory have been issued in his direction. Besides his many papers, which number above a hundred, he has edited, with others, "The Theory of Colour in its Application to Art and Art Industry," by Dr. Bezold, 1876; and is the author of "Elements of Physical Manipulation," 1873-76.

PICKERING, Percival Umfreville, M.A., F.R.S., born at Boston, 1858, at 6 Upper Grosvenor Street, W., is the son of Percival André Pickering, Q.C. (Bencher of the Inner Temple, and of the Passage Court at Liverpool, one time Attorney-General for Ireland, and of (formerly) Viscount Stanhope, grand-daughter of the Duke of Leinster. He was educated at Eton, from which he went to Balliol College, Oxford, converted, in 1875, an Exhibition in Science. He received a Brackenbury Scholarship at Eton. In 1880 he took first-class in Natural Science at Oxford. In January 1881 to July 1883 he was Master at Highgate School, and from October 1881 to April 1889

PICKERSGILL, Edward Hare,
M.P., Gladstonian Liberal, was born in 1850, is the son of the late Mr. Thomas Pickersgill, architect, of York, and was educated at York Grammar School, and graduated B.A. at London University in 1872. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1884, and was from 1868 to 1885 a Civil Servant in the G.P.O.
Savings Bank Department. Since 1885 he has sat in Parliament for Bethnal Green, South-West. Address : 238 Amherst Road, Hackney.

PICKERSGILL, Frederick
Richard, Hon. R.A., nephew of the late Henry William Pickersgill, R.A., born in London in 1820, studied at the Royal Academy. His first production, "The Combat between Hercules and Achelous," an oil painting, exhibited in 1840, was followed by a prize cartoon of "The Death of King Lear," exhibited in Westminster Hall in 1843 ; and "The Burial of Harold," a picture for which he received a first-class prize in 1847, and which was immediately purchased for the new Houses of Parliament. Mr. Pickers-gill was for many years a regular exhibitor.
In 1847 he was elected A.R.A., and in 1857 was promoted to the rank of Academician. He was Keeper of the Royal Academy from 1873 to 1887, and retired a few years ago. Permanent address :
The Towers, Yarmouth, Isle of Wight.

PICQUART, Colonel Georges, was born at Strasbourg in 1854, and is a descendant of an old Lorraine family long settled in Alsace. From 1872 to 1874 he studied at St. Cyr, and in the latter year entered the Staff College, leaving it in 1876 with a brilliant record. He served for a short time in Algeria with the Zouaves, and afterwards joined the infantry, being gazetted Captain in 1880.
In 1883 he was appointed to the War Office Staff, and in 1885 served in Tongking, where he gained the Médaille militaire. He returned to France in 1888, and was promoted to be major. In 1890 he obtained the post of Professor at the Military School, filling the position with much distinction. He rejoined the War Office in 1893, and two years later (1895) succeeded the late Colonel Sandherr as head of the Intelligence Department. He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in 1896, having previously, from 1890 to 1895, served on General de Gallifet's staff. At the beginning of May 1896 the fragments of a telegram-card ("petit bleu") fell into his hands, as head of the military police, which proved that Commandant Esterhazy was on suspicious terms of intimacy with the writer. This led Colonel Picquart to inquire into Esterhazy's life, and his suspicions deepened, and he was forced to the conclusion that the famous bordereau or memorandum had been in reality written by Esterhazy, and not by Dreyfus. At first these discoveries were favoured by his chiefs, Generals de Boisdeffre and Gonse, but when they saw that a revision of the Dreyfus court-martial would expose the illegal manner in which the condemnation of the prisoner had been secured, he was relieved of his duties as head of the Intelligence Department of the War Office, and sent on a mission all over France on Nov. 16, 1896; and in January 1897 he was sent to Tunis. He was sent without an escort to a dangerous part of the Tripolitan frontier, where the Marquis de Morès had been killed by the natives some time previously. In May 1897 the War Office officials decided to accuse him of having forged the "petit bleu." At that time he was attached to an Algerian cavalry regiment as colonel, and in June he came to Paris and consulted Maître Leblois, an old friend of his family, as to the accusations of the War Office. The lawyer told Picquart's tale to M. Scheurer-Kestner, Vice-President of the Senate, who commenced the agitation for a revision of the Dreyfus trial, which is still dividing France into two opposite camps. In November 1897 he was recalled suddenly from Algeria, and was examined by General de Pellieux, who endeavoured to prove that the Colonel had forged the "petit bleu" incriminating Esterhazy. He was questioned in camera at the Esterhazy bogus court-martial in January 1898, when the Count was acquitted of high treason, and on the day of his acquittal Colonel Picquart was arrested by the military authorities, on the frivolous charge of having communicated to Maître Leblois, his counsel, documents concerning the national defence. Two years death of Canon Repton presented by Mr. Kempe, James's, Piccadilly, to of St. Philip's, Regent ie continued for the period s; and then, upon Dr.

Vaughan accepting the Mastership of the Temple in 1869, he was presented to the important Vicarage of Doncaster, by the late Archbishop of York, who, when in town, had been one of his congregation. The charactor of his labours, as Vicar and Rural Dean of Doncaster, was so apparent, that, when the still more important Vicarage of Halifax became vacant by the death of Archdeacon Musgrave in 1875, he was selected by the Crown to fill the post. The income of the Vicarage of Halifax is £2000 a year, and there are no fewer than thirty-two livings in the gift of the Vicar, whose position is thus semi-episcopal. He is also the Rural Dean of Halifax. During the last four years of his ministry there, the Vicar's rate question was settled, £13,000 having been raised by the churchmen of the parish to redeem it, thus securing to the Church what was at one time seriously threatened. When this was accomplished Dr. Pigou next set to work to get the parish church restored. He found it in a dilapidated condition, and, seconded by Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., he raised £20,000; so that now the Halifax parish church is one of the finest in the kingdom. In 1888 Dr. Pigou was appointed to the Deanery of Chichester, where he remained till 1891, when he became Dean of Bristol. At Bristol he has recently been intent on the restoration of the Cathedral, after plans by the late Mr. Pearse, and at a cost of about £15,000. In the year 1871 Dr. Pigou was appointed Honorary Chaplain to the Queen; and in 1874 Chaplain-in-Ordinary. In 1878 his University conferred on him the two degrees of B.D. and D.D., a rare distinction. He has published a small volume of "Addresses at Holy Communion," "A Manual of Confirmation," "Faith and Practice" (a volume of sermons), "Two Sermons Preached before the Queen, on Unostentatious Piety and Private Prayer," and various addresses. Address: The Deanery, Bristol.

PILLSBURY, H. N., American chess-player, was born at Somerville, near Boston, Mass., in December 1872. His first knowledge of the game with which his name has become associated was obtained in 1891 in Boston, and such was the rapidity with which he mastered its intricacies that within two years from his first move he was rated a first-class player at the Boston Chess Club, where he constantly attended. In the winter of 1892-93 he met Mr. Nalbrodt, and won from him in brilliant style. His first attempt at tournament play was at the Columbian Chess Congress held in New York in 1893, and although he was not among the prize-winners he established a reputation for rare originality. In the meantime he had removed to Brooklyn, N.Y., which has since been his home. In 1895 he won first place in the tournament at Hastings (England), where he met all the great chess-masters of the world. In the tourney at Vienna, in 1898, he tied the score with Tarrasch, but in the deciding game he lost, and so took second place.

PINERO, Arthur Wing, born in London on May 24, 1855, is the son of John Daniel Pinero, a solicitor, and was educated with the view of following his father's profession. Having no particular liking for the law, however, he ultimately prepared for the stage, and made his début at Edinburgh in June 1874. The following year he joined the Lyceum company, and played Claudius to Mr. Irving during his first "Hamlet" tour at all the principal theatres in the United Kingdom. Subsequently Mr. Pinero played Lord Stanley in the Lyceum revival of "Richard III.," the Marquis of Huntly in "Charles I.," and Alderman Jorgens in "Vanderdecken." He is the author of several very successful plays, among which are "£200 a Year," 1877; "The Money-Spinner," 1880; and "The Squire," 1881; "Lords and Commons" and "The Rocket," 1883; "Low Water," 1884; "The Magistrate," 1885; "The Schoolmistress," "The Hobby-Horse," 1886; "Sweet Lavender," 1888; "The Profligate," 1889; "In Chancery," "Lady Bountiful," "The Times," and "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." The last play, which in the opinion of many is his best, was produced at the St. James's in May 1893. "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith" came next, being produced at the Garrick on March 13, 1895. This was followed by "The Benefit of the Doubt," at the Comedy, in October 1895, and "The Princess and the Butterfly," at the St. James's, in March 1897. His latest play, "Trelawny of the 'Wells,'" was acted for the first time at the Court on Jan. 20, 1898. Address: 63 Hamilton Terrace, N.W.

PINTO, Alexandre Alberto da Rocha Serpa, was born April 30, 1846, at the Tendões in the province of Douro, Portugal, and educated at the Royal Military College, Lisbon. He entered the 7th Infantry Regiment, Aug. 13, 1863; became Ensign, July 14, 1864; Lieutenant in the 12th Rifles, Nov. 20, 1868; Captain, Oct. 10, 1874; Major, April 17, 1877; and Aide-de-Camp of the King of Portugal, March 10, 1880. In 1869 he was in the Zambesi war, and in the battle of Nov. 23 at Massangano he succeeded in saving the regiment of India. He was then in command of the African native troops.

During 1877-79 he crossed Benguela to Durban, and has admirably described the journey entitled "How I Crossed" (1881). These geographical labours won for him the Gold Medal of the Geographical Society of Paris, Antwerp, Rome, &c. He was also elected a Fellow of the most important geographical associations in the world, and of many associations. Major Serpa is Knight Commander of the Order of James of Portugal, a Knight of the Legion of Honour, and of the Order of Leopold of Belgium, and has received many foreign Orders.

PIRBRIGHT, Lord, The Hon. Baron Henry de Wotton, was born for East Toxteth Division in 1821, F.R.S., J.P. for Surrey, and J.P. for Middlesex County of London. He was Minister, Commissioner for the Poor Law Fund, third son of the late Lord Wotton, Hereditary Baron of the Empire, of Park Crescent, W. His mother, Lady Wotton, daughter of Samuel Moser, was born in London, Oct. 20, 1821, educated in Paris and at King's College, London, of which he is a Fellow. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in June 1863, and practised as a barrister about three years. In 1864 he was elected Member for Greenwich, and at that time he took an active part in the House, especially those connected with foreign affairs. He directed the then imperfect administration of the Royal Patriotic Fund, and his recommendations which were embodied in an Act of Parliament, Mr. Gladstone, in acknowledging the services thus rendered, made him a Royal Commissioner of the Fund. At the general election of 1880 consequent upon alterations in the Redistribution Bill, he was elected for Greenwich, and successful in the East Toxteth, for which constituency he was returned unopposed in 1885. He was again elected in 1892. Lord Salisbury's Government gave him the office of Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade. He was Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies in January 1888 (to 1892); President of the International Conference on Bounties in 1887-88; and plenipotentiary, in which capacity he negotiated the Treaty on behalf of Great Britain for the abolition of the Bounties. In 1889 he became a Member of the Privy Council, and in the same year a Fellow of the Royal Society. He is the author of "The Earth and its licy in the East," and "The Arian Empire," the latter position of Count Beust's. He edited the "Memoirs of Count Beust," which he wrote the preface to. He died in 1887, Sarah, daughter of Samuel Phillips. He was created under the title of Lord Rivers in 1895. Addresses: 42 Grosvenor Place, S.W.; and Henley Park,

Mrs. E. R., writer of works of fiction, biography, and missionary interest. Born in 1841, at Milborne Port, Dorsetshire. While in her teens she won several prizes for essays on various subjects, and became a contributor to the Home, Old Jonathan, and other periodicals. When about seventeen she planned and wrote her first novel, entitled "The Power of Little Faith," several years after this she became a contributor to religious, and Sunday-school journals; in recent years her works have been issued in volumes. Of these, her productions are "Vestina's Story of the Catacombs," "The Story of Christianity," 1872; "Martha's Cross," 1878; "Profit and Loss," "Heroines of the Mission," "Mission Life in Greece," 1881; "Garnered Sheaves," "Edfrey's Faith," "Life's Daily Bread," "My Governess Life," 1882; "India, Japan, and Fiji," 1883; "The Eminent Women Series," "The Müller and Andrew Reed" (Lakers Series), 1885; "Lady in Foreign Lands," 1889; "The Writers," 1891; "Oliver Twist," 1892; and "Missionary in Foreign Lands," 1895. In 1866 married to Mr. Edwin Pitman, her children born of the marriage in H.M.'s Civil Service.

VIS, George, Q.C., Recorder of Poole, is the son of the late George T. Lewis, formerly of Honiton Grammar School. He was born on Dec. 13, 1865, was educated privately, and became a student at the Middle Temple. He obtained a certificate of articulation in 1885, and was called to the Bar in the following year. He was on the Western Circuit, and was Recorder of Poole, and a Liberal Member for N.W. Dorset from 1885 to 1886, and as the same constituency in the last interest from 1886 to 1892.

Mr. Pitt-Lewis is the author of "A Complete County Court Practice"; is the editor of "Taylor on Evidence" (9th edit.), 1895; and has published also "The Insane and the Law," 1897; "The Yearly County Court Practice," 1896; "The Coal Mines Regulation Acts," 1877-96. Address: 4 Paper Buildings, Temple, E.C.

PITT-RIVERS, Lieut.-Gen. Augustus Henry Lane-Fox, F.R.S., J.P., D.C.L., F.S.A., was born in 1820, and is the sole surviving son of W. A. Lane-Fox, of Hope Hall, and a daughter of the 18th Earl of Morton. He was educated at the R.M.A., Sandhurst, and became an officer in the Grenadier Guards, and was afterwards on the staff. He served in the Crimea, and was at Alma and Sebastopol, being mentioned in despatches, London Gazette of Oct. 10, 1854, and obtaining a medal with two clasps, the Turkish medal, and brevet of major. Since 1893 he has been Colonel of the South Lancashire Regiment. He is Vice-President of the Society of Antiquaries, and President of the Anthropological Institute, and it is as an anthropologist that he will be remembered by posterity. The magnificent Pitt-Rivers collection, illustrative of savage life and embryo civilisation, has been presented to the New Museum at Oxford, and is to it very much what the original Hunterian collections are to the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, Eng. The manner of its formation was described by Lieut.-General Pitt-Rivers, then Col. Lane-Fox, as long ago as 1874-75, at a time when it was being exhibited in the Bethnal Green Museum. Since the year 1852 he had been in the habit of selecting from among the commoner class of objects relating to savage life which reached England, those which appeared to show connection of form. Connection of form is therefore the guiding principle of the collection, which serves to illustrate the development of specific ideas and their transmission from one people to another. In 1880 the subject of our memoir inherited the Rivers estates, in accordance with the will of his great-uncle, the second Lord Rivers. The will was excessively binding, and provided inter alia that he should assume the name and arms of Pitt-Rivers within a year of his inheriting the property. The Rivers estates are, indeed, unique, having been forest-land, swarmed over by an immense herd of fallow-deer, until the present century. They lie in that part of Wiltshire, near Dorsetshire, where the Romano-British bordered for some time on the territories of the conquering West Saxons, and having been protected by the deer from the inroads of cultivation for many centuries, afford a field of operations for the excavator hardly to be equalled in any other part of Western Europe. Lieut.-General Pitt-Rivers has conducted extensive excavations in the burrows, &c., on his estates round Rushmore, and has published the results in four sumptuously printed and illustrated volumes, of which the last appeared in December 1898. They are cited by the general title of "Rushmore Excavations." He has published much in the British Association Reports, and in the Journal of the Anthropological Institute, on the affinities of weapons, on excavations, &c. He married, in 1853, Alice, daughter of the 2nd Lord Stanley of Alderley, and in 1880 assumed the name of Pitt-Rivers, under the will of his great-uncle, the 2nd Baron Rivers. Addresses: 4 Grosvenor Gardens, S.W.; Rushmore, Salisbury; and Athenæum.

PLANÇON, Pol, basso singer of grand opera, was born in the Ardennes in 1855. His parents were fond of music, but only as a recreation, and it was decided that he should follow a commercial career, and he was sent to Paris in 1871. He chanced to meet Theodore Ritter, who induced him to devote his time to music, and introduced him to the famous tenor Dupré, under whose guidance he worked for two years. He started his musical career at Lyons, in the rôle of Count St. Bris in "The Huguenots." There he remained for two years, when he returned to Paris, and sang for Samoureux. In 1883 he was engaged at a grand opera to sing Mephistopheles, in which he scored an immediate success, and he has been constantly heard in that part since. In 1893 he went to America, and on returning was engaged by Sir Augustus Harris to sing at Covent Garden, where he has been a regular performer ever since. His chief parts are: François I. in Saint-Saëns' "Ascanio," Don Gormaz in Massenet's "Cid," Pittacus in Gounod's "Sappho," the Landgrave in "Tannhäuser," Pogner in "Die Meistersinger," Brother Lawrence in "Romeo and Juliet," Jupiter in "Philemon and Baucis," and the General in "La Navarraise." Paris address: 16 Rue de Marignan.

PLANQUETTE, Robert, a musician, was born in Paris, July 21, 1850, and educated at the Conservatoire there, where he was a pupil of Duprato. He is the composer of the popular operetta "Les Cloches de Corneville," which was played at the Folies Dramatiques in 1877, and had immense success in France and in England. In 1882 he produced "Rip Van Winkle"; in 1887, "The Old Guard"; and in 1889, "Paul Jones." One of his last productions in France was "Le Talisman," which was produced at the Gaité in January Crasenose College, Oxford, where he obtained B.A. in 1865. After serving as the Secretary to Sir John Peter Grant, Governor of Jamaica from 1866 to 1870, he was called to the Bar at the Temple in January 1870, and went to the Oxford Circuit. He was appointed Under of Wenlock in 1878; Revising Officer for Oxfordshire in 1883; and a Metropolitan Police Magistrate in June 1883. In 1883 he married Evelyn, youngest daughter of General Sir Charles Foster. Addresses: Marylebone Police Station and 31 Brunswick Square, London.

PLOWDEN, Trevor John Chichele, Resident at Haiderabad, was born in 1868. He has held offices as Secretary of Bengal, Inspector of Police, and in 1877 was Secretary to the Prisons Conference. In 1879 he was Political Agent in Turkish Arabia, Consul-General at Baghdad in 1880. He became Commissioner of Ajmir in 1885, and was promoted to his present post in 1888. Address: The Residency, Haiderabad.

PLUMMER, William E., Hon. M.A., youngest son of John Plummer, born at Deptford, in Kent, March 26, 1841, and was privately educated there. He early developed a taste for astronomy, and entered the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and there acquired a certain knowledge for the practical details of that science. In 1870 he became attached to Bishop's observatory at Twickenham, under the direction of Mr. Hind, the superintendent of the "Nautical Almanac" office. That observatory was engaged in the formation of charts of the stars situated near the Ecliptic, to facilitate the discovery of minor planets. The revision of the charts for hours of the day, as well as in the observation of the stars, and the subsequent determination of their orbits. The establishment of the Oxford University Observatory in 1874 led to Plummer's appointment as senior assistant to that institution, in which capacity he has taken a considerable part in the photometric and extra-meridian observations carried on in that observatory. Later, when the Oxford Observatory took part in the formation of an astro-photographic chart of the heavens, Mr. Plummer gave much attention to the preliminary arrangements, but took little part in the actual observations, owing to his withdrawal from Oxford. In 1883 he was appointed Astronomer to the Admiralty Docks and Harbour Board, and Director of the Liverpool Observatory. Here he has introduced a method for the systematic observation of earth tremors, carried out under the auspices of the British Association. He has also been appointed Examiner in Astronomy to the University of Edinburgh. Mr. Plummer in 1879 entered the Royal Astronomical Society; in 1888 was elected to a seat on the Council, and in the following year received the honorary degree of M.A. from the University of Oxford. He is a frequent contributor to periodical scientific literature, and has written on "The Motion of the Solar System in Space," "The Sidereal System," and on cometary astronomy generally, besides issuing Annual Reports from his Observatory. Address: Liverpool Observatory, Bidston, Birkenhead.

PLUNKETT, Hon. Sir Francis Richard, G.C.M.G., H.M. Minister at Brussels, was born at Corbalton Hall, co. Meath, in 1835, and is the youngest son of the 9th Earl of Fingal. He accompanied his parents abroad at a very early age. They first lived at Brussels in 1841, and then at Rome, where they met Pope Gregory XVI. and Cardinal Mezzofanti, who spoke to them in ancient Irish. In 1850 he went to Oscott College, and five years later entered the Foreign Office. He commenced his diplomatic career at Naples, and in 1859 became Second Secretary at St. Petersburg. In 1863 he was transferred to Copenhagen, and later to Vienna. In 1870 he married May, daughter of C. W. Morgan, of Philadelphia, at Florence, and in 1873 he became First Secretary at Yeddo, and three years later at Washington. In 1883 he was promoted to be Minister to Japan; in 1888 to Sweden; and in 1893 to his present post. Address: British Legation, Brussels.

PLUNKETT, The Right Hon. Horace Curzon, M.P., D.L., third son of Edward, 16th Baron Dunsany and Anne, daughter of the 2nd Baron Sherborne, born at Sherborne House, Gloucestershire, on Oct. 24, 1854, was educated at Eton and Oxford, and took a B.A. Degree in 1877, obtaining Second Class Honours in the School of Modern History. In 1879 he became a ranchman in Wyoming and Montana, U.S.A., and still retains a business connection with the Western States of America, where he spends a few weeks of every year looking after his affairs. Since 1889 he has spent most of his time in Ireland, where he has been constantly engaged promoting various schemes for the agricultural and industrial development of the country. In 1891 he was appointed a Commissioner of the newly constituted Congested Districts Board, of which he has since been an active member. Mr. Plunkett was the originator of agricultural co-operation in Ireland. In conjunction with a few friends he first organised several farmers' societies, mostly for the erection of co-operative creameries, in the years 1859 to 1894. In the latter year he founded the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, of which he has since been president, to take over the work of promoting a movement then becoming too widespread to be controlled by himself and his friends. The programme of this Society, which embraces every branch of farming, and which is the adaptation of analogous movements in other European countries, is rapidly being adopted by the farming classes throughout Ireland. At the General Election of 1892 Mr. Plunkett successfully contested South County Dublin, then represented by Sir Thomas Esmonde. He stood as a Conservative, declaring that his main object in seeking Parliamentary honours was to advocate any measures calculated to advance the economic and social condition of the people, believing as he did that the political question would then be easily solved. He was returned again in 1895 with a greatly increased majority. When the General Election of 1895 had temporarily, at any rate, placed the Home Rule question in a subordinate position, Mr. Plunkett invited representative Irishmen of all parties, more especially those who were most prominent in industrial and commercial undertakings, to form a committee to discuss and report upon the material condition of the country, and measures needed for its improvement. The Recess Committee, thus formed was thoroughly representative of all the industrial and commercial interests of the country, and of all political parties, the main objection to the project and refusal to support it coming from the Nationalist Members of Parliament. The Report of the Recess Committee, which appeared in the summer of 1896, met with general approval, and its main recommendation, the establishment of a Department of Agriculture and Industries for Ireland, was substantially adopted by the Government in 1897, and only postponed to make way for the Local Government policy of 1898. Mr. Plunkett is a Member of the Royal Commission for the Paris Exhibition, 1900. He is a Justice of the Peace for County Meath, Ireland, and a Deputy-Lieutenant for Radnorshire. Mr. Plunkett was sworn a Privy Councillor (Ireland) in 1897. Address: 104 B. Mount Street, W.

POBYEDONOSTSEFF. Cour tine, Procurator of the Holy Synod in Russia, was born at Moscow in 1841 entered the Higher Law School in Russia, and in 1846 became a member of the Senate. From 1859 to 1867 Professor of Civil Law at Moscow. He was tutor to the Czar Alexander II. In 1868 he was created a Senator. In 1872 a member of the Imperial Academy of Sciences. While in 1881 he was appointed to his present post. After the accession of Alexander III., his influence increased, and with the late Czar he became the most intimate adviser and Imperial master. Opposed to all reforms, he endeavoured to strengthen the influence of Greek Orthodox Russian policy. In 1865 he published "Cours de Droit Civil," and in 1868 "de la Procédure Civile." He has translated "The Imitation of Christ" by the Latin of Thomas à Kempis. In the autumn of 1898 a volume of essays from his pen was translated into French, and English, and published in England under the title of "Recollections of a Russian Statesman." This excursion at once showed its author to have lost none of his old intolerant fanaticism. The general thesis of his work was that since men were to be governed, autocracy is the only rational form. In the writer's opinion the great mistake of the age has been the practical supersession of the old ideas. Faith in the unseen being the thing which preserves morality and keeps men's minds sound and healthy, the Church should be omnipotent, interfering and advising in every course of life. He declared that "among the principles of political principles is the principle of the sovereignty of the people, that all power issues from the people. Thence proceeds the theory of despotism, which has up to the present day deluded much of the so-called intelligence, and unhappily infatuated foolish Russians. . . . Parliament is the triumph of egoism, its highest expression."

POEL, William. See POEL (JUNIOR).

POINCARÉ, Jules Henri F.R.S. (elected 1894), the son of Léon Poincaré, a Professor of the Faculty of Medicine at Nancy, was born at Nancy on April 29, 1854. He was educated at the Lycée in his native town, entered the Polytechnic School and the School of Mines in 1875, became a Mining Engineer at Vesoul, and took the degree of Doctor of

He held the position of Assistant-Professor in the Faculty of Science at Paris from 1880 to 1881, becoming a lecturer in the Faculty of Science at Paris Assistant-Professor of Mechanical in the same faculty in 1885, and Professor of Mathematical Physics in 1886. He acted as an Examiner at the Polytechnic School from 1883 to 1897. M. Poiré was elected a member of the Academy of Science on Jan. 31, 1887, and a member of the Royal Society of London on July 11, 1894. He is the author of the following papers and works: "Les Courbes Fuchsiennes," Acta Mathematica, 1, Stockholm; "Les Equations de Dynamique et le Problème des 3 Corps," Mathemat., 13; "Electricité et Optique," Paris, 1889-91; "Les Méthodes Nouvelles de la Mécanique Céleste," Paris, 1893, 1898. POIRÉ, Emanuel, whose nom de plume or rather, nom de crayon, of "Caran d'Ache" (Russian for lead-pencil) is known for his art and humour are appreciated, was born at Moscow, and educated at his native town. His grandfather was one of Napoleon's officers, who, during the invasion of Russia, was wounded and taken prisoner. He married and settled in Russia, but his grandson determined to return to France. He became connected with the Cabaret du Chat Noir in the Rue de la Massé, for which he did a splendid series of Napoleonic "Ombres Chinoises." His "Carnet de Chèques" issued during the Boulangist Scandal, has become a classic work. Most of his best work has been done for the Figaro, and his cartoons are eagerly looked for as those of Sir John Tenniel in England. His Paris residence is 41 Rue de la Faisanderie.

POLAND, Sir Harry Bodkin, Q.C., D.L., is the fifth son of the late Sir Harry Poland, of London, and was born on July 9, 1829, in London. POLE, William, Senior, F.R.S., civil engineer, was born in Birmingham in 1814. After serving an apprenticeship to an engineer in the Midland Counties, he followed the profession in London for some years, and in 1844 he was appointed by the East India Company Professor of Civil Engineering in Elphinstone College, Bombay. In 1847 he returned to London, devoting his chief attention to the mechanical branch of engineering. From 1871 to 1883 he was Consulting Engineer for the Imperial Railways of Japan, and on his retirement the Mikado honoured him with the decoration of the Third Degree (Knight Commander) of the Imperial Order of the Rising Sun. Between 1859 and 1867 he was Professor of Civil Engineering at the University College, London, and Lecturer at the Royal Engineer Establishment, Chatham. He has done much work for Government at various times and in various ways. From 1861 to 1864 he served as a member of the Committee on Iron Armour, and from 1863 to 1865 as a member of the Committee on the comparative merits of the Whitworth and Armstrong systems of artillery. In 1870 he was employed by the Home Office to investigate the question of the introduction into the Metropolis of the Constant Service System of Water Supply, and he took an important part in the subsequent proceedings for carrying it into effect. In 1871 he was commissioned by the War Office to report on the Martini-Henry breech-loading rifle. In 1870 he was appointed by the Board of Trade as one of the Metropolitan Gas Referees, which office he still holds. He has acted as Secretary (in two instances under a special appointment by the Queen) to four Government Commissions of Inquiry, namely, from 1865 to 1867 to the Royal Commission on Railways; from 1867 to 1869 to the Royal Commission on Water Supply; from 1882 to 1884 to the Royal Commission for inquiring into the Pollution of the Thames; and in 1885 to a Committee on the Science Museums at South Kensington. He has also done much private work, chiefly connected with mechanical matters, the steam-engine, railway bridges, plant, stock, and iron-work, as well as in subjects connected with water supply. He is one of the oldest Members of the Institution of Civil Engineers, having been elected in 1840. He served on the Council from 1871 to 1885, and was Honorary Secretary from 1885 to 1896, in which year he was made an Honorary Member. He has also some distinction in science. In June 1861 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of London; he has served six years on the council, and was Vice-President in 1876 and 1889. He was elected into the

AL, Wyndham Spencer, D.L., chairman of the London and stern Railway Company, was July 22, 1822. He is the third late John Portal, Esq., of Free- s and Laverstoke Park, Hants. l family has for several genera- e Hampshire its home, and ranks e best known of its worthies. er was Henri Portal, a descend- ne French Huguenots who were d in 1711 at Winchester. Forced nstances to adopt a means of , he built a mill for the manu- f paper on the river Test at e. So excellent was the production of the mill that the Bank of England granted him the privilege of making their bank-note paper, which has ever since been continued in the family. Mr W. S. Portal was educated at Harrow and at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. He joined the North Hampshire Yeomanry Cavalry as Cornet in 1842, and was promoted Cap- tain in 1853, retiring from the service in 1865. He succeeded his father in the business of the manufacture of the bank- note paper in 1848. Mr. Portal has always taken a great interest in the poorer classes, especially with a view to their improvement socially and intellectually. His first efforts in that direction were begun in 1843, when he rented land and let it out in allotments to labourers and others. He took up poor law, and was elected Chairman of Whitchurch Union, Hants, in 1847, and some years later was chosen Chairman of the Basingstoke Union. While thus engaged he became much impressed by the evils of public- house benefit clubs. This led him to devote his energies to the development of the Hampshire Friendly Society, of which he is President. Mr. Portal is one of the original founders of the Hampshire Re- formatory School, and of the Southern Counties' Adult Education Society. He contested the city of Winchester for a seat in Parliament in the Liberal interest in 1857; also the borough of Portsmouth in 1874. For several years he was one of the Visiting Justices of the Winchester Prison, and became convinced that drink is the principal source of crime. This led him to espouse the temperance cause, and he never loses an opportunity of spreading temperance principles among railway men and labourers. Mr. Portal takes an active interest in international exhibitions, and received a medal "for services rendered" from the Commis- sioners of the Exhibition of 1851. He was also much engaged in the subsequent International Exhibitions of Paris of 1855 and 1867, and was appointed a member of the Royal Commission in connection with the Chicago Exhibition of 1893. He has been deputed to act in a similar capacity at the Paris Exhibition of 1900. Mr. Portal was presented with the honorary freedom of Southampton in 1895, and is the owner of Malshanger, a fine country seat at Basingstoke. From 1892 until his retirement recently he was chairman of the London and South-Western Rail- way Company, and in March 1899 he was presented by the Queen with a framed likeness of herself, accompanied by a letter referring to the many occasions on which he had travelled with the Royal train. POUBELLE, Eugène René, French statesman, was born at Paris, 15, 1831, of an ancient Norman family. He was educated at the College of Bourbon, and having passed through the law, became an Assistant-Professor. He afterwards held posts in France and Toulouse. At the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war, he enlisted as a volunteer, and gained the military Cross of Gallantry at the sorties from Orléans. He was appointed Préfet of the Seine-et-Marne, in April 1871, and went in the same capacity to the fall of M. Thiers in 1873, and again became Professor of Law at Toulouse. However, in 1878 he was appointed Préfet of the Rhône. In 1879 he was promoted to the most important post of the Seine-et-Marne, which he held with success for thirteen years. In a municipal council, more and more becoming a political body, he resisted pretensions which would have placed them in opposition to the Government. Amidst tumultuous scenes and attacks he preserved an impassive and patient, that tired out opponents and prevented civil disturbances. Thanks to him these struggles prevented the carrying out of important works. His ædileship was marked by the construction of sewers, arteries for traffic, the creation of parks, the building of the Genoa, the Bourse du Commerce, the Sorbonne, and the improvement of public education and out-door sports. In 1889 he was sent by the President of the Republic to Magdeburg, to be present at the exhumation of the remains of Frederick the Great, and to bring them back to France. In 1896 he was appointed to the Ministry of Agriculture, and was succeeded by M. Rouvier. He is a Grand Officer of the Légion d'Honneur, and of several other orders.

POULTON, Edward Bagnall, F.R.S., F.Z.S., Hon. LL.D. Prince-

ton, of Wykeham House, Oxford, Hope Professor of Zoology in the University of Oxford, was born at Reading, Jan. 27, 1856, and is the only son of William Ford Poulton, architect. He was educated at the private school of the late W. Watson, B.A., London, at Reading, and in 1873 he worked in the Biological Laboratory at the University Museum, Oxford, and obtained an open scholarship in Natural Science at Jesus College. In 1876 he obtained a first class in the Final Honour School of Natural Science. From 1877 to 1879 he was Demonstrator of Biology under the late Prof. G. Rolleston. In 1878 he obtained the Burdett-Coutts University Scholarship in Geology; and from 1877 to 1878 he was Librarian of the Oxford Union Society, and in 1879 (Lent Term) its President. From 1880 to 1889 he was Lecturer in Natural Science, and then Tutor of Keble College, Oxford; 1881 to 1889, Lecturer in Natural Science, Jesus College, Oxford; 1886 to 1887, Lecturer in Zoology and Comparative Anatomy at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington. In 1889 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society; and in June 1893 was elected Hope Professor of Zoology at Oxford in succession to the late Prof. Westwood. He has published the following works: "On Mammalian Remains and Tree Trunks in Quartern Sands at Reading," Quart. Journ. Geol. Soc., May 1880; "Account of Working of Dowerbottom Cave, Yorkshire," Geol. and Polytechnic Soc., W. Riding of Yorks., 1881, p. 351; "On the Minute Structure of the Tongues of Marsupialia and Monotremata," Quart. Journ. Micro. Soc., January and July 1883; Proc. Zool. Soc., December 1883; "Ovary of Marsupialia and Monotremata," Quart. Journ. Micro. Soc., January 1884; "The True Teeth of Ornithorhynchus," Proc. Roy. Soc., 1888, and Quart. Journ. Micro. Soc., July 1888; "On the Colours and Markings of Lepidopterous Larvæ and Pupæ, &c.," published in the Trans. Ent. Soc., 1884-88, and in 1893, and in Proc. Zool. Soc., 1878 and 1891; "On the Relation between the Colours of Lepidopterous Larvæ and Pupæ and those of their surroundings," Proc. Roy. Soc., 1885-87, and 1893, and Phil. Trans., 1887, and Trans. Ent. Soc., 1892; "On the External Morphology of the Lepidopterous Pupæ, &c.," Trans. Linn. Soc., 1890 and 1891. He is also one of the editors of the translation of Prof. Weismann's "Essays on Heredity and Kindred Biological Problems," Clarendon Press, 1889, vol. ii. 1892; and is the author of "The Colours of Animals, their Meaning and Use, especially considered in the case of Insects," 1890, International Scientific Series. In 1896 he published "Charles Darwin and the Theory of Natural Selection," and in 1899 presented to the University of Oxford a statue of Charles Darwin, which was unveiled by Sir Joseph Hooker in June of that year. At the 1890 meeting of the British Association held at Leeds, Prof. Poulton delivered one of the evening addresses, choosing for his subject "Mimicry in the Animal Kingdom." In January and February 1894 he delivered one of the courses of Lowell Lectures in Boston, Mass., upon "The Meaning and Use of the Colours of Animals." He was educated at Rugby, and entered Oxford as a non-Collegiate Student, as many other distinguished men have done before and since. He joined Christ Church, of which he became a student, and graduated with a first class in Law and Modern History. In 1870 he was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple. He has been Tutor and Law Lecturer at Christ Church, and History Lecturer at Trinity College, and was appointed Regius Professor of Modern History, in succession to the late Prof. Freeman, in 1894. He is editor of "English History from Contemporary Writers," author of "Early England up to the Norman Conquest," in Epochs of English History, "Old Stories from British History," "History of England to 1509," &c. With the late Georg Vigfusson he has edited the "Corpus Poeticum Boreale," and with him is co-author of the "Grimm Centenary Papers," &c. He has besides contributed many important papers on historical and literary subjects to the English Historical Review, the National Observer, &c. Addresses: Christ Church, Oxford; and Bedford Park, W.

POWELL, Major John Wesley, Ph.D., LL.D., American geologist, was born at Mount Morris, New York, March 24, 1834. His early life was passed at various places in Ohio, Illinois, and Wisconsin, and he studied at Illinois College and at Wheaton College, finally taking a special course at Oberlin, Ohio, teaching in the public schools at intervals in the meanwhile. At the outbreak of the Civil War he entered the Union army as a private, and by its close had gained the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, having lost his right arm during its progress. He had, prior to the war, attained prominence as a scientist, and in 1865 was made Professor of Geology and Curator of the Museum in the Illinois Wesleyan University, but he soon resigned this position to accept a similar one in the Illinois University. In 1868 he organized and conducted an expedition to explore the Colorado, which was at that Congress established, in 1879, as the United States Geological and Geographical Survey of the Colorado River of the West, and in his charge. The results of the exploration made by him of the features of this region (covering 100,000 square miles), and of the survey instituted by the United States Government in the Rocky Mountains, proved so important, that in 1879, consolidated them into a permanent and independent organization, the United States Geological Survey, which Major Powell, in 1881, succeeded Clarence King as the Director. In the time Major Powell had devoted considerable attention to ethnology, and through the Smithsonian Institution, vols. of "Contributions to North American Ethnology." To ensure the continuation of this work a special Bureau of Ethnology was established by Congress in 1880, and placed at its head, a position he held, in addition to the directorship of the Survey, until 1894, when he was obliged to resign them both on account of ill health. Major Powell received a Ph.D. from the University of Berlin in 1886, and in the same year an LL.D. from Harvard. In 1880 he was elected a Member of the National Academy of Sciences, and from 1879 to 1887 he was President of the Anthropological Society of Washington. He became a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1875, its Vice-President in 1879, and President in 1887. In addition to these he is a member of a number of other learned and scientific societies. His publications embrace many papers and addresses and Government volumes, including various surveys of the Bureau of Geology and of the U.S. Geological Survey. The special volumes which bear his name are: "Explorations of the Colorado River of the West and its Tributaries," 1875; "Report on the Geology of the Eastern Portion of the Uinta Mountains," 1876; "Report on the Lands of the Region of the United States," 1877; "Introduction to the Study of the Languages," 1880. In 1890 he published a series of papers on irrigation in the Magazine.

POWELL, Sir Richard, Bart., M.D., F.R.C.P., Physician to the Queen, is the second surviving son of the late Captain S. R. Powell. He was educated at University College, London, and graduated M.D. in 1854.

University of London in 1866. He was elected C.P. in 1873, having been admitted in 1867. He is Physician to the Hospital and Consulting Physician to Ventnor and Brompton Hospitals, Consumption, Fellow of the Medical and Chirurgical Society, &c., and one time President of the Society. In May 1898 he was knighted of Grace of the Order of Jerusalem. In January 1899, having previously been Physician Extraordinary to the Queen, he was appointed an Ordinary in succession to Sir William Jenner. He was married in 1897. His works include "On the Diseases of the Lungs and Pleura," 1893; "On the Principles of the Treatment of Diseases and Disorders of the Lungs," being the Lumleian Lectures and contributions, mostly on the subject, to Quain's "Dictionary of Medicine," 1882 and 1894; Reynolds's "Medical and Surgical Journals." He married, in 1897, the second daughter of Sir John Lubbock. Address: 62 Wimpole Street, W.

D'Arcy, born Nov. 11, 1855, at 10, Grosvenor Terrace (now 56 Belgrave Square), S.W., eldest son of Henry D'Arcy, C.S., surgeon (q.v.), and Ann D'Arcy, educated at Merchant Taylors' School, which he entered in 1870, receiving preliminary training at the St. Paul and All Souls' Grammar School. He matriculated in October 1876, as a commoner of New College, but transferred to Exeter College, when he won an open Exhibition in October 1877, and graduated B.A. in June 1878. He has been placed in the first class in the Natural Science School of Natural Science. He received the degree of M.A. in 1881, and the degree of M.B. in June 1882. During 1878-79 he acted as Demonstrator of Comparative Anatomy at University College, London, and in October 1882 began his professional education as a student at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he was appointed a Demonstrator of Physiology in 1878, and in the succession the posts of House Surgeon, Tutor of the Museum, Teacher of Anatomy, and Assistant-Surgeon. At the Royal College of Surgeons of England he was elected a Fellow in 1883, and has since been Examiner, and has filled the position of Senior Professor of Surgery. For five years he was a member of the Conjoint Examining Board of the Medical Colleges of Physicians of London and of Surgeons of England, and has been an Examiner at the University of Cambridge. He is Surgeon to the Hospital for Children, Chelsea;

Visiting Surgeon to the Metropolitan Dispensary, and an Assistant Professor at the Royal Veterinary College. He has served many offices in the British Medical Association, is Senior Secretary of the Pathological Society of London, and a Vice-President of the Harveian Society. In 1897 he was admitted a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. His published work divides itself into General, Scientific, and Professional. His general work consists of "Memorials of the Craft of Surgery," 1886; a "Life of William Harvey," 1897; various works upon antiquarian medical subjects, and the lives of eminent surgeons in the "Dictionary of National Biography." The scientific writings are chiefly connected with an attempt to discover the cause of cancer, 1893-95, and of certain forms of intestinal obstruction, 1897-1898. The purely professional work comprises a book on the "Surgical Diseases of Children" (1895), and numerous papers upon points of surgical interest published in the various medical periodicals, 1878-98. In the spring of 1898 he was appointed Assistant-Surgeon at St. Bartholomew's. Address: 10A Chandos Street, Cavendish Square, London, W.

POWER, Henry, M.B., F.R.C.S., received his medical education at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and, in studying for his London degree, obtained the Exhibition in Anatomy and Physiology of the University of London in 1852. He is Consulting Ophthalmic Surgeon of St. Bartholomew's Hospital and of the Westminster Ophthalmic Hospital, as well as to the Artists' Benevolent Society. He is Professor of Physiology at the Royal Veterinary College, and has been Professor of Surgery and Arris and Gale Lecturer at the Royal College of Surgeons, England. He is author of "Elements of Human Physiology," "Illustrations of the Principal Diseases of the Eye," 1869; has translated Stricker's "Manual of Human and Comparative Histology" for the New Sydenham Society in 1870, and Erb's "On the Diseases of the Nervous System" for Ziemssen's "Cyclopædia," and, with Dr. Sedgwick, is editor of Mayne's "Expository Lexicon." Addresses: 37A Great Cumberland Place, W.; and Bagdale Hall, Whitby.

POWERSCOURT, Viscount, The Right Hon. Mervyn Edward Wingfield, K.P., M.R.I.A., J.P., D.L., was born at Powerscourt on Oct. 13, 1836, and is the eldest son of the 6th Viscount, and succeeded his father in 1844. He was educated at Eton, and joined the 1st Life Guards, of which he was a Lieutenant. He is an Irish representative peer, sitting as Baron Powerscourt, Past President of the Royal Dublin Society, was made K.P. in 1871, and sworn of the Irish Privy Council in 1897. He married, in 1864, Lady Julia Coke, daughter of the 2nd Earl of Leicester, K.G. Addresses: 51 Portland Place, W.; and Powerscourt, co. Wicklow.

POYNTER, Sir Edward John, P.R.A., was born in Paris, March 20, 1836, being the son of Mr. Ambrose Poynter, architect. He was educated at Westminster School and at Ipswich Grammar School; afterwards he studied art in English schools from 1854 to 1856, and under Gleyre in Paris from 1856 to 1859. He was made an Associate of the Royal Academy in January 1869, a member of the Belgian Water-Colour Society in 1871, and was appointed Slade Professor of Art at University College, Gower Street, London, in May 1871, the appointment being renewed in 1873 for four years. He was elected a Royal Academician, June 29, 1876, and in November 1896 was raised to the Presidency of the Royal Academy. He received the honour of knighthood at the same time. He has exhibited at the Royal Academy, "Israel in Egypt," 1867; "The Catapult," 1868; "Perseus and Andromeda," 1872; "More of More Hall and the Dragon," 1873; "Rhodope," 1874; "The Festival" and "The Golden Age," 1875; "Atalanta's Race," 1876; "The Fortune-Teller," his diploma picture, 1877; "Zenobia Captive," 1878; and "Diadumene," 1885. This picture was one of those offering a text to the memorable discussion upon the morality of the nude in art which enlivened the season of 1885. Mr. Poynter also painted cartoons for the mosaic of St. George in the Westminster Palace, 1869; designed the architectural and tile decorations for the grill-room at South Kensington, 1868-70; painted a fresco at St. Stephen's Church, Dulwich, 1872-73; and has exhibited many other smaller works in the Academy and Dudley Water-Colour Exhibitions, and at the Royal Water-Colour Society, of which he is a member. At the Royal Academy in 1889 he exhibited "On the Terrace" and "A Corner in the Villa"; in 1890 "Pea Blossom," "On the Temple Steps"; in 1891, "The Meeting of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba"; a small finished study for the large picture of the same subject, containing more than sixty figures, exhibited at Mr. M'Lean's Gallery in 1890, and since sold to the National Gallery at Sydney in New South Wales; in 1892, "When the World was Young," and two portraits; in 1893, "Chloe," and the design for the border of the Queen's letter to the Nation after the death of the Duke of Clarence; in 1894, "Horæ Serenæ Fears," and two sets of designs for coinage. Mrs. Campbell Mack-Rosa Caroline Murray-Prior, born March 27, 1852, in Queensland. On her father's side she is of Scottish descent. Her grandfather, Colonel Mack, fought in the 18th Hussars.

Her father, a squatter in New South Wales, took an active part in Australian politics and held office as Postmaster-General of Queensland Ministries. She grew up between bush life and the rising capital of the colony. In 1872 she married Mr. Campbell Praed, nephew of the poet. In the first years of her married life she lived on an island off the Queensland coast, bought by her husband as a retreat. In 1876 she came, for the first time, with him to England. "An Heroine," her first novel, was published in 1880; "Policy and Passion," 1881; "Moloch," 1882; "Affinities," "Sketches of Life," and "The Head Station," 1883; "Brother of the Shadow," and "Men's Chance," 1886; "The Clock," 1887, also dramatised and produced by Mrs. Praed, under the title of "Ariane," the same year; "The Romance of the Year," published in 1890. She has written, in collaboration with Mr. Campbell Praed, "The Right Honourable," published in 1886; "The Rival," first published anonymously as "The Rose," 1888; "The Ladies' Club," and "The Grey River," in collaboration with Mr. Justin McCarthy and Mr. Menpes, by whom the work was edited, 1889; "Soul of Countess," 1891; "Romance of a Chalet," 1892; "Law and Lawmaker," 1893; "The Chard," 1894. Since 1894 she has travelled to a large extent, and visited Australia. Her most recent publications are three books: "Mrs. Mack-Rosa," and "Nulina," both novels of 1897; and in 1898, "The Scourge," a recent address: 75 Elm Park

Alfred, was born at Liverpool. He studied art firstly at a school in connection with the Art Department of South Wales, where he obtained a National award for drawing from the antique, and other prizes, and afterwards principally at Heatherley's Art School in Newman Street, and at different periods also at Antwerp and Paris. He exhibited first, about 1885, at the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colours, subsequently at the Royal Academy, Royal Society of British Artists, the Dudley and New Galleries, and at Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, &c. He is occupied chiefly with portraiture, but has also exhibited several subject pictures both in oil and water-colours, notably: "Father, I have Sinned," 1893, and "The Heiress," exhibited in 1895 at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool; "A Favourite of the Sultan," Royal Academy, 1894; "Sorrow and Sin," Royal Institute of Painters in Oil, 1894; a portrait of "M<sup>de</sup>. Sarah Grand" shown at the Society of Portrait-Painters' Exhibition at the Grafton Gallery in 1896, and another of J. Lumsden Propert, Esq., the well-known authority and writer on miniature art, at the same Society's exhibition in 1897. He painted during 1898 a life-size presentation portrait of Li Hung Chang, a commission from a merchant in China as a gift to the venerable statesman. Turning his attention latterly to the somewhat neglected art of miniature painting, he founded in 1895 the Society of Miniaturists, of which he has been the Vice-President, Lord Ronald Gower being the first President, and in 1899 became President. The Society grew rapidly, and held an important and highly successful inaugural exhibition at the Grafton Gallery in the autumn of 1896, which was composed not only of the works of members, but included what was perhaps the most important and representative collection of the works of the old masters in miniature art ever before brought together. This exhibition has since been followed by others of equal interest at the same Gallery. Amongst miniatures by Mr. Praga that have been shown both at the Society's exhibitions and at the Royal Academy were portraits of the late Lady Glenesk, Princess Henry of Pless, the Earl and Countess of Egmont, Sir Henry Irving, the late General Alec Fraser, C.B., and the infant son of the Hon. E. Johnstone. A miniature also of Dr. Lumsden Propert, in Georgian court dress, was shown at a recent exhibition at the New Gallery, and this was referred to in the course of a review in Literature as being "fine enough to have belonged to an earlier age." Mr. Praga contributed an article entitled "The Renaissance of Miniature Painting" to the Magazine of Art for December 1896, which was illustrated by a miniature of the author's, entitled "Isabel." This was subsequently exhibited at the Royal Academy.

The article dealt chiefly with the revival and the technique of miniature art, and illustrated three different stages of a miniature painted from life. Mr. Praga is married to a lady well known in journalistic circles as a member of the Daily Telegraph staff. Address: The Grey House, Kensington.

PREECE, Sir William Henry, K.C.B., F.R.S., V.P.I.C.E., &c., Consulting Engineer to the General Post Office, was born in Carnarvon on Feb. 15, 1834, and is the eldest son of R. M. Preece, Bryn Helen, Carnarvon. He was educated at King's College, London, passing through the School and College. He first entered the engineering office of Mr. Edwin Clark in 1852, passing the next year into the Electric and International Telegraph Company, and became, three years later, superintendent of their southern district. In 1858 he was appointed engineer to the Channel Islands Telegraph Company, and in 1860 superintendent of telegraphs to the London and South-Western Company. On the transfer of the telegraphs to the State, he became a Divisional Engineer, in 1877 was promoted to the post of Chief Electrician, and in 1892 to that of Engineer in Chief, which he held until his retirement, on his sixty-fifth birthday, in Feb. 1899. His researches for the advancement of electricity, his practical inventions, and his reputation as a speaker and lecturer have made his name familiar to many outside the scientific world. He is a prominent member of many of the learned societies, including the Royal Society, the Institution of Civil Engineers, the Electrical Engineers of which he is a past President, the Physical Society, the Royal Institution, the British Association, and the Society of Arts. He is Consulting Engineer to the Colonies. He was made Officier de la Légion d'Honneur in 1889, and in 1894 was created a Companion of the Order of the Bath, and a K.C.B. at the Birthday, 1899. Sir William Preece has patented many inventions, though of late years his work is lost in that of his department at the General Post Office. These include a new method of duplex telegraphy, 1855; a new mode of "terminating" wires, 1858; working miniature signals by electricity to assimilate electric signals with "robot" signals on railways, 1862; the application of electricity to domestic telegraph purposes, 1864; the application of electricity for signalling between different parts of a train in motion, 1864; locking signals on railways by means of electricity, 1865; a new telephone, 1878, &c. He introduced both the telephone and the photograph into England. Sir William has written, in conjunction with Mr. Sivewright, a "Telegraphy," which is in part with Dr. Julius Maier, "The Telegraph," and with Mr. Stubbs, a "Manual of Telephony." He has edited several treatises read, at various scientific meetings, on various papers on telegraphy, telegraph conductors, the telephone, the telegraph, electric lighting, and various applications of electricity, too numerous to mention. Address: Gothic Lodge, Wimbledon.

PRENDERGAST, General Harry North Dalrymple, K.C.B., born Oct. 15, 1834, is the son of Thomas Prendergast, V.P.I.C.E., Service, late of Meldon Lodge, Hampshire, and was educated at Brighton College, and Addiscombe. He served with the sappers and miners in Persia in 1857, and was present at the bombardment of Mohumrah and the Malwa Field Force. He was awarded the Victoria Cross for conspicuous gallantry on Sept. 23, 1857, at Munda. He was severely wounded; he served out the Central India Campaign with Hugh Rose, and was severely wounded at Jhansi. In the Abyssinian war he commanded the detachment of the companies of Madras Sappers and Miners. He was Field Engineer during the advance, and was present at the battle of Magdala. During Lord Dufferin's Viceroyalty he was appointed Aide-de-Camp, and has since held several military commands in Mysore. The ultimatum was despatched to Theebaw, and it was seen that Upper Burma was inevitable. He was appointed to the command of a expeditionary force, and lost at the despatching his troops to the king. On the king's refusal of the ultimatum, General Prendergast issued a proclamation declaring that no settlement could be hoped for in the affairs of Upper Burma. The Government of India had decided that the king should cease to reign. The troops proceeded up the river Irrawaddy, and were engaged at Nyaung-U, Guegyuan, Kiamto, Manda, Pakoko, and Myingyan. The king fled to Mandalay on Nov. 28, 1885, and his troops surrounded the city. The next day the king surrendered, thus in less than a fortnight he conquered the kingdom of Upper Burma, and overthrew the dynasty of Alaungmye, of which the area was nearly equal to that of Spain, was annexed to the British Empire, and 1860 pieces of artillery were taken. General Prendergast was created a C.B. in May 1886, and in December 1885. Sir Harry Prendergast

RAY DE BEAUREPAIRE, French magistrate, was born at Paris, May 2, 1838, and entered the legal profession under the Empire. In 1862 he became substitute at La Flèche, and in 1867 at Mamers. On the fall of the Empire he became a volunteer in the war, and took part in the defence of Paris, and, on the restoration of peace, became editor of the Journal de la Sarthe. In 1877 he entered Parliament, but was defeated. He was the Duc de la Rochefoucauld, and recently re-entered the law. In 1879 he became substitute at the Tribunal of the Seine, Procureur-Général at Rennes in 1881, and Avocat-Général at Paris in 1883. In this last-named post he had to prosecute Louise Michel for urging the people to loot the bakehouses. M. de Beaurepaire first came prominently into public notice during the Boulangist agitation of 1889. In that year M. Bouchez, the Procureur-Général, refused to prosecute the General, and resigned his post. M. de Beaurepaire was nominated to it on the 1st of April in that year, and undertook the prosecution of the General and of M. Rochefort before the Senate in August, when they were condemned to imprisonment for life. He became the object of the most outrageous attacks from the Boulangist press, such as La Cocarde and L'Intransigeant, against which he brought suits for damages, which were dismissed on appeal. In 1890 he prosecuted Eyraud and Gabrielle Bompard for the murder of Gouffé, and in 1892 the anarchist Ravachol. In December of that year he was promoted to the Presidency of the Cour de Cassation, which he resigned in January 1899 somewhat melodramatically, giving as his reasons the partiality of the judges of the Court in their investigation of the Dreyfus imbroglio. His "Revelations" in the Echo de Paris fell somewhat flat. M. de Beaurepaire is also known as an author of moral novels, which he has written under the pseudonym of Jules de Glouvet. Of these the chief are: "Le Forestier," 1880; "Le Berger," 1882; "L'Idéal," 1883; "La Famille Bourgeoise," 1883; "Le Père," 1886; "Marie Fougère," 1889; and extracts from his uncle's papers, which he called "Histoire du Vieux Temps," 1865; 3rd edit., 1888. He was created a Commander of the Legion of Honour in 1890, and his Paris address is 4 Place Possoz.

QUILTER, Sir W. Cuthbert, Bart., M.P., is the eldest son of the late W. Quilter, of Norfolk Street, Park Lane, W., and was born in 1841. He was educated privately. He is head of the firm of Quilter, Balfour & Co., and Director and one of the founders of the National Telephone Company. Alderman of the West Suffolk County Council, a leading East Anglian agriculturist, D.L. and J.P. for his county, &c. He was created a Baronet in 1897, and has sat in the House of Commons for the Sudbury Division since 1885. He married Mary, daughter of the late John Wheeley Revington, in 1867. Addresses: 74 South Audley Street, W., and Bawdsey Manor, Suffolk.

QUINCKE, Professor Georg, Ph.D., F.R.S., F.R.S.E., was born at Frankfurt-

an-der-Oder, Prussia, on Nov. 19, 1834, and studied in Berlin, Koenigsberg, and Heidelberg; obtained the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Berlin in 1858, and has since been Professor of Physics in Berlin, Wurzburg, and Heidelberg. He has published numerous papers on electricity, capillarity and molecular forces, acoustics, and optics, in Poggendorff's Annalen, Plücker's Archiv, &c. Professor Quincke is a Fellow of the Royal Societies of London and of Edinburgh.

RADNOR, Earl of, The Right Hon. William Pleydell-Bouverie, Bart., D.L., J.P., was born on June 19, 1841, and is the son of the 4th Earl, whom he succeeded in 1889, and Mary, daughter of the 1st Earl of Verulam. He was educated at Harrow and at Trinity College, Cambridge. He represented South Wilts in the House of Commons from 1874 to 1885, and the Enfield Division from 1885 to 1889. He was Treasurer of the Household in 1885-86 and 1886-89, and is Prov. Grand Master of Mark Masons for Wiltshire. He married, in 1866, Helen, daughter of the late Rev. Henry Chaplin, son of the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin. Addresses: 12 Upper Brook Street, W.; and Longford Castle, Salisbury, &c.

RAGONA, Professor Domenico, Director of the Royal Observatory in Modena, was born in Palermo on Jan. 20, 1820, and studied in that Royal University. He derived very great advantage from the private instruction of his maternal uncle Domenico Scina, a celebrated Sicilian scientist. Whilst still very young, after the death of Scina, he competed for and obtained the post of demonstrator and Assistant-Professor of Physics at the University of Palermo. Afterwards he was appointed assistant at the Royal Observatory of Palermo. In 1851, after having carried out long and arduous astronomical and geodesical observations with regard to the triangulation of the province of Palermo, he was sent, at the expense of the government, to Germany for some years, in order to perfect himself in the science of astronomy. He had excellent theoretical and practical instruction in Berlin from Professor Encke, and in Bonn from Argelander. In Berlin he had the honour of enjoying the friendship of Baron A. von Humboldt, through whose powerful influence Ragona obtained a Merz's refractor of great dimensions, and one of Pistor and Martin's meridian-circles, instruments which now adorn the Obser-

In tered the Papal service, and he served his apprenticeship In that year he was appointed of the Papal Embassy at When he returned to Rome he became Secretary of the Congregation of the Propaganda, being especially charged with the affairs of the Greek Church. From 1880 to 1882 he was Secretary of Ecclesiastical Affairs, and in the latter year became Papal Nuncio at Madrid. When the dispute as to the Caroline Islands, between Spain and Germany, broke out in 1885, Monsignor Rampolla suggested the choice of the Pope as arbitrator. He was created a Cardinal Priest in 1887, and in May of the same year became Under-Secretary of State. In this post it has been his duty to conduct the delicate negotiations between the Quirinal and the Vatican, especially with regard to the Penal Laws directed against the clergy by the Crispi Cabinet. He is now the chief adviser of the venerable Pontiff, and as the introducer of foreigners, has earned a very favourable fame. Among the Papabili, or probable successors to the present Pope, he is regarded as the most eligible candidate, his supporters being the prelates of the Latin races as opposed to the Austrian and German dignitaries, who do not favour him owing to his opposition to the Triple Alliance.

RAMSAY, Professor William, LL.D., D.Sc., Ph.D., F.R.S., was born at Glasgow, Oct. 2, 1852; his father, of the same name, was a civil engineer, and subsequently Secretary to the Scottish Union and National Insurance Office; he was brother to Sir Andrew Ramsay, the geologist; his mother, Catherine Robertson, was the daughter of Archibald Robertson, M.D., who practised in Edinburgh. RANSOME, Arthur, M.A. Cantab., M.D., M.R.C.P., F.R.S., the son of the late

Joseph A. Ransome, twenty years' surgeon to the Manchester Royal Infirmary, and of Eliza, third daughter of Joseph Brookhouse, of Derby, was born at Manchester on Feb. 11, 1804, and was educated at Manchester, D. Linn. Lam ridge, London, and Paris. He took diploma as licentiate in midwifery, Dublin, 1833; M.R.C.S. 1855, L.S.A. 1856; M.B. Cambridge, 1854; M.D. Cambridge, 1869, and was elected F.R.S. in 1855; and Hon. Fellow of Caius College in 1862. When at Cambridge, at Gonville and Caius College, he was Caius Scholar in Anatomy and Physiology, and Mecklenburg Scholar in Chemistry. He obtained honours in Mathematics in the second class Senior Optimes in 1856, and first class in the Natural Science Tripos. He was Honorary Secretary and Lecturer in Physiology to the Working Men's College, Manchester, from 1857 to 1860. He joined the Committee of the Manchester and Salford Sanitary Association in 1877; was Honorary Secretary in 1881 and 1882; Deputy-Chairman from 1874 to 1884; and was Chairman from 1884 to 1884. During that period he has taken an active part in assisting the Association in the formation of the following institutions: The Nurse Training, the North Western Association for Medical Officers of Health, Noxious Vapours Prevention Association, the Day Nursery Association, and the Children's Country Holiday Fund. He was instrumental in promoting weekly returns of sickness, which were for twenty years published by the Association. The success of his interesting and Dr. Ransome's efforts, first as Honorary Secretary and afterwards as Chairman of the Registration of Disease Committee, have materially forwarded the eradication of infectious sickness throughout the country. In connection with this subject he wrote pamphlets on 'Numerical Tests of the Health of Towns,' 'Epidemics Stopped by Means of Quarantine of Disease,' 'Disease in St. Mary's Lane and Manchester,' 'Ten Years of Disease between 1861 and 1870 in Manchester and Salford.' To the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society he has contributed papers on the 'Influence of Atmospheric Changes on Disease,' 'Atmospheric Pressure and its Relations to Disease, especially Hemorrhages,' 'The Germination and Early Growth of Seeds,' 'On the true Matter of the Breath,' 'On Epidemic Cries,' and 'On the Graphical Representation of Chest Movements.' In the Proceedings of the Royal Society he has published papers on the 'Movements of the Chest,' and on the 'Discovery of the Tubercle Bacillus in the Aqueous Tissue of the Breasts.' To the Epidemiological Society he has contributed article "On the General Respiratory Diseases," in Dr. t's "System of Medicine." married Lucy Elizabeth Fullar-Sunnyhurst, Bournemouth.

He also cial thanks of the Supreme India, with a substantial services he rendered to the e Indian Mutiny. When ed the Foreign Office in sul Cameron and other men had been imprisoned by Theodore, King of

Abyssinia, Mr. Rassam was chosen by the Home Government to proceed to the court of that monarch with a letter from the Queen asking for the release of the captives. He accordingly went to Massowah, the port of Abyssinia, whence he wrote to Theodore for a safe-conduct; and after having waited there more than a year, he was invited by the king to proceed to his court. Mr. Rassam was accompanied by Lieutenant Prideaux and Dr. Blanc, of the Bombay army, and they were received with every mark of distinction and honour. It seemed at one time that Mr. Rassam's mission would be crowned with success, but through Theodore's eccentricity, coupled with intrigue from other quarters, it was doomed to disappointment. Hopeful as Mr. Rassam was at first of procuring the liberation of Consul Cameron and the other captives, he was himself arrested with his suite, and the three were sent as prisoners with the old captives to Magdala, where they were kept in chains for nearly two years. After the old captives, Consul Cameron and his fellow-prisoners, had undergone about four years' rigorous confinement, and Mr. Rassam and his companions had shared their fate for nearly two years and a half, they were ultimately set free by Theodore on the Easter Eve of 1868, after his defeat the day before by the British force under the command of Sir Robert Napier, at Arogay, below Magdala. Mr. Rassam published a narrative of the "British Mission to Theodore, King of Abyssinia, with Notices of the Country traversed from Massowah through the Soudan, the Amhara, and back to Annesly Bay from Magdala," 2 vols., London, 1869. In 1876 he was selected by the Trustees of the British Museum to conduct the Assyrian Explorations under a favourable firman granted to him by the Ottoman Government, through the influence of Sir Henry Layard, who was then acting as her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople. From that time until July 1882, he conducted the British National Archæological researches in Assyria, Armenia, and Babylonia; during which time he succeeded in securing for the British Museum important relics connected with the history of those three great ancient kingdoms, amongst which he discovered, in a small mound called "Balawat," in the vicinity of Nineveh, a magnificent bronze gate, twenty feet high, forming a memorial of the wars of Shalmenesar III., B.C. 850. The rich embossed bronzes are now in the British Museum. He also discovered, amongst other sites, the great Biblical cities of Sippara, or Sepharvaim, and Cuthah, situated in Southern Mesopotamia. During his different expeditions to Assyria and Babylonia he acquired for the National Institution about ten thousand whole, and more than one hundred thousand pieces of terra-cotta and clay inscribed tablets, with a large number of different-shaped terra-cotta cylinders and marble tablets recording the religious and general history of those two kingdoms. During the Turko-Russian war of 1877 he was sent by the British Foreign Office on a special mission to Asia Minor, Armenia, and Kurdistan, to inquire into the condition of the different Christian communities, who were said to be maltreated by their Moslem fellow-countrymen. Among other works by Mr. Rassam mention should be made of "Asshur and the Land of Nimrod," "The Garden of Eden and Biblical Sagas," and "Biblical Lands." Address: 7 Powis Square, Brighton.

RATHMORE, Lord, The Right Hon. David Robert Plunket, Q.C., LL.D., is the fourth son of the third Lord Plunket, and of Charlotte, daughter of the Right Hon. Lord Chief-Justice Bushe, and grandson of the first Lord Plunket, the famous orator and lawyer, who held the Great Seal in Ireland from 1830 to 1834, and for the second time from 1835 to 1841. Lord Rathmore, who was born Dec. 3, 1838, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated in Honours in 1859. He was called to the Irish Bar in 1862. Having held for some time the Professorship of Constitutional Law at the King's Inns, Dublin, he obtained the rank of Q.C. in 1868, and in the same year was appointed Law Adviser to the Government in Ireland. Mr. Plunket unsuccessfully contested Dublin City at the General Election in 1868, but was elected M.P. for the University of Dublin in 1870, a seat which he held continuously until November 1895, when he was raised to the Peerage, as Baron Rathmore of Shanganagh, Co. Dublin. Whilst in the House of Commons he filled, under successive Conservative Administrations, the offices of Solicitor-General for Ireland, 1875-77, Paymaster-General, 1880 (when he was made a Privy Councillor), and Her Majesty's First Commissioner of Works, 1885-86, and 1886-92. Throughout the twenty-six years during which, as Mr. David Plunket, he sat in the House of Commons, Lord Rathmore was the foremost champion of the Irish Conservative party. When in office, he was not—apart from his official utterances—a frequent Parliamentary speaker; but when in opposition, both in the House and on the platform, he was by far the most eloquent champion of the Irish minority in their resistance to Radical policy, on the questions of Irish University Reform, Irish Franchise, Land Legislation for Ireland, and Home Rule.

He obtained the Denyer prize for an Essay in 1842, and again in 1843, having held for some years in his College, was appointed in 1852; became Public Examiner in 1854, and again in 1856, 1868, and 1870, and preached the Bampton Lecture in 1859. He was elected without competition to the Camden Professorship of History in the University in 1861, and took an active part in the agitation which led to the passing of the Oxford Reform Bill, in favour of the changes proposed. In September 1872 he was elected Canon of Canterbury by the Chapter in 1888 was presented by the Chapter of Canterbury to the Rectory of All Hallows, Lombard Street, London. He has written (in conjunction with his brother, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Bart., and Wilkinson) "The History of the Jews, a new English version, with notes," 1858-60; and also, independently, "The Historical Evidences of the Truth of the Scripture Records, in a series of lectures delivered in the Oxford Chapel, at the Bampton Lecture Series, published in 1860; "The Consistency of Christianity with Heathen and Paganisms, in Nine Sermons preached at the University of Oxford on various occasions," 1861; "The Five Great Monarchs of the Ancient Eastern World," 1867; "A Manual of Ancient History," 1869; "The Sixth Great Oriental Monarchy; or, the Geography, History, and Antiquities of the Assyrian or New Persian Empire, illustrated from Ancient Sources," in 1876; a "History of Ancient Egypt," 2 vols., in 1881; "The Phoenicians," in 1889; and many other works. Professor Rawlinson has written an essay, the subject being "The Truth and Authenticity of the Bible," to "Aids to Faith," by J. Thomson, in reply to "Essays on the Bible," by J. Thomson; and was a large contributor to Smith's "Dictionary of the Bible," where he wrote the article on "Herodotus." In the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." He supplied the articles on Kings, Chronicles, Ezra, Esther, and the two Books of the Kings, to "The Speaker's Commentary on the Bible," and the Bishop of Exeter's "Commentary on the Old Testament," and those on Exodus, II. Samuel, Nehemiah, Esther, and Isaiah in the "Bible Commentary" of Dean

Spence and Mr. Exell. During recent years he has written in "Men of the Bible" on the lives and times of Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Ezra, and Nehemiah. In 1893 he published "Parthia" in "The Story of the Nations," and in 1898 he published a memoir of his brother, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Bart. He held the office of Classical Examiner under the Council of Military Education from 1859 to 1870. He has been Proctor in Convocation for the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury since 1873. He was elected a member of the Athenæum Club, as the representative of literature, in 1870, and is a Corresponding Member of the Royal Academy at Turin. In 1846 he married Louisa W., second daughter of Sir R. A. Chermiside, M.D., Physician to the British Embassy, Paris. Addresses: All Hallows Church, Lombard Street, E.C.; The Precincts, Canterbury; and Athenæum.

RAWSON, Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Holdsworth, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of the Channel Squadron, son of Christopher Rawson, Esq., of Petersfield, Surrey, was born on Nov. 5, 1843. He was educated at Marlborough College, and entered the Navy in 1857. He went almost immediately to China in H.M.S. Calcutta, and was present at the capture of the Peiho Forts and of Peking. He acted as aide-de-camp to Captain Dew of H.M.S. Encounter during the whole of the operations with the army in 1860, taking part in all the engagements, and on one occasion was severely wounded. He was twice mentioned in despatches for meritorious services, and for three months had command of 1300 Chinese troops which were mobilised for the defence of Ningpo against the rebels. He received the Chinese medal with two clasps. During 1861, while employed in the Shanghae River, he jumped overboard at night to save the life of a marine, and received the thanks of his captain on the quarter-deck. He was promoted Lieutenant in 1863, and in that rank served in H.M.S. Bellerophon and in the royal yacht. As Commander he had charge of H.M.S. Hercules in the Channel Squadron from 1871 to 1874. In the following year Admiral Rawson was appointed to the flagship of the Mediterranean fleet, and in 1878 issued a report on the capabilities of defence, &c., of the Suez Canal, for which he received the thanks of the Admiralty. It fell to him to hoist the English flag at Nicosia, capital of Cyprus, where he was for one month the military commandant. As Captain he was employed as principal transit officer during the Egyptian war, and received a C.B. and the Osmanieh of the third class. He has also served as a member of the International Code of Signals Committee. He had the honour of being an aide-de-camp to the Queen from August 1891 to January 1892, when he was promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral. As Commander-in-Chief he went to the Cape and West Coast of Africa station in 1895, and in August of the same year he landed a large brigade assisted by sixty Seneguese and fifty Seneguese Askari troops, and assisted in capturing M'wali, the stronghold of a rebel Arab chief. In 1896 he commanded the palace of the Sultan of Zanzibar which had been seized by a pretender. The Sultan conferred upon him the Brilliant Star of Zanzibar of the first class. In February 1897 Admiral Rawson organised and commanded a punitive naval expedition, and with seamen and marines landed from his squadron, men sent in England together with a force of 1500 men, to proceed to the capture of Beira City to avenge the massacre of a previous expedition which had been sent thither. The operations were perfectly successful, and he received the well-merited personal recognition of the Queen and the approval of the Admiralty. He was promoted to a K.C.B. in May 1897. In May 1898 he entertained the King and Queen of Italy on board his flagship H.M.S. Monarch, with the Channel Squadron was visiting harbours in the Mediterranean. Admiral Sir Harry Rawson married in 1871 Florence Anne, daughter of John Shaw, Esq. of Arrow Park, Cheshire. Address: United Service Club, Pall Mall, S.W.

RAWSON, Sir Rawson William, K.C.M.G., C.B., eldest son of the celebrated politician William Adams, who assumed the name of Rawson, that of his wife in 1827, was born in London, Sept. 3, 1812; was educated at Sturton, Nottingham, and Eton, 1827-30, and was appointed to the East India Company in January 1830 at the age of sixteen. In 1830 he became Private Secretary to the Vice-President Mr. Philip Thomas; and in 1834 to the President Mr. Alex. Baring. Upon the creation of the Statistical Department in the Board of Trade, he was appointed first assistant to the chief, Mr. G. R. Porter, with which office he continued to hold until 1842. In 1847 he became a Fellow of the Royal Statistical Society of London, one of its Honorary Secretaries, and first editor of its journal; in 1848 he became a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and in 1841 was elected a member of its Council; in 1838 he became a member of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and in the three following years acted as one of the Secretaries of Section F, Statistical Sciences. In 1841, upon the Rt. Hon. W. E.

England, and retired from the service after nearly 47 years of employment. In Barbados he was present at the Census in 1871, and upon his return to that island for a long series of years he paid a visit to the Governor of the neighbouring French Colony of Guadeloupe, and received his return visit in exchange of such courtesy which had occurred between the two colonies though they are so closely situated. After his retirement Mr. Rawson was elected F.R.S., M.G., and resumed his connection with the several scientific societies of which he is a Fellow. He was elected a member of the Councils of the Royal Geographical and Statistical Societies, and in 1885 he was chosen President of the Royal Geographical Society. He joined the Colonial Imperial Federation League, and was a member of the Council and Committee of the latter until 1890. In 1885, on the creation of the International Statistical Institute, he was elected its first President, and has since been re-elected to that office, and now holds. He presided at the Congresses of the Institute in London in 1887, 1889, and at Bern in 1895. In connection with the Royal Geographical Society, he had the rare experience of auditing the accounts of the Society of Charles Darwin, then in his declining years, and with his son, Major Darwin, in 1894—an interval of half a century. His principal works since his retirement, have been his addresses to the Royal Society on "British and Foreign Trade," "International Vital Statistics," a "Synopsis of the Tariffs of the British Empire," in 1890; two contributions to the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society on the "Territorial Partition of the Coast of Africa," 1884; and "European Territories on the Coasts of the Red Sea," 1885; and a letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the relative values of Gold, Silver, and Commodities, 1886. He is also the author of "Our Climate," in the journal of the Colonial Federation League; and of "Highways, or Approaches to the Continent," 1894. Sir Rawson is a member of the American Philosophical Association, the Statistical Society of Paris, the International Statistical Commission of the Geographical and Geographical Societies of Vienna, and of the Royal Society, "Lihe economieque," of London. He is married, in 1849, Marianne, daughter of the Hon. the Earl of Devon. Address: 68 Cornwall

RAYLEIGH, Lord, John William Strutt, D.C.L. Hon. Oxon., LL.D., F.R.S., Sc.D. Cambridge and Dublin, Hon. C.E., Corresponding Member of the French Institute, Lord Lieutenant of Essex, J.P., 3rd Baron, was born Nov. 12, 1842, and succeeded to the title on the death of his father, of whom he was the only son, in 1873. His mother, created Baroness Rayleigh, was a daughter of the 1st Duke of Leinster. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A., Senior Wrangler, and first Smith's Prizeman, 1865; Fellow of his College, 1866; M.A., 1868; Honorary D.C.L. Oxford, 1883; Honorary LL.D. McGill University, Montreal, 1884, and Dublin University, 1885); has been since 1892 Lord Lieutenant of Essex, and is J.P. of the same county; and a Cambridge Commissioner under the Oxford and Cambridge Universities Act, 1877. He was Professor of Experimental Physics in the University of Cambridge from 1879 to 1884; and was appointed Professor of Natural Philosophy in the Royal Institution, 1887. Since 1896 he has been Scientific Adviser to the Trinity House, and from 1887 to 1896 was Secretary of the Royal Society. In December 1898, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the St. Petersburg Academy of Medicine, he was appointed an honorary member of the Academy. He is the author of two volumes on "The Theory of Sound," 1877-78 (2nd edit. 1894); and of many memoirs in the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society, and other scientific publications. He has also edited Clerk Maxwell's "Heat" (1891 and 1894). Professor Ramsay divides with Lord Rayleigh the distinction of discovering a new element—"Argon"—in the atmosphere, the existence of which was announced at the meeting of the British Association at Oxford in August 1894. Lord Rayleigh married, in 1871, Evelyn Georgina Mary, daughter of the late James Maitland Balfour, Esq., of Whittinghame, Prestonkirk, and has three sons. Addresses: Terling Place, Witham, Essex; and Athenæum.

READ, Clare Sewell, J.P., a distinguished agriculturist, born at Ketteringham in 1826, is the eldest son of George Read, Esq., of Barton Bendish Hall, Norfolk. He entered Parliament in 1865 in the Conservative interest as a member for East Norfolk, and was one of the most prominent advocates of the reduction of the Malt Tax. After the dissolution in 1868 he was returned for the southern section of the county, and continued to represent that constituency until 1880, and West Norfolk until 1885. In 1874 he was appointed Parliamentary Secretary of the Local Government Board, a position he retained until January 1876, when he resigned on account of a difference of opinion upon the question of inspection and Restrictions in Ireland, for the prevention of the spread of pleuro-pneumonia and foot-and-mouth disease among cattle. He advocated uniformity of treatment in both countries, and as an acknowledgment of his services the farmers of England presented him with a service of plate and a cheque for £5500. He is a member of the Council of the Central Chambers of Agriculture, of the Smithfield Club, and of the Farmers' Club, and also of all the local agricultural societies in the county of Norfolk. He married Sarah Maria, only daughter of J. Watson, in 1859. Addresses: 91 Kensington Gardens Square, W.; Barton Bendish, Stoke Ferry.

REANEY, Mrs. Isabel, philanthropist, is a daughter of the late Mr. Robert Edis, of Huntingdon, and a sister of Colonel Edis. She is well known for her labours in the cause of temperance, and is constantly requested to address meetings on that subject. She has also opened "homes" for various forms of distress, notably a Convalescent and Holiday Home at Blackpool. She is well known as a writer of religious stories and other works, of which we may mention "Our Brothers and Sons," "Our Daughters," and "Just in Time." Her husband, the Rev. G. Sale Reaney, is a well-known Broad Church clergyman at East Greenwich, who earlier in life made his mark as a preacher among the Congregationalists. Address: Christ Church Vicarage, Greenwich, S.E.

REAY, Lord, Donald James Mackay, Bart. G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., LL.D. Edinburgh, D.L., J.P., was born in Holland in December 1839, and is the son of the late Baron Mackay, of Ophemart, Minister of State, by the daughter of Baron Fagel, Privy Councillor of the Netherlands. His ancestors were distinguished Scottish Jacobites. Lord Reay was educated at the University of Leyden, where he graduated as D.C.L. in 1861. He joined the Diplomatic Service, and in 1871 was elected Member of the Second Chamber of the States General, and vacated his seat in 1877 on becoming a British subject. He succeeded to his father's title in 1876. In 1881 he was created a Peer of the United Kingdom; in 1884 elected Rector of St. Andrews University; in 1885 appointed Governor of Bombay; in 1894 Under-Secretary of State for India. He is Chairman of the London School Board in February 1872. He subsided at Lugano, in Switzerland, as admitted to the benefit of in March 1879. In 1882 he gained notoriety as the practical head of the Anti-Marriage Movement; his two daughters were actually married in his own fashion without religious or civil ceremony. Together with Kropotkin he was condemned as a leader and organiser of the movement, but he escaped from the force of the French law in Switzerland. In September 1892 he was appointed professor of Comparative Geography at the University of Brussels. A volume of his "Géographie" was published in 1875, the second in 1891. He is said to have been the original of Jean Froment, the Anarchist, in Zola's "Paris."

REDINGTON, The Right Hon. Sir Thomas N. Redington, J.P., D.L., was born on Sept. 30, 1847, being the son of Sir Thomas N. Redington, Under-Secretary for Ireland, and previously M.P. for Dundalk, and Eliza Mary, daughter of John Esq. of Ballytrent and Talbot of Wexford. He was educated at Trinity College, and Christ Church, where he took the B.A. degree with first class Honours in Lit. Hum. He is a J.P. and D.L. for Galway, served as High Sheriff and was sworn a member of the Council in Ireland in 1893. He was on the Piers and Roads Commission in connection with the distress in 1885, on the Poor Relief Enquiry Commission in 1886, and a member of the Royal Commission on Royalties in 1889-93, and of the Land Tenants Commission in 1892-93. In 1880 he was made a member of the Senate, and in 1894 was Vice-Chancellor. In 1886 he was a Commissioner of National Land and in 1894 became Resident Magistrate in succession to the late Sir John, K.C.M.G. He was one of the members of the Manual and Practical Commission. Addresses: Kilanmore, co. Galway; Talbot Ross, co. Wexford; and Athe-

REED, John Edward, M.P., born in 1851, and is the son of the late Redmond, M.P., of Ballytrent, M.P. for Wexford from 1872 to 1892. He was educated at Clongowes College, Kildare, at Trinity College, and was called to the Bar at Gray's Inn in 1886, and at the King's Inns in 1887. He was for some time Clerk in the Vote Office, House of Commons. He was elected for New Ross in 1881, for Wexford, North, in 1885, for Waterford in 1891, and for Waterford City in 1892, a constituency which he still represents. He has sat in Parliament continuously since 1881, and since the Parnell split has been a leading Parnellite. Address: 392 Clapham Road, S.W.

RED SPINNER, See SENIOR, WILLIAM.

REED, Sir Edward James, K.C.B., F.R.S., J.P., born at Sheerness, Sept. 20, 1830, was educated at the School of Mathematics and Naval Construction, Portsmouth, served in a subordinate capacity in Sheerness dockyard, and was afterwards editor of the Mechanics' Magazine. He paid great attention to naval architecture, on which he became an authority, and was induced to accept the Secretaryship of the Institution of Naval Architects. He submitted to the Admiralty proposals to reduce the dimensions, cost, and time required for building our iron-clads, and was soon after appointed Chief Constructor of the Navy. In about three years he designed iron-clad ships for the British Navy, amounting to an aggregate of 35,000 tons; a large iron-clad frigate for the Turkish Government; a fleet of steam-transports for the service of our Indian Government, consisting of five ships of 4000 tons each, a paddle despatch-steamer of war, and numerous tugs, life-boats, and other smaller vessels. After four years of further service as Chief Constructor, Mr. Reed, whose objections to rigged sea-going turret ships were well known, found these vessels so much in favour that he resigned his office in July 1870. His resignation was made remarkable by the capsizing of the turret ship Captain a few weeks afterwards. Mr. Reid was afterwards engaged in private pursuits, visiting occasionally the foreign dockyards of Europe. He was returned to Parliament in the Liberal interest as member for the Pembroke boroughs at the general election of February 1874. He represented that constituency till April 1880, when he was returned for Cardiff. He was re-elected for Cardiff at the general election in November 1885, and again in February 1886, on his appointment as Lord of the Treasury in Mr. Gladstone's administration. He received the Companionship of the Bath from the Queen of England; the Star of the Imperial Order of St. Stanislas (first class) from the Emperor of Russia; the Star and Ribbon of the Medjidieh (second class) from the Sultan of Turkey, and the Knight Commandership of the Imperial Order of Joseph from the Emperor of Austria. He is the author of works on Practical Shipbuilding, Iron-cased Ships, and Coast Defence. In October 1878 he started on a visit to Japan, at the invitation of the Imperial Government. He returned to this country in May 1879, and published a work on "Japan: its Histories, Traditions, and Religions," 2 vols., 1880. Other works from his pen are: "The Stability of Ships," 1884, and "Modern Ships of War" (with Admiral Simpson), 1888. In August 1880 he was created a K.C.B. In 1883 Sir Edward Reed was appointed by the Government to inquire into the cause of the capsizing of the SS. Daphne during the operation of launching on the Clyde; and in 1884 was also appointed by the Government as President of the Load Line Committee, which was formed for the purpose of thoroughly investigating the question of a proper load-line for the ships of the Mercantile Marine. Re-elected for Cardiff in 1892, Sir Edward Reed did not take office under the new Government, and at one time was thought to be on the point of becoming a Unionist. He is Vice-President of the Institute of Naval Architects, and a member of the Council of the Inst. of Civil Engineers. He married, in 1851, Rosetta, daughter of Nathl. Barnaby. Address: 112 Cromwell Road, S.W.

REED, Edward Tennyson, of Punch, was born in London on March 27, 1860, and is the only son of Sir Edward James Reed, K.C.B., F.R.S., M.P. He was educated at Harrow, and in 1880 travelled in the Far East. He began to draw for Punch in 1889, and definitely joined the staff in 1890. He is justly famous for his "Prehistoric Peeps," which are, in some sort, a reminiscence of the sketches and paintings, by which Ernest Griset illustrated the savages of the Quaternary Period. He succeeded Mr. Harry Furniss as Parliamentary Artist to Punch in 1894. His most memorable sketch in this connection is "The House of Commons in Lager" in 1894. At a time when the members of the Corporation of the City of London were busily engaged in a search for armorial bearings he created much mirth with his series of "Ready-Made Coats of Arms." "Unrecorded History" is another of his series of clever sketches. "Prehistoric Peeps" was republished in 1896, and "Mr. Punch's Animal Land" in 1898. Address: 3 St. Paul's Studios, West Kensington, W.

REES, John Sims, tenor singer, Shooter's Hill, Kent, Oct. 21, 1822; instructed by his father. At an early age he held the appointment of organist and director of the choir at the church of North Cray, and after taking lessons on the pianoforte from J. B. Crotch he was placed under the care of Mrs. Crotch, Hobbs, and other distinguished teachers of singing. In December 1839, he made his first appearance on the stage.

At this time he was singing some parts; he next visited the principal provincial towns, and went to London to study his profession. Not long after he made his first appearance in an opera at La Scala, Milan, in the part of Edgardo, in "Lucia di Lammermoor," and came out in the same opera at Drury Lane Theatre, Dec. 1840, then under the management of J. J. Jullien.

His first original part was in Balfe's opera of the "Honor of Honour," and he appeared at Her Majesty's Theatre, as Carlo, in "Linda di Chamouni," in 1848, and was engaged at the Royal Italian Opera, at Covent Garden, in 1849. Since that time Mr. Sims Reeves has appeared at all the great musical performances of oratorios, at Exeter Hall, and at the Crystal Palace.

One of his best original parts was in Macfarren's opera of "Robin Hood," produced at the performances of the opera at Her Majesty's Theatre.

Mr. Sims Reeves has made great efforts to reduce the present style to that of the Normal Diapason. He completed his Jubilee in 1889, and published a book setting forth some of the events in his long and successful career. He took his farewell of the stage at the Albert Hall on May 11, 1891, when Madame Christine Nilsson came over to assist on this memorable night, but he did not finally cease appearing in public for some years. Mr. Sims Reeves married Miss Emma Lushington, a soprano singer, who died June 1891. His son Herbert is a tenor, who has been well taught by his father.

Address: 56 Ridgmount Gardens, W. C.

REAVELT, Jeanne Julia. See REAVELT, MADAME.

REAVELT, Ada, American actress, was born at Limerick, Ireland, April 22, 1859. At an early age she went to America and was educated in Brooklyn, N.Y. She first appeared upon the stage when but fifteen years of age, but did not adopt acting as her profession till a year or two later. For some years she was in Mrs. Drew's company at Philadelphia, shortly after which she joined Mr. Augustin Daly's company, with which she has been since connected, both in London and New York. Her special rôle is light comedy, and perhaps her most successful impersonation has been Lady Teazle in "The School for Scandal," though her Katherine in "Taming of the Shrew" met with nearly equal favour. Among the other parts in which she has appeared are Valentine Osprey, in "The Railroad of Love"; Jo, in "The Lottery of Love"; Xantippe, in "The Wife of Socrates"; Tilburnia, in "Rehearsing a Tragedy"; Phronie, in "Dollars and Sense"; Oriana, in "The Inconstant"; Kate Verity, in "The Squire"; Doris, in "An International Match"; Audrey Ollyphant, in "Samson and Delilah"; Niobe, in "A Night Off"; Flos, in "Seven-Twenty-Eight"; Tryphena Magillicuddy, in "The Golden Widow"; Etna, in "The Great Unknown"; Rosalind, in "As You Like it"; Donna Hypolita, in "She Would and She Wouldn't"; Peggy, in "The Country Girl"; Dina Faudelle, in "A Priceless Paragon"; Mlle. Rose, in "The Prayer"; Helena, in "A Midsummer-Night's Dream"; Miss Hoyden, in "Miss Hoyden's Husband"; Nancy Brasher, in "Nancy & Co."; Elvira Honiton, in "New Lamps for Old"; Baroness Vera von Bouranoff, in "The Last Word"; Pierrot, in "The Prodigal Son"; the Princess of France, in "Love's Labour's Lost"; Aprilla Dymond, in "Love in Tandem"; Maid Marian, in "The Foresters"; Rena Primrose, in "Little Miss Million"; Juno Jessamine, in "A Test Case"; Julia, in "The Hunchback"; Mockwood, in "The Knave"; Letitia Hardy, in "The Belle's Stratagem," and Viola, in "Twelfth Night." As a recognition of her services to the dramatic art, and especially to the Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, she was, in April 1898, elected a permanent governor of that institution. Address: 93rd Street West, New York.

REICHEL, Henry Rudolph, M.A., born October 11, 1856, in Belfast, son of the Rev. Charles Parsons Reichel, D.D., Professor of Latin in Queen's College, Belfast, and subsequently Bishop of Meath (died 1894), and of Mary Brown M'Cracken (died 1885), was educated at Christ's Hospital (1865-75), where he was Head Grecian, and at Balliol College, Oxford (1875-80), of which college he was a Scholar. He gained first-class Honours in Classical Moderations, 1876; Mathematical Moderations, 1877; Lit. Hum., 1879; Modern History, 1880; and was elected Fellow of All Souls' College, November 1880, and re-elected for a second term of seven years in 1889. From 1881 to 1884

he acted as History Tutor for University College and New College. In 1884 he was appointed first Principal and Professor of English Literature and History in the University College of North Wales, Bangor, then incorporated under Royal Charter, and since federated with the sister Colleges at Aberystwyth and Cardiff into the University of Wales. During the session 1896-7 he officiated as Vice-Chancellor of this University. He took an active part in the establishment of the Welsh intermediate school system, the most perfectly organised system of the kind in the United Kingdom, and also in the establishment of the University, and is a member of the Executive Committee of the University and of the Executive Committee of the Central Welsh Board, the body which controls the inspection and examination of the intermediate schools. He has published several short papers on educational subjects and has devoted special attention to the position of manual training in the ordinary school curriculum. He married, February 1, 1894, Charity Mary, eldest daughter of Henry M. Pilkington, Q.C., of Tore, Tyrrell's Pass, in the county of Westmeath. Address: University College of North Wales, Bangor.

REID, Sir George, President of the Royal Scottish Academy, LL.D., D.L., was born in Aberdeen on Oct. 31, 1841, and is the third son of the late George Reid and Esther Tait. He was educated at the Grammar School, Aberdeen, and early evinced a taste for art, working at lithography before becoming a painter. His earliest contribution to the Royal Scottish Academy was a small landscape, after which time he painted only landscape for some years. In 1867 began his career as a portrait-painter, his likeness of George Macdonald winning him fame in 1868. His success was now assured, and he exhibited from time to time his well-known portraits of Sir John Millais, the Marchioness of Huntly, Mr. James Anthony Froude, and others. In the R.S.A. Exhibition of February 1899 he exhibited a masterly portrait of the Marquis of Tweeddale, in the green and gold uniform of the Royal Archers, painted for Yester House as a pendant to the portrait of Lady Tweeddale by the late Sir John Millais. Other portraits from his brush in this exhibition were a full-length of Sir William Henderson, ex-Lord Provost of Aberdeen, in robes of office, and a greatly admired "Kit-kat" of Mr. W. W. Robertson, ex-Master of the Merchant Company of Edinburgh. Sir George studied the modern movement in Dutch art under Mollinger, but he is opposed to Impressionism, espe-

Sir (Thomas) Wemyss, was wcastle-on-Tyne in 1842, being the Rev. Alexander Reid. He d by Dr. Collingwood Bruce at became a journalist in 1861;

in 1864 was appointed editor of the Preston Guardian, and in 1870 to 1887 editor of the Leeds Mercury. Sir Wemyss Reid has contributed largely to the leading reviews and magazines. He is the author of "Charlotte Brontë: a Monograph," a biographical work intended to supplement Mrs. Gaskell's well-known Life of the author of "Jane Eyre." This work, which was published in 1877, has gone through several editions both in England and in the United States. In 1883 Sir Wemyss Reid published "Gladys Fane, a Story of Two Lives." It passed through four editions within a few months of its publication. Two years later, at Christmas, 1885, appeared "Mauleverer's Millions," a sensational story, the scene of which was laid in Yorkshire; it has had a large sale. In 1888 Sir Wemyss Reid published the "Life of the Right Hon. W. E. Forster," a work tracing the personal history of the author of the Education Act, and throw-ing considerable light on recent political events. Six editions of the Life appeared within twelve months from its publication. The other works written by Sir Wemyss Reid are "Cabinet Portraits," sketches of leading statesmen of both parties, 1872; "Politicians of To-Day," 1879; "The Land of the Bey," 1882, a narrative of a visit to Tunis during the military opera-tions of France; and the "Life of Lord Houghton," 1890. Sir Wemyss Reid has also contributed to the Leeds Mercury an extensive series of literary and social essays, under the title of "The Rambling Philosopher," as well as letters descriptive of travel in various parts of the world. In 1887 Sir Wemyss Reid resigned the editor-ship of the Leeds Mercury, and accepted the post of manager to Messrs. Cassell and Company. Since the beginning of 1890 he has been editor of the Speaker, a weekly political and literary review, his resigna-tion from which was announced in 1899. In 1893 he received the hon. degree of LL.D. from the University of St. Andrews, and in 1894 he was knighted "in consideration of his services to letters and to politics." He married (2) Louisa, daughter of Ben-jamin Berry. Address: 26 Bramham Gardens, S. Kensington, S.W.

REID, The Hon. Whitelaw, was born near Xenia, Ohio, Oct. 27, 1837. He graduated from Miami University, Ox-ford, Ohio, in 1856, and immediately took up journalism, soon becoming editor of the Xenia News. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was sent into the field as corre-spondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, and served for a while as volunteer aide-de-camp to General Thos. A. Morris, and afterwards to General Rosecrans. From 1863 to 1866 he was librarian of the House of Representatives. He was then engaged for a short time in cotton planting in Louisiana, the result of his observations while there on the condition of the South, "After the War," appearing in 1865. Returning to Ohio he devoted himself for two years to writing a complete history of "Ohio in the War," which was published in two volumes in 1868. In the same year he joined the staff of the New York Tribune, of which, on the death of Mr. Greeley in 1872, he became the editor-in-chief and principal owner. He was chosen a regent (for life) of the University of the State of New York in 1878. On the accession to the Presidency of Mr. Harrison in 1889 he accepted an appointment as American minister to France. He negotiated a new Extradition Treaty with France and a limited treaty of Reciprocity. He also began the negotiations which resulted in the withdrawal by half the nations of Europe of the prohibition, which they had maintained for from eight to twelve years, against the importation of American pork, and conducted these negotiations in France to a successful close. On the conclusion of these different tasks he tendered his resignation (1892). A few weeks later the Republican National Convention, after renominating President Harrison, unanimously nominated Mr. Reid as its candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States. During the canvass he made numerous speeches in Boston, New York, Buffalo, Indianapolis, and elsewhere. After the defeat of his party in November he visited the Pacific coast, and in a few months resumed his editorship of the New York Tribune. He was actively connected with the work of sending poor children from New York to homes in the West, and he originated and long conducted the Tribune Fresh Air Fund, which was the pioneer of a multitude of similar charities now existing in both America and England. In addition to the works already mentioned, he is the author of "Schools of Journalism," 1871; "The Scholar in Politics," 1873; "Some Newspaper Tendencies," 1879; "Town-Hall Suggestions," 1881, and a great number of speeches and addresses on political, literary, and social topics. In 1887 he was appointed specially to represent the United States at the Jubilee of Her Majesty in June of that year, and in 1898 he was one of the Commissioners to arrange terms of peace with Spain.

REINOLD, Arnold William, M. A., F.R.S. Professor of Physics in the Royal Naval College Greenwich, was born in Hull June 19, 1843. His father, a native of Fife, settled in England in 1814 and carried on the business of a shipbroker.

he played in London in 1894. He has only seen the English and has little idea of the devilish recklessness and good nature which Réjane gave to this part. Her chief success has been in "Couloureuse," by Maurice Donnay, which he played at the Lyric in 1897. In 1897 he created the part of "Zaza." Her address is 25 Avenue d'Antin.

RENALS, Sir Joseph, Bart., Lord Mayor of London for 1894-95, was born at Wymondley on Feb. 21, 1843, and is the eldest son of William Renals, the Park, Nottingham. His business career has been chiefly in the City. He became a member of the Corporation in 1885, as the representative of the Aldersgate Ward in the City of London Common Council. He attained the rank of Knight in 1888, and in 1893 was created Senior Sheriff, and received the Order of Knighthood at the same time on the occasion of the Duke of York's marriage. During the autumn of 1894 he was elected by the Livery for the office of Mayor, and was finally chosen in preference to Alderman Faudel Phillips, who was put forward by a determined set of supporters. A poll was demanded, and resulted in a close contest, 1357 votes being given to the successful candidate, and 1360 to Ald. Phillips. Sir Joseph Renals is a member of the Grocers' and Fruiterers' Companies. In politics he is a Liberal, and has often been asked to contest Nottingham in the next election, but preferred to take his seat on the Council of the Mayoralty. He is a partner in the firm of Renals & Co., is Officier of the Légion d'Honneur, Lieutenant for the County of London, and was created a Baronet in 1895. Address: 108-9 Fore Street, E.C.

RENDALL, Gerald Henry, M.A., Head-Master of Charterhouse School, was born in 1851, at Harrow, and is the second son of the Rev. F. Rendall, Rector of Harrow. He was educated at Cheam, Harrow, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he won a University Scholarship in 1872. He held the University Bell Scholarship in 1873, and stood fourth in the Classical Tripos, graduating B.A. in 1874. He became University Lightfoot Scholar in 1875, was Hulsean Prize Essayist in 1876, and became Fellow, Lecturer, and Assistant at Trinity College. He was Vice-Chancellor of Victoria University in 1890-1892-94, was member of the Aberystwyth University Commission in 1893, was first Principal of University College, Liverpool, was Gladstone Professor of Greek from 1880-97, and was elected to his present post in 1897. He has published various works on classical subjects, notably his Hulsean Essay on the Emperor Julian, in 1879, and "The Cradle of the Aryans," 1889, and a translation of Marcus Aurelius in 1897. Addresses: 25 Falkner Square, Liverpool; and Athenæum.

RENDEL, Sir Alexander Meadows, K.C.I.E., civil engineer, born in 1829, is the eldest son of James Meadows Rendel, civil engineer, and was educated at King's School, Canterbury, and Trinity College, Cambridge (Scholar and Wrangler); studied as engineer under his father, on whose death in 1856 he became engineer to the then London Dock Company, the Leith Harbour and Dock Commissioners, the East Indian Railway, and other companies. He visited India in 1857-58, and at various other times; subsequently he built the Shadwell New Basin, the Royal Albert Dock, and other works on the Thames, the Albert and Edinburgh Docks at Leith, the Workington Dock and Harbour, and other kindred work; was a member of the Commission appointed in 1870 by the Secretary of State for India, to determine what should be the narrow gauge for India, and is at present engineer in England (commonly called consulting engineer) to the Secretary of State for India, the East Indian, the Bombay and Baroda, the South Mahratta, the Nizam's, and other Indian Railway Companies engaged in the construction and working of about 9000 miles of railway. He is a member of the Institution of Civil Engineers. He married in 1853 Eliza, eldest daughter of the late Captain Hobson, R.N., late Governor of New Zealand, and was created K.C.I.E. on the formation of the order in 1887. Address: 44 Lancaster Gate, W.

RENDEL, George Whightwick, second surviving son of the late J. M. Rendel, F.R.S., the eminent civil engineer, was educated at Harrow, and as a civil engineer in his father's office, where he subsequently took an important part in reference to some of the later engineering works carried out by Mr. Rendel—notably the superstructures of the great bridges on the East Indian Railway crossing the Ganges and the Jumna at Allahabad. He joined Sir William Armstrong's firm at Elswick in 1858 as managing partner of the new Elswick Ordnance Works, which he continued to direct during twenty-four years (in conjunction with Captain Noble from 1860). During that time he took a large part in the development of guns, ironclads, and ships of war. He devised and carried out the system of hydraulic machinery for mounting and working heavy guns, first tried in H.M.S.

Thunderer, and subsequently adopted in the Dreadnought, Indefatigable, Colossus, and all the later ironclads of the British fleet, as well as in the Duilio, Dandolo, Italia, and Lepanto of the Italian fleet. He designed and directed the building of the Esmeralda for the Chilean Government, the swiftest and most powerful unarmoured cruiser of her time, which has become a type of unarmoured cruisers, as also the gunboat Staunch for the British Government, and the numerous gunboats, developments of the Staunch, known as the "alphabetical gunboats," and built on the Tyne for the Chinese Government. Mr. George Rendel was a member of the Committee on Designs of Ships of War, appointed by the English Government in 1871, to settle the types of English ironclads to be built; also of the Committee appointed by the Government in 1877 to decide upon the questions raised by Sir E. J. Reed in reference to the design of the Indefatigable. In March 1882 he accepted the nomination previously made to him by Mr. Smith under the Conservative Administration, and repeated by Lord Northbrook, First Lord of the Admiralty in Mr. Gladstone's Administration, and became professional Civil Lord of the Admiralty, abandoning for the purpose all connection with the Elswick firm. In June 1885, on the fall of Mr. Gladstone's Government, he, for family reasons, resigned his position at the Admiralty and retired to Italy. Address: Posillipo, near Naples.

RENDEL. Lord Stuart Rendel, J.P., third surviving son of James Meadows Rendel, F.R.S., the engineer of the Harbours of Refuge of Holyhead and Portland, and of many docks and railways in Great Britain and abroad, and brother of the two preceding, was born July 2, 1844; educated at Eton and at Oriel College, Oxford, where he graduated an Honorary Fourth in 1867. He was called to the Bar in 1861, but has never practised; was appointed in behalf of Sir William Armstrong, member of the Armstrong and Whitworth Committee, which sat from 1861 to 1864, and carried out the most extensive known series of artillery experiments; became a member of Sir Wm. Armstrong's firm in February 1870, and its managing partner in London; has been closely associated with the growth of the great works at Elswick, Newcastle-on-Tyne, which now employ 24,000 men, and form a second arsenal for the empire. He is an Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, and a Knight of the Order of Charles XII. of Spain. In 1888 Mr. Stuart Rendel retired from the Armstrong firm, and contested and won the representation,

His nce in England was at Covent 880, when as Judra, in Massenet's "Roi de Lahore," he created a very favourable impression. In 1887 Sir A. Harris engaged him at Drury Lane, and in subsequent years he has appeared at Covent Garden. His best known rôles are Hans Sachs, Ruy Gomez, Don Basilio, Leporello, Mephistopheles, Friar Lawrence, Marcely, Wotan, and Merke. Address in the season: Royal Palace Hotel, Westminster.

RESZKE, Jean de, M.V.O., operatic singer, brother of the preceding, was born at Warsaw in 1850. He completed his studies in law at the University of his native city, but being drawn by an irresistible vocation, he entered upon a theatrical career. After studying with the celebrated teachers Ciaffei and Cotogni, in Italy, who persisted in making him sing baritone rôles, although he had by nature a tenor voice, he made his début in 1874 in Venice as Alfonso in "La Favorita." He was at once engaged in London at Drury Lane, where he sang during two seasons with Titjens, Nilsson, &c., the parts of Don Juan, Figaro, Valentia, Richard I. in Balfe's "Talismano," Nevers and Count Almaviva in the "Nozze." In 1876 he sang for the last time baritone rôles at the Opéra Italien in Paris. Feeling that it would be pernicious to his voice to continue singing parts which were too low for him, with the help of Maestro Striglio he effected the transformation of his voice from baritone to tenor, but it was not until 1880 that he was prevailed upon to appear as Robert le Diable at Madrid. After this promising début he was chosen by Massenet to create the part of Jean in "Hérodiade," at the Théâtre Italien, under the management of Maurel. The great success he obtained resulted in his being engaged at the Grand Opera, where he sang from 1885 until 1890. During these five years he interpreted "Le Cid," especially composed for him by Massenet, "Le Prophète," "L'Africaine," "Aïda," "Faust," "Roméo," "La Dame de Montsaurau," "Don Juan," &c. His Romeo, when Patti sang Juliet, was not eclipsed by the great cantatrice, and he became the greatest favourite of the Parisian public. In 1887 Sir Augustus Harris engaged him for Drury Lane, and he immediately scored a success as Radames in "Aïda." Since that time he has appeared in most of the popular operas in London, always insisting that each work should be sung in the original language in which it was composed. From 1891 till 1897 he took part every winter in a long American tour, singing all Wagner's works in German, and thereby gaining his greatest triumphs in both continents. Josephine de Reszke, sister of the foregoing brothers, was also a well-known singer. She died in 1891 as Baroness de Kronenberg. M.

Jean de Reszke was created M.V.O. in June 1899. Address in the season: Kensington Royal Palace Hotel, W.

RÉVILLE, Albert, pastor and French Protestant writer, was born at Dieppe, Nov. 4, 1826. He contributed to the most important French Protestant organs, and by his writings took a prominent position among his co-religionists. For some months he was suffragan at Nîmes, then pastor at Luneray, near Dieppe, and in 1851 he was called to Rotterdam as pastor of the Walloon Church. In 1862 the University of Leyden conferred upon him the degree of Doctor; in 1880 he was appointed Titular Professor of Religious History in the College of France, and in 1886 he accepted the Presidency of the Section des Sciences Religieuses at the Sorbonne. Among his works are: "Authenticité du Nouveau Testament," 1851; "De la Rédemption," 1859, translated into English in 1864; "Essais de la Critique Religieuse," 1860; "Manuel d'Histoire comparée de la Philosophie et de la Religion," 1861; "Études critiques sur l'Évangile selon St. Matthieu," 1862; "Théodore Parker, sa vie et ses œuvres," 1865; "L'Enseignement de Jésus Christ," 1870; "Histoire du Dogme de la Divinité d'Jesus Christ," 1876; "Prolégomènes de l'Histoire des Religions," 1881, translated in 1885; "Histoire des Religions," tomes i.-iv., 1883-88. M. Réville is one of the chief leaders of the Liberal movement among the French Protestants. In 1884 he delivered the Hibbert lectures on the native religions of Mexico and Peru, and in 1889 published a work on "La Religion Chinoise." His Paris address is 16 Avenue La Bourdonnais.

REYER, Ernest, whose real name is Rey, was born at Marseilles, Dec. 1, 1823. He studied solfeggio at the Free School of Music in his native city, and became a good reader. At the age of sixteen he went to Algiers as a Government official, continuing his pianoforte practice, and began to compose without having properly learned harmony and counterpoint. His compositions became popular, and in 1848, when the Revolution deprived him of his situation, he returned to Paris and completed his musical education under his aunt, Madame Louise Farrene. He composed the music of "Le Salam," an Oriental symphony, which was produced with success, April 5, 1850; and "Maitre Wolfram," a one-act opera, which also was successful at the Théâtre Lyrique, May 20, 1854; "La Statue," produced at the same theatre, April 11, 1861, showed much facility and power. His other works include "Erostate," performed at Baden in is born on July 5, 1853. The state of his health as a boy induced his friends to send him to South Africa for improvement, and in 1871 his elder brother, Herbert, at that time returned to England in the year, and matriculated at Oriel College, Oxford; but his course of study was interrupted by his continual ill health, having become affected as the result of the illness, and he again returned to South Africa, settling with his brother at Kimberley. The diamond mines had been opened there, and they both prospered, and soon amassed a large fortune. Herbert Rhodes, however, left the colony to enjoy travelling and hunting, leaving Cecil in charge of his property. Cecil persevered in his work, and became rich. At Kimberley he met Mr. C. Rudd, and a close friendship was formed between the three. There is very little doubt that while the diamond mines Mr. Rhodes was pursuing his plans for the subjugation of the whole of the continent of South Africa. He had frequently said, pointing to the map of Africa, "I am sweeping my hand from the Cape to the Zambesi—"That's my dream." He did not neglect his education, and during 1876 he was at the Inner Temple, for a short time being a law student; he also spent some time between his journeys to Africa on residential terms at Oxford, and obtained the degrees of B.A. and M.A. He did not confine his attention entirely to diamonds, but managed many undertakings for the improvement of the condition of the natives by means of transit in those parts.

He never cared for money, his one dominant idea of all his life being the expansion and development of Great Britain in South Africa. Speaking of himself, he has said, "My expansion was everything, the world's surface being limited, and the lot of present humanity should be much improved by the possession of much of the world as it possesses."

Mr. Rhodes, in the early part of 1880, addressed the Cape Parliament for the first time, and about that time met Mr. C. Rudd. They were thrown much together by many interesting anecdotes and stories of the relations of these two men. Mr. Rhodes had formed a very high opinion of Mr. Rudd, and when he decided to return to the colony he telegraphed to him to join his expedition; but Mr. Rudd decided to remain at the Cape. Mr. Rhodes was appointed Treasurer-General of the Cape Colony in the Scanlan Administration, and in the Assembly he chiefly devoted his attention to schemes of expansion to the north, receiving very little encouragement. During 1883 Mr. Rhodes was sent by the Cape Government to deal with the question of the delimitation of Griqualand West, and at the same time he obtained from Mankoroane, the ruling chief, a cession of a large portion of Bechuanaland, which the Cape Colony refused to take over. He thereupon applied to the Home Government, asking them to administer the country, and in 1884 an Imperial Protectorate was established over the territory in question. About that time the London Convention with Mr. Krüger was drawn up, and the Boer President began a rival competition with Mr. Rhodes for native territories, ultimately securing a large part of Zululand, Stellaland, and Goshen. Mr. Rhodes was then appointed Deputy Commissioner for Bechuanaland, and by a firm policy was enabled to keep the Boers out of, and to checkmate the designs of Mr. Krüger upon that portion of South Africa. The extraordinary fertility of the diamond mines at Kimberley led to a great influx of settlers there, the result being the formation of a large number of small companies. Mr. Rhodes seeing the desirability of limiting the supply of diamonds, set himself the task of banding together a number of the companies into one, and thus the De Beers Consolidated Mines sprang into existence. In that company all the important properties were amalgamated. During 1886 gold mines were discovered in the Transvaal, and, with the aid of Mr. Rudd, he formed the company known as the Gold Fields of South Africa, which has had a most prosperous career. As time went on it became more and more evident to Mr. Rhodes that neither the Home nor the Cape Governments had grasped the situation in South Africa, and to prevent the absorption by the Boer Republic of a vast region, which he hoped to see under British rule, he determined to form a company large enough to be able to administer any amount of territory. Both Mr. Beit and Mr. Rothschild favoured the scheme, and the British South Africa Company was formed. Mr. Krüger now became alarmed, and sent emissaries into Matabeleland. When this was known to Mr. Rhodes, he urged upon Sir Hercules Robinson the necessity of obtaining concessions from Lobengula, to whom a mission was at once despatched, with the result that the Moffat Treaty, which amounted in fact to a right of pre-emption over Matabeleland, was signed in 1888. In that year Mr. Rhodes came to London and secured large interests in the African Lake Company, which enabled him to obtain a free hand in the matter of expansion north of the Zambesi River. He also brought the De Beers Company into the British South Africa Company, and secured a Royal Charter. This charter conferred large administrative powers upon the company, and authorised it to promote trade and commerce, and to work mineral and other concessions in the region north of Cape Colony. The total area administered by the company embraces nearly a million square miles, and includes Rhodesia (Mashonaland and Matabeleland), Bechuanaland, and British Central Africa. Effective occupation was first begun in Mashonaland after a good deal of trouble, as Lobengula at first strongly objected to the pioneer force passing through his country. However, Dr. Jameson undertook a mission to the Matabele king, and stayed three months in his kraal at Bulawayo. All difficulties having been removed, Mr. Selous was directed to make a road into Mashonaland in advance of the expedition. Dr. Jameson now gave up his medical practice at Kimberley, and settled at Fort Salisbury, as the representative of Mr. Rhodes, at whose instance, in 1891, he was appointed administrator of the company. Upon the defeat of the Sprigg Ministry in 1890 Mr. Rhodes became Premier of the Cape, and formed an alliance with Mr. Hofmeyr and the Afrikaner Bond, thus securing a solid Dutch vote. During 1891 he gave £10,000 in support of the cause of Home Rule for Ireland. For two or three years the development of the Chartered Company's territories proceeded very satisfactorily, but during 1893 the Matabele became troublesome, and constantly raided and massacred the Mashonas, a more peaceable tribe. Mr. Rhodes, though directed to avoid aggression, prepared for war, and when, in September, Lobengula placed himself at the head of his army, Mr. Rhodes went to Fort Salisbury to direct operations against him. After considerable fighting, in which the Matabele suffered severely, peace was restored, and, upon the death by fever of Lobengula in January 1894, a general submission by the natives was made. Upon his return to Cape Town Mr. Rhodes was entertained at a public banquet, and great satisfaction was expressed with his conduct. In a speech at the time he outlined his policy with regard to the natives, and also his plans for railway communication, tariffs, law, and coinage. About this time he sent three of Lobengula's sons to Cape Town to be educated at his own expense. In company with Dr. Jameson he came to England in November 1894, and made several speeches dealing with Cape politics and a "United South Africa" on federal principles. He was sworn a Member of the Privy Council in February 1895. Early in the following year Mr. Rhodes resigned the Premiership of the Cape, and also his

The only obstacle ning in the way of a trans- lway is the permission to take either through German East Africa or the Congo Free State. But as Mr. Rhodes has been honoured by two interviews with the German Emperor, who has a great admiration for Cecil Rhodes and his projects, it is almost certain that the line will go through German territory. The German Government has also decided to guarantee the interest on the capital invested in it. Mr. Rhodes firmly believes there are gold-fields in Rhodesia, and hopes soon to erect batteries for the crush- ing of ore. His chief delight is in farming, which he greatly encourages among the settlers; he also keeps a large menagerie at Table Mountain, and he allows the zebras, ostriches, and buck of all kinds to run wild in huge enclosed tracts on the mountain side. He is famous as a col- lector of books, curios, &c., and has caused many of the Greek and Roman classics to be specially translated for his perusal. He received the D.C.L. degree at the Encœnia at Oxford in June 1899, and was most en- thusiastically welcomed on that occasion.

RHYS, Ernest, was born in London in 1859, and carried the same year to Car- marthen, his father's native place. He was educated there, and at Newcastle-on- Tyne, and Durham; studied mining en- gineering at Langley Park, co. Durham, and then threw up, in 1885, his post, after passing the usual Government examina- tions, in favour of literature. He edited the Camelot Series, leading off, in 1886, characteristically, with Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," which won an extraordinary suc- cess. The series ran to some eighty volumes. Mr. Rhys has also written on Lord Leighton, and edited, in other series, the plays of Thomas Dekker, and the poems of Herrick, Geo. Herbert, Clough, and Walt Whitman. More recently he has added to this list yet another series, "The Lyric Poets," whose twelve volumes include Campion and Sidney. Marrying in 1891 (vide the succeeding notice), he retreated to a mountain cottage at Geinen Hir, in the Vale of Llangollen, and took up more deliberately the study of Welsh poetry. The result may be seen in his book, "A London Rose, and other Rhymes," whose poems, devoted to Welsh subjects, won the praise of Robert Louis Stevenson; and in his more recent volume of "Welsh Ballads," published in 1897. Mr. Rhys has interested himself, as this book shows, in the revival of Welsh print- ing; and in a recent lecture on "Welsh Heroes," he is said to have predicted more than a merely fanciful resurrection of the sword of Owain Glyndwr. Mr. Rhys has been duly initiated in the sacred ci- the Welsh bards as "Rhys Goch o" and is a well-known contributor subjects to our contempor owing to the Panama scandals, M. Ribot became President of the Cabinet in January 1893, and exchanged the portfolio of Foreign Affairs for that of the Interior.

He still pursued the policy of Republican concentration, but on February 8 his government was violently attacked by M.
Cavaignac, who declared that like its predecessors it was the slave of the Radicals.
On February 16, the Chamber passed a vote of confidence in the Government, which was thus able to last a few weeks longer, and to pass a law making the correctional tribunals cognisant of libels in the press against foreign governments or their representatives. On March 30 the Ribot government fell, owing to a disagreement about the budget between the Chamber and the Senate. In January 1895, on the election of M. Faure to the Presidency of the Republic, several attempts were made to form ministries, but without success, until M. Ribot was appealed to and at once chose a Cabinet.
On March 17, 1895, the Chamber decided unanimously that M. Ribot's speech on the watchmakers' strike, which was then causing serious trouble, should be placarded all over France. This unusual honour was certainly deserved, for the speech in question brought about the termination of the strike. M. Ribot's statement was referred to by M. Rivet, who made the proposal as to publication, as the speech not merely of an honest man, but of a statesman, and as a model for the whole country in the pacification of social conflicts. The accuracy of this estimate may be gauged by the following extract from M. Ribot's speech: "The State ought to respect the dignity of workmen just as it requires them to respect the principles of authority. . . . In view of the dispute as to whether wages had decreased or not, there is but one course to take—namely, a joint verification of the facts. The dictates of authority must now be superseded by the idea of contract and the fulfilment of engagements, and when we have implanted this idea in the heart of all, we shall have done much to dispel misunderstandings. We are about to verify the disputed point with the workmen. Hear them patiently, and see whether they are in the right. Both sides have appointed delegates, and if they cannot agree I shall decide the question im-partially. If the workmen are in the right, wages will be increased. This is the way in which I understand the relations between the State and its workmen, and we shall thus set a grand example of social pacification." This eloquent appeal was naturally interpreted by the Socialists as a capitulation to their own theories, but the claim passed unnoticed.

However, Mr. Ribot's administration met with much adverse criticism. In the following month, Madame Lambert, sister of M. Ribot, met with a fatal accident at Calais, being run over in the street by a train. In October 1895 M. Ribot resigned on the question of the participation of members of his Cabinet in the Financial Syndicate connected with the Southern Railways, and he was succeeded by the Cabinet of M. Bourgeois (q.v.). Since this time M. Ribot has held no office, although he has been often approached when Cabinets have been in the making. His Paris address is 6 Rue de Tournon.

RICHARDS, Sir Frederick William, Admiral of the Fleet, G.C.B., F.R.G.S., First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, was born in November 1833, and entered the navy in January 1848. He was promoted Lieutenant in 1855, Commander in 1860, and Captain in 1866. During the Zulu and Boer Wars, he was Commodore of the British fleet on the West Coast of Africa. He accompanied the Ekowe Relief Column, and was present at the battle of Ginghilo in April 1879, and was awarded the Zulu medal with clasp. He received the C.B. in November of the same year. He took part in the action of Laing's Nek in January 1881, and was shortly afterwards created a K.C.B. Sir Frederick was an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen from June 1879 until he was promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral in June 1882; the following month he became a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty. He hoisted his flag as Commander-in-Chief on the East Indian Station in May 1885, and also commanded the naval forces which were landed during the Burma Annexation war of 1885-86. He rendered valuable service throughout that campaign, and received the thanks of the Indian Government "for the very complete and prompt manner in which his Excellency placed the whole force under his command at the disposal of the Government of India, and for the admirable manner in which the Naval Brigade was organised and equipped." In 1889 he was appointed a member of a Royal Commission under the chairmanship of the present Duke of Devonshire, upon Army and Navy Administration. In the following year he went to China as Commander-in-Chief on that station. In 1892 Sir Frederick was selected as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, which position he now holds, and by virtue of this appointment he is practically Commander-in-Chief of the Navy. He was created a G.C.B. in June 1895. In November 1898 he was promoted to the rank of Admiral of the Fleet, in recognition of his distinguished services, the promotion to be made to the existing numbers. He was at the request of the First Lord to continue at the Admiralty until the middle of 1901. He was then transferred to 121 Victoria Street, S.W.

LEINE, THE RIGHT REV. JOSEPH

RICHMOND, Sir William K.C.B., R.A., son of General A.R.A., D.C.L., was born in 1829, 1843. As a student at the Academy he obtained two medals in 1857; in 1860 he exhibited his two brothers. In 1854 he travelled in Italy, working pictures that were not exhibited. In 1865 he went again to Italy, in Rome, working at sculpture, tapestry, fresco, and tempera. Between 1865 and 1868 he painted "Procession of Bacchus." He settled in England, and painted portraits and other pictures. In 1868 he executed for J. S. Hodgson, Esq., Lythe Hill, Haslemere, a series of illustrations "The Life of William the Conqueror." At the same time he painted a colossal "The Conqueror Bound," exhibited at the following spring, with several others. Since that time Mr. Richmond has been at the Grosvenor and the Academy, and has abandoned by Thackeray, "The Conqueror carried by Night and Death," "The Tomb of Agamemnon," "Hercules releasing Prometheus," "The Ten Virgins," "An Audience at Athens," and "The Conqueror," besides portraits of Holman Hunt, the Bishop of Salisbury, Lord Cecil, Princess Louise, and in 1890 Miss Wilson and the Dean of St. Paul's. Richmond was elected Slade Professor of Oxford, in the place of Mr. Ruskin, in 1878, but resigned the post in 1881. Mr. Ruskin again filled it. He received an honorary M.A. degree, and was elected Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. He has made many studies all over Greece, and Egypt during several successive autumns. He has developed an interest in local affairs, from a desire to combat the fog and smoke nuisance which makes London so hard a place to live in. In 1891, being consulted on the subject of the decoration of St. Paul's Cathedral, he submitted designs for some of the choir, which were accepted. Mr. Richmond here saw his opportunity, and determined to employ mosaic made in England and applied by English workmen. Messrs. Powell, an old and respected firm, answered his expectations, and supplied him with the mosaic, and with one or two men who

Mr. Richmond trained artists under his own personal supervision. The great work has grown more and more purely; the choir is finished, the domes, and quarter galleries completed, and it is hoped to be forthcoming to finish the construction of the Cathedral. Upon the occasion of Her Majesty's Jubilee he received the honour of K.C.B.; the year 1852, the University of Oxford honoured him with a degree of D.C.L. Sir William Richmond is an Academician, and Associate of the Society of Architects, and of the Royal Academy, from which he lectured on Michael Angelo, the Evolution of Sculpture, the Influence of Greek Art, and the influence of Greek Architecture. Sir William Richmond has executed several mural works at Cheltenham, and has recently been employed on the restoration of the minaret of the mosques in conjunction with the highly accomplished architect, Herz Bey, and Mr. Richmond. Addresses: Beavor Street, Birmingham, W.; Royal Athenæum.

RICHMOND AND GORDON, Duke of Richmond and Gordon, Duke of Devonshire, Earl of Devonshire, Viscountess of Devonshire, Baroness of Devonshire, K.G., P.C., D.L., J.P., &c. (Hon. Camb.), eldest son of the Duke of Richmond, was born at Leinster House, Whitehall, Feb. 27, 1818, and educated at Westminster School and Balliol College, Oxford; became a captain in the 1st Life Guards in 1844; was aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington from 1842 till 1852, and to the Duke of Devonshire from 1852 till 1860; he succeeded his father as Duke of Richmond, to which dukedom was added that of Gordon. His Grace was created President of the Poor-Law Commission in 1852, sworn a Privy Councillor in 1853, and resigned in June, on the death of Lord Derby and his party; was created Knight of the Garter, Feb. 6, 1854, President of the Board of Trade in 1858, 1867, till December 1868. He was created Viscount West Sussex in the Conservative interest from July 1841 till he succeeded his father as 6th Duke of Richmond, 21, 1860. His Grace was the able leader of the Conservative House of Peers from Feb. 26, 1851, to Disraeli's elevation to the peerage as Viscount Beaconsfield. When he returned to office in February 1858 he made Lord President of the Council, and he retained that office until the death of the Conservatives in April 1868, when he introduced the Bill by which the death penalty was abolished in Scotland, and also the Agricultural Holdings Bill of 1875. In Lord Salisbury's first Ministry the Duke of Richmond held the post of President of the Board of Trade from January to August 1885, and was then appointed to fill the new post of Secretary for Scotland; but he held no office in Lord Salisbury's second Ministry. He is Hereditary Constable of Inverness Castle, Lord Lieutenant of Banffshire, Elder Brother of the Trinity House, and, since 1885, has been an Ecclesiastical Commissioner. He married, in 1843, Frances, daughter of Algernon Frederick Greville. This lady died in 1887. Addresses: 40 Belgrave Square, S.W.; Gordon Castle, Banffshire, &c.

RICHTER, Hans, Mus. Doc. Oxon., a celebrated conductor of orchestral concerts, was born April 4, 1843, at Raab, in Hungary, where his father was Capellmeister of the Cathedral. In 1853 he entered the Löwenburg School in Vienna. For three or four years he was a member of the Court Chapel Choir, and in 1859 entered the Conservatorium, studied the horn under Kleinecke, and theory under Sechter. For some time he was horn-player in the orchestra of the Kärnthnerthor Opera. Esser brought him under the notice of Wagner, who took him to Lucerne, and there he made the first fair copy of the score of the "Meistersinger." In 1868 he became conductor at the Hof and National Theatre, Munich. Early in 1871 he went to Pesth as chief conductor of the National Theatre. He first attracted general attention in January 1875, when he conducted a grand orchestral concert in Vienna, and was invited to assume the direction of the Court Opera Theatre on the retirement of Herbeck in April of the same year. Previous to this he had been conducting the rehearsal of the "Nibelungen Ring" at Bayreuth, and in 1876 he directed the whole of the rehearsals and performances of the Festival there, and received, at the close of the third set of performances, the Order of Maximilian from the King of Bavaria, and that of the Falcon from the Grand-Duke of Weimar. In 1877 he produced the "Walkyrie" in Vienna, and followed it in 1878 by other portions of the tetralogy. The same year he was made Capellmeister, and received the Order of Franz Joseph. In 1879 he began the series of Orchestral Concerts in London, which, under his direction, have been annually continued, and have excited much attention. He has also conducted many performances of German operas in London, notably those of Wagner. Dr. Richter has a perfect knowledge of the scores of Beethoven's symphonies and other large works, and conducts them from memory. In 1885 he was chosen

Director of the Birmingham Festival, and in 1893 he received a handsome offer from Chicago, but was prevented from going to the Exposition by the Viennese authorities. In September 1898 he resigned his post as Conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic Society, having suffered from rheumatism in his right arm, and being only able to wield the bâton with his left. His successor is Herr Gustave Mahler, Director of the Opera House.

RIDDELL, The Right Rev. Arthur, Roman Catholic Bishop of Northampton, the third son of the late Edward Riddell, of Bootham House, York, by his wife, the Hon. Catharine, sister of the 8th Baron Beaumont, was born in Paris on Sept. 15, 1836, and was educated at St. Gregory's College, Downside, near Bath, and at St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, near Durham. He was ordained priest in 1859, and his first mission was that of St. Charles's, Hull, where he worked for fourteen years. Upon the death of Canon Walker of Scarborough, in 1873, he was appointed to that mission, where he remained until his elevation to episcopal dignity. In June 1880 he was consecrated Bishop of Northampton, and has laboured so assiduously in his diocese, that the number of his clergy has increased from 34 to 71, and that of the laity from 6000 to about 10,000. Address: Bishop's House, Marriott Street, Northampton.

RIDDELL, Mrs. Charlotte Eliza Lawson, is the youngest child of James Cowan, of Carrickfergus, formerly High Sheriff for the county of that town. She married J. H. Riddell, Esq., a civil engineer, by whose initials she is generally known. Mrs. Riddell is the author of many popular novels, including: "Too Much Alone," "City and Suburb," "World in the Church," "George Geith," "Maxwell Drewitt," "Phemie Keller," "Race for Wealth," "Far above Rubies," "First and Last Love," "Life Assize," "Austin Friars," "Home, Sweet Home," "The Earl's Promise," "Mortomley's Estate," "Above Suspicion," "Her Mother's Darling," "The Mystery in Palace Gardens," "The Senior Partner," "Daisies and Buttercups," "A Struggle for Fame," "Alaric Spenceley," "Susan Drummond," "Bernie Boyle," "Mitre Court," "Miss Gascoigne," "The Nun's Curse," "Princess Sunshine," "A Mad Tour," "A Silent Tragedy," "The Head of the Firm," "The Rusty Sword," "Did He Deserve It?" "A Rich Man's Daughter." The last two appeared in 1897. Address: 3 Bulstrode Road, Hounslow, W.

RIDGEWAY, The Right Hon. Joseph West, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., Governor of Ceylon, was born in 1841, son of the late Rev. Joseph Ridgeway, Tunbridge Wells. He entered the army as ensign in 1861, attained rank of Colonel in 1885. He served in the Afghan War in 1879, his services several times acknowledged in despatches. He was Under Secretary to the Government of India, 1880-84, in which latter year he was appointed Assistant-Commissioner of the Demarcation of the NW. Border of Afghanistan, for which he received thanks of her Majesty's Government. In 1885 he was appointed Commissioner of the Delimitation of the Afghan frontier between the Heri Rud and the Oxus. In 1887 Sir West Ridgeway filled the post of Under Secretary at Dublin Castle. In 1892 was sent as Envoy-Extraordinary on a special mission to the Sultan of Morocco. From 1893 to 1895 he was Governor of the Isle of Man, and in 1896 was appointed to his present post. He married Lina, daughter of Sir John Bewick, in 1881. Address: Colombo, Ceylon.

He was educated at Balliol College, Oxford, of which he was a scholar. He graduated in 1865, and was a Fellow of Balliol from 1865 to 1873 (M.A. 1867). His parliamentary career began in 1868, when he was elected Conservative member for Northumberland (North). He represented the constituency until 1885. In 1885 he returned for the Blackpool constituency, Lancashire, which he now represents. He was Under-Secretary for the Admiralty from 1878 to 1880, and Secretary to the Treasury in 1880. He was appointed Secretary for the Admiralty in 1895. In the same year he was appointed an Ecclesiastical Commissioner. He was mentioned as the successor to Speaker Peel. In 1873-95 he was Chairman of the Sessions in Northumberland, and was at one time Hon. Member of the County Council for Northumberland Yeomanry. He was a member of the Privy Council in 1873, and a Governor of Harrow. He married, in 1873, Mary, daughter of the late Sir Edmund. She died on March 1895. The Right Hon. Sir John, of Appeal, is the son of the late Sir John Rigby, Esq., of Halton, and his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John, Esq., and was born in 1834. He received his education at Liverpool College, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he was the second Wrangler, and Smith's Prizeman of his year; M.A., 1859. He was a Fellow of Trinity from 1856 to 1866, and in 1860 was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn. In 1881 he became a Q.C., and a Bencher in 1884. He was Junior Counsel to the Treasury from 1875 to 1881, and in December 1885 entered Parliament as Liberal Member for the North, or Wisbeach Division of Cambridgeshire. He sat for this constituency till June 1886. On July 11, 1892, he re-entered Parliament as Gladstonian Liberal member for Forfarshire, and was appointed Solicitor-General in August, at the same time receiving the honour of knighthood. In 1894 he was appointed Attorney-General, and in 1894 was raised to the Bench as Lord Justice of Appeal. Addresses: 11 New Square, Lincoln's Inn; and Athenæum, &c.

RIGG, The Rev. James Harrison, D.D., was born on Jan. 16, 1821, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, being the second son of the Rev. John Rigg, a Wesleyan minister who was eminent in his day. He received his education at Old Kingswood School, where he was afterwards a teacher, and in 1845 he entered the Wesleyan ministry. He was one of the leading writers for the Biblical Review (1846-49). For many years the Wesleyan Conference was more indebted for the defence and exposition of its proceedings and principles to this young minister than to any other person. In 1865 he was elected by the Conference to be Chairman of the Kent District, and in 1866 a member of the "Hundred," or the "Legal Conference." In 1868 he was elected Principal of the Wesleyan Training College, a position which he still holds. In 1878 Dr. Rigg was chosen President of the Wesleyan Conference. His name is associated with the admission of laymen in the Conference that year, and with the Thanksgiving Fund, which has realised over £300,000 for Methodist work. In 1892 he received the rare honour of a second election to the Presidency of the Conference. For many years (till 1896) Dr. Rigg was Chairman of the "Second London District Synod" of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. He was one of the original members of the London School Board, on which he represented Westminster for six years. In 1886, 1887, and 1888, he was a member of the Royal Commission on Elementary Education. He has written "The Principles of Wesleyan Methodism," 1850; "Connexionalism and Congregational Independency," 1851; and "The Connexional Economy of Wesleyan Methodism," 1879; "Modern Anglican Theology," 1857 (3rd edit., enlarged 1879); "Essays for the Times on Ecclesiastical and Social Subjects," 1866; "The Churchmanship of John Wesley," now in its 3rd edit.: "The Living Wesley as he was in his Youth and in his Prime," now published in an enlarged form as "The Centenary Life of Wesley," 1891; "National Education in its Social Conditions and Aspects, and Public Elementary Schools, British and Foreign," 1873; "Discourses and Addresses on Leading Truths of Religion and Philosophy," 1880; "The Sabbath and the Sabbath Law before and after Christ," 1881; "Was Wesley a High Churchman?" and "Is Modern Methodism Wesleyan Methodism? or Wesleyan Methodism and the Church of England," and "Church Organisation: Primitive and Protestant," 1887 (2nd edit., much enlarged, 1891; 3rd edit., revised and again greatly enlarged, 1897); "Oxford High Anglicanism and its Chief Leaders," 1895. Dr. Rigg was formerly English correspondent of the New Orleans Christian Advocate (1851), and of the New York Christian Advocate (1858-76). He has written for the Wesleyan Magazine, the Quarterly, Contemporary, and International Reviews, and has contributed articles on Methodism to the new edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." He has for many years been the editor of the London Quarterly Review, which is the quarterly literary organ of the Wesleyan Methodists. Throughout his whole course he has held, as an educationist, a position opposed to secularism and equally opposed to sectarian exclusiveness. Addresses: Westminster College, 139 Horseferry Road, S.; and 79 Brixton Hill, S.W.

RILEY, John Athelstan Lawrie, is the only son of John Riley, barrister, of an ancient Yorkshire stock, the De Ryleys, and was born in London on Aug. 10, 1858. He was educated at Eton and at Pembroke College, Oxford, where he took his M.A. in 1884. Not being called upon to put his hand to the plough, on leaving the University he travelled extensively in the East, visiting Turkey and Persia, and especially familiarising himself with the wild and little-known district called Kurdistan. Having been an eye-witness of the sufferings of the Christians of Eastern Turkey at the hands of the Kurds, he has more than once assisted in exposing the horrors of Turkish misrule. One result of his travels has been the introduction amongst the Christian population of North-Western Persia of a system of education which has been very successful, whilst he practically laid the foundation of what is now known as the Archbishop of Canterbury's Mission to the Assyrian Christians. He is a Fellow of the Geographical Society; a member of the London Diocesan Conference; a member of the House of Laymen of the Diocese of Canterbury; and Honorary Secretary of the Church Education and Visitation Defence Union for the Metropolitan Diocese, the founding of which he took a leading part. He was a member of the London Board from 1891 to 1897, when he resigned. As member of the Board he was a prominent champion of Anglicanism, and published in 1897 "Atheism and the Reign of the Monks," and has written many pamphlets and many articles on theological subjects and on the East, Christians and travel. Some of these have appeared in the Nineteenth Century. In 1887 he married the eldest daughter of the Right Hon. and Rev. Viscount Ribblesworth. Address: 2 Kensington Square.

RINGER, Sidney, M.D., F.R.S., was born in 1836, his father being in business in Norwich. He was educated at Dr. Brewer's School, and at University College, London, where he became Professor of Materia Medica and Botany, and Professor of Medicine, and now holds the Chair of Clinical Medicine. He has been Assistant-Physician to University College Hospital, and is Lecturer there and at the Children's Hospital, Ormond Street. He has been Examiner of the University of London and of the College of Physicians of London. Hon. Member of the Pharmacological Society and New York Medical Society, and Corresponding Member of the Academy of Medicine, Paris. He has published "Handbook of Therapeutics," 2nd edit.; "Temperature in Phthisis," and besides contributing numerous papers to the Physiological Journal and medical journals. Addresses: 15 Cavendish Square, and Leestingham, Sinnington, York.

RIPON, Marquis of, The Hon. George Frederick Samuel Robinson, P.C., K.G., G.C.S.I., C.I.E., D.C.L. (Hon. Oxford), Litt.D. (Hon. Victoria), F.R.S., Bart., long known as Lord de Grey and Ripon, is the only son of Frederick John, 1st Earl of Ripon, known by his original title of Viscount Goderich, which he bore when he held the post of Premier for a few months in 1828, by Lady Sarah Albina Louisa Hobart, child of Robert, 4th Earl of Bucklebury. He was born in London, on Jan. 28, 1859, and succeeded to his father's title as 3rd Earl de Grey, November 14, of the same year. He began his political career as attaché to a special mission to Brazil in 1849. At the General Election in to the House of Commons by the Duke of Viscount Goderich as a Member for Huddersfield, where he was elected by a majority of eighty. At the general election in 1857 he was returned for Yorkshire without opposition. In June 1859, the year in which he succeeded to the Upper House, he was elected him for the post of Secretary for War, and in February 1860, on the accession of Sir George C. Lewis, he was made Under-Secretary for War. On the death of Sir G. C. Lewis in 1863, his lordship, who was noted for his great efficiency in his subordinate position, took the place of his chief, and continued in office until 1866. He remained at the War Office for nearly three years, and in 1866, when Sir Charles Wood, then Secretary of State, withdrew from office, he was appointed Secretary for India. On Mr. Gladstone's resignation in December 1868, he resigned that office in January 1869. He was created a Knight of the Bath in 1869. In 1871 he acted as High Commissioner for the High Joint Commission to negotiate the Treaty of Washington in recognition of the services he had rendered in that capacity he was, soon after, elected a Member from the United States, and was elected a Member of the House of Commons for North and West Ridings of Yorkshire in 1874. He was created an honorary D.C.L. in 1870, and on April 23 in that year he was elected as Grand-Master of the Grand Lodge of England, in succession to the Duke of Devon. In the autumn of 1874 he received a communication from the Marquis of Ripon, informing him that the Marquis of Ripon had resigned the post of Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, and his surprise was heightened by the circumstance that he had not assigned any reason for his resignation. A few days afterwards, however, he learned that his lordship had been elected a Member of the Roman Catholic Church, which, it was known, has condemned Free-Masonry and other oath-bound societies. The resignation of the Marquis into the Roman Catholic Church took place at the Marquis's residence, Sept. 7, 1874, and his resignation gave rise to much comment in the Press, both here and on the Continent. On the return of Mr. Gladstone to office, the Marquis of Ripon was appointed Secretary of India. He arrived at the office on June 9, 1880, and was installed in his office. On June 18 a large meeting was held in Exeter Hall to protest against the appointment of a Roman Catholic to the Viceroyalty of India. As Viceroy Lord Ripon excited much diversity of opinion by his policy, which was directed towards extending the rights of natives of India, and, in certain directions, towards limiting the privileges of Europeans. The excitement caused by the famous "Ilbert Bill" was the chief instance of this; and in a word it may be said that there never was a Viceroy so unpopular among Anglo-Indians, or so popular among natives. Lord Ripon's departure was the occasion of the most extraordinary manifestations in his favour on the part of the Hindoo population of Bengal and Bombay. In Mr. Gladstone's short "Home Rule" administration Lord Ripon was First Lord of the Admiralty. On the return of his party to power in 1892 he was appointed Colonial Secretary. In 1895 he was Mayor of Ripon. The Marquis was elected in 1882 President of the Yorkshire College, Leeds. He married, in April 1851, Henrietta Anne Theodosia, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Henry Vyner; she has been a Lady of the Bedchamber to the Princess of Wales. He has surviving issue, Frederick Oliver, born Jan. 29, 1852, now Earl de Grey, heir to the marquise. Addresses: 9 Chelsea Embankment, S.W.; Studley Royal, Ripon; and Athenæum.

RISTICH, John, a Servian statesman. Born at Apatz in 1821. began his studies in Germany and continued them in Paris. After the government of Prince Michael, 1860, he was appointed Secretary for Foreign Affairs and a department in the Ministry of the Interior. Michael's death in 1868 on his return in 1870 he was appointed Secretary to a legation in Vienna. He went to Constantinople in 1871 and for a short period the same year he was appointed as the representative of Servia at the Sultan's Porte. Shortly after he been installed in his post. However, when the crisis commenced which culminated in the bombardment of Belgrade, 1872, M. Ristich extricated himself with much ability from the difficulties he encountered, that five years later (1877) he succeeded in obtaining the evacuation of all the Servian fortresses occupied at that time by the Turkish troops. This service gained for him the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, but he soon resigned it in consequence of his inability to agree with Prince Michael on certain questions of detail. He was present as the representative of Prince Michael at the capture of Prince Nicholas of Montenegro. While on his way back from Cetinje he learned the news that Prince Michael had been assassinated (July 10, 1868), and had been succeeded by his grand-nephew, Prince Milan. The young Prince was then pursuing his studies in Paris, and the provisional government which had been established sent M. Ristich to that capital to escort him to Servia. On the Prince's arrival at Belgrade the Grand National Skupschina was convoked, and nominated a Council of Regency, composed of three members, to govern the country during the Prince's minority. M. Blasnavatz, M. Ristich, and M. Gavrilovitch formed this Council, which discharged its functions till 1872, when the Prince attained his majority. This Council then became a Ministry, in which M. Ristich held the portfolio for Foreign Affairs, and on the decease of his colleague Col. Blasnavatz, he became President of the Council. He afterwards withdrew from public life for two years, until the insurrection occurred in Herzegovina, when he became Minister for Foreign Affairs. In May 1876 he and his friends returned to office, which they had been obliged to resign eight months previously, in consequence of the diplomatic pressure of the Cabinets of Vienna, Berlin, and St. Petersburg. He held the office of Foreign Minister during the Eastern war with Turkey, 1877, in which the Servians were thoroughly defeated. In 1878 he was sent to the Congress of Berlin, where he successfully defended the

RIVETT-CARNAC, Colonel John Henry, C.I.E., V.D., F.S.A., A.D.C. to the Queen, was born in London in 1839, and is the second son of the late Admiral Rivett-Carnac, and Maria, daughter of J. S. Davis, R.E., F.R.S. He was educated abroad, and at the East India College, Haileybury. His career in the Bengal Civil Service was long and distinguished, and extended from 1859 to 1894. During this period he was Advising Secretary to Sir Richard Temple in the Central Provinces, Commissioner of Cotton and Commerce with the Government of India, Special Commissioner in the Bengal Famine of 1874, Opium Agent, and raised and commanded the Ghazipur Light Horse and Volunteer Rifles. He was made C.I.E. in 1878. He has written various important reports on the Indian Cotton Trade, Indian Railways, Antiquities, &c., especially on archaic rock-markings. He is a Fellow of the University of Bombay, F.S.A., and Fellow or Hon. Fellow of various antiquarian societies, and is a Knight Grand Commander of the Austrian Order of Francis Joseph, and North Star of Sweden. He married a daughter of General Sir H. M. Durand, R.E. Address: 40 Green Street, Park Lane, W., &c.

RIVIÈRE, Briton, R.A., D.C.L., animal painter, was born in London, Aug. 14, 1840, being the youngest son of Mr. W. Rivière, who was head of the drawing-school at Cheltenham College, and afterwards a teacher of drawing at Oxford, and Ann, daughter of Joseph Jarvis, Warwickshire. He found in his father an experienced and able master, under whom he studied during the nine years he was at Cheltenham, and subsequently at Oxford. While studying art at the latter place, the influences, other than artistic, by which he was always surrounded, prevailed to turn his attention to classical and other scholarly matters; he entered the University, took his B.A. degree in 1867, and that of M.A. in 1873. The first pictures he exhibited were home rural scenes, as "Rest from Labour," and "Sheep on the Cotswold," in the Academy Gallery in 1858; and, in the next year, "On the Road to Gloucester Fair." From that date till 1864 he was absent from the Academy as an exhibitor, but in the last-mentioned year he sent "Iron Bars" and "Romeo and Juliet." Among his subsequent works are: "The Poacher's Nurse," "Strayed from the Flock," a dead lamb lying in the snow, and "The Long Sleep," 1866; "Fox and Geese" (exhibited in the Exhibition of Water-colour Painters at the

He was ointed a member of the lras, and commanded the Presidency from 1881 to hen has been Commander-lia, in succession to Sir

Donald Stewart. On the death of Sir H. Macpherson (October 1886), Sir F. Roberts assumed the command of the Burmese expedition. He had been twenty-three times mentioned in despatches before the Afghan war, during which campaign he was eight times thanked by the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief in India. To the Nineteenth Century for November 1882 he contributed an article on the "Present State of the Army," thus supplying the sequel to an interesting speech which he had delivered at the Mansion House about two years before. He was created a peer in January 1892, under the title of Lord Roberts of Kandahar and Waterford. In April 1893, on resigning his command, he left India for England, and was given a brilliant farewell, and received an equally brilliant reception at home. Upon his arrival, a G.C.S.I. was conferred upon him. During 1895 his Lordship was promoted to the rank of Field-Marshal, and succeeded Viscount Wolseley as Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in Ireland. He was shortly afterwards admitted to the Privy Council in Ireland, and also received the Order of St. Patrick. Lord Roberts is an ardent advocate of what is known as the "Forward Policy" in Indian affairs, and in March of 1898 he delivered before the House of Lords a very able speech in support of his views with regard to the pacification of the various frontier tribes, and also the prevention of encroachments by Russia in Afghanistan and adjacent territories. His lordship pointed out that the "Forward Policy" was an endeavour to extend British influence over, and establish law and order on, that part of the Indian border where anarchy, murder, and robbery reigned supreme. Moreover, it was necessary to secure the allegiance of the turbulent tribes, owing to the proximity of Russia, who would inevitably invade India, if Afghanistan ever passed into her possession. It was of paramount importance to obtain complete control of the Khyber and other passes, so as to be in a position to check any advance over the great Hindu Kush barrier. "That barrier," said his lordship, "Russia must never be allowed to cross." The speech was greatly appreciated, as it was felt that nobody could speak with higher authority upon the matter than Lord Roberts. He published in 1895 "The Rise of Wellington," which was followed in 1897 by "Forty-one Years in India." The latter work obtained a phenomenal success, and passed through many editions in a few months. He is an honorary D.C.L. of Oxford, and LL.D. of Cambridge and Dublin. Lord Roberts married, in 1859, Nora Henrietta, a daughter of Captain Bews, and his son and next the Hon. Frederick H. S. Roberts, is a Lieutenant of the King's Royal Rifle Corps. Addresses: Royal Hospital, Dublin; and Athenaeum.

ROBERTS, Frederick Thomas, M.D., F.R.C.P., obtained his medical education at University College, London, where he is now Professor of Medicine, as well as being Professor of Clinical Medicine and Physician at University College Hospital. He obtained the Gold Medal for Anatomy and Physiology at the first M.B. Examination, London, in 1890. He was formerly Physician at Liverpool Northern Hospital, and Lecturer at Liverpool School of Medicine, and now, in addition to the posts above mentioned, is Consulting Physician to the Brompton Hospital, &c., Fellow of the Royal Medical-Chirurgical Society and Medical Society of London, and Member of other Medical Societies. He was Assistant-Editor of Quain's "Dictionary of Medicine," and has contributed largely to that work, to Reynolds's "System," and to the medical journals. His best-known work is "A Handbook of the Theory and Practice of Medicine," 9th edit. Address: 102 Harley Street, W.

ROBERTS, Isaac, D.Sc., F.R.S., F.R.A.S., F.G.S., was born in Denbighshire, North Wales, in the year 1829. A large part of his life has been devoted to practical investigations in Geology, Microscopy, Spectrum Analysis, Astronomy, and other kindred branches of science. He is the author of several papers on geological and astronomical subjects, amongst which are investigations of the physical conditions affecting the circulation of the underground water and the filtering and hygroscopic properties of triassic sandstone. He has for several years (by the aid of self-recording mechanical contrivances designed by himself for tracing continuous diagrammatic curves) studied the movements in the underground water which are caused by capillarity, by rainfall, by variations in atmospheric pressure, and by solar and lunar attraction. He has made exhaustive experiments by means of specially designed weighing machines, to determine the vertical and lateral pressures of wheat, barley, oats, Indian corn, linseed, sand, gravel, and gun shot, when stored in cells up to eighty feet in height. Some of the results of these investigations are published in the Proceedings of the Royal Society. For several years he has been pursuing stellar photography with powerful instruments specially constructed for the purpose, and has succeeded in adding considerably to the knowledge of the stars, clusters, and nebulae. In 1885 he commenced to start by photographing in the northern hemisphere where he had been a year or two at work. The French astronomer, that the charting of the sky done internationally by instruments of a similar kind. Mr. Roberts therefore devoted attention to special researches in the and nebulae, with long-exposed photographic plates. These have been regarded with interest and admiration, and have been exhibited. He has also and a machine by which the have been photographed, and be engraved directly with on copper plates for the purpose; the machine is also measuring the positions of the stars. In 1871 he was Fellow of the Geological Society, the Royal Astronomical Society. In 1890 he was elected a member of the Royal Society, and in 1891 Doctor of Sciences was conferred on him by the University of London. He published a volume of "Photographs of Stars, Star Clusters, and Nebulae," which is a reliable time of the objects as they appeared in the sky on the day when the respective photographs were taken. In 1895 he was awarded the Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society, and has served on the Council of the Society for several years. A field, Crowborough, Sussex.

ROBERTS, Morley, born in London on Dec. 20, 1850, the son of W. H. Roberts, a tending inspector of incomes, educated at Bedford Grammar School and Owens College, Manchester. Much of the savage side of existence before the mast in the merchant ships, in the Australasian Islands, &c. The results of his experiences, which always involved more or less manual labour and hardship, he has embodied in a series of and virile novels, which include the known "Western Avernus," "Low Relief," 1890; "Last Sea-faring," 1891; "King Bill," 1891; "The Mate of the 'Cerberus,'" 1892; "The Reputation of Captain," 1892; "The Purification of the 'Cerberus,'" 1894; "Red Earth," 1894; "The Book of Instinct," and "The Ad Ship's Doctor," 1895; that volume on Eastern life, "The C," in collaboration with Max Muir, "Maurice Quain," 1897; "The

ROBERTS, Samuel, F.R.S., mathe-matician, the son of the Rev. Griffith Roberts, many years minister of the Presbyterian Chapel at Kirkstead, Lincolnshire, was born in 1827. He received his education at Queen Elizabeth's School, Horncastle, and subsequently to Manchester New College, London. In 1849 he obtained a first class degree of London in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy and received the Gold Medal.
He entered the legal profession, and was a Solicitor in 1853. After an interval of some years, Mr. Roberts resumed mathematical studies; and, having returned to London, became in 1865 a Fellow of the London Mathematical Society, published in the same year. He was several years Treasurer, and has held the offices of Vice-President and President, 1880-82, of that Society. In 1883 he was elected Fellow of the Royal Society, except a few early articles of an historical kind, his writings have related to mathematical subjects. They are contained in the Proceedings of the London Mathematical Society, the Quarterly Journal of Mathematics, and various other English mathematical journals. In recognition of services to mathematical science, he was elected a Member of the Council of the London Mathematical Society awarded to Mr. Roberts a Gold Medal in 1896. Address:

ROBERTS-AUSTEN, Professor Sir
Samuel, K.C.B., D.C.L., F.R.S., Assay-Master, was born in 1827, the son of George and Maria Roberts. His father's ancestry were the Huls and Austens, which family with the Huls and Austens, among their more distinguished members the learned scholar, John Huls, Canon of Canterbury. In 1882, at the request of his uncle, the late Sir John Huls, J.P., of Haffenden and Kent, Mr. Roberts obtained permission to take the name of Austen.
He was appointed Assayer to the Royal School of Mines in 1861, and subsequently to becoming a Mining Engineer, on obtaining the Associate-ship of the Institution, the late Prof. Graham, of the Mint, secured his service, and he conducted a remarkable series of researches, and on Prof.
Graham's death in 1869, he succeeded to one of the appointments which Prof.

Graham had held—that of Assayer to the Mint—being subsequently, in 1882, entrusted with all the duties of the Queen's Assay-Master. In 1880, on the retirement of the late Dr. Percy, F.R.S., at the request of the then Lord President of the Council, Mr. Roberts-Austen was appointed to the Chair of Metallurgy at the Royal School of Mines, a post which he still holds in addition to his office at the Mint. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1875, and is the author of several papers, mostly relating to metals, published in the Philosophical Transactions and elsewhere. He was one of the founders of the Physical Society of London, of which he was for some time Secretary, and afterwards a Vice-President.
He is one of the two Honorary General Secretaries of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and a Vice-President of the Iron and Steel Institute.
His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales appointed him a Member of the Executive Council of the Inventions Exhibition, 1885; and he served on the British Executive Council of the 1889 Paris Exhibition.
He was chosen Vice-President of the International Mining and Metallurgical Congress in Paris; and received from the President of the French Republic the Cross of Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. He was made a C.B. in 1888, and the University of Durham conferred upon him its honorary degree of D.C.L. in 1897. He received from her Majesty the Queen, in the same year, the Jubilee medal. He was created K.C.B. at the New Year, 1899. Addresses: Royal Mint, Tower Hill, E.; Blatchfeld, Chilworth, Guildford; and Athenæum.

ROBERTSON, Rev. Archibald, D.D., Principal of King's College, London, was born at Sywell Rectory, Northampton, on June 29, 1853, and is the eldest son of the late George S. Robertson, M.A., grandson of Dr. Archibald Robertson, F.R.S., of Northampton. He was educated at Bradfield College, Berks, and Trinity College, Oxford (first class Lit. Hum. and B.A.
1876; M.A. 1879; D.D. 1898); Fellow of Trinity College, 1876-86 (Dean, 1879-83);
Principal of Bishop Hatfield's Hall, Durham, 1883-97; Hon. D.D., Durham, 1893.
In 1897, on the retirement of Dr. Wace, he was appointed Principal of King's College, London. He has published an edition of Athanasius's "De Incarnatione" (2nd edit., 1893); a translation of the same (2nd edit., 1891); "Prolegomena," &c., to Athanasius with revised translation of principal works, 1892; and is a contributor to the Classical Review, &c., to Smith's "Dictionary of the Bible," 2nd edit., 1893;

Clark's "Dictionary of the Bible," 1898; and editor of Methuen's series of Handbooks of Theology. He is Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Bristol, and Vice-Chairman of King's College Hospital. In 1885 he married Eleanor, daughter of the Rev. Charles Noel Mann, late Rector of Mawgan-in-Meneage, &c., Cornwall.

ROBERTSON, Lieutenant-Colonel Donald, C.S.I., President of Mysore and Chief Commissioner of Coorg, was born in Ireland on June 24, 1847, and arrived in India as Ensign in the Scots Fusiliers in 1865. In 1869 he was appointed an Assistant-Commissioner in the Central Provinces, being transferred to Rajputana in 1872. He was Cantonment Magistrate at Nasirabad in May 1877, and after holding similar appointments at Ajmir, Jhalawar, and Indore, he became Political Agent at Bhopawar in 1885, and later in the same year he was transferred to Bundelkhand. In the following year he was Secretary to the Commissioner of Coorg, and Political Agent in Baghelkhand in 1888. He was appointed Resident in Gwalior in 1894, and transferred to his present post in 1896. He was created C.S.I. at the New Year, 1899.

ROBERTSON, Edmund, M.P., LL.D., Q.C., D.L., was born on Oct. 28, 1845, and is the eldest son of Edmund Robertson, of Kinnaird, Perthshire. He was educated at St. Andrews, and at Lincoln College, Oxford, where he graduated with a first class in Classical Moderations (1868), and a first class in Lit. Hum. (1870). He was elected a Fellow of Corpus after becoming in 1871 Vinerian Scholar. He was Examiner in Jurisprudence in 1877, 1878, and 1879. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1871, and went the Northern Circuit. Since 1885 he has represented Dundee as a Liberal, in the House of Commons. From August 1892 to 1895 he was a Civil Lord of the Admiralty. He was at one time Professor of Roman Law at University College, London, and is LL.D. of St. Andrews. He has contributed many articles on legal and constitutional subjects to the "Encyclopædia Britannica," 9th edit., and has published a work on "American Home Rule." Address: 4 Essex Court, Temple, E.C.

ROBERTSON, Sir George Scott, K.C.S.I., M.R.C.S.E., British Agent at Gilgit, Kashmir, was born in London on Oct. 22, 1852, and is the second son of T. J. Robertson, and comes of an Orkney family. He was educated at the Westminster Hospital Medical School, and has the Edinburgh qualification. He entered the Indian Medical Service in 1878, and served through the Afghan campaign of 1879-80. He was promoted Major in 1890. His connection with the Gilgit frontier of Kashmir began in June 1880. He has been continuously employed there, and is now at Gilgit. He has been engaged in various important political missions among the barbarous tribesmen of the North-West Frontier, was Chief Political Agent of the later part of the Hunza-Nagar expedition; was at the head of a mission to Chitral in 1893, and was in Chitral, and seriously wounded in the spring of 1895. In the September of that year he installed Shuja-ul-Mulk as ruler of Chitral. His work, "The Hindu-Kush," published in 1897, is the result of his visit to Kafiristan in 1894. The Hindu-Kush is a little known and difficult hill-country between Afghanistan and Chitral. Previous to Scott Robertson's visit in 1894, no European had ever to his knowledge been in the country. He made the acquaintance of the Kam and various other tribes, and converted to Mohammedanism. Before "Kafirs," and he traveled with a small escort. His guide was a young Kafir, whom he had adopted as his son. He had several hair-breadth escapes at one time in danger of being held for ransom for three years by his captors, and intended to force the Government to pay for his release. During part of his journey he was accompanied by Mr. E. F. Knight, author of "Three Empires Meet." In 1898 Scott Robertson published "The Story of a Minor Siege." He has been granted three war medals for his services, and rose to be K.C.S.I. He married (2) Mary, daughter of Lawrence, the painter. Address: Gilgit Agency, Gilgit; and Athens.

ROBERTSON, Lord, Hon. James Patrick Robertson, M.A., ex-M.P., D.L., late Lord Advocate and Lord Justice-General of Scotland, was born at Forteviot, Perthshire, and is the son of the late James Robertson, of Forteviot, by the daughter of the Rev. J. Banner, of Perthshire. He was educated at the Royal High School, Edinburgh, where he was Dux, and at the University of Edinburgh. He took his M.A. in 1864; and had his degree of LL.D. Edin. conferred on him April 10, 1890. He was called to the Scottish Bar in 1867; made a Queen's Counsel in 1871, and Solicitor-General for Scotland in 1873.

Edward Cookworthy, born in London in September 1798, was educated at Esher, Derby, schools. He early applied geometrical drawing, to which he devoted himself, and was eventually introduced to the late Émile de Buck, a French engineer, who was also an architect. In 1853 he was elected an Associate of the Institution; in 1860 a Fellow, of the Royal Institute of British Architects. He now sits on the Council of that body. In 1878 Mr. Robins was elected a member of the Society of Antiquaries. He has been elected on the Council of the Essex and Middlesex Archæological Society, one of the original members of the Institution of Surveyors, and introduced to the Council of the Architectural Institute, whose transactions he has edited for several years past. He has been chosen on the Council of the Royal Academy of Arts. Mr. Robins has been consulted by many churches, as St. Andrew's, Brixton ; St. Jude's, Brixton ; Emmanuel Church, Battersea Park ; St. Saviour's, Battersea Park ; St. John's, Essex ; besides many Conventual Churches, as at Wandsworth, Putney Heath, Clapham Hill, Holloway, East Ham &c. He gained the first premium for his design of a Jeweller's tabernacle in 1859, and took part in the competition for the building of an Asylum, at Watford, by the vote of the chairman. He acted as an architect to the London Architectural Society, and enlarged their premises in Bloomfield Street. He designed our memorial churches for the Theological College at the eminent historical painter, Drilling. On his return he received an appointment to the Government School of Design as Master of the School of Art at Hanley, Staffordshire Potteries 1847. In 1852 he was called to London to assist in the development of the newly-created Science and Art Department, founded under the auspices of the Prince Consort, and in 1853 the organisation of the Art Museum at Marlborough House, afterwards transferred to South Kensington, was entrusted to him. In this post he remained till 1869, and the country owes to him the acquisition of an immense mass of varied art treasures gleaned from every part of Europe, where, especially in Italy and in the Spanish peninsula, a great portion of every successive year was spent in long expeditions, during which the remotest corners of these countries were minutely explored. The system of circulating objects of art from the central museum to provincial institutions was, moreover, first suggested and carried into effect by Mr. Robinson in the early years of his tenure of office. In 1862 he suggested and carried out the special loan exhibition of art treasures in connection with the General Industrial Exhibition of that year: an example which has since been repeatedly followed, but perhaps never surpassed in interest or importance, in France, Germany, and other Continental countries. In association with the Marquis d'Azeglio, Italian Minister in London, and the late Baron Marochetti, he founded, and for many years directed as honorary secretary, the well-known Fine Arts Club, now the Burlington Fine Arts Club. In 1869 he resigned his appointment at South Kensington on a retiring pension, but he has not ceased to render from year to year disinterested services to that institution, in the promotion of notable acquisitions and the formation of special loan collections, &c. In 1881, on the resignation of Mr. Redgrave, R.A., the Queen confided the post of Crown Surveyor of Pictures to Mr. Robinson, the office being that of art adviser in the Lord Chamberlain's Department, and comprising the supervision and control not only of the pictures, but of nearly all the art treasures of the Crown, in the various royal palaces, including the Hampton Court Gallery. Among the great number of his published works in divers branches of art may be specified the catalogue of the Soulages Collection, that of the Art Treasures Exhibition in 1862, and of the Italian Sculpture collections of the South Kensington Museum, all preceded by original introductory essays. In 1870, at the request of the Oxford University authorities, he wrote "A Critical Account of the Drawings of Michel Angelo and Raphael in the Vatican," an elaborate work, which has received general recognition throughout the Continent. An edition of the Portuguese School of Painting taken on the basis of his researches in the Vatican and Majesty the King of Portugal was translated into English and issued by the Libros de Arte, remains one of the most valuable contributions made to the study of Portugal. Very numerous also in the shape of letters and notices on branches of art have appeared in a series of years been published in the Times, the Nineteenth Century, the Society of Arts, and other journals. He was knighted on the occasion of her Majesty's Jubilee. He married, in 1852, Maria, the eldest daughter of Edward M. Norwich. Addresses: 1, Bedford W.; Newton Manor, Stratford-on-Avon.

ROBINSON, Sir John 2nd baronet, manager of the Daily News, born at Witham, Essex, Nov. 2, 1817. Son of the Rev. R. Robinson, a Unitarian minister, connected at an early age with journalism. On coming to London in 1845 he joined the paper then known as Douglas Jerrold's and soon afterwards undertook the management of the Evening Express, the property of the Daily News. Robinson soon took an active part in the conduct of the morning paper, and on change of proprietorship in 1855 the Daily News joined the ranks of the penny papers, he was appointed manager. On the outbreak of the German war in 1870 he introduced an effective system of special correspondence, and in his selection of war news was as in his method of organising the paper very successful. His management of the campaign of Ashanti, the Crimean war, and the Russo-Turkish war, distinguished by equal initiative and fertility of resource. During the German war Mr. Robinson suggested a fund should be raised for the relief of the French peasants in the districts of the north-west, and £20,000 was subscribed under his management, the whole of which was distributed, one shilling being taken out of the fund for expenses. For many years Robinson was a copious contributor to the columns of the American press, the Boston Advertiser and the Tribune. He has also edited shorthand. In June 1887 Mr. Robinson became editor of the Daily News.

he same time the post of the paper. In 1893 Mr. received the honour of knight-Queen. In 1896 he relinquished the part of the duties to be entirely to the management, in 1859, Jane, daughter, of Wickham Bishops. 1876. Address: 4 Addisonington, W.

J. Philip Stewart (known as Robinson), son of Rev. Julian Robinson, born at Chunar in India, educated at Marlborough, was the Pioneer as sub-editor in 1869; contributing to that paper the papers afterwards called "In my Indian Garden." He was appointed (1872) editor of the Benares Province Gazette, and of the N.W.P., which he compiled (1876) in two volumes of the Benares Collector's Gazette while he was gazetted Professor of Logic and Metaphysics (1873), and exchanged for the Chair of Logic and Metaphysics simultaneously the appointment of the Supreme Government of the Vernacular Press. He resigned service, 1877; joined the Army in the same year, and was of the war-correspondents in Afghanistan, 1878-79; in Egypt, 1882; Sudan, 1883; travelled over the United States as a missionary of the New York Tribune, and published his experiences and Saints," 1883. His work, "Under the Punkah," in Ark, or Mornings in the East, in Un-Natural History, "The Poets and Nature," 3 vols.; "Chasing a Fortune," "Large," and "The Poets' Valley of Testation." "Some Country Sights," 1893; and "Birds of the Woodland," 1894. The first edition of his works in English appeared in 1882, as "Under the Sun," a regular contributor to the Review, Gentleman's Magazine, and Monthly.

J. W., landscape-gardener, was of the Garden and of other works on rural life, was by his interest in horticulture at an early age, when in the gardens of the Regent's Park Society in the Regent's Park, on behalf of the Society, he cultivated the gardens in the United Kingdom, commenced as a writer by his description of this tour in the Londoner. He went to Paris at the time of the Exhibition of 1867, and studied the horticulture of the neighbourhood of Paris, in public, private, and commercial gardens, writing in the Times an account of the more important things observed. He travelled in Europe and America, always in the interest of the same subject, and collected plants in California and the Rocky Mountains. He has founded the Garden, vol. lii., 1897; Gardening Illustrated, vol. xix., 1898; Farm and Home, vol. xvi., 1898; Woods and Forests, vol. ii., 1885; Cottage Gardening, vol. xi., 1898. He is author of the "English Flower Garden," 6th edit., 1898; the "Wild Garden," 4th edit., 1894; "Parks and Gardens of Paris," 2nd edit., 1883; "Hardy Flowers," 5th edit., 1892; the "Sub-Tropical Garden," 2nd edit.; "Garden Design and Architects' Gardens," 1892; and "God's Acre Beautiful." In most of the above the aim has been to develop more artistic work, both in the design and planting of gardens, and to advocate the greatly increased culture of many plants from countries like our own in climate. Mr. Robinson is garden and woodland editor of the Field. Address: 63 Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.

ROBINSON, Sir William, G.C.M.G., Governor of Hong-Kong, was born in 1836, and is the son of the late Rev. J. B. Robinson. In 1854 he became a clerk in the Colonial Office, and having been private secretary to Lord Blackford and Mr. Cardwell, he was appointed to represent the Colonial Office on the East African Slave-Trade Commission, 1869, and the Vienna Exhibition, 1873. He was Governor of the Bahama Isles, 1874-80; of the Windward Isles, 1881-84; of Barbados, 1884; of Trinidad, 1885; and of Hong-Kong, 1891-97. In 1887 he received the thanks of the Government for the satisfactory settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty arising out of the Henrietta and Josephina cases.

ROBSON, Professor A. W. Mayo, F.R.C.S., Professor of Surgery at the Yorkshire College, Victoria University, was born at Filey, on April 17, 1853, and is the eldest son of the late T. Binnington Robson of Filey. He was educated at a private school, and at the Wesley College, and Yorkshire College. He studied medicine at Leeds, where he is now Senior Surgeon at the General Infirmary, and Lecturer on Practical Surgery and Pathology at the Leeds School of Medicine. He holds a number of important posts in his own district, and in London is Member of Council, and has been Hunterian Professor of Surgery and Pathology at the Royal Coll. Surgeons, Eng. He is also a Fellow of the Royal Med. Chir. Society, and other leading societies, and is President of the British Gynaecological Society, and of various Yorkshire societies. He has been Hon. President of the International Congress of Gynaecology. His publications include "On Gall-Stones and their Treatment," a subject on which, amongst others, he has written largely in Chloroform, Albion's "System of Medicine," and in the leading reviews and transactions, &c. Address: 7 Park Square, Leeds.

ROBSON, William Snowdon, Q.C., M.P., is the third surviving son of the late Robert Robson, J.P. of Newcastle, and was born in 1852. He was educated at Dr. Bruce's School, Newcastle, and at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge (B.A.), graduating in the Moral Science Tripos, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1880. He joined the North-Eastern Circuit and took silk in 1892. In 1895 he was appointed Recorder of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. From 1885 to 1886 he sat for the Bow and Bromley Division of the Tower Hamlets, and was elected for South Shields in 1895, a constituency which he represents in the Liberal interest. Addresses: 101 Chester Square, S.W.; Newcastle-upon-Tyne, &c.

ROBY, Henry John, M.P., J.P., LL.D. Edin. and Camb., is a native of Tamworth where his father was a solicitor, and where he was born, Aug. 12, 1830. When he was twelve years of age his family removed to Bridgnorth, and for seven years he was a day-scholar at the grammar school there. In 1849 he went up to St. John's College, Cambridge, and was elected scholar and exhibitioner of the College, graduating B.A. in 1853, being first in the first class of the Classical Tripos. As senior classic he was elected the following year to a Fellowship at St. John's, and subsequently was appointed a classical lecturer. He remained at Cambridge until 1861, filling, among other offices, that of Secretary to the Committee of the Cambridge Local University examinations, and that of one of the examiners for the Law Tripos, the Classical Tripos, and the Moral Science Tripos. Mr. Roby took an active part in promoting reform in his college, and in the university, under the Cambridge University Act, and published a pamphlet on the subject, "Remarks on College Reform," 1858. Upon leaving Cambridge, he became an under-master at Dulwich College, and while there (1861-65) he published his Elementary Latin Grammar. From 1864 to 1868, under the appointment of the Crown, he was successively Secretary to the Schools Inquiry Commis-

d life as so many other French littérateurs have done. His office duties light, he employed a good deal of spare time in doing odd jobs for the newspapers. Slowly he crept into notice, with the considerable assistance of an occasional duel, and became somewhat notorious as a bold writer, even daring to attack the Emperor himself. He was afterwards one of the writers of the Revue, and his articles in this journal led to his appointment as sub-inspector of the Arts in Paris, a post he resigned in order to devote himself wholly to journalism.

After contributing to various papers, he joined the staff of the Figaro at an annual salary of 30,000 francs; but in 1865 he retired to save the journal from prosecution and established the Lanterne, whose weekly issues reached a circulation of over 1,150,000. The paper was, however, soon suppressed on account of violent attacks upon the Imperial Government, and its author was condemned to three years' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 10,000 francs. M. Rochefort fled to Brussels and continued to publish the Lanterne till August 1869, when on his application to the Legislative body he was permitted to return to Paris. In the same year he founded the Marseillaise, in which Victor Noir was a collaborator. The attacks in this journal on Prince Louis Bonaparte led to the assassination of Victor Noir by the Prince; the paper was seized, and M. Rochefort committed to the prison of Sainte Pélagie. On the proclamation of the Republic in September 1870 he was released by the mob, and was for a short time connected with the Government of National Defence. He was president of the Commission of Barricades during the siege of Paris, and in Feb. 8, 1871, he was elected one of the representatives of Paris in the National Assembly. During that time he was the editor of the Revue d'Ordre, in the columns of which he justified the Commune, and vehemently assailed the Government of Versailles, and Thiers personally. On May 19, 1871, while endeavouring to escape from Paris, he was taken, tried by court-martial, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. In September 1872 he was temporarily released to enable him to legitimise his children by marrying their mother, who was dying. Subsequently M. Rochefort was transported to New Caledonia, but effected his escape in 1874. He returned to Europe and attempted to revive the Lanterne in London and Geneva, but without success. The general amnesty of July 11, 1880, permitted M. Rochefort to return to Paris, where he at once resumed the direction of a new Radical paper, L'Intransigant, and renewed his attacks upon all the Governments in turn. He has since been elected for Paris, but Parliament was irksome to him, and he resigned. In 1886 he proposed to take part in the workmen's riots in Belgium, but the Belgian authorities would not permit him to cross the frontier. He was a staunch partisan of General Boulanger, and came to England with him in 1889, having escaped through Belgium from France. Until the beginning of 1895 he resided in London, when he returned to Paris under an amnesty. His reception in his native city was one of royal character. He was welcomed by thousands, and received most flattering ovations. During the course of litigation between Rochefort, as editor, and M. Vaughan, manager of the L'Intransigant, in which the latter gained the day, it became known in December 1896 that for the last seven years Rochefort had received no less than 700,000 francs as editor and 1,700,000 francs in dividends on his shares, or altogether 342,000 francs a year. Commenting on this, the Débats observed: "The war against capital is a good business, but it does not enrich all who take part in it. It is not stated that M. Rochefort has ever had the idea of admitting his compositors and messengers to a share in his ample profits." Always eager for notoriety, he violently assailed Dreyfus and those who supported him in his desire for justice; by the praises he lavished on the army, one would never think he had written against it just as heartily. He joined the anti-Jewish party, of which he is a prominent supporter. M. Rochefort is a great connoisseur of all the arts, and was one of the first to appreciate Goya.

ROLLINAT, Maurice, French poet, was born at Châteauroux in 1853, and is the son of François Rollinat, one of the representatives in the National Assembly of 1848. His family were intimate friends of George Sand, and under her auspices he took to a literary career. His first published work was a collection of poems entitled "Dans les Brandes," which aroused but little stir. But his second work, published in 1883, "Les Névroses," was a most realistic collection of luxurious and eccentric poems, and made him one of the chiefs of that school of young poets who unite plain speaking with sonorous words. It was declared to be a work surpassing those of Poe and Baudelaire, and was followed by two other volumes, "L'Abîme," 1886, and "La Nature," 1892, which, owing to their saner thoughts, made less noise. He also published, in 1893, a book of poetry for children, entitled "Le Livre de la Nature."

ROMERO, Matias. Mexican man, was born in Oaxaca, Mex., 1837, and educated at the University of Sciences in his native city. He studied philosophy and then law, and was admitted to the bar in the city in 1857. In the revolution of 1858 he sided with the Government. In September 1859 he was appointed Consul of the Mexican Legation in Washington, and was subsequently Consul-General until April 1863. He returned to Mexico in 1863, and resigning his diplomatic position, was appointed Colonel in the army, and became Chief-of-Staff to his old General Porfirio Diaz. He was on several military missions of a diplomatic nature, and in September 1867 he went to Washington as Minister to the United States, and negotiated several treaties with that country after the fall of the Emperor in Mexico. He accepted the Treasury position in Juarez's Cabinet, and for five years ministered the finances of Mexico with skill. In 1876 he was a member of the Mexican Senate, and on the fall of General Diaz as President he returned to the Treasury, which he held until April 1, 1879. He was appointed master-General in February 1880, and retired. In 1881 the boundaries between Mexico and the United States, and also that between Mexico and Central America, were adjusted by him, and he since retained the post of Minister to the United States. He has published Culture on the Southern Coast of Mexico, 1875; Historical Sketch of the State of Chiapas and Soconusco, 1877; The State of Oaxaca, 1877; besides many other volumes, chiefly reports.

RONNER, Mdme. Henri. Her charming pictures of cats were on view at the Fine Art Gallery in Pall Mall Street, was born in Amsterdam, and was educated with great care for the profession of an artist. Her tutor was her father, Herr Ronner, who kept her at work for many hours, adopting the unusual plan of shutting her up in darkness for two hours every day, in order to rest her eyes, and which is much more likely to be injurious than beneficial. Forty years ago she married Fieco Ronner, since which time she has lived in Brussels, and devoted her attention almost solely to animal painting. On the Continent she is regarded as an animal-painter of the highest order, and receives from the Brussels Natural History Museum, the Luxembourg, and very many other and corporation museums, commissions to paint portraits of favourite dogs.

characteristic of her work is her thoroughness. Brussels address: de Vieurgat.

ROENTGEN, Conrad Wilhelm, Professor of Physics at the University of Bavaria, was born at Lennep, Prussia, in 1844. He was educated at Bonn, where he became a Doctor of Science in 1869. For long he had been a devoted investigator of physical phenomena, and his great discovery of the X-rays was made on Nov. 8, 1895, and communicated to the public in the Annalen der Physik in January 1896. The apparatus of this experiment is a small glass tube into each end of which is fitted a metal plate, some electric generating apparatus, the tube being exhausted by a vacuum pump, the electric circuit is completed by the vacuum space in the tube between the two ends of the wires. If an electric current is made to pass through the tube, a living human hand being placed between the tube and a photographic plate, a photograph can be taken showing all the outlines of the hand. In 1897 a Röntgen Society was founded in England, of which the first president was Professor Sylvanus Thompson.

ROOKWOOD, Lord, The Right Hon. John Selwin-Ibbetson, only son of the late Sir John Selwin-Ibbetson, the 6th Baronet, daughter of the late Lord Leveson-Gower, was born in 1816, and received his academical education at St. John's College, Cambridge. He twice contested Ipswich, in 1846 and 1852, with private interest, before being elected Member of Parliament for South Essex in July 1865; when the county was further divided by the Reform Act, he was elected for the western division of it, and for the new name Epping Division presented in the House of Commons in 1892, when he was made a Peer of the Realm, and the title of Lord Rookwood. In 1869 and 1870. Sir H. Ibbetson was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department. Disraeli taking office in the 1874. He was chairman of the Royal Commission appointed in 1874 to inquire into the detective branch of the Metropolitan Police. In April 1878 he was appointed Secretary to the Treasury, and held that office until the resignation of the Conservative Government in 1885. He was appointed Church Commissioner in 1885. He assumed the name of Ibbetson (which his father had formerly borne) in addition to that of Selwin in 1867. He married (1) Sarah, daughter of the 1st Lord Lyndhurst, and (2) in 1867, the widow of Sir Charles Henry Ibbetson, 5th Baronet. Addresses: 62 Prince's Gate, S.W.; and Down Hall, Essex.

ROOSEVELT, Hon. Theodore, American statesman and writer, was born in New York City, Oct. 27, 1858, and graduated from Harvard University in 1880. He was a Member of the New York State Legislature, 1882-84, and an unsuccessful candidate for Mayor of New York City in 1886. In 1889 he was appointed on the Civil Service Commission by President Harrison. In 1895 he was appointed a Police Commissioner by the Mayor of New York, and in 1897 he became Assistant-Secretary of the United States Navy. He resigned this position soon after the outbreak of the war with Spain in 1898 to become lieutenant-colonel of a regiment of picked men known as the "Rough Riders," recruited largely from the cattlemen of the western plains. With this regiment he distinguished himself greatly by his bravery in the actions preceding the capture of Santiago in Cuba, and was soon made colonel, returning with his men to the United States in August 1898. He has published "The Naval War of 1812," 1882; "Hunting Trips of a Ranchman," 1885; "Life of Thomas H. Benton," 1887; "Life of Gouverneur Morris," 1888; "Essays on Practical Politics," 1888; "Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail," 1888; "The Winning of the West," 1889; "History of New York City," 1891; "The Wilderness Hunter," 1892; "The Winning of the West," vol. iii., 1894; vol. iv., 1896; "American Ideals and other Essays," 1897. On Nov. 8, 1898, he was elected Governor of New York State.

ROPES, Arthur Reed, "Adrian Ross," was born at Lewisham on Dec. 23, 1859, and is the youngest son of the late William Hooper Ropes, a Russia merchant. He was educated at Priory House School, Clapham, at Mill Hill, and City of London Schools, and at King's College, Cambridge, of which he was a scholar. He gained the Chancellor's Medal for English verse, and the Member's Prize for English Essay in 1881, was eleventh Wrangler, Senior in Historical Tripos, Lightfoot and Whewell Scholar, Fellow of King's College, 1884-90, Lecturer in History. Mr. Ropes is an interesting example of an academic poet turning into a successful modern librettist. He was known in his college days as a poet of literary subjects and singular literary charm, since which time he has either written or collaborated in the libretti of which he is a staunch supporter. In 1886 and 1892 he was elected but was defeated in 1895 of Lorne. Since 1896 he has been Chancellor of the University of London. In 1863 he married Lucy, daughter of Edmund Potter, F.R.S. Address: Bramham Gardens, S.W.; West Horsley, Surrey; England.

ward, dramatist, was born in Norfolk, on Aug. 7, 1849, son of Caleb Rose, M.R.C.P., and of a long line of clergymen and was chiefly educated at Marlborough School, where Mr. Rider was his school-fellow. He was called to the law, but, after passing the bar examination, came to devote himself to literature. He has from a very early age been interested in drama, and in 1873 published "The Shipowner," a five-act historical drama, which acted piece of any importance. "Our Farm," produced in 1875, ran for seven nights in London alone. He has had some three dozen plays acted in London or the provinces, ranging from romantic drama to comedy. His most ambitious play has been "Agatha Tylden," which was acted at the Haymarket by Mrs. Siddons in the autumn of 1893, and the success of his plays has won for him the title of Mr. Anstey's "Vice-king." He himself has constantly acted in his delightful Dick Bultitude. His play, "The Marble Arch," has been acted more than a thousand times. He has acted Bultitude that Mr. Rose has acted as a professional actor in London, previously belonged to an amateur company, nearly all the members of which, including Mr. Tree, are now well known on the stage. In 1881 he had a tour with Mr. George Rignold, and played many parts in "Henry V." Since that time he has been on tour the comedy part, played by Gosling, in Herman Meriwell. Since that time he has been in London, except for occasional tours in the country, when he has toured in his own. As a journalist he has done much good work, and has been for nearly twenty years associated with the London News, in which he has been the series of editor, illustrated by M. Montagu. "The Shipowner" is a story in Arrowsmith's series, is from his pen. He was called to the Sunday Times in 1886, elaborating a new system of teaching children to read. His most recent adaptations for the stage are "Under the Red Robe" and "The Prisoner of Zenda"; and "In Days of Old," partially adapted from the French, and played at the St. James's in 1899. Address: 36 Upper Addison Gardens, W.

ROSEBERY, Earl of, The Right Hon. Archibald Philip Primrose, K.G., K.T., LL.D., F.R.S., son of the late Archibald, Lord Dalmeny, by Lady Catherine Lucy Wilhelmina, only daughter of the 4th Earl Stanhope, was born in London in 1847, and received his education at Eton, and at Christ Church, Oxford. He succeeded to the title on the death of his grandfather, the 4th Earl of Rosebery, in 1868. The first time he ever spoke in public was in 1871, when, at the opening of Parliament, he was selected by the Prime Minister, Mr Gladstone, to second the address in reply to the speech from the throne. He soon took a decided position on the question of national education, and when the Government Education Bill for Scotland was before the House of Peers, he moved an amendment to it by which he aimed at the exclusion of catechisms from public schools. He also spoke in the same session on Lord Russell's motion regarding the Alabama Treaty; and he was appointed Commissioner to inquire into Endowments in Scotland. In the session of 1873 Lord Rosebery was much engaged in an endeavour to obtain a Committee of Inquiry on the supply of horses in this country. He moved for, and obtained the Committee, and was made the chairman of the same. It may be said that to the labours of that Committee the remission of the taxes on horses is fairly due. During the session of 1874 Lord Rosebery moved for, and was made the chairman of, a Committee on the Scotch and Irish representative peerages. He was President of the Social Science Congress which met at Glasgow Oct. 1, 1874. On Nov. 16, 1878, he was elected Lord Rector of the University of Aberdeen in succession to Mr. W. E. Forster. In November 1880 he was elected Lord Rector of the University of Edinburgh, but he did not deliver his inaugural address until Nov. 4, 1882. He was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in August 1881, in succession to Mr. Leonard Courtney, who was transferred to the Colonial Office. His lordship resigned the Under-Secretaryship in June 1883, and in November 1884 became First Commissioner of Works in succession to Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, who succeeded Mr. Fawcett as Postmaster-General. In Mr. Gladstone's next Government (1886) Lord Rosebery was appointed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; and won general approval at home and abroad, for the firmness with which he conducted the difficult questions arising out of the Servo-Bulgarian War and the Greek desire for territorial indemnity. When Mr. Gladstone brought forward his first Home Rule for Ireland Bill, he entirely approved of it, and became one of its staunchest supporters in the Upper House. In 1888 Lord Rosebery received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Cambridge. On Jan. 17 he was elected, in company with Sir John Lubbock, member for the City Division of the London County Council; and on Feb. 12 was appointed chairman, but resigned in June 1890, owing to the pressure of his many public duties, and was succeeded by Sir John Lubbock. He married, March 20, 1874, Hannah, only child of Baron Meyer de Rothschild. She died Nov. 19, 1890. Owing to her death, Lord Rosebery abstained from most of his political and social labours during 1891; but in November of that year he published his well-known monograph on William Pitt the younger. In January 1892 he was again elected chairman of the London County Council, and held the position for some months. On Mr. Gladstone's accession to power, Lord Rosebery was appointed Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and in October was made a Knight of the Garter. As a Foreign Minister he has always inclined to maintaining firmly the interests of Great Britain abroad, and as such has carried on Conservative traditions. He is a strong advocate of Imperial Federation, and it is therefore not surprising that when Mr. Gladstone retired in March 1894 and the Premiership was offered to Lord Rosebery by the Queen, a group of "Little-Englanders" and others, headed by Mr. Labouchere, should for a time have violently resented his accession to power, especially whilst such a tried Liberal leader as Sir William Harcourt was apparently passed by. Lord Rosebery, on his acceptance of the Premiership, made some necessary changes in the Cabinet. His Premiership was marked by no startling political events, but he had to carry on the work of Government with a majority too small and heterogeneous to allow of a very dashing policy on the part of those in power. After March 1894 he made several great speeches containing some notable remarks on the relations of the House of Commons and House of Lords, and on the question of Welsh Disestablishment. In the summer of 1894 Lord Rosebery's horse "Ladna" won the Derby, and prolonged attacks on his owner's encouragement of so-called "gambling" were the result. During 1895 Lord Rosebery's Premiership came to an end, mainly owing to the hostility shown to his policy by a section of the Fabian Society. The Government was sent to the Houses of Parliament on the 19th they were defeated on an amendment to the Bill: on the 21st they were defeated on the amendment to the Army Estimates. On the 22nd Lord Rosebery's resignation was accepted. He then wrote supporters that the result should be fought upon the question of the dominance of the House of Lords. On October 1895, in the House of Lords, arising out of the amendment, Lord Rosebery wrote to the Whig resigning his position as the Liberal party as a result of the apparent difference between the mass of the party and his opposition to Mr. Gladstone's Question. Soon after his resignation, Edinburgh, he declared his approval of any policy that involve Great Britain's interest in regard to the Armenian question. He held that this was a European war. Upon the death of Gladstone, in May 1898, he made an eloquent tribute to the services of the illustrious statesman in a speech delivered in the House of Lords. During the Premiership of Lord Salisbury, Lord Rosebery uniformly supported the policy of Lord Salisbury. This was consistent with the attitude of 1896 against the encroachment of French in Siam, when by his efforts he obtained a treaty limiting the boundary to the Mekong River. His ship has the character of being many sympathies. Besides being the first of English Foreign Ministers has for many years taken a deep interest in the welfare of the masses. He presented a fine swimming-bath at the People's Palace, and his chairmanship of the London County Council was remembered for the keen sympathy displayed during his tenure of office. His movements tending to the betterment of the condition of the London classes. His interest in literature was great, and, mutatis mutandis, he endeavoured to carry on the Whig tradition in high places. He is an admirer of Robert Burns, and has frequently given interesting addresses to his own men and to Englishmen on the works of the Scottish national poet. His fame as a speaker stands high, and his public utterances are always awaited by his admirers in all parties. Selections from his

He is the author of various scientific papers in the Philoso- phical Transactions, and in the Proceedings of the Royal Society, London; the Royal Dublin Society, of which he was elected President in March, 1887; the Reports of the British Association (Montreal meet- ing); and in the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society. Since 1896 he has been President of the Royal Irish Academy. Lord Rosse married, in 1870, Frances Cassandra, only daughter of the fourth Baron Hawke, and has two sons and one daughter. Addresses: Birr Castle, Parsonstown, King's County; Womersley Park, Pontefract; and Athenæum.

ROSSETTI, William Michael, brother of the late Dante Gabriel and Christina Rossetti, was born in London, Sept. 25, 1829, and educated at King's College School, London, where his father, Gabriele, was Professor of Italian. He was appointed in February 1845 to an extra Clerkship in the Excise Office, London (now the Inland Revenue Office), and be- came in July 1869 Assistant-Secretary in the same office. Under the rule as to limit of age, he retired in September 1894, but continues to act for the office as expert in Paintings, for the purposes of Estate-duty. Mr. Rossetti has been a critic of fine art and literature since 1850. He has acted in that capacity (principally as regards Fine Art) for the Critic, Spectator, Reader, Saturday Review, London Review, Chronicle (weekly), Fraser's Magazine, Academy,

Edward John, M.A., D.Sc., was born at Quebec, Canada, 1831, being a son of Sir Ranald Keith, K.C.B., Commissary-General. He is also a nephew of the late Cardinal de Broglie. At the age of 11 he was brought to England and subsequently was sent to Eton College School, where he stayed for three years before entering University College, under Professor De Morgan. He made rapid progress in mathematics. He passed through the higher examinations, gaining the mathematical prizes. He matriculated at the University of London in 1850, and passed the B.A. examination in 1851, gaining the Mathematical Tripos. He received also the degree of M.A. at his M.A. examination in October 1851 he entered Peterhouse, Cambridge. He studied for a year under the tutorship of Mr. Clerk Maxwell, of St. John's College, remaining two years and a half. He was then appointed Fellow of Peterhouse, and began the profession of teaching as his duty.

From 1861 to 1885 (with a short exception of 1883), the Senior Wrangler every year been his pupil, and before that date, and once twenty-seven times. He has amongst his pupils forty-one men. This success is without parallel. In 1855 Mr. Routh wrote a book on Mechanics with Lord Brougham. In 1859 he was appointed Examiner in Mathematics in the University of London, and after the necessary interval of a year, he held the office for a second quinquennial period (1865-70). Soon after his graduation he was elected a member of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, of the Geological Society, and of the Royal Geographical Society; subsequently he became a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, and a Fellow of the Royal Society. He is also an original member of the London Mathematical Society, having been one of those who helped to establish it. In 1860 he was a Moderator, and in 1861 Examiner for the Mathematical Tripos at Cambridge. In 1877 he gained the Adams Prize for his essay on the Stability of Motion. The honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him in 1879 by the University of Glasgow. In 1883 he was one of the first to take the degree of Doctor of Science, then established in the University of Cambridge for those who had "given proof of distinction by some original contribution to the advancement of science." He was elected Honorary Fellow of Peterhouse in the same year. In 1884 Dr. Routh was appointed by the Crown a Fellow of the University of London, and is therefore now a member of the governing body of that University. In 1886 Dr. Routh ceased taking any new pupils, and during the next two years he merely conducted through the remainder of their mathematical course those who had already begun to read with him. In the thirty-one years from 1857 to 1888 he thus "coached" nearly seven hundred pupils through the Mathematical Tripos, five hundred of them becoming wranglers. In 1888 his old pupils presented Mrs. Routh with a portrait of her husband painted by Herkomer as a memorial of their attachment to him. The presentation took place in Peterhouse, the ceremony being described at some length in the Times of Monday, Nov. 5, 1888. In this year he was elected a member of the Council of the University of Cambridge, and a member of the Council of the Royal Society. At the celebration of the Tercentenary of Trinity College, Dublin, in June 1892, he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science in that University. In 1888 he was an examiner for the second part of the Cambridge Tripos, and in 1893 he was again Moderator. He is also on the governing bodies of Cavendish College, Dulwich College, and till lately of the schools at Ipswich. Dr. Routh has written a book on "Rigid Dynamics," in two volumes, six editions of which have been published. A translation into German was made under the auspices of Prof. Klein of Göttingen. He has written for the Syn-dics of the University Press a treatise on "Statics," also in two volumes. He has also written for them a treatise on the "Dynamics of a Particle," which appeared in the summer of 1898. Besides these he has contributed numerous papers on mathematical subjects to the Mathematical Messenger, the Quarterly Journal of Mathematics, the Transactions and Proceedings of the Royal Society, and the volumes of the London Mathematical Society. In 1864 he married the eldest daughter of Sir G. B. Airy, K.C.B., the late Astronomer-Royal. Address: Peterhouse, Cambridge.

ROUVIER, Maurice, French politician, was born at Aix, April 17, 1842, and having entered the legal profession, was a well-known opponent of the Empire. He entered Parliament in July 1871 for Marseille, and sat with the Extreme Left. In 1877 he was one of the 363 members who refused a vote of confidence to the Broglie Cabinet, and it was then that he began to come to the front as an authority on financial matters. Especially did he defend the interest of the town of Marseille, and in Gambetta's great ministry of 1881 he received the Portfolio of Commerce. He resigned with his colleagues in January 1882, but received the same Portfolio in the Ferry Cabinet of 1884. In 1886 he was sent to Rome to treat with the Italian Government as to a new Commercial Treaty, and on the 30th of May of the next year he was asked to form a Government in succession to that of M. Goblet. In this he took the Ministry of Finances, a post he held for many years in successive Cabinets. On entering upon power, he had the courage to deprive General Boulanger of his post as Minister for War, by which act he brought much abuse upon his head. Having held power in the Tirard, Freycinet, and Loubet Cabinets, he had to resign in 1892 on account of his connection with the Baron de Reinach and the Panama scandals. He was accused of having received huge bribes from the Panama directors, but he declared that the money had been spent in preserving the country from Boulangism. However this may be, it has been up to now the drawback to M. Rouvier's official career, and although he is always prominent in financial debates, he has not again taken office. His Paris address is: 8 Rue de Windsor.

ROUX, Dr. Pierre Paul Émile, Director of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, was born in 1853 at Confolens, pursued his classical studies at the College of Confolens d'Aurillac, and afterwards at the Lycée of Puy, and from 1872 to 1874 was a student at the Medical School of Cler-mont Ferrand. At Clermont Roux became intimate with the late Professor of Chemistry, Duclaux, and it was doubtless his influence that he wrote his thesis on the variations of "The Quantity of Urine Excreted with a Normal Amount of Drinking Coffee or Tea" (Comptes Rendus Acad. des Sciences, August 1874). Roux subsequently entered the military but found the military life incompatible with his research work. He therefore left the army in 1874 to 1878 was attached to the Hôtel-Dieu as Clinical Assistant in the Faculty of Medicine. M. Roux came to Paris, and brought to the notice of his great master, Pasteur, who at once associated M. Roux with himself and MM. Jouliet and Chancelier in the studies he was about to undertake on the "wool-sorters' disease." M. Roux accordingly became préparateur in Pasteur's laboratory. In 1883 he took his doctor's degree with the thesis, "Nouvelles observations sur la Rage." The thesis dealt with the anti-rabic inoculations performed at the Pasteur laboratory in 1881-82. In 1884 he became head of the famous Pasteur laboratory, and in 1896 succeeded his illustrious master as its sole Director. His memorable researches on the "wool-sorters' disease," attenuation of the virus of rabies, vaccination against hydrophobia, tuberculosis, &c., which have rendered the French Pasteur Institute famous, are largely shared in by Dr. Roux. His colleagues under Pasteur were MM. Berland and Thuillier. He has published many notes on their joint researches. In April 1898, with M. Barree, contributed a paper on cerebral tetanus and its relation to tetanus to the Congress at Paris. M. Roux is a professor of great reputation, his eloquent expositions of Pasteur's work delivered in his courses of lectures to French and foreign men, are well known. His great work in microbiological research has won frequent rewards, such as the Breget Prize (1884), and the Alberto Levi prize of the Institut Pasteur, and the St. Paul prize (1884), and St. Paul prize of the Academy of Medicine. In February 1898 he was elected a member of the Académie des Sciences.

ROWBOTHAM, John Fred, the only son of the late Rev. John Rowbotham, Incumbent of St. Andrew's, Edinburgh. He was born in 1854, educated at the Edinburgh Academy and at Rossall School, of which he was a pupil. From Rossall he proceeded to Balliol College, Oxford, where he gained the Balliol Scholarship at the age of eighteen, and was the favourite pupil of long other distinctions at Oxford, a first class in Lit. Hum. and a University Scholarship for leaving college he travelled for two years on the Continent, in order to collect materials for his "History of Music," which he studied at the libraries of Paris, Rome, Florence, Venice, and even visited monasteries for manuscripts. The "History of Music" was published in 1885, and was acknowledged by the entire press, musicians at large, to be the work on the subject. After completing his "History of Music," Mr. Rowland devoted himself to epic poetry. His epic poem, "The Death of King Arthur," was published in 1886. "The Song of the Sea" appeared in 1890. In 1892 he published "The Private Life of the Great Compositors," and in 1893, a new edition of the "History of Music"; and in 1894, "A History of the Rossall School." Among those who have taken a deep interest in Mr. Rowland's writings is the Queen of

ROWLAND, Rev. Alfred, LL.B., born on Jan. 17, 1840, at the Rectory-on-Thames. His father, James Rowland, was a well-known minister and pastor, exercising his ministry for thirty-seven years in the Rectory. His second son, Alfred, was educated at Cranford College, Maidenhead, four years spent in the business of J. & R. Morley, he entered the law in London, in September 1859. Rowland took his degrees at the University in Arts and in Law, in 1865 he entered on his first pastoral charge at Zion Chapel, Frome, where he was successful. In 1875 he removed to Park Chapel, Crouch End, where the church was at the time the one he was asked to undertake. Under his pastorate it has grown to 262, now numbers 1037. The membership, which was 262, has been enlarged three times, and now accommodates nearly 1500 persons, the seat being occupied at the services. During Mr. Rowland's pastorate the mission premises have been built, and the Carbin Memorial Chapel after the first pastor. Mr. Rowland has published: "Half-Hours with the Bible," "Paul's First Letter to the Romans," "The Burdens of Life," in which are collected sermons issued by Horace Bushnell, besides numerous sermons published in the "Homiletic Collection" and elsewhere. He has held the office of Secretary of the "Antient Merchants' Association" since 1889; was Chairman of the Congregational Union in 1892; is President of the local Free Church Council, Chairman of the New College Council, and for the year 1898 was Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Mr. Rowland married the daughter of the late William Trewent, Esq., J.P., of Pembroke, and has a large family, his second son, Maynard, being well known as the cyclist who carried despatches through the Boer army from Johannesburg to Dr. Jameson. Address: Selwood, Crescent Road, Crouch End, N.

ROWLANDS, William Bowen, Q.C., J.P., D.L., Leader of the South Wales and Chester Circuit, and Recorder of Swansea, was born in South Wales in 1838, and is the eldest son of the late Thomas Rowlands, J.P., of Glenover, Pembrokeshire, and Anne, daughter of John Bowen, of Dygoed, in the same county. He completed his education at Jesus College, Oxford, of which University he is M.A. In 1870 he gained a first-class certificate of honour at the General Examination for the Bar, and was called at Gray's Inn in 1871. In 1882 he was appointed a Queen's Counsel, and became a Bencher of Gray's Inn in the same year. In 1889 he was Treasurer of his Inn. He is a member of the Council of Legal Education and of the Board of Studies, of the Bar Library Committee, of the Committee of the Four Inns of Court on the Discipline of the Bar, leader of the South Wales and Chester Circuits, D.L. for Cardiganshire, and J.P. for Pembrokeshire, Cardiganshire, and Haverfordwest. In 1886, and again in 1892, Mr. Bowen Rowlands was elected Member of Parliament for Cardiganshire. In June 1893 he was appointed Recorder of Swansea, when he vacated his seat, and was re-elected without opposition. He did not seek re-election in his old constituency in 1895. He married, in 1864, Adeline Wogan, only daughter of J. D. Brown, of Kensington House, Haverfordwest. Address: 3 King's Bench Walk, Temple, E.C.

ROWTON, Lord, Montagu William Lowry-Corry, C.B., D.L., J.P., second son of the Right Hon. Henry Corry, son of the 2nd Earl of Belmore, and of Lady Harriet, daughter of the 6th Earl of Shaftesbury, was born in London, Oct. 8, 1838. He was educated at Harrow and at Trinity College, Cambridge, taking his degree in 1860. Called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1863, he practised for three years on the Oxford Circuit, and in 1866 was officially appointed Private Secretary to Mr. Disraeli, then Chancellor of the Exchequer. After Mr. Disraeli's defeat in 1868 he declined offers of public appointments which were made to him, and rendered voluntary service to that statesman till his return to power in 1874, subsequently continuing to act as Lord Beaconsfield's private secretary till his death in 1881. He accompanied Lord Beaconsfield to the Congress of Berlin, being then appointed one of the joint-secretaries to the Special Embassy of Great Britain, and, at its close, received the Companionship of the Bath. At the termination of Lord Beaconsfield's Government in 1880, he was raised to the peerage, taking his title from his estate at Rowton Castle in Shropshire. Lord Beaconsfield bequeathed to Lord Rowton the whole of his letters, papers, documents, and manuscripts, leaving it to his absolute discretion to destroy, preserve, or publish any of them, at such time as, in his uncontrolled judgment, might seem fit. It was at first inferred from the terms of the bequest that Lord Beaconsfield had left behind him some sort of diary or memoirs for publication. This, unfortunately, proved not to be the case, and it became evident that the only manuscript, the publication of which was distinctly contemplated by the testator, was that of "Endymion." This work was almost completed at the date of the signing of the will, and was afterwards published during the lifetime of the writer. Lord Rowton is chairman of the Rowton Houses Company, formed for the purpose of providing large and cheap hotels for poor single men of all classes in London, and he is also chairman of the Guinness Trust. Addresses: 17 Berkeley Square, W.; and Rowton Castle, Shrewsbury.

ROYSTON, The Right Rev. Peter Sorenson, D.D., is the son of John P. Royston, of the Bank of England, was born in London on June 6, 1830, and was educated at St. Paul's School, and Trinity College, Cambridge. Ordained in 1853, he was Resident Tutor at the Church Missionary College, London, for the two following years. From 1855 to 1862, and from 1866 to 1871, he was incumbent of the Church Missionary Society's chapel at Madras, and also acted as Corresponding Secretary of the Society for South India. He was a Fellow of the Madras University from 1858 to 1872, and in the latter year was appointed to the Bishopric of Mauritius, which he was, however, compelled to resign, through ill-health, in 1890. On his return to England, he was, in the following year, appointed Assistant-Bishop to the Bishop of Liverpool, and he has held also the Vicarage of Childwall since 1896. He was editor of the Madras Church Missionary Record from 1856 to 1871. He was married, in 1861, to Mary, daughter of Thomas Clarke, Madras Civil Service.

Addresses: Childwall Vicarage and Athenæum.

ROZE, Madame Marie, soprano, was born in Paris, entered the Conservatoire, and was studying under Auber and others. In 1865 she took a first prize for singing, and the gold medal in the piano. She made her début at the Opéra, where her chief parts were: "La Dame Blanche," "Fra Diavolo," Auber's "L'Ambassadrice." She remained in Paris during the siege of 1870, and was presented with a gold medal for her gallant conduct. Her first appearance in England was in 1872, and she made a great success in "Fra Diavolo." She remained in this country until 1875, when she went to New York, and spent several years in America. Since 1875 she has been a member of the Carl Rosa Company.

RÜCKER, Professor William, M.A. Oxon., F.R.S., M.I.E.E., eldest son of D. H. Rücker, of Errington, Cambs. was born Oct. 23, 1848. He was educated at the Clapham Grammar School, and Brasenose College, Oxford. A distinguished University career followed, he was elected Fellow and Lecturer in Natural Philosophy, and Demonstrator in the Laboratory of the University. He was appointed Professor of Mathematics and Physics in the newly founded University of Leeds. In the Election of 1885 Professor Rücker was elected to the Northern Division of the Liberal interest; and in 1886 as a Unionist Liberal for the Division of the West Riding. In 1887 he was appointed Professor of Natural Philosophy in the Royal College of Science, Kensington. Professor Rücker is the author or joint-author of many works on scientific subjects. Together with Prof. Reinold, F.R.S., he has published the Transactions of the Royal Society in 1883, 1886, and 1893, a series of papers on the properties of liquid films in conjunction with Prof. Thomsen. He has carried out the magnetic measurements for the United Kingdom which form the subject of the Bakerian Lecture before the Royal Society in 1896, the final results of this investigation being published in the Philosophical Transactions in 1896. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1884, was awarded the Royal Medal in 1891, and was appointed to the office of Secretary to the Royal Society in 1896; he has served as Treasurer of the Physical Society, and as Treasurer of the ation; he is an Honorary Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, and a Fellow of the University of London. He married in 1876, Marian, daughter of J. D. Leeds, F.R.C.P., of Leeds, and (2) Leeds, daughter of N. Story-Maskeleyne, Leeds. Addresses: 19 Gledhow Gardens, Leeds and Athenæum.

DINI, Marquis di, Italian statesman, was born in 1840, and when hardly 17, became Syndic of Palermo. In 1876 he was for a short time Minister of the Interior, but did not attain prominence until 1891, when he succeeded Di Rudini as Premier, with a programme of enrichment. He resigned in 1892, because he could not have a free hand; and was succeeded by Signor Giolitti (q.v.).

At the fall of the second Crispi Cabinet in 1893, owing to the disasters in Erythrea, Marquis di Rudini again became Premier. Replying to an interpolation by Imbriani in May 1896, the Marquis di Rudini strongly supported the Triple Alliance, warmly eulogised the German Emperor, and referred in cordial terms to the friendship between Italy and Great Britain as completing the system of alliances.

In the following month the Government carried a vote closing the Budget by only three votes, and a semi-official note was published stating absolutely current reports to the King that the Marquis di Rudini had accepted his resignation to the King.

In March 1897 the Premier issued an election manifesto, which set forth the programme of the Cabinet. The elections at the end of the same month resulted in a large majority for the Government, and, speaking soon after, di Rudini expressed confidence in his ability to retain office for a considerable time.

However, it soon became apparent that it was a complete mistake to suppose that the elections signified public approval of the Government. Elections in Italy are the result, it is said, of personal pressures at best, and of official pressure at worst. Notwithstanding the re-election of di Rudini, the country evinced a deep discontent with the Government as a whole, particularly with the monarchy.

Disasters in Africa were popularly supposed to have been directly caused by unconstitutional agencies beyond the reach of public opinion. Although the King in his speech from the Throne promised to introduce a Bill for promoting the welfare of the lower classes, the lower classes began to clamour for reform. The reception of the King by the populace of Rome on his way to Parliament was "frigid beyond precedent" and occasional cries of "Viva la repubblica" were even raised. It might be noted by the way that a press telegram to England referring to the general disfavour was stopped by the authorities as being untrue. Popular feeling was excited by the alleged injustice and inequality of the revised assessments, and the Chamber of Commerce of Rome organised a tremendous and widely-adopted protest, afterwards by deputation interviewing the Premier, who gave unsatisfactory replies to the spokesmen of the demonstrators. The crowd outside, becoming irritated by the delay of di Rudini's answer, began stoning the military guard, who subsequently fired on the people, and after a hand-to-hand fight succeeded in clearing the streets. The city soon assumed its usual aspect, but the authorities were blamed for the disturbances. However, the Government granted the desired revision of assessments, and matters were smoothed over for a time. In December 1897 the Government were defeated on a military bill, and the Minister of War, General Pelloux (q.v.), persisting in his resignation, the Premier also gave up office. The Marquis di Rudini, having overcome the redoubtable Zanardelli, remodelled his ministry, but its life was uncertain from its birth. The pressing need of the hour was social reform, which di Rudini was too conservative to undertake. Hence his failure to allay popular discontent.

RUDLER, Frederick William, was born in London, July 8, 1840, and appointed an assistant in the Museum of Practical Geology in Jermyn Street, in 1861. He was Assistant-Secretary of the Ethnological Society in 1870; and for some time edited its Quarterly Journal, and that of the Anthropological Institute. In 1876 he was appointed Professor of Natural Science in the University College of Wales, but resigned that position in 1879, to take the Curatorship of the Museum of Practical Geology. He also held the office of Registrar of the Royal School of Mines until its amalgamation with the Normal School of Science. For many years he was Honorary Secretary of the Anthropological Institute, and in 1880 presided over the Anthropological Department of the British Association. In 1887 and 1888 he was President of the Geologists' Association, and in 1898 President of the Anthropological Institute. In conjunction with the late Mr. Robert Hunt he edited the seventh edition of Ure's "Dictionary of Arts," and, jointly with others, was author of the volume on Europe in Stanford's "Compendium of Geography." Mr. Rudler was a contributor to the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and to Longmans' two Dictionaries of Chemistry. He is a copious writer of articles and reviews, mostly anonymous, in various scientific journals, and is a lecturer in connection with the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching. Address: Museum of Practical Geology, Jermyn Street, S.W.

RUMBOLD, The Right Hon. Sir Horace, Bart., G.C.M.G., G.C.B., Ambassador to the Emperor of Austria, is the fifth son of Sir William Rumbold, by Henrietta Elizabeth, second daughter of the 1st Lord Radcliffe. He was born on July 22, 1829, and succeeded his brother in 1877. He entered the diplomatic service, and was successively Attaché at Washington in 1849, and from 1852 onwards at Florence, Paris, and Frankfurt. On Sept. 19, 1854, he was appointed paid Attaché at Stuttgart, and, in November 1856, second paid Attaché at Vienna. In December 1858 he was selected to be Secretary of Legation in China, and proceeded thither with Mr., afterwards Sir Frederick Bruce, in March 1859. When Mr. Bruce's mission was prevented from proceeding to Peking, and the Taku forts were attacked, June 25, 1859, he was sent home with despatches, and to supply the Government with full particulars of events at the Peiho. In September 1862 he became Secretary of Legation at Athens, and in July 1863 was sent, in company with the French and Russian First Secretaries, his colleagues, to conclude an armistice between the two military factions at that time waging civil war in Athens. Transferred to Bern on May 18, 1864, he nevertheless remained in charge of the mission at Athens until June 30, during which time he accompanied the King on a visit to the Ionian Islands, then newly annexed. On March 7, 1868, he was promoted to be Secretary of Embassy at St. Petersburg, and was transferred in March 1871 to Constantinople. In October 1872 he became Minister-Resident and Consul-General in Chili, and at the beginning of 1878 was appointed Minister-Resident at Bern. On Aug. 15, 1879, he was made Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic, and was transferred in that capacity to the King of Norway and Sweden on April 1, 1881, to the King of the Hellenes on Dec. 17, 1884, and to the King of the Netherlands, and also to his Majesty in his capacity of Grand-Duke of Luxembourg, on Feb. 1, 1888. His present appointment dates from August 1896, when he succeeded Sir Edmund Monson. He was created a K.C.M.G. in August 1886, and a G.C.M.G. in May 1892, and was sworn of the Privy Council in November 1896. He married (1), in 1867, Caroline Barney, daughter of

Mr. George Harrington, (1), and (2), in 1881, Louisa Anne, daughter of Mr. Thomas Russell, the widow of Captain St. George Russell, of the 1st Life Guards. Address: 127 Sloane Street.

RUNDLE, Major-General Henry Macleod Leslie, D.S.O., was born in January 1847, educated at the Royal Military College, Woolwich. He entered the Army as Lieutenant of Royal Artillery in 1866, and was promoted Captain in 1876, and was promoted Major in March 1885, Major in June 1886, and Colonel in January 1887. He first saw active service in the Crimea of 1879 with Sir Evelyn Wood's Column, and was present with his battery in the engagement at the end of the Boer War of 1882 being the Field Artillery, and took part in the defence of Potchefstroom. Then he went to Egypt, and was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. General Rundle became attached to the Egyptian Army in 1883, since which time he has been actively employed in practically all the various operations that have taken place in Egypt. During the Nile Expedition he was employed on special service with the Bedouin tribes, when he won the D.S.O. and the Medjidieh of 4th class. In 1885 he was attached to the Frontier Field Force, and took part in the action at Sarra, being in command of the Mounted Corps. He won the D.S.O. and the Osmanieh of 4th class. He was present at the battle of Fort Tokar, and at the action of the Nile, when he commanded the artillery. General Rundle served with the Donga Expeditionary Force under Lord Kitchener as Chief of the Staff, and, besides his command at Firket, he took part in the operations at Hafir. He was specially promoted to Major-General for distinguished service in the Nile Expedition of 1898, and was present at the battle of Atbara and the taking of Khartoum. Upon returning to England he was knighted, and appointed to the command of the South-Eastern District. General Rundle is a Pasha and Adjutant-General of the Egyptian Army. Address: Dover.

RUSDEN, George William, was born in 1849 appointed agent for the establishment of national schools in the Port Phillip district, now Victoria, and afterwards inspector of schools in New South Wales. John, M.A., D.C.L., LL.D., London merchant, was born in et, Brunswick Square, London, 1819, and was educated pri- at Christ Church, Oxford, ined the Newdigate Prize in en devoted himself to painting, under Copley Fielding and g. An unpublished paper in Turner written in 1836 was ort in the cause of modern was enlarged into a standard d "Modern Painters," the first hich appeared in 1843. The cess as a writer on art was the warm reception accorded me, of which many editions een published. Mr. Ruskin's ver, were combated with bitter some of the art critics of the sented with an affectation of s free expression of dissent amnels of their school. In olume of "Modern Painters," r a residence in Italy, and 1846, he took a much wider ne subject originally entered ling the works of the great ters, and discussed at length of their respective schools. ief work, has been completed lication of three additional taining illustrations by him- t of which was published in Ruskin as an undergraduate "The Poetry of Architecture" f papers for a magazine; ten years later he wrote "The Seven Lamps of Architecture," published in 1849, followed by the first volume of "The Stones of Venice" in 1851, the second and third volumes of which appeared in 1853. The illustrations in the last-named productions, which excited some of the same professional hostility that his first publication evoked, displayed to much advantage his artistic powers. Mr. Ruskin has expounded his views both in lectures and in newspapers and reviews, having contributed articles to the Quarterly on Lord Lindsay's "Christian Art," in 1847, and on Eastlake's "History of Oil Painting" in 1848. In 1851 he advocated Pre-Raphaelitism in letters to the Times; and in 1853 he lectured in Edinburgh on Gothic Architecture, published as "Lectures on Architecture and Painting," 1854. In addition to the above-mentioned works, Mr. Ruskin has written "Notes on the Construction of Sheepfolds," "The King of the Golden River," a story for children, illustrated by Doyle, in 1851; "Notes to Pictures in the Royal Academy, Nos. 1 to 5," in 1854-59; "Giotto and his works in Padua," written for the Arundel Society, of which he was a member; "Notes on the Turner Collection," in 1857; "The Elements of Drawing," and "Political Economy of Art," in 1857; "Elements of Perspective," and "The Two Paths," in 1859; "Unto this Last: Four Essays," republished from the Cornhill Magazine, in 1862; "Ethics of the Dust," in 1866; "Sesame and Lilies," in 1865; "Crown of Wild Olive," in 1866; "Time and Tide," in 1867; and "The Queen of the Air, being a Study of the Greek Myths of Cloud and Storm." To the Art Journal he contributed "The Cestus of Aglaia," and he has written for various periodicals. Mr. Ruskin was appointed Rede Lecturer at Cambridge in April 1867, and the Senate conferred the degree of LL.D. upon him, May 15. He was also elected Slade Professor of Fine Art at Oxford, and in 1870 published "Lectures on Art"; in 1872, "Aratra Pentelici: Six Lectures on the Elements of Sculpture, given before the University of Oxford in Michaelmas Term, 1870," followed by "The Eagle's Nest," and other courses of lectures. In 1871 he proposed to devote £5000 for the purpose of an endowment to pay a master of drawing in the Taylor Galleries, Oxford, and this handsome offer was, with some modifications, accepted by the University in January 1872. He was re-elected to the Slade Professorship of Fine Art, 1876. From 1871 to 1884 he published the 96 "Letters to the Workmen and Labourers of England" under the title of "Fors Clavigera." In 1883 he was again elected Slade Professor, and at his inaugural lecture was received with unprecedented enthusiasm. So great was the crowd that thronged to hear his lectures that it was impossible to accommodate the audience, and Professor Ruskin undertook to deliver each lecture twice. He was obliged to resign the post in 1884 on account of failing health. Other works of his later period are "Love's Meilie: Lectures on Birds"; "Proserpina," on Botany; "Detecalion," on Geology; "St. Mark's Rest," on the Art and Architecture of Venice; "The Laws of Fesole," on drawing; "The Bible of Amiens," a historical study; and "Præterita," an autobiography; beside many minor lectures and articles. He has also edited various works on Art and Social questions, and, amongst other books, has published for Miss Francesca Alexander, an American lady, "The Story of Ida," "Christ's Folk in the Apennine," and "The Roadside Songs of Tuscany," the illustrations to which he eulogised and exhibited during his last series of Slade lectures. For several years Mr. Ruskin has lived in tranquil retirement at Brantwood, Coniston. On Feb. 8, 1899, Mr. Ruskin celebrated his eightieth birthday, and was presented with a national address from the St. George's Guild and the Ruskin societies, which ran as follows: "Dear Master and Friend,—The eightieth anniversary of your birthday gives us the opportunity of offering our united loving greetings. As the representative members of the St. George's Guild and the Ruskin societies of the country, owing so much of the good and joy of life to your words and work, we feel that the world is richer and happier for that which you have been able to accomplish year by year in ever-widening extent. There is an increasing desire to realise the noble ideals you have set before mankind in words which we feel have brought nearer to our hearts the kingdom of God upon earth. It is our hope and prayer that the joy and peace you have brought to others may return in full measure to your own heart, filling it with the peace which comes from the love of God and the knowledge of the love of your fellow-men. We have the further happiness of appending to this address of congratulation the names of friends who are associated with our national and other institutions, all of whom have intimated their wishes to be included in this general expression of deepest respect and sincerest affection." The signatories included the Prince of Wales, the trustees of the British Museum, and representatives of the National Gallery, the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours, Oxford University, Whitelands College (with all the "May Queens"), Ancoats Museum, Manchester, the Art for Schools Association, the Royal Academy, St. John's, and the Glasgow, Liverpool, and Ham Ruskin societies. Addresses were those of the Archbishop of Canterbury and York, the Earl of Lansdowne, Sir John Lubbock, H. W. Acland, Address in Coniston; and Athenæum.

RUSSELL, General Sir James Duff Creed, K.C.B., K.C.M.G. was born in 1837, and when the Crimean War broke out at Meerut, he was with the Carabineers, and after the Seaton's Movable Column, he was at Gungaree, where he was killed in his regiment. In 1857 he was in the cavalry in the action of the Peshawar, was especially mentioned by Lord Seaton in his despatches. He was at the relief of Bareilly, and in the operations in Oude, and under Brigadier Showers, and in pursuit of Tantia Topa. He accompanied Sir Garnet Wolseley to the Gold Coast, and organised a regiment, which he commanded in the Ashanti war, forming the guard of the army. For his management he was appointed Colonel and C.B. He was with Sir Garnet Wolseley in South Africa, he commanded the forces in the war against Sekukuni, for which he was a K.C.M.G., and an Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. He commanded a cavalry in the Egyptian war, and was present at Kassassin, Tel-el-Khark, the capture of Cairo, for which he was a K.C.B. and the second Lord of Medjidieh. In 1886 he was an Officer of Auxiliary Cavalry; in 1889 Commander at Shorncliffe; in 1890 to 1895 he commanded a brigade at Aldershot. From 1895 he was in command of the North District, and in 1898 was appointed in command of the Southern District. Government House, Broughton.

RUSSELL, Lord, of Killoch Right Hon. Charles, Lord Chief Justice of England, G.C.M.G., Q.C. of the Universities of Dublin, Edinburgh and Cambridge, and D.L. of the University of London, was born at Newry on Nov. 10, 1812, is the son of Mr. Arthur Russell, of Seaford House, Rosstrevor, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He began his professional career by being called to the bar in London, as a solicitor in Belfast; but, in 1841, he was called to the bar in England, he was called to the bar in Lincoln's Inn in 1859, and became a Bencher of Lincoln's Inn in 1872. He entered Parliament in 1868, and was elected Liberal interest as member for represented from 1880 till 1885; Hackney, 1885-86, when he became Attorney-General in the Gladstone Administration, and was knighted. His eloquent speech before the Commission was one of the most brilliant of modern times. He was appointed Attorney-General in 1886, and on taking office he gave up the old privilege of retaining his private office, which had been a very large and latterly brought him in an income of upwards of twenty-five thousand a year. In 1893 he was given the G.C.M.G. for distinguished services as English representative in connection with the United States Arbitration in Paris. Both in the arbitration and on the third day of the Home Rule Bill in the House of Commons he delivered very eloquent and powerful speeches; but he was, on the whole, so successful as a speaker as at the Bar, that he was in constant request as an eloquent orator. On the death of Lord Russell in 1894 he was appointed a Judge in Ordinary, and a life-peerage was conferred on him. In July 1895 he was appointed Lord Chief-Justice in succession to the late Lord Russell.

As a barrister Lord Russell was without a rival in the English Bar. He was a sound lawyer, and a most able and weighty pleader, especially in uphill or apparently hopeless cases. The list of celebrated cases in which he has been engaged is a long one. He represented Mr. Cleverly in his action against the late Lord Russell of the Referee. In the Chamberlain case he secured enormous damages for the plaintiff. He was for the plaintiff also in Wilberforce v. Phillips, in the famous Belt case, the once famous Convent case, Starr. In the Chetwynd and Arbitration case he was one of the counsel, and he defended Mrs. Russell in the Maybrick murder case of 1889. In 1889 he made his greatest triumph during the Parnell Commission. Lord Russell is well known and is himself an accomplished sportsman.

He is a Member of the Jockey Club, married, in 1858, Ellen, daughter of John Mulholland, M.P., of Belfast. 12 Cromwell Houses, S.W.; Court, Tadworth, Surrey; and

Russell, and grandson of John, 6th Duke of Bedford, was born Feb. 3, 1853, at 16 Mansfield Street, W., and educated at Harrow and University College, Oxford, where he was Scholar and Prizeman. He graduated in honours, B.A. 1876, M.A. 1880. He entered the Inner Temple, 1875, and was elected Liberal Member of Parliament for Aylesbury, 1880, and for North Beds., 1892. He was Parliamentary Secretary to the Local Government Board, 1883-85. He was elected an Alderman of the county of London for six years in 1889; and was Under-Secretary of State for India 1892-94, and Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department 1894-95. He is the author of a "Life of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone," in the series of the Queen's Prime Ministers, editor of the "Letters of Matthew Arnold," and many essays and lectures. He has been known in recent years as a leader of a section in the House of Commons styling themselves Liberal Forwards. Address: 18 Wilton Street, S.W.

RUSSELL, Henry Chamberlaine, C.M.G., B.A., F.R.S., F.R.A.S., F.R. Met. Soc., Government Astronomer of New South Wales, Vice-President of the Board of Technical Education, New South Wales, Fellow of the Senate of the University of Sydney, was born in 1836. He has done much for the promotion and study of science in New South Wales. He has been in charge of the Government Observatory since 1862, and Government Astronomer since 1863. He organised and led the N.S.W. Expedition to Cape Sidmouth in 1871; organised and sent out four parties to observe the Transit of Venus in 1874, and six parties in 1882, also three parties for the Transit of Mercury in 1881; and he originated and presided over the first Australasian Meteorological Conference, 1879. In 1890 he was made a C.M.G. He is the author of seventy-five Reports and Original Papers upon Astronomical, Meteorological, and Physical matters, published by the New South Wales Government in the Memoirs and Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society, London, and in the Journal of the Royal Society of New South Wales. He is the designer of several improved forms of self-recording Barographs, Thermographs, Pluviometers, Anemometers, Tide-gauges, Actinometers, &c., for use in his observatory. Amongst the above seventy-five papers are "Measures of Double Stars, and a list of 351 New Double Stars"; "Nebula surrounding Eta Argus"; "Measures of Coloured Clusters about Kappa Crucis"; "Measures of Alpha Centauri"; "The Great Southern Cross," 1880; "Meteorology and Climate of New South Wales"; "Tropical Rains";

"Rain Maps": "Atmospheric Lines between D Lines at Sydney," &c. In 1861 he published "Notes on the Rate of Growth of some Australian Trees." He married a Sydney lady, a daughter of Ambrose Foss, in 1861. Address: The Observatory, Sydney.

RUSSELL, Earl John Francis Stanley, J.P., L.C.C., was born on Aug. 12, 1865, and is the son of the late Viscount Amberley, and Katherine, daughter of the 2nd Baron Stanley of Alderley. He succeeded his grandfather, the illustrious Lord John Russell, in 1878. He was educated at Winchester and Balliol College, Oxford, under Dr. Jowett. He is especially interested in social questions, and is a Progressive Alderman of the London County Council. He married in 1890, Mabel, daughter of Sir Claude Scott, Bart. Address: Amberley Cottage, Maidenhead.

RUSSELL, Thomas Wallace, M.P., for South Tyrone, was born at Cupar-Fife, N.B., Feb. 28, 1841, is the son of David Russell, and was educated at the Madras Academy, Cupar-Fife. He unsuccessfully contested Preston as a Liberal in 1885, but was elected for South Tyrone in 1886, 1892, and 1895 as a Liberal Unionist. His energies were strongly directed, both in the House and in the country, against the Home Rule movement. He was appointed Parliamentary Secretary to the Local Government Board in 1895, and he was largely instrumental in forming the Land Acts Committee of 1894, from which there followed the Land Act of 1896. Mr. Russell has contributed numerous articles to magazines on the Irish Question and other matters. He is a J.P. for the county of Dublin. He married 2<sup>d</sup> Martha, daughter of the late Lieut.-Colonel Keown, of the 15th Hussars. Address: 90 Astley Gardens, S.W.; and 102 and 103 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin.

RUSSELL, William Clark, known under his author's name of Clark Russell, was born at the Carlton House Hotel, Broadway, in the city of New York, on Feb. 24, 1844. His father was Mr. Henry Russell, the composer of "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," "There's a Good Time Coming, Boys," and many other compositions of a like kind. Mr. Clark Russell's mother was, prior to her marriage, Miss Lloyd, a connection of the poet Wordsworth, and the associate in her youth of Coleridge, Southey, Lamb, and others of that group. She died in 1857. Mr. Clark Russell was educated at Winchester and in France, and went to sea as a midshipman in the ilyvale, and Mary, daughter of John Kelly, of Castle Kelly. He was educated principally at Dr. Geoghegan's school in Dublin, and entered Trinity College, Dublin, in 1838. During the Repeal agitation he was engaged to describe the monster meeting at the Times, and shortly afterwards secured an engagement on the staff of the Times. In 1846 he entered the army, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1850. In 1850 he went to Schleswig-Holstein during the war, and was present at the battle of Idstedt. In 1854 he was despatched as correspondent of the Times with a special guard of the British expedition to the East, on the declaration of war with Russia, and from Malta he proceeded to the Light Division to Gallipoli, then to the Crimea, where he was present at the landing at Old Fort on the 22nd, till the final armistice and the evacuation of the Chersonese by the British in 1856. He was present at the battle of the Alma, Balaklava, and witnessed the bombardment of the Redan and the two assaults on the city. He accompanied the expeditions to the Tchernaya to Kinburn; and saw the capture of the city on Sept. 8, 1855, and the fall of the city. The privations and sufferings of the British troops during the terrible winter, to which the British troops were exposed in open positions, were made known by his letters and reports, and excited such indignation in the British Ministry that they were turned round, and were succeeded by a Government pledged to reform our military system. In 1856 he went to Moscow for the coronation of the Czar, and was present at the Crimea, and, in the year 1857, he was present at the outbreak of the mutiny at Meerut, and set out for Sir Colin Campbell's headquarters at Cawnpore; was present at the taking of Lucknow, and the capture of Oudh, Rohilkund, &c., and received the Indian War Medal and the Lucknow Clasp. In 1858 he returned to England and established the London Navy Gazette, of which he was the proprietor, having remained for a short time with the army in Italy. When civil war was imminent in the United States he proceeded to Washington in the South, and joined the army on the day of the first battle of Bull Run, which ended in the defeat of the Federals. In 1862 he returned to England, and, after an unsuccessful attempt to reach the lines at Döppel in Belgium, remained at home till the outbreak of the war between Prussia and France in 1870, when he repaired to the headquarters of Von Benedek, and witnessed the disastrous battle of Königgratz. A few years of peaceful life and of travel on the Continent and in the East followed; but in 1870, when war was declared by Napoleon III. against the King of Prussia and his allies, Mr. Russell was attached to the headquarters of the Crown Prince, which he joined at Wörth. He was present at the battle of Sedan, and he accompanied the German army on their march through France, remaining with the headquarters during the siege till the capitulation of Paris, when he entered the city with the Crown Prince's staff. In 1875 he was named Honorary Private Secretary to the Prince of Wales on his expedition to India, and he previously accompanied his Royal Highness during his visits to Egypt, Turkey, the Crimea, &c. When the Zulu troubles were at their height, and Lord Wolseley was sent out to save the situation, Sir William (then Mr.) Russell accompanied him, and was at the taking of Sekukuni's stronghold; and he subsequently was in Egypt during the operations under the same general, which led to the overthrow of Arabi, to the re-establishment of the Khedive in Cairo, and to the British occupation of Egypt. He has published "Letters from the Crimea," 1855-56; "The British Expedition to the Crimea," "Diary in India," "The Sepoy Mutiny," "My Diary North and South, during the Civil War in America," "Canada: its Defences," "Rifle Clubs and Volunteer Corps," "The Adventures of Dr. Brady," "My Diary in the East with the Prince of Wales," "Hesperotheria: or Notes from the West," 1882, &c. He unsuccessfully contested Chelsea in the Conservative interest in 1869. He is a Knight of the Iron Cross, a Commander of the Legion of Honour, has the Turkish War Medal of 1854-56, the Indian War Medal, 1857-58, the South African War Medal, 1879; and the Medjidieh (third and fourth class), the Osmanieh (third and fourth class), the St. Sauveur of Greece, Chevalier of Franz Josef, the Redeemer of Greece, Portugal, &c. The honour of knighthood was conferred upon him in 1895. He married (1), in 1846, Mary, daughter of Peter Burrowes, Esq., of Warren House, co. Dublin; and (2), in 1884, the Countess A. Malvezzi. SAGASTA, Praxedes Mateo, a Spanish statesman, was born at Torrecilla de Cameros, July 21, 1827. He studied in the School of Engineers in Madrid, practised his profession at Valladolid and Zamora, and was elected by the latter town to the Constituent Cortes of 1854. He took part in the insurrection of 1856, and was obliged to seek refuge in France. On the amnesty being proclaimed he re- turned to Spain, and became a Professor in the School of Engineers in Madrid. He was also the editor of La Iberia, the principal organ of the Progressist party. After the unsuccessful insurrection of June 1856, he was again under the neces- sity of seeking an asylum in France, and he did not return to Spain until after the fall of Queen Isabella II. Appointed Minister of the Interior in the first Cabinet formed by General Prim, he gradually adopted more and more the views of that statesman and of the Conservative party, and completely broke off his relations with his old friend Zorilla. He was conse- quently exposed to bitter attacks from the Republican minority in the Cortes. Ap- pointed Minister of State in January 1870, he ordered several towns, including Barce- lona, to be placed in a state of siege, de- clared himself in favour of the monarchy, and proposed, on Dec. 17, 1870, the disso- lution of the Chamber, after the king had taken the oath. He continued to be Minister of State and Minister of the In- terior in the first Cabinet of King Ama- deus, and during that monarch's brief reign he took part in several ministerial combinations, either as a Member or as President of the Council. Under the Presidency of Marshal Serrano, in 1874, he was Minister for Foreign Affairs (Jan. 4), Minister of the Interior (May 13), and President of the Council (Aug. 4). After the coup d'état re-establishing the mon- archy, he withdrew for a time from public life. In June 1875 he gave in his adher- ence to the cause of Alfonso XII., and endeavoured to form a Liberal Constitu- tional party. Subsequently he joined the Opposition, and attacked the administra- tions formed by Martinez Campos and Cánovas, 1877-79. When a new Liberal party was formed in 1880 Señor Sagasta gave in his adhesion to it. The Conserva- tive Cabinet of Señor Cánovas del Castillo was overthrown early in the year 1881, and a coalition between Señor Sagasta and General Martinez Campos came into power. Sagasta's ministry remained in office till Oct. 1883, when it was super- seded by a Cabinet formed from the Dynastic Left. This, however, was short- lived, and was followed by a return of the Conservatives to power. On the death of Alfonso XII., Nov. 23, 1885, Señor Sagasta, at the request of the Queen Regent, again became the head of the Government; but, in consequence of a crisis, he re-formed the Cabinet in 1888, and gave to his policy a more markedly democratic character. Among the acts of his ministry may be mentioned the passing of the Anglo-Spanish commercial treaty. After fresh ministerial crises, Señor Sagasta was again commissioned to form a new ministry in January 1890, but in the July following, after violent scenes in the Chamber, he was obliged to retire, and was replaced by Cánovas del Castillo, whose Cabinet remained in power till the elections of March 1893, when Sagasta returned to office as President of the Council and Foreign Minister. He relinquished the latter post, however, on the assembling of the Cortes, in order to devote himself entirely to a general supervision of affairs, 5th April 1893. A Cabinet crisis occurred on March 8, 1894, the ministry resigned, and Señor Sagasta was again requested to form a Cabinet, which came into power, met with constant opposition, and resigned office on October 31. A new ministry was formed a few days afterwards, and Señor Sagasta again became Premier, five of his former ministers resuming office under him. In March 1895 occurred an extraordinary incident, which resulted in the resignation of Sagasta's ministry. A number of army officers, irritated at their conduct being criticised in certain of the Madrid papers, attacked and wrecked the offices of the Resumen and Globo. The editors naturally claimed the protection of the Government, which was granted, and the officers in question were strongly guarded by the police. When the subject was discussed in the Chamber on the following day (March 15, 1895), the reply of the War Minister, General Lopez Dominguez, was regarded as practically backing up the officers in their illegal conduct. The Press representatives left the House in a body, and the ministry subsequently resigned on the War Minister insisting that the charge of libel against the two newspapers which had attacked the officers should be tried before a court-martial. Previous to the resignation of the Cabinet, a deputation of officers waited upon Señor Sagasta to require the suppression of the Resumen. Sagasta met this insolent demand with a flat refusal, and confined to barracks all the officers concerned, while some were court-martialled. The succeeding Premier, the ill-fated Señor Cánovas del Castillo, on assuming office, stated that the new Government had effected no compromise with the military, but were counting on the loyal support of Sagasta and his followers, in order to legalise the strained situation. In July 1897 Sagasta issued a manifesto to the nation, severing the policy of the Government from Cuba, and stated that the Queen was to send out to Cuba a captain-general whose mission should be limited to suppressing the insurrection, while the Government should be appointed to control the conflicting elements in the island, alluding to the Philippines. He insisted upon the necessity of limiting the influence of the monks and friars, and preventing their interference outside the sphere of their religious duties. In the previous month, owing to a parliamentary dead-lock, the Government had tendered their resignations to the Queen-Regent (q.r.), after she had refused to accept. However, the crisis came to a sudden end on the resignation of Señor Cánovas by the Queen, on the first Sunday in August, 1897. General Weyler was Premier pro tempore. General Weyler resigned in the following month, on the receipt of the fact that the Queen had refused to accept his note, and Sagasta was again Premier. He resumed office at the first meeting of the Cabinet, and in plain terms, his dissatisfaction with the course of events in Cuba, and the importance of a report on the position, and details of the Cuban situation, which General Weyler was to submit. The Premier also said that General Weyler would tender his resignation, "but, if he did not, he would be superseded." This step was taken, and General Weyler was superseded by Marshal Sagasta. Sagasta attempted to redeem his promise by granting autonomy to the Cuban people, but their leaders, emboldened by the critical internal state of Spain, refused to accept complete independence. It was a failure of Sagasta's policy, and the consequent imbroglio led to the United States. Sagasta's country's aid at a time when the country touched their lowest point, and a man of his manhood saved a nation. In a crisis after crisis, soothed the passions, allayed public anxieties, and circumvented a hopeless war, and an almost bankrupt treasury, and, as a measure, the national confidence was still engaged on these great

In 1881 he became Minister to the Republics of Central America, in 1884 he was transferred to Colombia, and later the same year to Venezuela, which he left in March 1887, diplomatic relations having been broken off, owing to the dispute with British Guiana as to the boundary. In 1888 he was promoted to be Minister to Servia, and was transferred to his present post in 1893.

ST. JOHN, Sir Spenser, G.C.M.G., third son of the late Mr. James Augustus St. John, was born in London, Dec. 22, 1825. After receiving a careful education, he began to turn his attention towards the East, and having applied himself diligently to the study of the Malay language, was in 1848 appointed secretary to Sir James Brooke. He resided in Borneo several years as H.M. Consul-General, and received in 1861 the appointment of Chargé d'Affaires to the Republic of Hayti. On returning to this country in 1862, he published an account of his Eastern residence and travels, entitled "Life in the Forests of the Far East." Early in 1863 he left England for the West Indies, and some years later was promoted to the post of Minister Resident and Consul-General in Hayti. About the same time he was accredited also as Chargé d'Affaires to the Dominican Republic. In 1874 he was appointed Minister Resident and Consul-General at Lima, Peru, and in 1875 he proceeded on a special mission to Bolivia. He was created a K.C.M.G. in 1881 for services rendered during the war between Peru and Chili, and a G.C.M.G. in 1894. In May 1883 he was sent on a special mission to Mexico, to negotiate for the resumption of diplomatic relations with that country; and was appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Mexico, Nov. 28, 1884, and was transferred to Stockholm, July 1, 1893. Sir Spenser St. John, who is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, published in 1879 "The Life of Sir James Brooke, Rajah of Sarawak," and in 1885, "The Black Republic," an account of Hayti. Address: Athenæum.

part-songs, and anthems for the English Church service, and nearly 100 numbers of sacred part music in the Hebrew language, for the service of the Synagogue. His orchestral compositions have been few, the most recent being the "Grand Funeral March in memory of Victor Hugo," first performed at the Albert Hall. He has also won reputation as a writer and lecturer on musical subjects, being the first to trace the history of the pianoforte and its precursors. Mr. Salaman, who founded the first amateur choral society in London in 1849, was one of the founders of the Musical Society of London in 1858, and was for nearly ten years its honorary Secretary. He was also one of the founders in 1874 of the Musical Association for the "investigation and discussion of subjects connected with the art and science of music," and he performed the duties of honorary secretary until the end of 1877, when he retired as a Vice-President of the Association. In 1882 he published an important volume entitled "Jews as they are," which deals with the modern Jews from a social, political, and religious point of view, and seeks to vindicate the Jewish character from reproach and prejudice. Mr. Salaman has now retired from professional life, but, in his 85th year, he still continues to compose music, and to celebrate each birthday by the publication of new songs, his latest dating exactly seventy years after his earliest. SALISBURY, Marquis of, The Most Hon. Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoigne-Cecil, P.C., K.G., D.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S., D.L., J.P., Prime Minister and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is the eldest surviving son of the 2nd Marquis of Salisbury, by his first wife, the daughter and heir of Bamber Gascoigne, Esq., born at Hatfield in 1830, was educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated, and was elected a Fellow of All Souls' College (1853). In 1853 he was elected M.P. for Stamford, and he represented that borough in the Conservative interest until his succession to the marquise on the death of his father, April 12, 1868. While in the Lower House he was known as Lord Robert Cecil, until the decease of his elder brother on June 14, 1865, when he assumed the courtesy title of Viscount Cranborne. His lordship took an active part in all public measures which affected the interests of the Established Church, and in the chief political questions of the day, and he was a frequent contributor to the Quarterly Review and to other periodicals. In Lord Derby's third administration he was, in July 1866, appointed Secretary of State for India, which post he resigned on account of a difference in opinion respecting the Reform Bill, March 2, 1867, when two other Cabinet ministers, viz., General Peel, War Secretary, and Lord Carnarvon, Colonial Secretary, also gave in their resignations. On Nov. 12, 1869, he was elected Chancellor of the University of Oxford, in succession to the late Earl of Derby. In 1871-72 he and Lord Cairns, as arbitrators, conducted a long investigation into the complicated affairs of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company. His lordship was again appointed Secretary of State for India when Mr. Disraeli returned to office in February 1874. When, at the close of the war between Turkey and Servia, differences arose between the former Power and Russia, the Marquis of Salisbury was sent as Special Ambassador to the Sublime Porte, and he and Sir Henry Elliot acted as joint Minister Plenipotentiaries of Great Britain at the Conference of Constantinople. His lordship left England Nov. 20, 1876, and, en route, visited Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Rome. The progress towards agreement made at the preliminary meetings held at the Russian Embassy in Constantinople were so satisfactory that the formal Conference, at which the joint proposals of the Powers were pressed upon the Porte, was opened on December 23. At the same time the new Constitution of the Ottoman Empire was formally promulgated by its author, Midhat Pasha. The Marquis of Salisbury really took the place of leader at the Conference, which held altogether seven plenary meetings. On Sunday, Jan. 14, 1877, he had an audience of the Sultan, at which Sir Arnold Kemball acted as interpreter, and pressed upon his Majesty the two points on which the two Powers intended to insist, informing him that if they were not accepted the Ambassadors would immediately leave Constantinople. These two proposals were, that there should be a mixed Turkish and International Commission of Supervision, and that the first appointment of the Governors should be ratified by the Powers. On Jan. 18 a special meeting of the Ottoman Grand Council was held, and about 140 Mussulmans and about sixty leading Christians were present. The proceedings lasted two hours, and were opened by Midhat Pasha. With one dissentient voice the Council were unanimous in insisting on the rejection of the proposals of the Powers. The Conference held its last sitting on January 20, and immediately afterwards Lord Salisbury left for England. On April 2, 1878, he was appointed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the room of the Earl

d electrical railway at Liverpool, the course of a speech delivered on occasion, dwelt on the marvellous of electricity. He is himself an electrician, and has applied it to practical experiments at Hatfield House and on his estate.

He is also much interested in astronomy and the whole range of experimental physics, and spends much of his time in his private laboratory. On March he presided at Oxford, as Chancellor of the University, over a meeting in the building fund of the Radcliffe Library, and spoke on that occasion on necessity of giving increased attention to the study of medicine. In April, illness prevented him from visiting Belfast to meet great Unionist demonstrations, but he received a number of Ulster delegates at home, and himself travelled in Ulster

In August 1894 he presided over the meeting of the British Association at Leeds and delivered a notable inaugural address in which he dwelt on the necessities to scientific speculation.

In December 1895 the Liberal Government announced its attitude on the ammunition question to a Committee on Army Estimates, and Lord Rosebery immediately resigned.

Salisbury was sent for, and duly formed an administration. His Cabinet, recently constituted, consisted of several members, of whom four were

Unionists. The general election resulted in giving the Unionist Coalition a majority of 150, the strongest Government of modern times. During 1896

Salisbury was much occupied by the conduct of our relations with America and the Venezuelan Boundary

, and his conciliatory attitude has been much appreciated at Washington.

Indeed, the present cordial understanding between the two branches of the Saxon race is, in great measure, due to Salisbury's endeavours. The Armenian atrocities added very much to the burden of office. The action of Mr. St. John and others, who on every occasion vehemently denounced the Sultan, only handicapped the Government in efforts to obtain a peaceful solution of the problem. Isolated action on the part of England was strongly advocated, especially by a section of the press, but

Salisbury resolutely pursued a policy which enabled him to act in concert with European Powers, since he held that a European war would follow the isolated action of Great Britain. During the present crisis a similar attitude was followed, and Lord Salisbury's policy was severely criticised. But the chaotic state of the island itself, and the conflicting interests of the Great Powers, rendered any action by any single Power very difficult. Upon the outbreak of a conflict at Candia, in which British soldiers were killed and Christian inhabitants massacred,

Admiral Noel, in command of the British squadron, bombarded the town, and afterwards sent an ultimatum to the Turkish

Governor demanding the ringleaders. His request was speedily complied with, and several of them were executed. Later, a collective note signed by Great Britain,

France, Russia, and Italy, demanding the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from the island, was presented to the Sultan, who surrendered unconditionally. The evacuation was completed in November, when Lord Salisbury urged upon the Russian Minister at Constantinople to formally propose Prince George of Greece

as High Commissioner and Governor of Crete. The proposal met with universal approbation, and was ultimately accepted by the Sultan. Affairs in the Far East reached an acute stage during 1897-98.

Li Hung Chang, the most influential personage in China, had been sent in 1896 to Europe as an Envoy Extraordinary, and after visiting the various capitals, came to London and received a hearty welcome.

During his visit to this country, he went to Hatfield as the guest of Lord Salisbury, and endeavoured, in vain, to get his lordship to assent to an increase of the import duties levied upon British goods entering

China. The refusal to accede to the wishes of Li Hung Chang was probably the cause of his hostility to England throughout the Chinese crisis, which was precipitated by the act of Germany in November 1897, when a force of German marines landed at Kiao Chau in order to exact reparation for the murder of two missionaries. They made their position secure, and shortly afterwards demanded,

and obtained, the port and the territory around it on a lease of 99 years. Russia almost immediately after occupied Port

Arthur and Talienwan in a similar manner, and Lord Salisbury had to face a considerable alteration in the balance of power in the Far East. As a set-off against the Russian aggression, Great Britain put forward a demand, which was granted,

for the cession of the islands and waters of Wei-hai-wei for the same number of years and on the same terms as Port

Arthur had been ceded to Russia. Throughout the Chinese crisis Lord Salisbury was subjected to a good deal of criticism from both sides of the House, and also in the press, for not pursuing a more active policy. But the lack of vigorous action was more apparent than real, as among the various concessions secured by his lordship were the opening of all inland waters to navigation to the vessels of all

ports; the assurance that no portion of the province adjoining the Yangtse-Kiang Valley should be alienated to any other power. The Chinese Government also undertook that so long as British trade continued to exceed that of any other nation the Inspector-General of Maritime Customs should be a British subject. A convention was also signed by which the mainland opposite Hong Kong, and the island of Lan-tao and Miao Bay, were secured to Great Britain, the area thus acquired covering about 200 square miles. The consecutive victories in the Soudan, and the capture of Khartoum by Lord Kitchener in 1898 brought into prominence our relations with France and her interests in Egypt, and when a French force was discovered posted at Fashoda a serious situation was created. In September Lord Salisbury pointed out to the French Foreign Office that all the territories which had been subject to the Khalfah had passed by right of conquest to the British and Egyptian Governments, and that H.M. Government did not consider this right open to discussion. Lord Salisbury also insisted upon the withdrawal of the French force as a condition precedent to negotiation on the matter. His lordship had the unanimous support of the country on the question of the evacuation of Fashoda by the French, and ultimately a satisfactory solution of the difficulty was arrived at by which the French Government relinquished all claims to the Nile Valley in consideration of concessions made to them in the Niger Hinterland. During 1898 Lord Salisbury was obliged for some weeks to give up his duties and go abroad on account of his health, which for some time had given his friends much anxiety. The duties of the Foreign Office devolved upon Mr. A. J. Balfour during his absence. The Marquis of Salisbury is a member of the Council of King's College, London; Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Constable of Dover Castle; High Steward of Great Yarmouth; Elder Brother of Trinity House, and Hon. Colonel of the 4th Batt. of the Bedfordshire Regiment and of the Herts Militia. For many years he was Chairman of the Middlesex Sessions. Lord Salisbury's tenure of office during the Jubilee year of the Queen's reign will be memorable in his lordship's family for the honour which her Majesty paid him by going in person to visit him at Hatfield. In 1857 he married Georgiana Caroline, daughter of Sir Edward Hall Alderson, Baron of the Exchequer, and niece of the celebrated Mrs. Opie. His eldest son is Viscount Cranborne (born 1861), M.P. for the Darwen Division of Lancashire from 1885 to 1892, and in 1893 returned for Rochester.

SALMON, The Rev. George
Dublin, and Hon. Edin. D.
LL.D. Cantab., F.R.S., was born in 1819, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, was elected as Senior Moderator in 1839. He was successively Fellow of his College, and Regius Professor of Divinity at the University of Dublin in 1866, and held until his appointment as the College in 1888. Besides contributions to theological and periodicals, and in particular "Dictionary of Christian Biography," is the author of treatises on "The Higher Plane," "The Geometry of Three Dimensions," on "The Modern Higher Algebra," have been translated into European languages, and was honoured by the Royal and of the Royal Society, and the Medal of the Royal Irish Academy. He has published four volumes besides many single sermons, published two series of lectures in the Divinity School of the one forming an Introduction to the Testament, and the other on the Infallibility of the Church. His recent publication is "Theological Criticism of the New Testament," 1897. He is a member of the Academy, a Fellow of the Royal Society of London and Edinburgh, a corresponding member of the Académie des Sciences at Göttingen, Berlin, and a Fellow of the Accademia dei Lincei, Rome. He was President of the Mathematical and Physical Sciences at the meeting held in Dublin in 1891. Address: Provost's House, Trinity College, Dublin.

SALMON, Admiral
G.C.B., V.C., was born in 1817 and educated at Marlborough. He is the son of the Rev. H. Salmon of Swarraton, by Emily, daughter of Admiral Nowell. He entered the Navy in May 1847, and was promoted to the rank of Captain in January 1856. While holding that rank he served in H.M.S. James in the Russian war, and was awarded the Baltic medal. In the Indian war he gained his V.C. while attacking the strongly occupied fort, the relief of Lucknow, during the attack suffered severe wounds, and distinguished himself by extraordinary marksmanship.

ad posted himself on the wall well over. There appeared to be no chance of checking this deadly fire except by climbing a big tree, which meant almost certain death to the climber. However, Salmon volunteered the attempt, and although his binocular glass (which he took in order that he might be sure of the right man) was shattered in his hand, he took aim and shot the man dead. For his gallant services in the Indian Mutiny Sir Nowell was promoted to the rank of commander, and received the medal with the sword clasp. He was promoted Captain in 1873, and created C.B. in 1875, being afterwards appointed aide-de-camp to the Queen. Admiral Salmon was successively Commander-in-Chief at the Cape, China stations, and also at Portsmouth. He hoisted his flag in H.M.S. Renown as commander-in-chief at the naval review held in 1897. On that occasion the First Lord of the Admiralty, in expressing his appreciation of the arrangements made for the sailing of so vast a fleet, said, "The perfect moorings of that 25 miles of ships reflected the greatest credit upon Lord Salmon and his staff." He was created K.C.B. in 1887 and G.C.B. in 1897, and is the senior admiral on the active list. Address: Curdrige Grange, Botten, W.

SALMONÉ, Professor H. Anthony, holds the Chair of Arabic at King's College, London, was born in Beyrout, Lebanon, on Sept. 1, 1860. He is of Cretan descent, and derives his family name from Saint Salmoné in Crete, which is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. The subject was brought to England when a year old, and later was sent to the Archdeaconry College, Beyrout, in which city he afterwards entered St. Joseph's University, where he completed his education, and then returned to England. He early devoted his whole energy to philological and literary studies. His father, who died in 1894, was himself an accomplished linguist, and was able to read, write, and converse fluently in about a dozen languages. He soon found a number of friends amongst the most distinguished linguists and scholars in this country, and in 1883 was elected a member of the Royal Asiatic Society. During the same year, and under the presidency of the late Bartle Frere, he delivered an address before a well-attended meeting of the Society, "On the importance to Great Britain of the study of Arabic." In 1884 Professor Salmoné was appointed lecturer in Arabic at University College, London, and he began to devote himself to the compilation of an Arabic-English and English-Arabic lexicon, which was dedicated by special permission to the Queen. It was compiled on a new and unique system, comprising about 120,000 Arabic words in vol. i. and about 50,000 in vol. ii.; this important work, published by Trübner in 1890, was well received by the press and by Oriental scholars at home and abroad. In the same year he was appointed Professor of Arabic at King's College, London. In 1891 he went on an extended tour in the East, visiting among other places some parts of India, Persia, Mesopotamia, Arabia, Egypt, Syria, and various other places in Turkey. His reputation as an Arabic scholar secured for him a welcome reception by the leading native scholars in Syria, Egypt, and Constantinople. In 1892 Professor Salmoné received a gratifying acknowledgment of his work, the Sultan of Turkey sending him the Order of the Medjidieh of the third class, in recognition of the services he had rendered to Oriental literature by the publication of his Arabic-English lexicon. Soon after starting on his Eastern travels in 1891 he was offered the post of special correspondent to the Times in Egypt, which, however, he was unable to accept. After his return from the East Professor Salmoné edited and conducted for nearly a year and a half the Eastern and Western Review, a monthly periodical intended to arouse public interest in Imperial affairs and Oriental subjects generally. After the discontinuance of this periodical he contributed various miscellaneous and political articles to the reviews and to newspapers, including the Nineteenth Century, Blackwood, the Times, and other journals. One of his most interesting works is "The Fall and Resurrection of Turkey" (published in 1896 by Messrs. Methuen), which gives a full and graphic account of the condition of the Turkish Empire, and indicates the reforms which are needed. He has also devised and edited an interesting work entitled "The Imperial Souvenir" (D. Nutt, 1897), dedicated by special permission to the Queen. It gives a metrical translation of the third verse of the National Anthem in fifty languages spoken in the British Empire. Professor Salmoné was employed at the War Office during 1885 and 1886 in the translation of important documents, also undertaking similar duties for the Admiralty. He has always been an active agitator for the encouragement of Oriental studies in England, and recently delivered an address "On the importance to Great Britain of establishing an Oriental School in London" at the Royal Asiatic Society. Address: 39 Colville Gardens, W.

son of the late Mr. Philip Salomons, and was born on June 28, 1851, at Brighton. Having lost both his parents when he was very young, the responsibility of his guardianship was undertaken by his uncle, the late Sir David Salomons. He was educated by private tutors and at University College, London, afterwards proceeding to Caius College, Cambridge, graduating in the Natural Science Tripos, his tastes tending rather to physical science than to pure mathematics. The pursuit of scientific attainments has been almost the exclusive occupation of his life. Not content with mere theoretical knowledge, he was in the habit of frequenting workshops, working with the men, and thus gaining an insight into the practical work; his uncle, moreover, provided him with a laboratory where he could devote his attention to the subjects which interested him so deeply. When, however, he succeeded to his uncle's position he was not neglectful of its duties and responsibilities. He worked assiduously as a county magistrate, being a Justice of the Peace for Kent, Sussex, Middlesex, Westminster, and London, and he is also a Deputy-Lieutenant for Kent. In 1874 Sir David Salomons stood in the Liberal interest for Mid-Kent, but he was defeated; and at the general election of 1880, through holding the offices of sheriff and returning officer, he was precluded from seeking election. Since that period he had relinquished things political, until 1885, when he consented to contest the new borough of St. George's-in-the-East. Sir David Salomons is a member of several clubs, including the Savage Club; a County Councillor for Kent, representing one of the Tunbridge Divisions; and belongs to many societies, being an Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, of the Physical Society, of the Chemical Society, of the Geological Society, of the Royal Meteorological Society, and a Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society. He is a Past Vice-President of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, and a Past Manager of the Royal Institution of Great Britain. Sir David has also studied drawing and painting, the better to appreciate art and its difficulties. He has served on the Scientific Committees appointed by the Institute of Electrical Engineers for settling symbols, fire risks, &c., and has brought out several new and successful inventions. He is also the author of several scientific papers read before many scientific societies: "Electric Light Installations and Management of Accumulators," 7th edit., in 3 vols. (the 8th edition will shortly appear), and of "Photographic Notes and Formulae," &c. Regarding the "Woman's Rights"

SAMPSON, William Thomas, a naval officer, was born at Palmyra, N.Y., Feb. 9, 1840, and graduated at the Naval Academy in 1861. He became a Master the same year, and a Lieutenant in July 1862; was stationed at the Academy in 1864, and then served on the monitor Patapsco, and was in that vessel when she was destroyed by a torpedo in Charleston Harbour in January 1865. He was in the European squadron in 1867, when he became a Lieut.-Commander, and in August 1874 was made a Commander. He was on the Asiatic Squadron in command of the Swatara, 1879–80. Assistant-Superintendent of the Naval Observatory, Washington, 1880–86, and Superintendent of the Naval Academy, 1886–90, becoming a Captain in 1887. From January 1892 till 1897 he was in the Bureau of Ordnance, and from 1897 to the spring of 1898 was in command of the battleship Iowa. Just before the war with Spain broke out in 1898 he was placed in command of the American fleet at Key West, with rank of Rear-Admiral, and had the duty of operations in West Indian waters which culminated in the destruction of the Spanish squadron near Santiago on July 3, 1898. He was appointed first one of the Commissioners to negotiate measures with the Spanish authorities for the evacuation of Cuba by Spain, and previously been advanced to the rank of Rear-Admiral for his services.

MONTAGU, The Right Hon. Sir Samuel, Bart., K.C.M.G., C.B., J.P., born 1820, is the son of the late Samuel Montagu, Esq., of London. He sailed for New South Wales in 1832; and, after completing his education at the Sydney University, he became extensively engaged in mining, commercial, and literary pursuits, and is recognised as the pioneer of several industries which have since developed into important ones. His public career commenced in 1856, five years before responsible government was inaugurated in New South Wales; he was then elected a member of the Legislative Council. Soon after the promulgation of the new Constitution in 1856 he was elected a member of the Legislative Assembly; and, in 1859, first accepted office in the Forster Administration as Colonial Treasurer. He held the same portfolio in the Cowper Government of 1865, the Robertson Ministry in 1868, and the Cowper Administration of 1869. He has also acted as Postmaster-General in several Governments, and successfully conducted negotiations with the United States Government for a Postal Convention with New South Wales, which resulted in the establishment of the San Francisco Mail Service with Australia. After holding high office under every Governor of the Colony (except Lord Carrington) since the inauguration of responsible government, he, in 1880, resigned the Postmaster-Generalship in the Parkes Administration, and was appointed Agent-General for the Colony in London, a position which he continues to fill. In that capacity he has conducted diplomatic and financial business of the highest importance with uniform success, and to the great satisfaction of successive Governments. He was created C.M.G. in 1874; K.C.M.G. in 1882; and C.B. (Civil) in 1886. He was created a Baronet in January 1898. He retired in October 1898, after a year's leave, and was thanked by Mr. Chamberlain for the manner in which he had discharged the duties of his post. He has been twice married (1), in 1857, to Henrietta Matilda, daughter of Benjamin Goldsmid Levien, Esq., of Geelong, Victoria; and (2) in 1877, to Sara Louise, daughter of E. Isaac, Esq., of Auckland, New Zealand. Address: 34 Nevern Square, S.W.

SAMUEL-MONTAGU, Sir Montagu, Bart. (usually called Sir Samuel Montagu), M.P., J.P., D.L., head of the banking firm of Samuel Montagu & Co., London, was born at Liverpool on Dec. 21, 1832, and is the son of the late Louis Samuel, of Liverpool, and afterwards of Bloomsbury, a watchmaker. He assumed the name of Montagu by royal license in 1894. He was educated at Liverpool Institute and privately, and established the banking-house, of which he is now head, in 1853. He was a member of the Gold and Silver Commission from 1887 to 1890. He has represented the Tower Hamlets, Whitechapel Division, since 1885, and is a Liberal in politics. He is an authority on currency and a leading member of the Hebrew community in London, a member of the Jewish Board of Deputies, President of the Jewish Working-Men's Club, J.P. for London, D.L. for Tower Hamlets. He married Ellen, youngest daughter of the late Louis Cohen, of the London Stock Exchange, in 1862. Addresses: 12 Palace Gardens, Kensington, W.; and South Stoneham House, Hants.

SAMUELSON, The Right Hon. Sir Bernhard, Bart., F.R.S., M.Inst.C.E. was born on Nov. 22, 1829, and is the son of S. H. Samuelson, a Liverpool merchant. He was educated privately, and was for some time in a general merchant's office in Liverpool, until in 1842 he was placed in charge of the Continental affairs of Sharp, Stewart & Co., engineers, of Manchester. Leaving their service in 1845, he established railway works at Tours between 1846-48. In 1849 he purchased the agricultural implement works at Banbury, and in 1851 erected blast furnaces at Middlesborough, where he bought collieries and ironstone mines between the years 1872-80. He is Chairman of Samuelson & Co., of Banbury and Orleans. He represented Banbury in Parliament in 1859, and sat as Liberal member for North Oxfordshire from 1885 to 1895. He was Chairman of several Royal Commissions, notably that on Technical Education, and was made a Baronet for his services in 1884. He was member of the Royal Commission on Scientific Instruction, was for three or four years Chairman of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, has been President of the Iron and Steel Institute, is J.P. for Oxfordshire, Knight of the Legion of Honour, &c. He was made F.R.S. in 1881, and P.C. in 1895. His publications take the form of Reports to the House of Commons on Technical Education, Patent Laws, Railway Rates, and Thames Conservancy, &c. He married, in 1889, Mrs. Denny, a daughter of Chevalier Leon Serena, and widow of William Denny, of Dumbarton. Addresses: 56 Prince's Gate, S.W.; and Bodicote Grange, Oxfordshire.

SAMUELSON, James, is the eighth son of the late Samuel H. Samuelson, merchant, of Liverpool and Hull. He was born in the latter place in 1829, was educated in Liverpool by the Rev. John Brunner (father of Sir John Brunner, M.P.), and studied zoology under Dr. Zedlitch at Konigsberg University. In 1867 he passed the General Examination of the Inns of Court, and was called to the Bar of the Middle Temple in 1870, but never practised. Mr. Samuelson has all his life been connected with manufacturing industries, and he is now the chief proprietor in a limited company at Birkenhead, managed by his two sons, for crushing palm kernels and cocoa-nuts. His leisure has been employed in literary and social work, the latter including the foundation of the of the present state of religious), and of many other experts in their respective departments. Mr. Samuelson has always been an advanced Liberal, and has helped to foster liberty at home and abroad.

He filled the chair on two occasions, the Liverpool Cretan and the Liverpool Greek Committee, both of which contributed considerable sums to the suffering Greeks. He has three times unsuccessfully contested constituencies; belongs to the Liverpool Reform Club, and is an active member of the National Liberal Club. Address: 42 Grosvenor Road, Liverpool.

BARTOLOMEO, Francesco de, Baron de, Italian Ambassador at the Court of St. James, was born in 1812 and was educated at the military school of La Nunzcatella, at Naples, which he left in 1854 with the grade of Sub-lieutenant of Engineers. In 1860 he left the service of King Francis II. of Naples, to enter that of Victor Emmanuel. He was at the siege of Gaeta, and his bravery there gained for him the Military Cross of Savoy. He was given a high rank in the Ordnance Corps, and fought against the Austrians in 1866. He is, however, best known as a writer, and in 1868 founded La Panfulla at Florence, which became one of the most popular newspapers in Italy. He sold his share on leaving Parliament in 1874. His best-known work is "Ananke," published in 1875. He was appointed to his present post in August 1898.

SANDAY, The Rev. William, D.D., Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity, Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, was born at Holme Pierrepont, Nottingham, 1811, and is the eldest son of William Sanday, of Holme Pierrepont, and of his wife Elizabeth Mann, of Scawsby, Doncaster. He was educated at Repton School, and at Balliol and Corpus Christi Colleges, Oxford, being elected scholar of Balliol in 1863. He obtained a first-class degree in 1865, and was ordained Deacon in 1867, Priest in 1869, taking his M.A. degree in 1868. He held a fellowship at Balliol from 1866 to 1873. Dr. Sanday has successively Lecturer of St. Nicholas, London, 1871; Vicar of Great Waltham, Essex, 1872; Rector of Barton-on-the-Heath, Lincoln, 1873; and Principal of Bishop Eldon's Hall, Durham, 1876. In 1882 he was appointed Professor of Exegesis at Balliol, in succession to the late Canon Sanderson, who resigned the post; and in 1883 he was elected to the Lady Margaret Professorship of Divinity attached to a canonry at Christ Church, which he now holds. He was Whitehall Preacher in 1889-90, and Select Preacher in Cambridge University between 1880 and 1892. Dr. Sanday has published "Authorship and Historical Character of the Fourth Gospel," 1873; "The Gospels in the Second Century," 1876; "Commentaries on Romans and Galatians for English Readers," 1878; and is joint editor of "Variorum Bible," and "Studia Biblica," and of a larger "Commentary on Romans," 1895, which is now in a third edition. In 1893 Dr. Sanday delivered the Bampton Lectures, his subject being "Inspiration." They were published later in the year. He married, in 1877, Marion, daughter of W. H. Woodman Hastings, J.P., of the family of Warren Hastings. Address: Christ Church, Oxford.

SANDEMAN, Albert George, late Governor of the Bank of England, was born on Oct. 21, 1832, and is the son of George Glas Sandeman, Portuguese merchant. He is senior partner in George G. Sandeman, Sons & Co., of London. He was High Sheriff of Surrey in 1872, stood for Reading as a Conservative in 1880, was Chairman of the London Dock Company when the working agreement with the East and West India Dock Company was effected, is one of the Commissioners of Lieutenancy and Commissioner of Income Tax for the City of London, was Governor of the Bank of England, 1895-97, and in July 1898 was elected President of the London Chamber of Commerce. He is Grand Cross of the Royal Military Order of Our Lady of the Conception of Villa Vicosa. He married a daughter of the Portuguese Ambassador to England, Viscount Moncorvo, in 1856. Address: Presdales, Ware, Herts.

SANDERSON, Professor Sir John Scott Burdon, Bart., M.A., M.D., D.Sc. Trinity College, Dublin, D.C.L. Durham, LL.D. Edinburgh, F.R.S., F.R.S.E., Regius Professor of Medicine, University of Oxford, was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, in December 1828, and educated at the University of Edinburgh. He was Medical Officer of Health for Paddington, 1856-67; has been Physician to the Middlesex Hospital and the Hospital for Consumption, Brompton. He held the office of Jodrell Professor of Physiology in University College from 1874 to 1882. On Nov. 29, 1882, he was elected Waynflete Professor of Physiology at Oxford. He was Professor Superintendent of the Brown Institution from 1871 to 1878. Dr. Sanderson was employed by the Royal Commissioners to make investigations respecting the Cattle Plague, 1865-66; was sent by her Majesty's Government to North Germany in 1865 to inquire into an Epidemic of Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis; and was occupied in an inquiry for a Royal Commission as to the influence of extreme heat on the health of workers in the Cornwall mines in 1869. In 1883 he sat on the Royal Commission on Hospitals for Infectious Diseases, and has since served on two other Royal Commissions, viz., that on the consumption of tuberculous meat and milk, 1891, and that on the University of London, 1892. He is the author of numerous Reports on infectious diseases and other subjects connected with Public Health in the Reports of the Medical Officer of the Privy Council in 1869 and for several succeeding years; and of papers on physiological and pathological subjects read before the Royal Society, particularly an elaborate series of researches on the Electrical Properties of the Dionaea Muscipula, as well as on the electrical organs of the skate and other electrical fishes. He was President of the Biological Section of the British Association at the meeting at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1889, and was elected President of the Association at Nottingham in 1893. He has three times filled the office of Croonian Lecturer, viz., in 1867 and 1877 at the Royal Society, and at the College of Physicians in 1891. For his physiological and pathological researches he received a Royal Medal in 1883, and the Baly Medal of the Royal College of Physicians in 1880. In 1895 he was appointed Regius Professor of Medicine in the University of Oxford. In recognition of his services to science he was created a Baronet at the Birthday, 1899. Address: Oxford.

SANDFORD, The Right Rev. Charles Waldegrave, D.D., Bishop of Gibraltar, son of the late Archdeacon Sandford, born in 1828, received his academical education at Oxford, where he was a student of Christ Church, and obtained a first class in Lit. Hum., was for several years Tutor and Senior Censor of Christ Church, 1855-1870, became Commissary of the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1869, and Rector of Bishopbourne, Kent, in 1870. On the resignation of Bishop Harris he was nominated by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the See of Gibraltar, and was consecrated at Oxford, Feb. 1, 1874. He is married to Alice, daughter of Sir George Baker, Bart. Addresses: 4 Hyde Park Square, W.; Cannes, France; and Athenæum.

SANDFORD, The Right Rev. Daniel Fox, D.D. Hon. Durham, LL.D. Glasgow, late Bishop of Tasmania, third son of the late Sir Samuel Keyte Sandford, D.C.L., sometime M.P. for Paisley, and Professor of Greek at Glasgow, was born in 1831. After taking orders he was Incumbent of St. John's Church, Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh, and has been elected to the Bishopric of Durham. He was consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Benson) at St. Paul's Cathedral, April 25, 1886. He was previously bishopric and was appointed to the Bishopric of Bordon, and Assistant-Bishop of the diocese of Durham, 1889. Address: Rectory, Durham.

SANDHURST, Lord Mansfield, G.C.I.E., J.P., was born in 1811. General Lord Sandhurst G.C.B. was the victor of the Indian Mutiny, Aug. 21, 1855. He became a Major in the Coldstream Guards in 1838, three years later succeeded to the title of the death of his father. He retired from the army, and in 1840 became a Lord-in-Waiting. In 1856 he was Under-Secretary in Mr. Gladstone's short-lived Administration, and he held the same post to 1894. As a junior member of the Government he had few opportunities of showing his talents of administration, and he accepted the post of Governor of Bombay in 1894. In 1898 he was created Knight of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. His mother was elected a member of the London County Council in 1890, but was disqualified from sitting on the Bench. She died in 1892. His grandfather was the famous Lord Mansfield. He married, in 1840, Victoria Alexandrina, daughter of Earl Spencer. He has contributed to the Review since its foundation in 1851, written articles on the History of the "Social England". He has also edited the late Commentary on the Rhetoric of Aristotle (1877); and (in conjunction with Professor Nettleship) has re-issued an English translation of the "Dictionary of Classical Mythology, Literature, Art, and Science" (1891). In 1887 he published Vacation in Greece. He is a member of the Managing Committee of the University of Athens, a Vice-President of the Philological Society, and Examiner in Classics at Victoria University. He has been Lecturer of the Cambridge Philology, and Chairman of the Board of Studies. In 1885 he was awarded a degree of Doctor of Letters by the University of Cambridge, in 1892 he received a degree from the University of Oxford, in 1894 he was specially elected member of the Athenæum Club. He resides at 15, Bedford House, Cambridge.

SANTLEY, Charles, R.A., was born at Liverpool on April 23, 1820, and received his first lessons in art from John Varley, one of the founders of the British School of water-colours. Later on, Sir Richard Wilson, R.A., gave him some advice and instruction in oil painting, but not, however, till 1842 that he turned himself to painting as a profession, becoming a student of the Royal Academy, where he studied for four years. On leaving, he began to exhibit "pictures," or "fancy subjects," of single figures generally, and especially children, by which pictures probably most widely known, and having been engraved. Of his most select as typical examples are "Samuel," the "Infant Timothy," the "Red Riding-Hood," and "The Boy of the Cross." Among Mr. Santley's other works of this description are "The Boy of the Cross," "Mother's Prayer," and "Evening," "Shepherd's Love," "Harmony,"

"Young Minstrel," "Retrospection," "Saxon Women," "The Boy Shakespeare," "The Walk to Emmaus," "The Miller's Daughter," and "Young Steele." After some years, however, Mr. Santley began to paint portraits, and his pretty pictures of ladies and children became, and for some time continued to be, the fashion. Since 1895 he has continued to exhibit largely at the Royal Academy's Exhibitions, his subjects being chiefly portraits. In 1896 he exhibited a portrait of Miss Dorothea Baird as "Trilby," and in 1899 as many as five portraits. The largest collection of Mr. Santley's works was at Strawberry Hill. For Countess Waldegrave the artist painted no fewer than 22 members of her distinguished circle, including the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Westminster when Lady Constance Grosvenor, the Countess of Shaftesbury, the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, the Duchess of Wellington when Marchioness of Douro, the Earl and Countess of Clarendon, Lord Lyndhurst, the Marchioness of Clanricarde, M. Van de Weyer, the Belgian Minister, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, Countess Morley, Earl Grey, Bishop Wilberforce, and Countess Waldegrave herself. This Strawberry Hill gallery of pictures was exhibited at the French Gallery, Pall Mall, in 1861. He was elected A.R.A. in 1861; R.A. in 1870; and in January 1871 was appointed Principal Painter in Ordinary to the Queen in succession to the late Sir George Hayter, and was commissioned to paint a large picture of her Majesty and her Royal grand-children, the eldest three children of the Prince of Wales, and a State portrait of the Queen for the Turkish Embassy. In June 1877 Mr. Santley was elected a corresponding member of the Royal Accademia Raffaello in Urbino. Mr. Santley married a daughter of R. M. M. Thomson, staff-surgeon, Bengal Presidency. Address: 43 Lancaster Gate, Hyde Park, W.

SANTLEY, Charles, baritone singer, was born at Liverpool in 1834, and after receiving a good musical and general education in his own country, proceeded to Italy to complete his professional training. He made his first appearance as an operatic singer in this country at Covent Garden, during the Pyne-Harrison management, and achieved his first great successes in the part of Hoel in the opera of "Dinorah" in 1859, and in that of Rhineberg, in Vincent Wallace's opera of "Lurline," in March 1860. He created so favourable an impression in this latter character that he took rank as one of the most effective baritones of the day. His career, especially since he attached himself exclusively to the Italian operatic stage, where he has distinguished himself in most of the great capitals of Europe, has been very successful. His voice is as remarkable for its quality as for the extent of its register, in the upper part of which it partakes of a pure tenore robusto, while in the lower portion it displays the qualities of the basso profondo. In Gounod's opera of "Faust," Mr. Santley performed in the same season the parts of Valentine and Mephistopheles. He sang in Australia in 1889-90 and at the Cape in 1893. He has published a work entitled "Student and Singer" (1892). Mr. Santley married, in 1859, Gertrude Kemble, a grand-daughter of Charles Kemble; she had appeared in public as a soprano singer, but gave up her professional career after her marriage. Address: 67 Carlton Hill, N.W.

SARASATE, Pablo Martin Meliton, Spanish violinist, was born at Pampeluna, March 10, 1844. He entered the Paris Conservatoire in January 1856, became the favourite pupil of Alard, and gained the first prizes for solfeggio and violin. He then entered Rebur's harmony class and secured a premier accessit in 1859, but afterwards relinquished the study of composition for the career of a concert player. His performances were highly successful. He has played in nearly all the great towns between Naples and Norway, and Portugal and Moscow, and has visited America, North and South. His first appearance in London was at the Philharmonic Concert on May 18, 1874. He again appeared at the Musical Union of June 9 of the same year. In 1877 he played at the Crystal Palace on October 13; on March 28, 1878, at the Philharmonic; in 1885 he gave several violin recitals in London, with very remarkable success, and in 1886 a series of equally successful concerts. Since then the "Sarasate Concerts" have become an annual feature of the St. James's Hall musical season. His works, which amount to over thirty, have as their favourite numbers, "Souvenir de Domont," "Spanische Tänze," and "Serenade Andalose." He is unmarried, a fact that is said to be due to advice given him by his master, Auber.

SARAWAK, Rajah of. See BROOKE. SIR CHARLES.

SARDOU, Victorien, French dramatist, is the son of M. Léandre Sardou, a professor in Paris, and the compiler of several publications. He was born in Paris, Sept. 7, 1831. At first he studied medicine, but he was obliged, in consequence of the embarrassments of his family, to give private lessons in history, philosophy, and mathematics. He also made attempts in literature, writing articles for several reviews, for the minor journals, and for the "Deuxième Conversation." His first play, "La Taverne des Étudiants," was performed at the Odéon, April 1, 1854, with complete failure. In the year 1855 Sardou was in a state of anxiety and extreme distress. He was attacked with typhoid fever; but a neighbour, Brécourt, nursed him with great care, and he recovered. He married the following year, and by her he was introduced to Mlle. Dejazet, who had established the theatre with her. M. Sardou, undeterred by his former failure, now turned again to dramatic composition, and built up for himself a brilliant career. Nine years later he was in possession of a handsome fortune and a European reputation, when a gloom was temporarily cast upon his career by the death of his wife (1867). M. Sardou's earlier plays performed at the Théâtre de la Renaissance were: "Les Premières Armes de France," April 27, 1859; "Monsieur Garçon," April 27, 1860; and "Les Pré-Établis," April 24, 1862. "Monsieur Garçon" was one of the most prolonged successes of the little theatre, and "Les Pré-Établis," transformed into an opera, was afterwards brought out at the Théâtre des Variétés, and also, in a revised version, at the Criterion Theatre. Subjoined is a list of his other plays, with the dates of their first representation: "Les Gens Nerveux," Palais-Royal, 1859; "Les Pattes de Mouche," May 15, 1860; "Les Femmes de Vaudeville," Dec. 31, 1860; "Le Dégel," under the pseudonym of Camille, Feb. 9, 1861; "Piccolino," Oct. 18, 1861; "Nos Intimes," Oct. 18, 1861; brilliant successes, Vaudeville, 1861; "La Papillonne," Théâtre, April 11, 1862, a piece well favourably received; "La Famille Bénoiton," Gymnase, April 12, 1862; "Le Dégel," same theatre, Oct. 29, 1862; "Le Dégel d'Amour," a comic opera written in conjunction with Opéra Comique, April 13, 1863; "Les Diables Noirs," Vaudeville, 1863, in four acts, which after being suppressed by the censorship, was severely criticised by the press; "Le Dégel," 1864; "Don Quichotte," 1864, in three acts, Gymnase, Jan. 1864; "Les Pommes du Voisin," Oct. 25, 1864; "Capitaine Héros," Opéra Comique, Dec. 26, 1864; "Les Garçons," Gymnase, Jan. 1865; "Famille Bénoiton," Vaudeville, 1855; "Nos bons Villageois," 1855; "Nos bons Villageois," Oct. 3, 1866; "Maison Noire,"

1866; "Séraphine," originally "Dévote," Gymnase, Dec. 21, 1866; "Porte-Saint-Martin, March 8, 1867; "Bernande," Gymnase, March 8, 1867; "oi Carotte," Gaité, Jan. 15, 1867; "agas," Vaudeville, January 1867, which was supposed to have been by A. Gambetta; "Les Merveilles du Théâtre des Variétés," 1873; Gymnase, March 17, 1873; "L'Américain," a satire on American vaudeville, Nov. 1873; "La Comédie," a comedy which was not successful, December, 1874; "Ferréol," Vaudeville, November, 1875; "Dora," a comedy in three acts, which is known in France under the title of "Diplomacy," a sample of M. Sardou's clever construction, Vaudeville, 1876; and "Les Bourgeois de Vaudeville," 1878; "Daniel et Catherine," a comedy, Théâtre Français, 1880; "Odette," a play in three acts, Vaudeville, November 1881; "L'Américain," a comedy in three acts, 1881; 1883; and "Théodora," 1884; being written for Madame Bernhardt. Since then his best work has been "La Tosca," also by Bernhardt, and brought to the Porte-Saint-Martin in 1887; a comedy, "Marquise," Vaudeville, 1889; "Thérèse," produced in January 1891, and during the French government political demonstrations it was produced by Bernhardt at the Renaissance, on Oct. 31, 1894, and produced by her in 1897. In 1897 appeared one of his most successful plays "Madame Sans-Gêne," written for Madame Réjane (q.v.), who portrayed the outspoken wife of Marshal Lefevre. It was translated into English, and Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry were seen in it at the Haymarket. In 1899 he wrote a play on Robespierre for Sir Henry Irving. Sardou has realised a princely fortune from his writings, and has built a chateau at Marly-le-Roy. He died, on June 17, 1892, Mdlle. de la Comédie-Française, Conservateur of the Théâtre de Versailles. He was decorated with the Legion of Honour in 1863, and was a Member of the French Academy in June 1877, in succession to Victor Hugo. His reception into the Academy took place, May 23, 1878. A monograph was written on him in 1892 by Roosevelt. His Paris residence was in the Rue de Madrid.

John Singer, R.A., is of the same parentage, and, like some other masters of style in art, is the son of a scientific father and an artistic mother. He was born in Florence, Italy, in 1856, his father, who had come to live there, being Dr. Fitz Hugh Sargent, a Boston physician, and his mother, a Miss Newbold, of the Philadelphia Newbolds, a clever water-colourist. He received his education partly in Italy, partly in Germany, and entered the Academy Schools, where he had completed some years of diligent study before he was eighteen. On a visit to the Tyrol with his mother, he met the late Lord Leighton, who praised his work. This encouraged him to study, under M. Carolus-Duran. In 1879 he exhibited at the Salon and was honourably mentioned, and in 1881 obtained a medal of the second class. He has won his European reputation as a peculiarly masterly portrait-painter and painter of genre. Some of the most celebrated portraits in the United States are from his brush, and he is represented at the Luxembourg by his "Carmencita," which was produced in New York, and first exhibited at the Society of American Artists. In 1894 he painted for Sir Henry Irving a portrait of Ellen Terry, and during the last twenty years has exhibited the following principal works: "Fishing for Oysters at Cancale," and "En Route pour la Pêche," 1878; "Neapolitan Children Bathing," 1879; and "El Jaleso," 1882, and, among portraits, those of Carolus-Duran and of Pozzi, the gynæcologist, as well as the "Portrait of a Young Lady" (Salon, 1881); group of four young girls, "Hall of the Four Children," 1882; "Madame G." (Salon, 1884); "Mrs. Marquand" and "Mrs. Boit" (Royal Academy, 1888). At the latter's exhibition in 1895 he exhibited portraits of Mrs. Ernest Hills, Coventry Patmore, W. Graham Robertson, and Mrs. Russell Cooke; in 1896, of the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, M.P., Mrs. Ian Hamilton, Sir George Lewis, and Mrs. Colin Hunter, &c.; in 1897, of Mrs. Carl Meyer and her children, a group which made a profound sensation among connoisseurs; and the Hon.
